Will Soon Become Dividend Payers

The manner in which the Victoria Eagle & Blue Bell and Chief Cons mines are responding to development work leads to the belief that these new bonanzas will rival some of the older mines of the district in the matter of ore production. All three of these mines are operating upon the same ore channel which is not only of very liberal dimensions but carries exceptionally high values. It takes time to place a mining property in the dividend paying class where deep mining is necessary but there are reasons to believe that it will not be very long before the shareholders of these three mines are drawing down some velvet. The Chief Cons already has a cash surplus of over $130,000. The Eagle & Blue Bell is now piling up a nice treasury which has no doubt been increased to the extent of nearly $40,000 as a result of the shipments sent out during the past thirty or forty days while the Victoria is rapidly wiping out the indebtedness which was caused by the purchase of valuable adjoining territory. Only a few days ago the Victoria took up a note for $93,000 which represented the bulk of the company's indebtedness and the Reporter learns from a reliable source that the mine's earnings for the month of May amounted to nearly $10,000 while the record for June while hardly as good as that of the previous month owing to the fact that Manager Sullivan kept a large part of his force upon new work was almost as satisfactory. Recent shipments from this mine have carried very good values in gold one and a half and two ounce gold ore being by no means unusual in addition to the splendid silver values. What causes the feeling of optimism among the shareholders of the Victoria is the fact that all indications tend to show that greater depth will show the continuity of the vein and the permanence of the values.

1,400 Foot Tunnel In North Tintic

Manager George Nichols of the Lehi Tintic property of the North Tintic District states that the big tunnel is now in a distance of over 1,400 feet and that the fissure which was encountered but a short time ago and which is being followed at the present time shows splendid ore indications. Mr. Nichols feels very confident that the development work is nearing an important stage and that a strike will be reported before many more months. Within the next fifty feet a north and south fissure will be cut and at this point the ore should make its appearance as this is the fissure which carried the old Gold Blossom ore upon the upper levels of the mine.

The Lehi Tintic officers are confident that the ore which was sent out from this property years ago will again be picked up at this depth and the deposit will then be a permanent one. They intend to keep plugging right along until they have thoroughly prospected their ground.

Miners Have Four Day Vacation

The employees of the Centennial Eureka mine are enjoying a four days vacation. The mine was closed down on Tuesday morning and will not reopen until tomorrow morning. Many of the men employed at this mine together with their families have been visiting in various parts of the state.

The Knight Power company's officials have contracted to furnish the power needed for the new electric hoist which will be installed at the May Day mine and during the week commenced work upon a pole line to this property. No time will be lost in the installation of the new hoisting equipment at the May Day and according to the figures which have been prepared by Supt. C. C. Gings, the switch from steam to electric power will result in a very substantial saving.

The returns from the zinc ore which has already been shipped from this mine were highly satisfactory to the management and there can be no question but what the May Day people will realize a handsome profit upon this class of ore which will no doubt be shipped in large quantities in the near future. Three cars of zinc containing in all about 125 tons brought the company in the neighborhood of $3800. While awaiting the adjustment of the freight rate large quantities of this ore is now being piled up at the mine.

Eureka Hill Will Resume Work

It is understood here that the officials of the Eureka Hill Mining Company are making preparations for the resumption of work the mine having been closed for several months with the exception of a small amount of work which is being carried on by lessees. In that section of the Eureka Hill mine which adjoins the Centennial Eureka there is a splendid body of ore. This ore body has already been worked to some extent through the Centennial Eureka and quite recently some rich shipments were placed on the market by lessees. This has led to the belief and the Eureka Hill people have decided to mine the ore through their own shaft. To reach this ore from the Eureka Hill side it will be necessary to do dead work requiring the expenditure of a few thousand dollars.

Eureka Hill Wants Damages

The Eureka Hill company this week filed suit against the Bullion Beck mining company asking for damages in the sum of $18,750. It is alleged that the Bullion Beck company trespassed upon the Eureka Hill ground at several different points.

New Work On 600 Level

The work upon the 1000 level of the Opohongo has been discontinued for the present owing to the fact that the management was anxious to take up some new work upon the 600 level. The company not having sufficient power to work upon both levels and continue with the operations in the various other parts of the mine. The showing upon the 1000 level seems to indicate that some little work will yet be required to get into the ore but just as soon as the development work upon the 600 level is completed prospecting will again be taken up where it has been left off on the 1000. On the 600 a drift is now being driven toward the south where Supt. Samu Cox believes that about 100 feet of work will be sufficient to reach ore which has already been followed to a point within 30 feet of this level. Another drift will also be pushed out toward the north at the same depth.

In order that some repairs might be made to the compressor the Opohongo and Gold Chain mines will be closed down until Sunday the Fourth of July vacation for the employees of these companies having started on Wednesday.

Report on United Tintic Property

The annual report of the United Tintic Mining Company has just been made public by Secretary H. J. Fitzgerald. It gives in detail the work which the company has done during the past year and while the property

You know us!

We are Mary Jane and her lamb. We have hired out to the best store in this city. We are happy; because our consciences are clear. The store we are going to work for has a clear conscience. They do an honorable business. There is no cotton in what they tell you is "all wool."

We are happy, because we succeed. So does the store we work for succeed; their upright goods and upright methods compel success.

Each week for a whole year we shall greet you in this paper, always with a smile. Our store folks greet you with a smile when you come in, and sell you reliable goods.

W. F. SHRIVER

has been idle for some time the secretary's report indicates that preparations are under way for the resumption of work. The company still has a small indebtedness which it will no doubt be necessary to clear up by the levying of an assessment. Some ore has been opened in this ground but it does not come in sufficient quantities to make the handling of it profitable.

Big Month for Gold Chain

The Gold Chain mine at Mammoth closed the month of June with an output of nearly fifty carloads and according to Assistant Manager W. D. Loos the earnings of the mine for that period will probably be heavier than for any month in the history of the property. The returns show that there has been a gradual improvement in the ore which is being shipped from this mine and a dividend can no doubt be expected in the near future as a good surplus is now being piled up in the company's strong box. The earnings of the Gold Chain for the month just closed will no doubt amount to about $20,000 being a few thousand dollars more than for the previous month.

The new ore body on the 700 level is opening up splendidly and the development work of the past few weeks upon this level has materially increased the ore reserves of this mine.

Will Distribute $100,000 Dividend

The directors of the Iron Blossom company are scheduled to meet during the present month for the purpose of declaring the regular quarterly dividend. The condition of the treasury which is said to contain in the neighborhood of $100,000 insures the payment of not less than $100,000 or 10 cents per share. While a larger dividend would be possible it is understood that the directors favor adhering to the regular amount for the present.

May Build Road to Coal Mine

John Cronin returned to Silver City early in the week after a trip to eastern Utah where he went for the purpose of looking over the route of the branch railroad which the Knight people propose to construct in order to reach some extensive coal deposits which they own in that section of the state. If the present plans are carried out and the road is constructed Mr. Cronin will probably take charge of the work. En route home he visited with his wife and daughter who are the guests of friends at Farmington and found Mrs. Cronin convalescing from her recent illness. She will be able to return to Silver City within the next few days.

Another Rich Car From Eagle Mine

The Eagle & Blue Bell mine has been shipping quite heavily from the new ore body on the 700 level this ore bringing the company on an average of $5,000 per car. One car which was billed out the other day will undoubtedly bring a check for better than $7,000 being about the richest ore that has yet been mined at this property. During the month of June the drift which is being rushed out toward the ore body from the lowest level in the Eagle—the 1350—was driven forward a distance of 198 feet but two shifts being used Supt. William Owens is naturally pleased with this record and at this rate the drift will reach a point directly under the big ore body by the last of the present month.

Supt. Lou Merriman of the Yankee Cons mine was in Salt Lake on business early in the present week.

The Utah Ore Sampling Co. of which Jesse Knight is president, has taken over the sampling mill at Park City.

The sampling mill of the Utah Ore Sampling company at Silver City was closed yesterday and will reopen again on Monday morning. The mill has been operating with two shifts for the past few weeks.

Nightwatchman Found Dead

Chris Anderson, formerly a shift boss at the Sioux Cons mine and later the nightwatchman at this property, was found dead on Saturday morning. He had been in poor health for some time and a couple of days prior to his death Dr. Mott of this city was called to attend him. The physician realizing that the man's condition was serious requested that he give up his work and join his family at Ephraim, Utah. Anderson agreed to do this and asked W. D. Loos to send someone up to the mine to relieve him as watchman. When the new man arrived on Saturday morning Mr. Anderson was dead having no doubt passed away the night before. According to the physician's report the man's death resulted from Bright's disease.

Mr. Anderson came to Tintic several years ago and followed mining during his residence here until poor health caused him to accept the position as watchman. He was well liked and has a great many friends who sincerely regret his death. The deceased was about 51 years of age and leaves a wife and six children. The remains were sent to Ephraim on Sunday the funeral taking place there the following day.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia cures on the market are really Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. Will you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to lose your stomach ailing. Eat every thing you stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acid indigestion. I tried physicians and their own patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

World of Labor

News from All Parts of the World,
of General Interest to the Worker

Washington—There are in the United States about 18,000,000 families. The privately owned wealth of the nation is estimated at $15,000,000,000. Two families have half a billion each. Four families have $192,000,000 each. Eight families are rated at $95,000,000. 23 at $43,000,000. 95 at $24,000,000. 285 at $12,000,000. 770 at $8,000,000. 1,925 at $3,000,000. and 4,620 at $1,500,000. In those nine groups are 7,737 families with a total wealth of $26,900,000,000.

Now for the summing up. 7,737 families own 24 per cent of the nation's wealth. 139,237 families own 54 per cent. 3,027,237 families own 87 per cent. 15,412,600 families representing five-sixths of the population of the United States own 13 per cent which is a trifle more than one eighth of the nation's wealth. And yet there are eminent authorities who call such a condition of affairs prosperity and are fearful lest it be disturbed.

Boston—It is declared that all the Boston deep water and transatlantic steamship longshoremen with the exception of a small handful of the very oldest men are now enrolled in unions under the banner of the B. G. A. F. of L. International Longshoremen's association. Daniel O'Connell Associates of Charlestown and Longshoremen's Provident union joined the organization as bodies several weeks ago and a few days ago East Boston Union 805 was instituted with more than 400 active longshoremen formerly members of Noddie Island and Eureka Assemblies K of L as members.

Albany N. Y.—The strike of the motormen conductors and shopmen of the Albany Southern Railroad an electric line between Albany and Hudson was settled. At the suggestion of F. J. Downey mediator for the state department of labor the company and employees agreed to submit to John Williams state commissioner of labor the interpretation of the word discipline under a working agreement with reference to a car barn employee who was transferred from day to night duty and to have a board of arbitration pass on the grievances of six other employees.

Indianapolis—The Brewery Workers union has issued a call to its locals to elect delegates to the national convention on at Denver on September 9. Delegates may be elected at any time between the present and September 1. The Brewers union of this city has chosen Joseph Oberfell his boss agent and member of the international board as its delegate. The drivers will name a delegate June 16. The brewers and the engineers and fire men here also are entitled to delegates.

Boston—Boston U. A. Steamfitters Union 537 has signed on wage and conditions agreements with a large Providence sprinkler company which is doing several jobs in this city and with two small firms. It reports that the places of its men who are on strike for on wages and conditions against a large general fire extinguisher and sprinkler company have been taken by members of another union.

Ottawa Canada—There were nine ten strikes reported to the Canadian department of labor in April being five more than in April 1911. About fifty firms and 6,000 employees were involved. The loss of time being estimated at 150,000 working days. Only eleven disputes were unsettled at the end of the month.

Indianapolis—The International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers has granted charters to two new locals. One of these is at Edmonton province of Alberta Canada. It has between 75 and 100 members says International Secretary Hockin. The other new local was organized among the pile drivers at Los Angeles and has a membership of 68.

Adelaide N. S. W.—Any person in New South Wales taking part in a meeting of two or more persons to instigate aid or control a strike or lock out where the strike or lockout will deprive the public of a necessary commodity is liable to imprisonment for twelve months.

New York—The referendum vote on the proposal to hold a convention of the League of Pattern Makers this year resulted in its defeat, but the same question will be submitted to the subordinate unions next year.

New York—New York motormen new receive for the first year $3 a day of 10 hours. After the first year they will receive $3.50 a day and after the fifth year they will be paid $3.75 a day.

San Francisco—The San Francisco Labor Council will ask the American Federation of Labor to urge congress to take steps to build a national highway at a cost of $500,000,000 to the end that the unemployed may be furnished work.

Washington—The paid up membership statement of the American Federation of Labor for April 1912 shows an increase of 149,046 over that of April 1911.

Jacksonville Fla.—Delegates from carpenters unions from every part of Florida convened here recently and organized a state carpenters council.

Boston—The use of the term scab at the present time is like setting a match to gunpowder. said Chief Justice Bolster in the municipal court in the case of Timothy Louden thirty years old of 1508 Washington street charged with disturbing the peace. Under ordinary circumstances I would be inclined to consider a plea involving a defendant's personal interest but at this time I believe the interest of the public should be considered first. He sentenced Louden to two months in the house of correction for calling out scab on a street car last night. He was a conductor on an elevated division up to a year ago when he resigned. He appealed the sentence and was held in $500 bond.

London England—There has been a big leap of membership of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants of England Ireland Scotland and Wales. The number has gone up according to the fortieth annual report of the A. S. R. S. from 75,153 to 116,516. In England and Wales the increase is 33,698. In Scotland 1,964 and in Ireland 701. Forty-eight new branches have been formed making the grand total 763. The society's income was £110,344 being an increase of £18,771. The historic national railway strike—the first in the history of this country—eventually caused a rush of new members.

Boston—The Bricklayers union successfully increased the minimum wage rate to 65 cents an hour and an advance of 5 cents an hour with practically no trouble at any point. Wharves and Bridge Carpenters union increased the minimum wage rates for its men from $3.28 to $3.50 a day. Artificial Stone Cement and Asphalt Workers union enforced its standard minimum rates with the local firms which were not paying them and the Hyde Park Carpenters union got the Boston wage rates and conditions from almost every employer.

London England—An effort is being made to organize London's large army of electrical workers of all grades. This is being done by the Electrical Trades Union which has during the last two years made tremendous progress numerically financially and intellectually. As a result of the increased membership wages have risen considerably in many parts of the United Kingdom but London although it has trebled its strength needs the whole solid mass of electricalians to aid in the betterment of conditions.

Los Angeles Cal.—In an effort to force recognition of the union card in Los Angeles 1,500 members of the building trades unions struck Secretary Mooney of the Building Trades Council expects the strike to tie up the building industry in the city. The strike has only one object he said and that is to enforce the recognition of the union card in the city. Only those employers who hire union men will be free from danger of a strike.

Osaka Japan—About 3,000 men engaged in mousseline yuzen printing in Osaka have gone on strike on account of the refusal of their demand for an increase in wages. The rate which had been agreed on between the employers and operatives was 65 cents for ten pieces the men now demand an increase of 15 cents. As the work of printing ten pieces takes a day and a half the increase demanded is 10 cents a day.

New York—Wages of street and electric railway employees have been increased since January 1 1912 on the various organized systems in a number of towns in all affecting 2,350 members of the amalgamated association. The rate of increase ranges from 8 to 20 per cent. The aggregate annual increase is approximately $100,000.

Washington—Thirty years ago the production of steel in the United States was less than a million tons a year. Now it is 25,000,000 tons. Then the exports of steel were valued at a million dollars now they approximate $760,000,000.

London England—A minimum rate of 6½ cents an hour has been fixed for women employees in the tailoring trade in Great Britain. Apprentices or learners are to receive wages of from 7 to 9 cents to $12 a week of 50 hours.

Cleveland Ohio—Plumbers announce that their strike for a minimum wage of $5 per day an increase of 50 cents and Saturday half holiday is virtually won all but a few small bosses having signed.

London England—A minimum wage for vocalists including chorus girls of $12 for six evening performance and $1 for each matinee is the demand made by the Amalgamated Musicians Union.

Belfast Ireland—The percentage of unemployed in this city is said to be the lowest in the United Kingdom. During the latter part of the year the wages of no less than 10,600 employees of the shipyards were increased.

Pittsburgh—The Stogie Makers union has rejected the terms of amalgamation offered by the International Cigar Makers union.

FAMOUS "BONEHEAD" PLAYS
ON MAJOR LEAGUE DIAMONDS

Explained by Leading
Baseball Players to

HUGH S. FULLERTON

By GEORGE MULLIN

Pitcher Detroit Tigers Who for Many Years Has Been One of the Best and Cleverest Pitchers of the American League

Far be it from me to boast much about it but it is a fact that what I believe was the biggest bone-headed play I ever made won the American league championship for Detroit.

It doesn't do me much credit to tell the yarn but every word of it is true. The Detroit players all knew about it but I guess no one in the stands or even in the press box knew it. It just goes to prove how much of a factor luck is in baseball.

In the fall of 1908 we were playing in Cleveland and if you remember they were putting us hard for the lead of the race. I was pitching against Dusty Rhoades a corking good man who always made it hard to beat him even when he wasn't at his best. Charles Schmidt was catching for me. It came down to the first half of the ninth with the score 3 to 2 in our favor but their toughest batters were coming up and it wasn't a cinch. They came at us hard and got a runner on third one on first and one man out with Bill Hinchman at bat and pitchers who have faced Hinchman will testify that it looked a little shaky for Detroit just then.

For two or three innings I had been worrying over the idea that they had our signals. I walked up toward Schmidt and told him to signal for a fast ball but that I would pitch out as I thought they were getting my signals. I was so worried over the situation that I entirely forgot to notify either the infield or the outfield what I was going to do.

I tried hard to waste the ball but instead of wasting it I got it over the plate right in the groove. Hinchman had given the hit and run sign just as I expected he would do and both runners were going when the ball was pitched. Hinchman hit that ball a mile a minute straight through my legs.

I thought it was curtains for me but you can imagine my surprise when I turned and saw Schaefer right back of second base making a beautiful stop and starting a fast double play that killed Cleveland's last chance and saved the game for Detroit. It not only saved the game but it saved the pennant as we had to beat Chicago on the following Sunday to win the pennant and keep from finishing third. When I recovered I told Schaefer the play I had in mind and we figured out the play this way.

If the infield had known I was going to pitch out O'Leary would have covered second base and the ball would have gone through over the bag with no one near it. It would have been impossible for O'Leary to reach the ball. My failure to let the infield know what I was going to do saved us. I crossed Schaefer and he thinking I was on the level about pitching a fast straight ball played back of second and saved the game.

You can see how a bone head play by myself would have lost the pennant if Schaefer hadn't saved it.

WHEN LIBERTY BELL RUNG INDEPENDENCE

THE story of the Declaration of Independence which gave birth to a new nation among the powers of the world 136 years ago in Philadelphia is full of the drama of history from the moment of the inception of the idea to that fateful moment when the resounding clang of old Liberty Bell pronounced the deed accomplished. The story has been told so often that there is scarcely a new angle from which to view it but to the younger generation of Americans the thrilling tale of Caesar Rodney is not so familiar as it well deserves to be and will bear retelling.

The final debate in Congress in the committee of the whole upon the adoption of the Declaration of Independence began at 9 o'clock on Monday July 1. On that day Pennsylvania seven of whose delegates were present voted against adoption. The vote of Delaware having two delegates present was divided. Thereupon McKean of Delaware who had voted affirmatively wrote a frantic letter to the absent Delaware delegate Caesar Rodney imploring him to come and cast his vote and thus turn the scale for Delaware.

Rodney at the time was 80 miles away at Dover at one or the other of his farms Byfield and Poplar Grove. He suffered tortures from the cancer which started on his nose had spread so that he had to wear a all over one side of his face a green silk shield to hide the disfigurement. It was of this chronic affliction that he died. A contemporary chronicler describes him as an animated skeleton—indeed all spirit without corporeal integument.

McKean's messenger left Philadelphia late in the afternoon of July 1. It was necessary to get Rodney back to Independence Hall by July 4 the day appointed for taking the vote upon the adoption of the Declaration. All night all day he rode at top speed and Rodney is supposed to have started on the return journey in the evening of the second.

That ride of Rodney's deserves to go down in history alongside of Paul Revere's and Philip Sheridan's. In default of missing detail the imagination must provide the picture of the tall gaunt spectre of a man half son that his hand drafted the Declaration of Independence. Among his papers he left many letters and documents which throw a flood of light upon the motives and objects of that gathering of American statesmen. He told the following anecdote characteristic of Benjamin Franklin.

INDEPENDENCE HALL

When the Declaration of Independence was under the consideration of Congress there were two or three unbecomingly expressive in which gave offense to some members. The words 'Scotch' and other foreign avillaries excited the ire of a gentleman or two of that country. Severe strictures on the conduct of the British king in negating our repeated appeals of the law which permitted the importation of slaves were disapproved by some southern gentlemen. Although the offensive expressions were immediately yielded these gentlemen continued their deprecations on other parts of the instruments. I was sitting by Dr. Franklin who perceived that I was not insensible to these mutilations.

I have made it a rule said he whenever in my power to avoid becoming the draftsman of papers to be received by a public body. I took my lesson from an incident which I will relate to you. When I was a journeyman printer one of my companions an apprentice hatter having served out his time was about to open shop for himself. His first concern was to have a hand some signboard with a proper inscription. He composed it in these words: John Thompson hatter makes and sells hats for ready money with a figure of a hat subjoined. But he thought he would submit it to his friends for their amendments. The first he showed it to the right word hatter tautologous because followed by the words makes hats which showed he was a hatter.

It was struck out. The next observed that the word makes might as well be omitted because his customers would not care who made the hats. If good and to their mind they would buy by whomsoever made. He struck it out. A third said he thought the words for ready money were useless as it was not the stem of the place to sell on credit. Every one who purchased expected to pay. They were parted with and the inscription now stood: John Thompson sells hats. Sells hats says his next friend. Why nobody will expect you to give them away. What tier is the use of that word? It was stricken out and hats followed it—the rather as there was one painted on the board. So his inscription was reduced ultimately to John Thompson with the figure of a hat subjoined.

In a letter to the editor of the Journal de Paris Jefferson gives the following account of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence.

On the 7th of June 1776 the delegates from Virginia moved in obedience to instructions from their constituents that Congress should declare the Thirteen United Colonies to be independent of Great Britain that a confederation should be formed to bind them together and measures be taken for procuring the assistance of foreign powers. The house ordered a punctual attendance of all their members the next day at 10 o'clock and then resolved themselves into a committee of the whole and entered on the discussion. It appeared in the course of debates that seven states viz New Hampshire Massachusetts Rhode Island Connecticut Virginia North Carolina and Georgia were decided for a separation but that six others still hesitated to wit New York New Jersey Pennsylvania Delaware Maryland and South Carolina. Congress desirous of unanimity and seeing that the public mind was advancing rapidly to it referred the further decision to the 1st of July appointing in the meantime a committee to prepare a Declaration of Independence a second to form Articles of Confederation of the States and a third to propose measures for obtaining foreign aid.

On the 28th of June the Declaration of Independence was reported to the house and was laid on the table for the consideration of the members. On the 1st day of July they resolved themselves into a committee of the whole and resumed the consideration of the motion of June 7 (declaring Independence). It was debated through the day and at length was decided by the affirmative by the vote of nine states viz New Hampshire Massachusetts Rhode Island Connecticut New Jersey Maryland Virginia North Carolina and Georgia. Pennsylvania and South Carolina voted against it. Delaware two members present was divided. The delegates from New York declared they were for it and their constituents also but that the instructions against it which had been given them a twelve month before were still unrevoked. That their convention was to meet in a few days and they asked leave to suspend their vote till they could obtain a repeal of their instructions. Observe that all this was in a committee of the whole Congress and that according to the mode of their proceedings the resolution of that committee to declare themselves independent was to be put to the same persons reassuming their forms as a Congress.

It was now evening the members exhausted by a debate of nine hours during which all the powers of the soul had been distended with the magnitude of the object and the delegates of South Carolina desired that the final decision might be put off to the next morning that they might still weigh in their own minds their ultimate vote. It was put off and in the morning of the 2d of July they joined the other nine states in voting for it. The members of the Pennsylvania delegation too who had been absent the day before came in and turned the vote of their state in favor of Independence and a third member of the state of Delaware who hearing of the division in the sentiment of his two colleagues had traveled post to arrive in time now came in and decided the vote of that state also for the resolution. Thus 12 states voted for it at the time of its passage and the delegates of New York the thirteenth state received instructions within a few days to add theirs to the general vote so that there was not a dissenting voice.

Congress proceeded immediately to consider the Declaration of Independence which had been reported by their committee on the 28th of June. The several paragraphs of that were debated for three days viz the 2d 3d and 4th of July. In the evening of the fourth they were finally closed and the instrument approved by an unanimous vote and signed by every member except Mr. Dickinson.

The first celebration of our national birthday took place in Philadelphia four days after the adoption of the Declaration of Independence July 8 1776 with all the clamor and rejoicing that today heralds its approach. And the banners of the people the king's arms were torn down the troops paraded and on the commons the proclamation was read before each of the five battalions. Bonfires blazed in the evening cannon were fired bells were rung and the populace celebrated generally. The next day General Washington arrived in New York and took charge of the demonstrations there.

It seems to take us into the long ago when we read that they hurried the news forward to Boston and the messengers made such incredibly fast time that they reached the city by 11 A.M. Here the excitement had no statue upon which to vent itself so the enthusiastic loyalty tore down the lion and the unicorn from the crest of the State house.

masked and riding like a demon urging his steed onward through the night with whip and spur along a road bounding in pitfalls with black miles separating one warm yellow cabin light from the next. What was he thinking of as he rode onward? Not of the pain of the cancer slowly eating away his countenance and sapping his vitality not of the risk he ran as a solitary horseman of being waylaid and robbed or murdered upon the lonely journey. He heeded not the hunger and the sleeplessness. He was thinking only of the fact that his vote would turn the day for Delaware. Delaware though a little state might influence Pennsylvania and so the vote of the colonies would be unanimous for a declaration that would immortalize the men who made and signed it and enfranchise the people of the thirteen colonies and their descendants.

Next day Thursday July 4 as the members were assembling at the State house door a rider booted and spurred and covered with the dust of night and day travel dismounted in their midst and then a little later Caesar Rodney rose in his place still breathing hard and said I vote for Independence. The result was that the vote of Delaware was cast in favor of the Declaration. Pennsylvania by three of her five delegates present supported Delaware's action and thus by the vote of Rodney the unanimous vote of the colonies (with the solitary and temporary exception of New York) was that day secured for the Magna Charta of our American liberties.

It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Lossing tells us when the final decision was announced by Secretary Thompson. When the secretary sat down a deep silence pervaded that august assembly. Thousands of anxious citizens had gathered in the streets. From the hour when Congress convened in the morning the old bellman had been in the steeple. He placed a boy at the door below to give him notice when the announcement should be made. As hour succeeded hour the graybeard shook his head and said They will never do it! They will never do it! Suddenly a loud shout came up from below and there stood the blue-eyed boy clapping his hands and shouting Ring! Ring! Grasping the iron tongue of the old bell backward and forward he hurled it 100 times its loud voice proclaiming Liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof. The excited multitude in the streets responded with loud acclamations and with cannon peals bonfires and illuminations.

Woodmen Plan Entertainment.

The members of the Woodmen of the World are making extensive preparations for a big time on the 10th—next Wednesday—when they will conduct a class initiation and public installation followed by a banquet. A number of the grand lodge officers have promises to come to Eureka up on this occasion and the local "choppers" are determined to show them a royal time.

Department To Give Another Dance

The members of the Eureka Fire Department will conduct the regular monthly dance at the pavilion on the evening of July 11th—next Tuesday. This dance will wind up the series which the organization has been conducting for the purpose of raising money for the convention to be held in this city in August although the firemen will probably give another dance during the convention week. The firemen will have ample money for the proper entertainment of their guests and a splendid program is being arranged.

Brief Comment.

Country editors are tired of printing advertising thinly disguised as news which is furnished them gratis from various sources. They said so recently at the regular meeting of the Utah Newspaper Association in the Commercial Club rooms in Salt Lake.

Discuss on at the meeting brought out that although the country papers are requested to print columns of such matter they are given the cold shoulder when they ask for a more substantial encouragement. A committee comprising J. S. Barlow, Royal Leppson and Charles E. Glaid was appointed to draft resolutions defining the association's stand against the free puffs.

A large number of Tintic people visited Spanish Fork on Tuesday and enjoyed the big celebration which had been prepared under the direction of the commercial club of that city marking the completion of the large tunnel which is a part of the great Strawberry Irrigation Project. This irrigation project will be completed next year and will be the means of irrigating many thousands of acres of fertile ground in Utah country. It is by far the most important undertaking of this kind in the history of this state and will be completed at a cost of $2,500,000. The people of Spanish Fork according to all reports handled their celebration in a very creditable manner and the many visitors were fittingly entertained.

F. Roosevelt is issuing a call for a Progressive convention to be held the first week in August at Chicago. What will happen if this convention should turn him down? Another convention in September?

The usual large number of people left Tintic for the Fourth but the two celebrations which were conducted in this district were very successful. Nice programs were in order both in Eureka and Mammoth.

The city council of American Fork has found it necessary to pass an ordinance prohibiting dances known as the Turkey Trot, Bunny Hug, Texas Tommy, Elephant Walk or dancing in the dark.

Corner Stone of High School

Put In Place Last Sunday

Several hundred people gathered at the site of the new Tintic High School building last Sunday afternoon to witness the ceremonies in honor of the laying of the corner stone. The severe wind-storm kept many people from attending the ceremonies but those who did brave the wind and dust felt amply repaid after listening to the interesting address delivered by Prof. Merrill. Preceding this address prayer was offered by Rev. McHarness. The exercises at the school grounds included the serving of refreshments to everyone present, those in charge of the affair having secured an abundance of sandwiches, lemonade, oranges, etc.

The meeting at the L. D. S. Church in the evening was exceptionally well attended and the program was a most enjoyable one. Joseph Treloar, the president of the Tintic District High School, presided and after a number by the church choir, Rev. Powell delivered the invocation. Professor Mosiah Hall of the University of Utah and inspector of high schools for Utah spoke along educational lines. He contrasted present conditions with those existing in Utah in earlier days and told in an interesting manner of the wonderful changes which have taken place during the past twenty or thirty years showing that the children of today are exceptionally well provided for in educational matters. A solo by R. A. Wilkins of Knightville preceded a brief address by B. N. C. Stott, the secretary of the high school district. Mr. Stott who has performed a great deal of work in connection with the Tintic High School gave a brief outline of the present organization and told of the work which has already been accomplished. He also gave a splendid description of the new building which is now being erected and explained in detail the arrangement of the various rooms.

A quartette composed of Messrs D. J. Russell, Walter Jensen, John Robinson and George A. Udall rendered a very nice selection which was followed by Prof. Joseph T. Merrill's address. The speaker congratulated the people of Tintic for their splendid work along educational lines for their loyalty to their schools and for their enterprise in voting and working for the erection of the magnificent building the corner stone of which he had just assisted in laying. Prof. Merrill is especially interested in mining work being the dean of the School of Mines at the University and he is pleased to see the people of the Tintic mining district leading other parts of the state in high school work. Following the song "America" by the choir and congregation benediction was offered by Bishop Peter Lorup.

Harry M. Torrence Called By Death

Harry M. Torrence until a few weeks ago the manager of the Tintic branch of the Mountain States Telephone Company's business died very suddenly at the home of his sister Mrs. W. E. Duvall at Salt Lake last Sunday afternoon. When Mr. Torrence left Eureka it was for the purpose of taking up the management of the Nephi District of the telephone company's business the promotion to one of the best positions in connection with this company's Utah division coming to him as the result of his competent work. During the few years that he was located in this city he made hundreds of friends who while regretting his departure were pleased to learn of his rapid advancement. Mr. Torrence never assumed his new duties at Nephi owing to an illness which came upon him while he was visiting at Salt Lake. His wife was called to that city and while the illness was not considered serious she remained with him and was present at his death on Sunday. On Saturday Mr. Torrence was so well that he left the house for a short ride and on Sunday he was reclining in a chair talking when suddenly he was seen to fall limp. He died before a doctor arrived, death no doubt resulting from heart trouble.

Mr. Torrence was born in New Bremen, Ohio, November 15th, 1880 and came to Utah in 1906 locating at Salt Lake where he was employed by the old Independent Telephone Co. Later he came to Eureka as manager for this company and upon the consolidation of the Independent and Bell companies he was retained as manager of the Tintic business holding this position to the satisfaction of everyone interested until he received word of his selection for a better position. He was a member of the Masonic and Elks lodges of this city being junior deacon of the former and a trustee of the latter. A widow and two sons, one aged eight and the other aged five years as well as many other relatives and scores of close friends survive him.

Harry Torrence was honest, brave and generous and while of a quiet unpretentious nature he seemed to make friends rapidly holding them by his pleasing personality. It is pitiful to think how suddenly he died but it is a joy to think that when his soul reached the place to which souls that are pure ascend there was a universal acclaim of welcome.

The funeral services were conducted at the Masonic Temple at Salt Lake on Wednesday afternoon being attended by many Tintic and Salt Lake friends of the family. The services were under the direction of the Tintic Lodge No. 9 F. & A. M. while an appropriate and eloquent eulogy was delivered by Rev. Peter Simpkins who was a personal friend of Mr. Torrence. No. 37

Will Increase Next Dividend.

Theodore Hatfield came up from Provo on Wednesday evening and spent a couple of days in looking after operations at the Opohongo mine at Mammoth. The property is reported to be in splendid condition and the ore at work under Supt Cox is having no difficulty in keeping the output up to about four carloads each week. Just at present a drift is being driven toward the south upon the 600 level and within the next 100 feet this drift will undoubtedly cut the ore which is known to exist in this particular part of the property. The ore which this drift will encounter was opened from the workings above but it can not be mined to good advantage until a connection is completed on the 600 level. The directors of the Opohongo mine are scheduled to meet for dividend action on the 15th of this month—next Monday—and the Reporter believes that it is safe to predict a dividend of either 2 or 3 cents per share which would mean the distribution of $20,000 or perhaps $30,000. The last dividend from this mine amounted to $10,000 but those who are posted regarding the value of the ore which is now finding its way to the smelter say that the mine's earnings justify the payment of a larger sum.

Drilling at Depth of 400 Feet

The diamond drill which is being used in the development of the south end of the Dragon Cons property is doing very good work and a depth of about 400 feet has already been attained. Sinking will be continued in an effort to locate the ore bearing lime.

Good progress is being made in the tunnel which is located near the main working shaft of the Dragon and during the six weeks that this piece of work has been under way about 175 feet of drifting has been accomplished.

Jesse Knight has decided to construct a railroad to his coal mines near Helper and this week let a contract for the necessary grading. The branch road will be five miles long and the steel rails will no doubt be put down in the early fall. Mr. Knight is also constructing buildings at the mines and a ranging for extensive operations.

"SHAME ON YOU, HENRY, TO SPOIL THIS BEAUTIFUL DAY BY USING SUCH LANGUAGE!"

Tintic's Newest Dividend Payer

Another dividend payer was added to Tintic's already large list on Wednesday of this week, when the Gold Chain company's directors met and ordered the payment of 2 cents per share or $20,000. This initial dividend came somewhat as a surprise to some but those who have been keeping close tabs upon the mine's output for the past few months and the value of the ore which is being sent out were expecting a dividend. The company's treasury will contain better than $50,000 after the distribution of this dividend and it appears that the mine has been safely launched upon a paying basis. The present output of the property is about 100 tons daily and with a total of 43 carloads of ore the mine is said to have earned $20,000 during the month of June. Present operations would no doubt permit of larger dividends but the directors desire to start off on a conservative basis.

and increase the amount later if conditions will justify it. The first dividend will be sent out to the shareholders on July 25th.

Hoist Will Be Ready August 1st

The work of installing the new electric hoist at the May Day mine is already under way and Supt. C. C. Griggs feels confident that on the first of August or early in that month everything will be in readiness for a switch over from the old steam plant to the new electrical equipment. The new hoist will not only facilitate underground operations but it will reduce operating costs at this mine quite materially. The new hoist will be operated by power secured from the Knight company.

A splendid specimen of zinc ore was placed on exhibition at McCormick & Co's bank this week, the ore having been taken from the May Day mine. It carries better than 50 per cent zinc.

The employees of the Tintic mines received their pay checks on Wednesday.

Iron Blossom's New Machinery

Practically everything that is needed in the installation of the new hoisting equipment for the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom is now upon the ground. The largest piece of machinery weighing nearly fifteen tons having been loaded upon a large truck at a point where it can easily be hauled to the mine. There have been numerous delays in getting this new machinery upon the ground but the work has now reached a stage where it can be rushed along quite rapidly. The foundations are all in readiness and the lumber for the new shaft house and other buildings has been delivered. The Provo contractor will erect these buildings and the work must be taken up at once.

In the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom a new drift has been started on the 700 level, the object of which is to develop the body of copper ore which was found on the 600 and which is undoubtedly making to greater depth. Supt. Zabriske anticipates a few hundred feet of drifting before reaching this ore on the 700 but there is already a fair showing of copper and quartz in the face of this drift.

The drift which was following a small stringer of nice ore to the south upon the 200 level of the No. 1 workings has been discontinued for the present but within a few days Supt. Zabriske expects to resume work at this point. This ore was cut while a drift was being driven around a portion of the mine in which there was a cave in and for a while it looked as though it might lead to something exceptionally good. The bunch of ore has since narrowed down but owing to the fact that it leads into new territory the management has no intention of discontinuing the work.

Dragon Ore Shipments

That part of the Dragon ground which is being developed through the Iron Blossom is producing about two cars of ore each week and as soon as timbers and an ore chute can be placed in the No. 2 raise from the 600 level this output will be increased. Drifting is still being carried on to ward the south upon the 600 level of Dragon and if the No. 2 raise turns out all right a third raise will perhaps be started 100 feet farther along the vein.

May Handle Big Mill Dump

The big tailings dump at the Eureka Hill mill was sampled again this week and there seems to be a possibility of this dump being placed upon the market. The dump contains fully 250,000 tons and according to Supt. Charles Baker who has sampled the tailings very thoroughly at different times during the past few years the entire dump will average up a little better than $1.50 per ton. By some inexpensive system of concentration the dump ore could no doubt be reduced to a point where it could be shipped at a fair profit and when the immense tonnage is taken into consideration it can readily be seen that a few cents upon each ton would in the aggregate mean a very large sum of money.

Sinking Shaft at Wanless

The Wanless property, which is located in the North Tintic section in the neighborhood of the Lehi Tintic and Tintic Delmar properties is coming in for considerable development work according to Frank F. Velle who was in town the other day. The shaft upon this ground has now reached a depth of 100 feet. Mr. Pozelle is in charge of the development work and states that it is his intention to continue sinking just as long as the work can be handled to good advantage with the whim which is now in use. The company's holdings consist of eight claims upon which there is an exceptionally fine surface showing of silver plus taken from the cross cuts in the dolomite line show some silver and gold values.

Dragon Rapidly Coming to Front.

Some nice ore is now being mined from that part of the Dragon ground which is being developed through the Black Jack shaft. It will be remembered that a short time ago work was taken up upon the 300 level of the old Star section of the Black Jack in behalf of the Dragon company. After drifting over into the Dragon ground a raise was started for the ore and at the point where work is now going on which is 110 feet above the level there is five or six feet of rock which is worth from $15 to $20 per ton. The assays showing about $17.50 in gold, 8 or 9 ounces in silver and some copper. Some of this ore will soon be finding its way to the market and this new strike will be of some help in putting the Dragon in the dividend paying class in the near future.

The directors of the Iron Blossom mining company held their regular monthly meeting at Provo this week and ordered the payment of the usual quarterly dividend of 10 cents per share or $100,000. The money to be distributed on the 25th of this month. This will bring the total for the present year up to $270,000 and the total to date from this property up to $1,230,000. After the payment of this dividend the Iron Blossom will have an exceptionally large surplus in the treasury and there are many reasons to believe that this mine will eclipse the dividend records made by some of the older bonanzas of this district. There is said to be enough ore already in sight to insure the payment of another million and a half in dividends which would be $1.50 per share or about 25 cents more than the stock is now bringing.

Work at Eureka Swansea Extension

Machine drills are now being used in driving the east drift up on the 100 level of the Eureka Swansea Extension property and at a point about 135 feet from the shaft the showing is highly satisfactory. The ground is quite loose and contains better ore indications than at any point in the property.

It is also stated that the drift which is being driven over into this same ground from the Centennial Eureka mine is now in a very interesting formation with a splendid chance of getting some ore.

Mining Notes.

Manager J. C. Sullivan of the Victoria was in the capital on mining business during the week.

The directors of the Tuttle Stand and company have levied an assessment of 1 cent per share delinquent August 10th with sale day set for September 10th.

Ralph Badger, manager of the local office of the Badger Pros. Co. early in the week issued a table showing the average weekly shipments of the various properties of the Tintic District for the first six months of the present year. This table shows that in January the average weekly output of the district was 150 1/2 carloads, in February 139 1/2, in March 183 1/2, in April 183 1/2, in May 183 1/2 and in June 180.

John Davis was over from the North Tintic section yesterday and told of very encouraging conditions at the Davis property upon which he has been at work for some time. W. F. Shriver of this city, being associated with him in the ownership of the claims. In a tunnel which has already been driven a distance of 70 feet on one of the claims a vein of splendid looking manganese and iron has just been encountered and Mr. Davis believes that an assay will show some gold values.

SYNOPSIS

At a private view of the Chatworth personal estate to be sold at auction, the Chatworth ring known as the Crew Idol mysteriously disappears. Harry Cressy, who was present, describes the ring to his fiancée, Flora Gilsey, and her chaplain, Mrs. Clara Britton, as being like a head on a god with a beautiful sapphire set in the head. Flora meets Mr. Kerr, an Englishman at the club. In discussing the disappearance of the ring, the exploits of an English thief, Farrell, are recalled. Flora has a fancy that Harry and Kerr know something about it. Harry tells Flora that he has met Harry somewhere but cannot place him. A $5000 reward is offered for the return of the ring. Harry admits to Flora that he dislikes Kerr. Harry takes Flora to a Chinese goldsmith to buy an engagement ring. An exquisite sapphire set in a hoop of brass is selected. Harry urges her not to wear it until it is reset. The possession of the ring seems to cast a spell over Flora. She becomes uneasy and apprehensive. Flora meets Kerr at a box party. She is startled by the effect on him when he gets a glimpse of the sapphire. The possibility that the stone is part of the Crew Idol causes Flora much anxiety. Unseen, Flora discovers Clara ransacking her dressing room. Clara refuses to give or sell the stone to Kerr and suspects him of being the thief. Flora's interest in Kerr increases. She decides to return the ring to Harry, but he tells her to keep it for a day or two. Flora tells Clara that Clara is setting her cap for her father. Julia Butler, Flora's beloved, Harry suspects Kerr.

But Judge Butler had already vowed for that man, she said quickly, so he must be all right.

Kerr inclined his head to her with a smile.

Butler is easily taken in, said Harry calmly. Under the direct the insolent meaning of his look Flora felt her face grow hot—her hands cold. Harry could sit there taunting this man hitting him over another man's back and Kerr could not resent it. He could only sit—his head a little canted forward—looking at Harry with the traces of a dry smile upon his lips.

She thought the next moment every thing would be declared. She sprang up and with an impulse for rescue went to the door of the smoking room. Judge Butler she called.

There was a sudden cessation of talk a movement of forms dimly seen in the thick blue element and then through wreaths of smoke the judges' face dawned upon her like a sun through fog.

Well, well, Miss Flora, he wanted to know to what bad action of mine do I owe this good fortune?

She retreated beckoning him to the middle of the room. You owe it to the bad action of another, she said gayly. Your friends are being slandered.

Harry made a movement as if he would have stopped her and the expression of his face in its alarm was comic. But she paid no heed. She laid her hand on Harry's arm. Mr. Kerr is just about to accuse us of being impostors, she announced. She had robbed the situation of its peril by gayly turning it exactly inside out. The judge blinked puzzled at this extraordinary statement. Harry was disconcerted but Kerr showed an astonishment that amazed her—a concern that she could not understand. He turned at her. Then he laughed rather shakily as he turned to her with a mock gallant bow.

All women impose upon us madam. And as for Mr. Cressy—he fixed Harry with a look—I could not accuse him of being an impostor since we have met in the sacred limits of St. James.

The two glances that crossed before Flora's watchful eyes were keen as thrust and parry of rapiers. Harry bowed stiffly.

I believe for a fact we did not meet but I think I saw you there once—at some embassy ball.

The words rang to Flora's ears as if they had been shouted from the housetops. In the speaking pause that followed there was audible an unknown hortatory voice from the smoking room.

I tell you it's a damn fool way to manage it. What's the good of twenty thousand dollars reward? Flora clutched nervously at the back of her chair. She seemed to see the danger of discovery piling up above Kerr like a mountain.

The judge chuckled. You see what you saved me from. They've been at it hammer and tongs all the evening. Every man in town has his idea on that subject.

For instance, what is that one? Kerr's casual voice was in contrast to his guarded eyes.

The judge looked pleased. That one? Why that's my own—was at least half an hour ago. You see about that twenty thousand dollar proposition—They moved nearer to her. They stood the four around the red velvet-covered table like people waiting to be served. The trouble is right here," said the judge emphatically with blunt forefinger. The crook has a pal. That's probable 'ant it'.

Harry nodded. Flora felt Harry's eyes upon her but she could not look at him.

And we see the thing is at a dead lock don't we? Well now the judge went on triumphantly we know if any one person had the whole ring it would be turned in by this time. That is the weak spot in the reward policy. They didn't reckon on the things being split.

Split? No really do you think that possible? Kerr inquired and Flora caught a glimmer of irony in his voice.

Well can you see one of the chaps trusting the other with more than half of it? The judge was scornful. And a fellow needs a whole ring if he is after a reward. He rolled his head waggishly. Oh I could have been a crook myself, he chuckled but his was the only smiling face in the party.

For Kerr's was pale schooled to a rigid self control.

And Harry's was crimson and swollen as if with a sudden rush of blood. His twitching hands his sullen eyes responded to Judge Butler's last word as if it had been an accusation.

It makes me damned sick the way you fellows talk—as if it was the easiest thing in the world to—He broke off. It was such a tone loose harsh and uncontrolled as made Flora shrink.

As if he sensed that movement in her he turned upon her furiously.

Well are we going to stand here all night? He took her by the arm. She felt as if he had struck her. Butler was staring at him but Kerr had opened the door through which she had entered and now turning his back upon Harry silently motioned her out.

She had a moment's fear that Harry's grasp even then wouldn't let go. Indeed for a moment he stood clutching her as if now that his rage had spent itself she was the one thing he could hold to. Then she felt his fingers loosen. He stood there alone looking with his great bulk and his great strength and his abashed bewilderment rather pathetic.

But that aspect reached her dimly for the fear of him was uppermost. Her arm still turned where he had grasped it. She moved away from him toward the door Kerr had opened for her. She passed from the light of the crimson room into the dark of the passage. Some one followed her and closed the door. Some one caught step with her. It was Kerr. He bent his dark head to speak low.

I don't know why you did it you quixotic child but you must not expose yourself in this way for any reason whatsoever.

The light of the crowded rooms burst upon them again.

Oh she turned to him beseechingly. Can't you get me away?

Surely. His manner was as if nothing had happened. His smile was reassuring. I'll call your carriage and find Mrs. Britton.

When Flora came down from the dressing room she found Clara already in the carriage and Kerr mounting guard in the hall. As he handed her in Clara leaned forward.

Where is Mr. Cressy? she inquired.

He sent his apologies. Kerr explained. He is not able to get away just now.

Flora lay back in the carriage. She was dimly aware of Clara's presence beside her but for the moment Clara had ceased to be a factor. The shape that filled all the foreground of her thought was Harry. He loomed alarmingly to her imagination—all the more so since for the moment he had seemed to lose his grip. That was another thing she could not quite understand. That burst of violent irritation following as it had Judge Butler's words. If Kerr had been the speaker it would have been natural enough since all through this interview Harry's evident antagonism had been strained to the snapping point.

But poor Judge Butler had been harmless enough. He had been merely theorizing. But—wait. She made so sharp a movement that Clara looked at her. The judge's theory might be close to facts that Harry was cozenant of.

For herself she had no way of finding out how the sapphire had got astray. But hadn't Harry? Hadn't he followed up that singular scene with the blue-eyed Chinaman by other visits to the goldsmith's shop? Why yesterday when he was supposed to be in Burlingame Clara had seen him in Chinatown. The idea burst upon her then. Harry was after the whole ring. He counted the part she held already his and for the rest he was groping in Chinatown. He was trying to reach it through the imperturbable little goldsmith. But he had not reached it yet—and she could read his irritation at his failure in his violent outburst when Judge Butler so innocently flung the difficulties in his face. She knew as much now as she could bear. If Harry did not suspect Kerr it would be strange. But—Harry waiting to make sure of a reward before he unmasked a thief. It was an ugly thought.

And would he wait for the rest now—now that the situation was so galling to him? Might not he just decide to take the sapphire and with the evidence of that risk his putting his hand on the Crew Idol when he grasped the thief?

The carriage was stopping. Clara was making ready to get out. She braced herself to face Clara in the light with a casual exterior—but when she had reached her own rooms she sank in a heap in the chair before her writing table and laid her head upon the table between her arms.

In her wretchedness she found her self turning to Kerr. How socially he had endured it all though it must have borne on him most heavily! How kind he had been to her! He had not even spoken of himself though he must have known the shadows were closing over his head.

I Mean It I Mean It He Assured Her

In the gray hours of the morning she wrote him. She dared not put the pearls into words but she implied them. She vaguely threatened, and she implored him to go, avoiding them all herself more than any and quaking at the possibility that he might after all overcome her. She declared that before he went she would not see him again. She closed with the forbidden statement that whether he stayed or went at the end of three days she would make a sure disposal of the ring. She put all this in reckless black and white and sent it by the hand of Shima. Then she waited as she waited in her little isolation with the sapphire always hung about her neck waited with what anticipation of marvelous result—always ideal farewells or possibly some incredible transformation of the grim face of the business. And the answer was silence.

CHAPTER XVI

The Heart of the Dilemma

There is in the heart of each gale of events a storm center of quiet. It is the very deadlock of contending forces in which the individual has space for breath and apprehension. Into this hush Flora fell panting from her last experience more frightened by the false calm than by the whirlwind that had landed her there. Now she had time to mark the echoes of the storm about her and to realize her position.

From the middle of her calm she saw many inexplicable appearances. She saw them everywhere from the small round of Clara's movement to the larger wheel of the public aspect. Clara was taking tea with the Butlers and the papers had ceased to mention the Crew Idol.

It had not even been a nine days wonder. It had not dwindled. It had simply dropped from headlines to nothing and after the first murmur of astonishment at this strange vanishing after a little vain conjecture as to the reason of it the subject dropped out of the public mouth. The silence was so sudden it was like a suppression. To Flora it shadowed some forces working so secretly so surely that they had extinguished the light of publicity. They must be going on with concentrated and terrible activity in cycles which perhaps had not yet touched her.

So seeing Maj. Purdie among the crowd at some one's afternoon where she was pouring tea she looked up at his cheerful face and high bald dome with a passionate curiosity. He knew why the press had been extinguished and what they were doing in the dark. She knew where the sapphire was—and where the culprit was to be found. And to think that they could tell each other if they would each a tale the other could hardly dare believe. Amazing appearances. How far away how foreign from the facts they covered! But Maj. Purdie had the best of it. He at least was doing his duty. He was standing stiffly on one side while she hesitated between trying to desert to push Kerr out of sight before she dared uncover the jewel. But he wouldn't move. In spite of all she had done he wouldn't.

Across the room that very afternoon she caught the twinkle of his resisting smile. He had had her letter then for two days and still he had come here though he had been bidden to stay away though he had been warned to keep away from all places where she or these people around her might find him though he had been implored to go finally as far away as the round surface of the world would let him.

By what he had heard and seen in the red room that night he must know her warning had not been ridiculous. And there was another threat less apparent on the surface of things but evident enough to her. It was the change in Clara after she had begun her attack on the Butlers. Her appearance of being busy with something absorbed with intent upon something which if she had not secured it yet at least she had well in reach. And that thing—suppose it had to do with the Crew Idol and supposed Clara's wild plan, into Harry's hands?

For Kerr's escape Flora had been holding the ring fighting off events and yet all the while she had not wanted to lose the sight of him. Well now when she had made up her mind finally to resign herself to the dreariness of that night he had at least have done his part of it and decently disappeared? So much he might have done for her.

He was playing her own trick on her but her chances for getting at him again were fewer than his had been with her. She could not besedge him in his abode and in the places where they met large houses crowded with people the eye of the world was upon her. For how long had she forgotten it—she who had been all her life so deferential toward it. Even now she remembered it only because it interfered with what she wanted to do.

For the eye of her small society was very keenly upon Kerr. She realized at once that he had become a personage and then by smiles by lifted eyebrows by glances she gathered that her name was being linked with his. She was astonished. How could their luncheon together at the Purdies' the few minutes talk in the opera box their few minutes talk in the shop have crystallized into this gossip? It vexed her—alarmed her how it had got about when she had seen him so seldom had known him scarcely more than a week. It was simply in the air. It was in her attitude and in his but how far it had gone she did not dream until in the dense crowd of some one's at home she caught the words of a young girl. The voice was so sweet and so prettily modulated that at its first notes Flora turned involuntarily to glimpse the speaker. A slender creature in a delicate mist of muslin with an indeterminate chin and the cheek of a pale peach.

Just think. Flora heard her say. He went to see her three times in two days but today did you notice he wouldn't look at her until she went up and spoke to him. I don't see how a girl can! Harry Cressy—She moved away and the words were lost. Flora looked after her. For the moment she felt only scorn for the creatures who had clipped that interpretation upon her great responsibility. These people around her seemed poor indeed absorbed only in petty considerations and seeing everything down the narrow vista of the correct. Her eyes followed the young girls' course through the room easy to trace by her shining blond head and the unusual deliciousness of her muslin gown. She stopped beside two women and with a certain sense of pleasure and embarrassment Flora recognized one of them—Mrs. Herrick. She caught the lady's eye and bowed. Mrs. Herrick smiled with a gracious inclination in which her graceful shoulders had a part.

It gave Flora the sense Mrs. Herrick's presence always brought her of protection of security and the possibility of friendship finer than she had ever known. She started forward. But Mrs. Herrick presenting instantly her profile drew the young girls' hand through her arm and moved away.

Flora winced as if she had received a blow. The other people who had heard the same gossip of her had been on account of it all the more amused and anxious to talk to her.

She felt herself judged—judged from the outside it is true—but still there was justice in it. She had been flying in the face of custom ignoring common good behavior in short sticking to her own convictions in defiance of the world's. And she must pay the penalty—the loss of the possibility of such a friend.

But it was hard she thought to pay the price without getting the thing she had paid for. It was more like a gamble in which she staked all on a chance. And never had this chance appeared more improbable to her than now. For if Kerr valued the ring more than he valued his safety what argument was left her?

CHAPTER XVII

The Demigod

On the third day she opened her eyes to the sun with the thought. Where is he? From the windows of her room she could see the two pale points and the narrow way of water that led into the western ocean. Had he sailed out yonder west into the east into that oblivion which was his only safety for ever out of her sight? Or was he still at hand ignoring warning defying fate?

She drew out the sapphire and held it in her hand. The cloud of events had cast no film over its luster but she looked at it now without pleasure. For all its beauty it wasn't worth what they were doing for it. Well to-day they were both of them to see the last of it. To-day she was going to take it to Mr. Purdie to deliver it into his hands to tell him how it had fallen into hers in the goldsmith's shop—all of the story that was possible for her to tell.

She had made it out all clear in her mind that this was the right thing to do. It hadn't occurred to her she had made it out only on the hypothesis of Kerr's certainly going. It had not occurred to her that she might have to make her great moral move in the dark or what was worse in the face of his most gallant resistance. In this discouraging light she saw her intention quivertle to the vanishing point but the great move was just as good as it had been before—just as solid as it was advisable. Being so very solid wouldn't it wait until she had time to show him that she really meant what she said supposing she ever had a chance to see him again? The possibility that at this moment he might actually have gone mad almost escaped her. She recalled it with a disagreeable shock but after all that was the best she could hope for to see him again. She ought to be grateful to be sure of that and yet if she were of never could she deprive him of so much beauty and light by her keeping of the sapphire as he would then have taken away from her.

She would come down then indeed level with plainest palest hardest things—people and facts. Her romance—she had seen it she had had it in her hands and it had somehow eluded her. It had vanished evaporated. She leaned and looked through the thin veil of her curtains at the splendid day. It was one of February's freaks. It was hot. The white glaze of noon lay over shore and sea. Beneath her the city seemed to sleep gray and glistering. The tops of hills that rose above the upcreeping houses were misted green. Across the bay along the northern shore there was a pale green coast of hills dividing blue and blue. Ships in the bay hung out white canvas drying and the sky showed whiter clouds slowly moving, like sails upon a languid sea.

She looked down upon all as lone and lonely as a deserted lady in a tower lifted above these happy peaceful things by her strange responsibility. Her thoughts could not stay with them. Her eyes traveled seaward. She parted the curtains and leaning a little out looked westward at the white sea gate. A whistle as of some child calling his mate came sweetly in the silence. It was near and the questing expectant note caught her ear. Again it came sharper imperatively directly beneath her. She looked down. She was speechless. There was a sudden wild current of blood in her veins. There he stood the whistler! neither child nor bird but the man himself—Kerr looking up at her from the gay oval of her garden. She hung over the window sill. She looked directly down upon him foreshortened to face and even with the distance and the broad glare of noon between them she recognized his aspect—his gayest, of diabolic glee. There lurked about him the implish quality of the whistle that had summoned her.

Come down, he called.

All sorts of wonders and terrors were beating around her. He had transcended her wildest wish. He had come to her more openly more daringly more romantically than she could have dreamed. All the amazement of why and how he had braved the battery of the windows of her house was swallowed up in the greater joy of seeing him there standing in his grays with stiff black hat pushed off his hot forehead hands behind him looking up at her from the middle of anemones and daffodils.

Come down, he called again and waved at her with his slim glittering stick. How far he had come since their last encounter to wave it and command her as if she were verily his own! She left the window left the room ran quickly down the stairs. The house was hushed no passing but her own rattle in the hall no kitchen maid on the back stair. Only grim faces of pictures—ancestors not her own—glimmered reproachful upon her as she fled past. Light echoes called her back along the hall. The furniture the muffled curtains her own reflections flying through the mirrors, held up to her her malignance and by their mute stability seemed to remind her of the shelter she was leaving—seemed to forbid.

She ran. This was no shelter. It was prison. He was rescue. He was light itself. The only chance for her was to get near enough to him. Near him no shadow lived. The thing was to get near enough. She rushed direct from shadow into light. She came out into the sun into the garden with its blaze of wintry summer. Its whispering life and the free air over it. The man standing in the middle of it for all his pot hat and Gothic stick was none the less its demigod waiting for her laughing. He might well laugh that she who had written that unflinching letter should come thus flying at his call but there was more than mischief in him. The high tide of his spirits was only the sparkle of his excitement. It was evident that he was there with some thing of mighty importance to say.

Was it that her letter had finally touched him? Had he come at last to transcend her idea with some even greater purpose? She seemed to see the power the will for that and the kindness—she could not call it by another word—but though she was beseeching him with all her silent attitude to tell her instantly what the great thing was he kept it back a moment looking at her whimsically in indulgently even tenderly.

I have come for you, he said.

Oh for me! she murmured. Surely he couldn't mean that! He was simply putting her off with that.

I mean it, I mean it, he assured her. This doesn't make it any less real my getting at you through a letter. Better, he added and sweet of you to make the duller way impossible.

She took a step back. It had not been play to her but he would have it nothing else. He too stepped back and away from her.

Come, he said and behind him she saw the lower garden gate that opened on the grassy pitch of the hill swinging idle and open. The sight of him about to vanish fired her on and as he continued to walk backward she advanced following.

Oh where? she pleaded.

With me. Such a guaranty of good faith he made!

She tried to summon her reluctance. But why?

Well talk about it as we go along. His hand was on the gate. We can't stop here you know. She'll be watching us from the window.

Flora glanced behind her. The windows were all discreetly draped—most likely ambush—but that she should apprehend Clara's eyes behind them. Ah then he did know what he was about! He saw Clara as she did. She would almost have been ready to trust him on the strength of that alone. Still she hung back.

But my things! she protested. She held up her garden hat. And my gown. She looked down at her frail slounces. Was ever any woman seen on the street like this?

Oh la la la he cut her short. We can't stop to dress the part. You'll forget 'em.

She smiled at him suddenly looked back at the house put on her hat—the garden hat. The moment she had dreaded was upon her. In spite of her warning reason in spite of everything she was going with him. (TO BE CONTINUED)

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and I have never had a return of the trouble since. NEWS of the

Indianapolis—The boxmakers in the national union may affiliate with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. The question is to be submitted to the executive board of the boxmakers by its president James Payne whose headquarters are in Chicago. Mr. Payne called on Frank Duffy, general secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and wished to know the attitude of the United Brotherhood toward the boxmakers organization. Mr. Duffy told him that all men handling edged tools in the wood working industry belong in the United Brotherhood. Mr. Payne said he would like to have in writing any proposition that the United Brotherhood might wish to make so that he could present it to his executive board and William D. Huber, general president of the United Brotherhood will write a letter suggesting that the boxmakers affiliate with the carpenters organization.

San Francisco—The State Federation of Labor will submit to the people of California next November an initiative petition that shall provide a minimum wage law. This will provide that no clerk, bookkeeper, railroad employee, mechanical or factory hand shall work for less than $2.50 per day not longer than ten hours a day, during six days in the week that the minimum wage for women shall be $1.65 per day that children under sixteen years of age shall not work more than six hours per day for which they shall be paid not less than 15 cents per hour and that adults on farms shall be paid not less than $1.65 per day and not to be charged more than $4 a week for working.

Havana, Cuba—A workmen's exchange in this city has been created by the municipality. This city will pay $4,000 a year for its maintenance in a proper way. It purports to be a home for all trade unions the representatives of which will be given office accommodation. It will have a meeting hall and a reading room. Employers will have facilities in the exchange for obtaining labor and employees will be given the opportunity to get positions while the adjustment of all controversies as to labor will be facilitated.

Hastings on Hudson, N. Y.—About 1,000 employees of the National Conduit and Cable company here are on strike for more pay. Two hundred wire drawers who quit were joined by about 400 tube mill men. Striking drivers crane men and members of the floating gang bring the number up to about 1,000. As a result of the strike the wire and tube department is inactive. The men have been getting from $2 to $2.75 a day and have been working about ten hours. They demand $2.75 for eight hours.

Chicago—Secretary James F. McHugh of the Journeymen Stone Cutters Association of North America, states that thirteen local organizations affiliated with the international have obtained increases averaging 50 cents a day for each member with a total increase for the year of over $110,000 to 1,488 members.

Little Rock, Ark.—A petition has been circulated by the farmers organizations and he trade unions in Arkansas to place on the ballot in the general election in September amendments for the recall of public officials and for the establishment of a school text book commission. The necessary names were obtained.

Portland, Ore.—A minimum wage bill which will permit no man over twenty years of age to work as a clerk, mechanic, railroad man, bookkeeper or factory hand for more than ten hours a day nor more than six days a week for less than $2.50 has been prepared by direction of the Oregon State Federation of Labor and will be placed on the ballot in the coming November election.

London, England—The earliest use of the word strike in the sense of stopping work occurs in the London Chronicle for September 1765 in connection with a coal strike. This publication reports a great suspension of labor in the Northumberland coal fields and the colliers are stated to have struck out for a higher bounty before entering into their yearly bond.

San Francisco—Newark, N. J. was chosen by the international union as the convention city for 1914. Indianapolis also contended for the convention the vote being 23 to 14. Next year's convention will be held at Buffalo, N. Y. that city having been chosen last year according to the rule under which the convention city is selected two years in advance.

New York—A new organization to be known as the Embroidery Workers International Union of America has been formed and will include every worker employed in the embroidery industry.

Brockton, Mass.—A recommendation that a universal eight hour day be established in Massachusetts will be made to the council of stationary firemen's unions which meets here in July.

Cleveland—Stone cutters voted to increase their dues to $1.30 per month and accumulate a treasury for a rainy day.

London, England—There is a movement in Great Britain to amalgamate into one great society all sections of building trade workers according to an article by a special correspondent in the current issue of the official journal of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International union. The article states that in the early part of April delegates representing 20 great building unions met in London and discussed the question and the result was that a strong committee has been formed to devise a plan to be presented at another general meeting. The London meeting represented about 200,000 organized workmen and it is said that the feeling was unanimously in favor of one great society to take up a national program of united demands.

San Francisco—One of the most important of the progressive statutes enacted by the last California legislature has safely passed the test of an appeal to the Supreme court. The law limiting the employment of women to eight hours a day is now beyond attack. In these words that tribunal swept away the contentions of the appellant. The application of this law exclusively to women is justified on the ground that they are less robust in physical organization and structure than man that they have the burden of child bearing and consequently that the health and prosperity and strength of the public generally is to be enhanced by preserving and protecting women from exertions which men might bear without detriment to the general welfare.

Geneva, Switzerland—Under the title Cantonal Berna Frauenverein a Swiss society of women representing all parts of the canton of Bern has just been formed in the Swiss capital to carry out a somewhat original scheme on behalf of girls and women. The object of the society is to prevent girls entering factories, cafes and trades which are already overcrowded with women workers and where the wages are therefore cut down to the lowest limit. The Berna society wishes girls to learn mens trades and to become bookbinders, capenters, sign painters, chemists, farmers, masseurs, travelers, etc.

Boston—Twenty four hundred or ganized wage workers through their unions and without a strike, received wage increases ranging from 20 to 40 cents a day in Boston. The list includes Wharf and Bridge Carpenters union 300 members toolmen advanced from $3.28 to $3.50 and foundation men from $2.76 to $3 a day with a 44 hour week agreed to. Artificial Stone Cement and Asphalt Workers union with 350 members 60 cents an hour for finishers 45 cents for helpers and 30 cents for laborers with a 44 hour week.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The initiative petition now being circulated under the auspices of the Eight Hour league of Los Angeles which embraces an eight hour day minimum wage and other features in one bill has failed to meet with the approval of the executive officers of the California State Federation of Labor who are advising trade unionists to refrain from signing the petition.

Stockholm, Sweden—The Swedish Master Bakers Association has declared a lockout against the journeymen bakers central organization. Bakers strikes are in progress in several cities of the kingdom.

Indianapolis—The referendum vote recently taken by the membership of the Cigar Makers International union on the holding of a convention resulted favorably. The convention will be held in Baltimore beginning the third Tuesday in September. This will be the first convention to be held in sixteen years and no doubt will be attended by delegates from practically every local organization attached to the international.

New York—The 400 longshoremen employed at the Holland American Steamship company's dock in Hoboken who went on strike some days ago returned to work having won their strike. The strikers demanded that preference be given to union men whenever work was to be done and that no non union men be employed if there were enough union men to do the work.

Lynn, Mass.—To get the attention of the public in a direct way the Boot and Shoe Workers union has kept on the road for the last five years a traveling entertainment. The object sought is to bring forcibly to the attention of not only union men but of the public in general the Boot and Shoe Workers union label.

Cleveland—The license of the local union of the Tug Firemen and Line men's association has been withdrawn by T. V. O'Connor president of the Longshoremen's association because the firemen struck in sympathy with a union at Chicago which refused to abide by the new wage scale that became effective last month.

Columbus, Ohio—The Ohio state branch of the Journeymen Barbers International Union of America will continue its present fight against Sunday barber work and introduce a bill into the general assembly providing for a state license for barbers.

Ty Cobb's Greatest Rival for the Honor of Being the Greatest Ball Player in the History of the National Game

I've tried to live them down but there are some of them I can't forget myself. I remember the time when I caught a fly ball with a runner on third and thinking it was the third out threw the ball at Jimmy Ryan and started for the clubhouse Ryan saving me by a great throw to the plate that cut off the run and made one of the queerest double plays ever recorded. But the one I think was the worst I ever made happened one fall when I was trying hard to win the base running championship of the National league.

It was close to the end of the season and Chicago and Boston were in a tight race for position and every game counted a whole lot. Also some one was pressing me for the base running honors. I stole 99 bases according to the records when the game started and was determined to make it 100 in that game. The great trouble was that some good pitcher was working and he wouldn't let me get on first to make that steal at all. It came down to the ninth inning with Chicago two runs to the good and I led off. I hit the ball a mile right on the line and if it hadn't been for the fact that I wanted to steal a base, I could have made a home run on the hit. I went lame and fell down trying to stop at first but the ball was so fast that I got up and saw I had to go to second so I kept on and slid there in order to lose more time. By the time I got up the ball was back. Anson was at bat. I was jockeying with the pitcher trying to get a good lead off the base when he pitched and I was starting to steal when I saw Anse bunt laying down a perfect sacrifice. Instead of going on to third I slid back to second and got up just in time to see Anson thrown out at first. Cap was going to the bench shaking his head and well satisfied with himself and the world when he happened to look at third. Then he looked at second and when he saw me standing down on second he let out a bark and stood looking at me. I thought he would have apoplexy. In half a minute he was unable to talk just standing there looking at me until I began to be afraid ever to go back to the bench. The next man filed out and on the next pitched ball I stole my one hundredth base and you may bet it was my best steal of the year. I wouldn't have been caught for a thousand dollars. I believe Decker was the next batter and I was praying for a hit to bring me home for I knew what Anse would say when I failed to score. Luck was against me. Decker drove a liner over second the short stop made a jumping one handed catch and I didn't score. Neither did I go near the bench. I ran for center field as fast as I could to escape Anse. Still the luck was against me. The other team came along bumped out three runs and beat us.

It certainly was the worst mistake I ever made and honestly it took Anson two days to forgive me which was about two days longer than it usually did.

CHILDHOOD A VARIED PERIOD

From Twenty Years In the Human Race, It Grades Down to a Few Weeks Among the Birds

The childhood of animals varies with the total length of life with the size and especially with the position in the life scale. Long lived animals have a long childhood. The educated human being requires 20 years to grow up the savage about 15 the higher monkeys—the gorilla and the orang—12 to 14 years the baboon 8 years and the small monkeys about half that time. The less intelligent cat race has a youth of but 4 or 5 years among the larger kinds. The vegetable eating animals mostly of small intelligence grow up quickly the buffalo and all the big antelopes and deer having only about 2 years of childhood and the chamois somewhat longer although the giraffe has 5 or 6 years. The elephant the largest of land animals and one of the most intelligent is not grown up until 20 to 27 years old. All birds have a short youth looking after themselves in 3 weeks to 3 months but becoming grown up in 1 to 4 years. Many reptiles—like the tortoise, crocodile and alligator—seem to grow all their lives. Certain other creatures have a short adult period—the mayfly for instance spending 2 years on the bottom of a pond and living but a few hours after emerging fully grown from its skin covering. Still more extreme is the American cicada which gropes 17 years underground and lives but 2 or 3 weeks after emerging.

STILL HAD A POINT TO MAKE

Domestic Difficulties Being Settled, Woman Insisted Upon One Other Before Understanding of Her

A colored couple, who had been the juvenile court and against the man was placed the charge of neglecting his children. Judge Taylor gave advice as to what should be done to straighten out the family trouble so the couple could continue to live together and support the children. "You are earning $3 a week and have three children to support on that," said the judge. "It is evident that you must cut your expenses down as low as possible. You are paying for a piano by installments. You will have to stop that for people in your circumstances can't afford to have a piano."

You must leave the house you are living in and move to a smaller one with lower rent. You ought not to pay over $5 or $6 a month for rent. The mother objected to this saying that she could not live in a respectable neighborhood under such conditions.

The judge found that they belonged to different churches and he advised that the wife join the husband's church. He added that it was proper that the husband hold the purse strings. After many other difficulties had been smoothed over the case was continued two weeks to give the new methods a trial. The couple left but at the door the woman turned to the judge and said:

Dat will be all right but Ah must insist dat he pinch his wouf an stop talking about me. —Indianapolis News

Daytime Somnambulists

The latest product of our complex civilization is the daytime sleep walker. A hotel clerk, The New York habit of turning night into day and vice versa is responsible for him. He is particularly likely to haunt hotels and lodging houses. Night hawks with somnambulist tendencies are frequently numbered among our guests, and maids and porters now add to their regular duties a vigilant patrol of halls and corridors which the daytime sleep walker would be most likely to choose for a promenade. No body seems to know just what to do with a person whose daylight slumbers send him strolling about the hotel in a state of subconscious activity.

There are prescribed rules for the treatment of a nocturnal somnambulist. Speak to him softly, touch him gently, lead him back to his room. Just so. In the case of a midnight sleepwalker that usually works, but just try it on a man parading around a broad daylight and see what happens. Daytime somnambulists seem unusually high strung and no matter how gentle the attack, most of them have to be escorted back to their rooms in a hysterical condition.

Yes. What volume would you like?

REALLY NOT SMITH'S FAULT

Mrs. Commuter Had Blamed Him Unduly, and Now She Wants the Law Changed

Even in town the commuters wife had been subject to violent likes and dislikes but in the suburbs her prejudice seemed intensified. Their neighbor on the left was the object of her sincerest aversion. "I think he is the most selfish man I ever met," she said. Such a contrast to Mr. Brown, on our right who is the soul of neighborly kindness.

On what do you base your estimation of their character? her husband asked.

"Fences," said she. Just look at Mr. Brown's fence. He has kept all the ugly posts and crossboards on his own side and has presented the smooth finished surface to us. But you don't catch Mr. Smith doing that. No indeed. He looks out for number one and keeps the nice side for himself while we get all the rough patchwork.

But that is not Smith's fence her husband argued. It is ours.

Ours? she echoed. How does that happen?

It happens through a legal statute which provides that every man who wants his property fenced in must build part of the fence and keep the ragged edge on his own side. That is the law.

How perfectly ridiculous she said. If we continue to live in the country isn't there some way it can be changed?

GETTING AHEAD OF SCANDAL

Peace and Dignity of Congregation Secured by Recommendation Made to Pastor

Parson Henderson an evangelist of color was caught one bright morning holding the hands of one of the ewe lambs of his congregation who was a very popular young lady and it created quite a stir among the colored population. A writer in the Norman Mailer's National Monthly "So the parson was brought up for trial and was questioned by the officers of the church as to what he meant by his action and this is what he had to say in answer to the question propounded to him: "My brudders you have seen these great pictures I suppose you know dat the Great Shepherd am always pictured with a lamb of his flock in his arms."

Yes sah parson dat am so, admitted Deacon Jones.

Den Brudder Jones what am wrong in the shepherd of his flock holding a lamb in his arms?

This was too much for Brudder Jones so he proposed the officers of the church have a call meeting that afternoon. After the point was discussed fully the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved Dat for the future peace and dignity of the congregation dat the next time Parson Henderson feels called upon to take a lamb of his flock in his arms dat he pick out a ram lamb.

Truly a Nervy Youth

A New York barber says he has discovered the nerviest man alive. He is young yet but when he is fully developed with a mature growth of nerve he will be a startling prodigy.

This fellow came into my shop the other day said the barber and asked me to shave his neck. I speedily accomplished the gentle task and called out "Next." While I was adjusting a towel around the neck of the next customer I saw the other youth going out the door.

Have't you forgotten, isme thing? I asked him.

He felt in his pockets and said he had all that belonged to him.

"I mean your forgot to pay me for that shave."

Pay for that? Just shaving my neck? he said with astonishment. I never heard of paying for so little a thing as that. I could have done it myself with my safety razor only I couldn't reach back there.

No Occasion for Surprise

This story is told of Forrest the great tragedian.

Forrest was playing in Richard III. And the part of Catesby had to be taken by a low comedian who sauntered on the stage at the wrong moment and uttered the famous words: "My lord the duke of Buckingham is taken in the wrong place."

Forrest clenched his fists in rage but otherwise took no notice of the remark.

Later on the comedian repeated the words in the right place, and when the king expressed surprise at the news, Catesby folded his arms and eyed boldly down the stage and remarked to the great actor in loud tones:

I told you so before, Mr. Forrest, but you wouldn't believe me.

How China Lives

No natural resource is too trifling to be turned to account by the teeming population. The sea is raked and strained for edible plunder. Seagweed and kelp have a place in the larder.

Great quantities of shell fish no bigger than one's finger nail are opened and made to yield a food that finds its way far inland. The lungs that spring up in the grass after a rain is eaten. Fried sweet potato vines furnish the poor man's table.

The roadside ditches are bailed out for the sake of fishes no longer than one's finger.

LIFE AT WEST POINT

"GUARD MOUNTAIN" AT WEST POINT

UNCLE SAM takes a great interest in developing the perfect type of the American man. West Point is Uncle Sam's principal factory and there men are developed under conditions as rigorous as those that made the warrior of ancient Sparta the greatest fighters of the time. It is no boy's play to take a course at West Point but when the four years of hard work is over and the cadets become officers in the army of the United States the result is worth all the trouble that it cost. Uncle Sam is not experimenting any more says a cadet in the New York Evening World. He knows the best way to turn out men that are perfect physically and mentally. And so a comparison of Uncle Sam's methods with the free and easy methods of our college and club athletes is of some interest.

In the first place a boy must be strong and healthy and able to pass strict physical and mental examinations before he can get into West Point. But on entering the school he is only good raw material. The four year grind brings out the best that is in him.

The moment a youngster enters the academy every moment of his time is mapped out by his superiors and he is moved about like a pawn on a chess board with no volition of his own. He has certain kinds of work to do. If he does it well he goes on smoothly until his graduation. If he can't or will not do the work laid out for him and keep at it to the very end he is dropped and that's the end of it. Uncle Sam has no time to waste guttering around with unsatisfactory material and there is always plenty of good material at the gates.

Stirring Scenes at West Point

On arriving at West Point to make a study of the system by which the United States rears men to command its armies I felt proud that I was an American born and bred.

In all the castled cities of Europe there is no more magnificent scene than West Point presents perched on a hill marvelous in the grandeur of its massive architecture looking down upon the broad sweep of a river beside which the Rhine is a mere mill stream. On the reservation every thing was busy. Everywhere cadets were doing sentry duty pacing up and down and paying little attention to the storm or the cold sleet that was driven into their faces as fine looking a lot of youngsters as any one could find anywhere in the world.

An officer met me and we began a trip into a strange land as full of unexpected things as a visit to the poles.

Uncle Sam is a strict guard. One of his wards would find it hard to get into mischief. In the first place the cadet is not allowed a day's leave. His family might live a mile from the reservation. For two years he could not go to make them a visit. The rule like all of Uncle Sam's rules for his cadets is as inflexible as cast iron.

People advocate the simple life for those who want health and strength. No one who has never visited West Point knows what the simple life is. West Point is the only place I've ever seen where the simple life is enforced to the last letter—it is a complex life—so complex that it is a wonder any boy can master its intricacies.

Has No Pocket Money

While in West Point he is not allowed to have money in his possession. He pays his clothing and his mess on a credit system out of his government allowance. On the door of each room in the barracks was a printed diagram showing what must be exactly the position of each article in the room. Everything is done absolutely by rule. To get a new pair of socks or to have a torn garment mended the cadet must apply for permission in writing and wait until his request is officially approved. On the table in each room was a thick book of regulations. The breaking of even the slightest of these meant demerit marks—100 demerit marks during six months immediate expulsion from the academy. A cadet might have 104 demerit marks. Enough dust on the top shelf of his closet to mark an inspecting officer's white gloves—and out he goes.

And the daily routine is ironclad. Each cadet is checked up 14 times a day. To be absent or even a moment late on one of these nineteen occasions would mean demerit marks.

Her One Wish

Mrs. Gus Rublin, the suffragist said in a recent address in Brooklyn. Another type of woman that possesses is the type that marries for money. This is a poor type and an unhappy one.

I know a very big and beautiful woman who married a very rich banker for his money. I met her downtown shopping the other day. She looked wretched.

Aren't you happy? I said. No, I'm not, said she. She frowned and added: George told me if I married him my every wish would be gratified.

Well, I'm not, said I. Look at your pearls, your motor cars, your clothes. Isn't everything wish gratified?

No, she said. I wish I hadn't married.

Harder to find. I would share my last crust with you.

I don't doubt that but what I want is a friend who would be willing to share about $10,000 with me.

Why He Was Grouchy

Klicker-Jones got out of the wrong side of the bed this morning. Bocker—He couldn't help it. It was a sleeping car and every side was wrong.

Ambrose remarked Mrs. Grantwood Jack Wilton is a very clever boy. He has written some poetry to Genevieve.

Unfortunately Mr. Grantwood was prejudiced against poetry, statuary and the theater for he knew that these things had nothing to do with the hardware business and he felt that they were apt to be improper. So he banged his fist down on the table and cried: "Poetry! Theed the boys an idiot."

He's very much in love with Genevieve replied his wife irrelevantly. Well, why can't he court her with common sense and plain prose? Did I write poetry to you Lily Mandeville?

Now Dad declared Thomas Mandeville Grantwood who was a staunch admirer of Jack Wilton, be responsible. You couldn't you know for I didn't do anything with anything but silly and chummy and Mandeville with ill and pill. The combination of words was against you.

Anyway the verses were very pretty persisted Mrs. Grantwood whose idea of poetry was bounded on one side by the Psalm of Life and on the other by Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight. They began to O Genevieve for you to give me. And he brought a cat, too, when he brought the poem. Genevieve told him that the rats were taking the place.

Mr. Grantwood was mollified at once. Good I always knew that boy had some sense. He had been asleep last night for the rats. They marched around the room like soldiers.

Cupid and the Cat

By A HOWARD GUNTER

(Copyright, 1912 by Associated Literary Press)

Ambrose remarked Mrs. Grantwood Jack Wilton is a very clever boy. He has written some poetry to Genevieve.

Unfortunately Mr. Grantwood was prejudiced against poetry, statuary and the theater for he knew that these things had nothing to do with the hardware business and he felt that they were apt to be improper. So he banged his fist down on the table and cried: "Poetry! Theed the boys an idiot."

He's very much in love with Genevieve replied his wife irrelevantly. Well, why can't he court her with common sense and plain prose? Did I write poetry to you Lily Mandeville?

Now Dad declared Thomas Mandeville Grantwood who was a staunch admirer of Jack Wilton, be responsible. You couldn't you know for I didn't do anything with anything but silly and chummy and Mandeville with ill and pill. The combination of words was against you.

Anyway the verses were very pretty persisted Mrs. Grantwood whose idea of poetry was bounded on one side by the Psalm of Life and on the other by Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight. They began to O Genevieve for you to give me. And he brought a cat, too, when he brought the poem. Genevieve told him that the rats were taking the place.

Mr. Grantwood was mollified at once. Good I always knew that boy had some sense. He had been asleep last night for the rats. They marched around the room like soldiers.

As donor of the cat, Jack Wilton received a warm welcome that night from Genevieve's father yet the young man's usually cheerful countenance was clouded. He had determined to try his fate that evening to tell Genevieve that he loved her and that life was nothing without her and a number of other beautiful remarks that he had carefully prepared for the occasion. He had practiced his speech in his room had told his Aunt Salie that it should be now or never and had left home with abounding self confidence. But before he reached the Grantwood home he experienced a familiar and sad sensation. His courage began to dwindle at the front door it had sunk below the waist line, and when he was ushered into the parlor it had ebbed entirely away.

Jack Wilton was not afraid of the choleric Mrs. Grantwood or the neurotic Mrs. Grantwood. It was this girl herself who held him silent. Whether it was the smoothness of her blonde hair, the whiteness of her stiffly laundered dresses the passionless common sense shining in her eyes whether it was any or all of these things the young man could not tell but certain it was that he had never been able to make love to Genevieve though he had served long and faithfully in her train. Many frantic efforts he had made, but Genevieve was neither sentimental nor flirtatious and her cheerful friendliness confounded his romantic flights from the rug at her feet to the clock while Genevieve sang him all her life's songs and told him all the jokes in the last installment of the Woman's Frisbee Friend. It was already 10:20 and at 10:30 as Jack Wilton knew Mr. Grantwood would be heard coughing violently in the dining room and at that signal all visitors must depart. The time was near and yet he could not speak.

Meanwhile upstairs Tommy Grantwood awoke with a start at a slight sound in his room and there on the table was a great gray rat that was his nightly visitor. Remembering his father's tale that he had loved and a huge rat pursued by the new cat rushed into the room. They ran both the pursued and the pursuer right over the sleeping form of old Ellen the negro nurse who lay on a pallet by Mrs. Grantwood's bed.

Oh Lord, cried the old woman, can't judgment day? I ain't dressed proper to rise in glory.

Mrs. Grantwood rose in bed and quick of action threw the brass candlestick at the rat as it rushed past. The candlestick was heavy and it well aimed might have done great damage to the rat but unfortunately it hit old Ellen.

"Oh Lordy," she wailed hiding her head in the bed clothes don't strike in the dark. She was firmly persuaded that the end of the world had come but the rat took a more cheerful view and hung on to life with the tenacity of a Harlem strap hanger. With the tenacity close upon her she raced down the hall toward the dining room and Mrs. Grantwood rushed in the bed clothes about her and followed in haste.

In the parlor Jack Wilton was reminding himself that he was business manager, sporting editor and society reporter for the only paper in the county that his Aunt Salie who had raised him had said that very night that any girl would be proud to marry him and that it must be now or never. And all the time he sat glumly in a straight backed chair, facing Genevieve who chatted gayly.

They too heard the unusual noise in the hall and the girl was frightened. Before Jack Wilton could reassure her the curtains parted and the rat and the cat darted into the room. The young man sprang up with open arms and Genevieve uttering one unearthly shriek rushed into his arms. Her hair was tousled her white frock crushed and Jack Wilton in a hot rush of words told her everything that he had meant to tell her and a great deal more besides.

He might have talked all night had not a voice of thunder interrupted him.

Sir what does this mean? In the door stood Mr. Grantwood, glaring ominously with Mrs. Grantwood in curl papers and a blanket trying very hard to see and not be seen. His daughter's friend Tommy Grantwood grinning broadly John Wilton and dear Mr. Grantwood in yellowing rages but never so angry as this he had been. Mrs. Grantwood relaxing in a rocking chair but never so limp as now. Still he did not waver.

Genevieve come to your mother, commanded Mrs. Grantwood. Genevieve did not stir. She was experiencing the first great thrill of her ladylike life and she clung to her lover.

Sir, cried Mr. Grantwood swelling with rage but his wrathful countenance was cut short by Thomas Mandeville Grantwood who shouted:

Say pa look at that rat! For Jack Wilton's cat had at last cornered her prey and was bringing it to her master for the customary praise. Mr. Grantwood at his small son's suggestion looked at the cat.

Good gracious Lily he exclaimed, what a rat! And forgetting his daughter he fell on his knees by the cat.

Mr. Grantwood begged Jack Wilton pressing his girl to his heart. I love your daughter!

Mr. Grantwood was pressing the cat to his heart. Jack he replied with conviction she's the best rat in the state.

I know I am not worthy signed the young man, but I'll try to make her happy.

She's hungry, suggested Mr. Grantwood, and she's much too fine to eat rats. Get her a chicken bone, Tommy.

Give her to me urged Jack Wilton and the absent minded Mr. Grantwood realized at last that he was being asked for his daughter's hand. He picked up the cat and his eyes began to twinkle. All right Jack he answered I'll swap with you if you must have Genevieve. I must have the cat. Now that's a bargain.

A little later in the evening Jack Wilton was hastening home to tell his Aunt Salie the glad news. The blood was still pounding unreasonably through his veins and he seemed to be walking on air when suddenly the words of his poem came back to him imbued with new and wonderful meaning. He thought of the time he had spent on that poem, his nights of agony his early morning flittings in pursuit of inspiration from the rising sun. And his queer misapprehension that he was still of the opinion that a newspaper man is necessarily literary that it wasn't the poem that won her after all, but my old mouse Nelly.

Woman's Fine Apple Orchard. Miss Elizabeth M. Hayward is the manager of one of the largest apple orchards in this country. The orchard is situated near Hancock N. H. and is owned by Miss Hayward's father, who managed it himself until a few years ago when because of his illness she took over. His daughter the farm comprises 1,000 acres and there are upward of 10,000 bearing trees in the orchard. At the recent New England fruit show Miss Hayward won several first prizes. In addition to her orchard Miss Hayward keeps from 3,000 to 5,000 hens.

All Have Beginning and End. A sun is like a living organism. It wears out. It maintains itself and its planets while its radiant power lasts, but it cannot do so forever. It contracts, flickers, struggles, fades and goes out. Its lifetime is millions of years but it has an end. Let us account for a mere nothing. Crisus Bopuet everything that ends for though we should multiply years beyond the reach of numbers yet all would be nothing when the fatal term is reached.

Some Good in Him. Willie's teacher was telling me today, said Mrs. Skemer, that Willie never gets his arithmetic sums right at all.

Maybe it's all for the best, replied Skemer. He may turn out to be an expert short change artist.

RETAINS HIS CONFIDENCE IN YOUNGSTER

Jay Cash on, Washington Pitcher

Manager Clark Griffith of the Washington American league team has not lost confidence or hope of making a pitcher out of Jay Carl Cashlon. The husky boy goes through a stiff course of sprouts each day. Griff is teaching him how to use the spitter and if Cashlon can develop a good spitball and at the same time be able to control it he can be counted upon to win some games before the 1912 curtain drops.

Cashlon is willing and works hard and that is all Griff wants for the Old Fox is a patient waiter and Cashlon will not be hurried along in the priming process. Washington fans are particularly sweet on this youngster.

LEIFIELD EARNS HIS SPURS

In First Game With Cubs Former Pirate Twirler Holds Brooklyn to Four Measly Hits

Lefty Leifield until recently a Pirate did himself handsomely in his debut as a member of the Cub team. Lefty gave Brooklyn a little impersonation entitled "Stingy" and the Dodgers agreed unanimously that as an impersonator Lefty ought to get big money on the vaudeville circuit when he gets through with baseball.

Lefty held the easterners to four measly bingles and whipped them 7 to 2.

Leifield never was in trouble if you can forget the first inning when a base on balls was followed by a double which in turn was trailed by a single scoring two runs. After that the Dodgers were easy picking and whenever things looked the least bit dangerous Lefty closed up on them. He only resorted to strikeouts once and that was when there were two men on and none out showing that he was confident of himself all the way.

PASSING OF HUGH E. KEOUGH

"By Heck Occupied Unique Place in Sport Letters—Was Imitated by Many Writers"

We shall read no more By Heck Hugh E. Keough, the Chicago sport writer who wrote under that nom de plume is dead.

Mr. Keough's place in sport letters was unique. He founded a new school of sporting comment. Many imitated him. None approached him. He was widely quoted. He was more widely pirated.

He was gifted gloriously. He knew sport in all its phases as few men have known it. He knew the idiosyncrasies of sporting men and for his agile fancy they were an inexhaustible theme. He keenly watched the entire passing show of sport. He knew its comedies its tragedies. And as the poet philosopher of American sport he sang his songs and sounded his warnings exposed the shams and exalted the genuine and always with inimitable drollery.

He was as Watterson once said the "ever welcome Heck." The sport page of American journalism whatever its color is in mourning at his passing—St. Louis Republic

LONG HIT CAUSE OF STRIKE

Belleville League Threatened With Dissolut on Because Freight Train Carried Away Ball

Belleville (Ont.) is confronted with a baseball situation that the heads of the Clerks Jun or league declare is more difficult of solution than that which arose in the American league when Ty Cobb smote a spectator in New York.

All the members of teams in the Belleville league have served notice they will strike just like the Tigers did if Henry Lbel plays in any more games.

Lbel is the pinch hitter of the Marred Vens nine. The trouble arose in Sunday's game when along toward the end Lbel took a good healthy swat at the sphere and it sailed over the heads of the infield and outfield. A passing freight train with a door of a box car carelessly left open made a clean pick up of the ball and carried it far away.

The game was called for two reasons. It was the only ball available and it was not available after Lbel's hit.

"THE LAW BOOKS" By Walt Mason.

The laws are as numerous as flies upon a summer day at making laws the statesmen wish still pond and pound away. No man on earth could recollect a list of all the laws. I tried it once—my mind's wrecked and now you know the cause. Some get it who are in prison yet proclaim with angry shout that they are so wise as these they really can't stay out. A man can't walk around a block. I heard a salaried man say but what the cops will round him in flock and chuck him into jail. I heard the butcher man refine and weep and rail at fate because he had to pay a fine for being short on weight. I heard the corner grocery store and use some language sour because they ranked him into court for selling mouldy flour. The milkman bottled half the creek and sold it on his route he said. The lawyer just makes me sick when friends had bailed him out. The laws are numerous as scales upon a fish, no doubt and so some people are in jail and simply can't stay out but all the time and everywhere one great truth stands out clear. The man who acts upon the square has nothing much to fear.

Brief Comment.

Loyalty to the institutions a desire to improve not only your own condition but the condition of your neighbors and friends and a willingness to support local industries are the things which help to build up a town. Upon the other hand no city will ever grow to any extent where there is a spirit of jealousy and selfishness where the business men are fighting each other and where mass lacks oppose everything that is for the public good. If a man makes his home earn his money and as all his interests in a town that town will be to him the best place in the whole universe. If he knows of some place that looks better to him then he should move and make room for someone else who will be patriotic enough to say a good word for the community and who is not afraid of spending a few dollars towards its betterment. We suppose that there is about as much knocking going on here in Eureka as there is in any other part of the state and yet our city is growing and getting better. Elbert Hubbard recently stated in one of his publications that God made the country man the city and the devil the small town and there seems to be more to this statement than is visible upon the surface.

John Dern the well known mining man and who was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention succeeded in having a plank placed in the party platform pledging the safeguarding of the lives of miners extending the work of the bureau of mines and also of the geological survey. This plank reads as follows:

We rejoice in the inheritance of resources unequalled in extent variety or value and in the development of a mining industry unequalled in its magnitude or importance. We honor the men who in their hazardous toil underground daily risk their lives in extracting and preparing for our use the products of the mine so essential to the industries the commerce and the comforts of this country. And we pledge ourselves to the extension of the work of the bureau of mines in every way appropriate for national legislation with a view to

School Elections in Tintic

Nearly eighty people attended the non partisan school primary which was held at the city hall on Saturday evening for the purpose of nominating candidates for the office of school trustee to be voted for on Monday. The call for the primary had been signed by members of the Socialist Republican and Democratic precinct committees and after the meeting had been called to order Frank Cromar was selected as chairman and Robert Adamson acted as secretary.

Three candidates were placed in nomination M. J. Tischer Mrs. William Homer and Mrs. W. J. Adams. In the voting Mr. Tischer and Mrs. Homer received the largest number of votes and were consequently declared to be the candidates for the election.

The election which took place on Monday afternoon was a very spirited one and a number of carriages were used in hauling voters to the polls. When the polls were closed at 6 o'clock a total of 49 ballots had been cast. The count showed M. J. Tischer to be the winner with 23 votes defeating his opponent Mrs. William Homer by seven votes.

After the closing of the polls John Morley chairman of the board called for order and the secretary B. N. C. Stott read the report covering the past year's work at this school. This report which is published elsewhere in this issue was duly accepted by the voters who were present and the three members of the school board were voted the usual compensation of $700 each for their past year's work.

At Silver City. But seventeen votes were cast at Silver City. Colin McMurphy being elected with nine votes. The other candidates for the office were C. G. Masson and N. E. Daly.

At Mammoth. Thomas Chatwin was re-elected as a member of the Mammoth school board having no opposition. At the meeting following the election the trustees submitted their report and were voted $150 as compensation for their past year's work.

You can save in new by attending the big mid summer bargain carnival at The Tintic.

Tintic's New High School Building

Irving Goodfellow the architect for the new Tintic High School Building was in Eureka last Saturday. He found everything progressing in very satisfactory manner at the new school building. Making Mill Tests.

The visit to this district of N. C. Christensen a well known metallurgist of New York City is perhaps the preliminary step toward the construction of a milling plant for the treatment of a low grade ore from the various Tintic properties of the Knight companies. Mr. Christensen is now at work sampling the mines controlled by Jesse Knight and it is understood that after a thorough examination he will compile a report which will be complete in every way and which will show the amount of low grade ore available in each of these mines together with figures giving the value of the ore. It is stated that Mr. Christensen and associates have a new milling process which they are anxious to try out in the Tintic district and that Mr. Knight is willing to give them all the assistance possible. Under this new process it is thought that such low grade ore worth from $6 to $8 per ton can be handled at a nice profit. One of this kind can not be handled profitably at the present time and the construction of a milling plant for the treatment of low grade ore would be a great thing for the Tintic district.

HIS FIRST UNIFORM.

Is Earning Big Sum

Notwithstanding the fact that the Gold Chain mine was closed down a few days during the present month giving the miners a Fourth of July vacation the July earnings will probably exceed the record made for June by fully $5,000. During June this mine sent out a total of 43 cars of ore upon which there was a profit of about $20,000 and according to assistant Manager W. D. Loose not less than 45 cars and possibly 50 will be placed upon the market for July bringing the earnings for the month up to about $25,000.

The smelter returns show the Gold Chain ore to carry from 5 to 8 per cent copper 8 to 10 ounces in silver and from $2 to $3 in gold while higher gold values are by no means unusual. The present output is bringing the company upon an average better than $600 per carload.

New Strike at Eagle & Blue Bell

A few days ago an important strike was made upon the 1200 level of the Eagle & Blue Bell and while Supt. William Owens is not inclined to do much talking preferring to wait for further developments there is no getting away from the fact that an important bunch of ore has been located. The Eagle has had some ore on the 1200 but the bulk of the tonnage has been coming from below this level. Then the ore body which has just been encountered is in new territory with ample room for it to develop into something exceptionally good.

On the 700 level where a winze has been sunk in the ore for a distance of about 36 feet a donkey engine has just been installed and shipments of high grade will again be in order. The ore body in which this winze is being sunk is bringing the Eagle on an average of $600 per carload.

Surveyor Frank Anderson this week completed a survey of a bunch of claims which are owned by the Scranton company and which will be patented in the near future.

Joplin Mo.—All records for zinc ore were broken here recently when $60 a ton was paid for blends from mines located near Webb city. High price of spelter increased the price of zinc ore. The recent heavy rains that flooded many mines in this district caused them to shut down bringing about a curtailment in the output.

Pumps Kept Busy.

The operation of that part of the Centennial Eureka mine which is below the water level is a difficult piece of work and for the past month the management has had the electrical pumping equipment running at its capacity in an effort to lower the flow to its normal point. It was something like a month ago that the work upon the 2200 level increased the water to such an extent that it was necessary to suspend operations at this depth and close the bulkhead door which keeps the water in check. Since that time the big pumps have been lifting the water at the rate of a million and a half gallons per day and a report from the mine indicates that it will only be a short time until work can again be taken up on this level.

Much of the water which has been developed since work was started on the 2200 level of the Centennial Eureka has been held in check by concrete work which in various places completely lines the sides of the drifts. The water appears to come in pockets and after cutting a seam which carries an unusually large flow weeks of continuous pumping is necessary before work can be taken up again.

Drift Close To Ore

The drift which is being driven toward the southeast upon the 2300 level of the Grand Central mine is undoubtedly nearing the ore and W. D. Loose expects that he will be able to report a strike on this level before many days. Thirty or forty feet of drifting will take the face of this drift to a point almost directly under the winze which was sunk in ore from the level above. For some distance the drift has been following a small fissure which contains iron stains and other signs of mineralization. No property in Tintic is operating at greater depth than the Grand Central and the discovery of ore upon the lowest level of this mine—and there can be but little doubt regarding the ultimate success of the work now in progress—will be an important event in the history of the district as it will show that the ore is good for much greater depth.

The directors of the Opohongo mining company held their regular monthly meeting at Provo on Monday at which time a 2 cent dividend amounting in all to $20,000 was declared. This dividend will be checked out on July 30th and will be the fourth dividend posted by this company the other three each being for 1 cent per share. It is understood that the mine will be in line with a dividend every quarter and that the amount will be increased from time to time as conditions will warrant it.

In some respects the Opohongo has been a wonderful little producer paying its way right from the first and giving promise of making a splendid record in the matter of dividends. The present output of the mine is about four carloads each week.

May Day Piling Up Zinc Ore

From present indications it will be some little time before the May Day mine will be able to commence the shipment of its zinc product. The work of adjusting the freight rate having been delayed by a squabble between two of the roads regarding the division of the money. The original plans of the May Day officers called for the shipment of this ore to Oklahoma at the freight rate between Eureka and the point where the zinc smelter is located being $9.50 per ton while the rate from any of the common points in Utah is but $7 per ton. Manager Dean of the May Day is making an effort to have the rate on the haul between Eureka and the main line of the Rio Grande reduced and it is understood that he will be successful although it is slow work because of the fact that all changes in rate must be advertised for a certain period by the interstate commerce commission.

There is quite a demand for the May Day's zinc ore and the officers of this company are undecided whether to ship the ore to Oklahoma as first decided upon or to contract with a smelting company which is operating at Iola, Kansas. Splendid contracts have been submitted by both of these smelters and there is no question but what the May Day will find the shipment of this zinc ore exceptionally profitable.

While awaiting the adjustment of the freight rate Supt. Gugas is keeping his force busy in opening up this ore and in the bins and underground workings are many carloads which will be good for several thousand dollars as soon as it can be shipped.

The May Day's new electric hoist will be ready to go into commission about the first of next month.

Still Raising In Emerald.

The Emerald property is still being developed through the Opex mine and at the present time work is being prosecuted in a ruse from the 2000 level. This raise is already about 200 feet above the main level and while the Emerald people are quite pleased with the showing there is nothing to import in the report. The Emerald management is quite confident that the work which is now under way will result in the opening of some ore and if indications count for anything a strike is liable to be announced at most any time.

Will Increase Uncle Sam Holdings

The shareholders of the Uncle Sam company have been asked to vote upon the proposition of increasing the capital stock from 500,000 shares to 750,000 shares the increase to be used for treasury purposes. A meeting to determine this question will be held at the company's office at Salt Lake on August 7th and the notice which has been sent out states that the new issue of stock may be used by the board of directors for extending promoting and carrying on the business of the corporation either by disposing of the same by subscription exchange of property the purchase of other properties or in such other manner as said board may direct.

This is no doubt the preliminary steps toward the consolidation of the Uncle Sam and Richmond & Anaconda properties. The Uncle Sam company already owns four fifths of the Richmond & Anaconda stock and it is generally understood that the officers of the former company have for some time been trying to work out a plan whereby the Richmond & Anaconda ground would become a part of the Uncle Sam holdings in order that everything might be handled by the one company.

Dr. McLaughlin of the U. S. Geological survey was in Tintic this week. On Sunday he visited the Balmuch property in the North Tintic section being accompanied by James Crooks and on the following day made a trip to the Scranton mine.

Reports from the Scranton mine indicate that the ore is opening up in nice shape in what is known as the Del Monte section of the company's property. A winze has been sunk to a distance of about 150 feet from the tunnel level and the ore appears to be good for much greater depth. The present output from the Scranton is two carloads a week.

A mining deed from M. W. Ford and others to the T. C. Richmond Machine company, any has been filed with the county Recorder at Provo. The deed conveys for a consideration of $1,000 an undivided one third interest in the following mining claims in the Tintic mining district: Sunrise Fraction, S. de Extension of Sunrise Runaway Montana, Montana No. 2 Idaho Fraction, Alex. Fraction, Turquoise Nevada and Nevada Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 6.

George Ames of Salt Lake representing the Independent Tintic company of Joplin, Missouri, in the territory tributary to Salt Lake recently returned from an extended trip east. During his absence he made a careful inspection of the company's Joplin plant which is being crowded to the limit. Mr. Ames recently took over his partners' interest in the Salt Lake agency for the Independent company and still maintains his office in the Dooly block.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat everything your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and number of patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolute confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Chambers Medicine Co. will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

When purchasing Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefited the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand the loss. All we ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will.

Chief Con Earnings

Manager Walter Fitch informs the Reporter that the earnings of the Chief Cons for the month of June aggregated $28,840.10 and that the Eureka City company during the same period earned $1011.77. The Eureka City operations are handled through the Chief Cons. The Chief Cons is sending out a large tonnage and from present indications the mine will be able to maintain this output indefinitely.

Development work is now being pushed at the Wanless property in North Tintic. Frank Rizzello has charge of the work and has a force of four men timbering the shaft which is down about 100 feet. Recently the company succeeded in selling about $9000 worth of the treasury stock and work will be pushed ahead rapidly.

Manager Jackson McChrystal of the Gemini mine was out from Salt Lake during the early part of the week. He found everything moving along in fine shape at this property which is now pretty much in the hands of the lessees. The leasing system has been proven quite satisfactory at the Gemini and the mine is sending out a nice tonnage of very good ore.

Eureka Man Is Fatally Stabbed

Dave Hutchison Lives But Half An Hour After Receiving Wound In Neck - His Assailant Captured

A very brutal and cold blooded murder took place on Main street in Eureka at about 11 o'clock on Wednesday night. Dave Hutchison a well known miner and the head of a family being fatally stabbed by James Hickman. Both men had been drinking during the evening but according to the testimony of close friends neither was drunk at the time. Hickman drove a knife into the left side of Hutchison's throat severing the jugular vein. A large number of people were upon the street at the time and perhaps half a dozen were within a few steps of the two men but none of them realized that Hickman had used a knife until they saw the other man fall to the ground with the blood spurting from his throat. Friends picked Hutchison up and carried him to the Hun on Drug store where he died about thirty seven minutes later from loss of blood. Dr. Hensel who had been hastily summoned finding it impossible to do anything toward saving the man's life.

Immediately after driving his knife into Hutchison's throat Hickman ran down main street and made his way to his room at the Griffith rooming house near the Rio Grande. He left his friends (who were among the eye witnesses to the affair) state that they believed at his room and while at that time they did not realize that Hutchison's injury was fatal. He was found dead in his room in getting out of town taking Gibson with him.

Officers Did Splendid Work
Marshal Church, Night policemen Adamson and Kemp, Sheriff Henrich, Deputy Sheriff Beitz, Hickman in Wm. Okey, Barlow, Bray, Frank Barret and others immediately started in search of Hickman and in a few minutes they had him in their power. He was taken to the jail where he was held until the morning when he was taken to the hospital.

Witnesses Must Give Bonds
It is very likely that after the preliminary hearing today the court will endeavor to have William Hanson and Elvar Gilson give bonds in the case. They were placed under bonds so that they will be available when the case comes to trial in the district court.

Preliminary Hearing Is Now Going On—Hickman Admits Guilt
Hickman is having his preliminary hearing as a Reporter goes to press. To the county attorney he has admitted killing Hutchison and states that he is willing to go to trial at once. He says that he will make no effort to secure an attorney. He states however that he acted in self defense as Hutchison struck him with a whiskey bottle.

Story by An Eye Witness
Will Okey who spent the evening with Hutchison Hickman and Gilson Hanson and Elvar Gilson who was present when the killing took place says that a few minutes previous to the trouble they had all taken a drink from the bar which was passed around by Hutchison. He also states that there was a quarrel at about 10 o'clock and that Hickman was the stake holder. Hickman was the stake holder and turned over to his friend Gilson and became angry when Hutchison refused to do as suggested. Provo says that they had all been sitting upon the sidewalk in front of the Krug Saloon at that time. Hutchison was standing. Hickman struck him on the head and then on the back of the head. Hutchison fell but immediately realized that his wound was serious so Okey John Summerville and others assisted Hutchison who was attempting to cross over to the other side of the street and then Okey went for a doctor. After the arrival of Dr. Hensel the injured man who was conscious and realized that he was dying was taken to the drug store. Neither Okey nor any of the others who were present saw the knife that was used in the killing. They realized what had taken place Gilson and Hanson did not remain to assist in taking care of Hutchison but slipped away.

Coroner's Jury Impaneled

Judge D. A. I. today impaneled a coroner's jury immediately after the death of Hutchison. The jury members are: J. H. Peterson, J. A. Art, J. Irons. After viewing the remains in a mortuary it was taken until the afternoon of Thursday when a finding was returned. County Attorney Fox indicated that he would file a charge.

Before proceeding with the trial on Thursday afternoon Ben H. Fox was excused from jury service and Hester Fields was sworn in as a juror. The following witnesses were examined: Barlow, Bray, John Summerville, Roy Phillips, William Okey, R. W. Hensel and Edward Gilson. The testimony of these witnesses was given at the feet already stated above. Edward Gilson making a full statement in which he said that Hickman drove a knife into Hutchison's throat and severed the jugular vein which he had used. After hearing the evidence the jury returned a verdict stating that David Hutchison came to his death on the 17th day of

Hutchison Funeral at Spanish Fork
Dave Hutchison the murdered man is an old resident of this district and leaves a wife and two small children his parents Mr and Mrs David Hutchison Sr. being residents of Lak Shore. The deceased was 35 years of age and was employed at the Iron Blossom mine prior to Wednesday when he took a lay off.

David Hutchison of Lake Shore father of the murdered man arrived here yesterday as also did Charles Barney father of Mrs. Hutchison. They have arranged a general funeral for tomorrow in Spanish Fork. The funeral will be held this evening at the T. D. Schuch in Eureka.

Hickman Has Been Here But A Few Weeks and His Past is Unknown

James S. Hickman the slayer of David Hutchison arrived last evening working as a laborer at the Chief Cons here was recently employed at a Bingham coal mine two weeks ago. He is a white man with two children and is about 40 years of age.

Edward G. Green who made his getaway with James Hickman claims that he is a resident of South Dakota. He also has a brother in Burke Idaho.

Many of Mrs. Frank Brohm's friends gathered at her home last Wednesday and held a good old fashioned quilting bee. Three quilts were made and a nice luncheon was served.

Goodies cream can be made unpalatable by careless handling and serving. We have an expert in charge of this end of our business. The Vienna Bakery.

The Past Noble Grand Club met at the home of Mrs. John Morley last Tuesday afternoon. A very enjoyable afternoon was spent and a delicious lunch was served. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. I. Wirthlin on August 7th. All members are requested to be present.

Deputy Sheriff Harry Goldsborough came over from Nephi yesterday. Upon learning that the officers were searching for James Hickman Mr. Goldsborough started out upon horseback thinking that he might be of some assistance in the search. At Goshen he learned that the man had been located but decided to ride on through to Eureka.

Mr and Mrs Walter C. Litch of Eureka announce the engagement of their daughter Lillian C. to L. R. Johnson of New York. Miss Litch was a great social favorite during the time that the family lived here and she has many friends who will be glad to learn of her happiness. The Litch family has spent the last year or so at a resort but returned home in the fall. Miss Litch has been at the Hotel Utah for the past few days and will return to her home today. Salt Lake Tribune July 19th.

The baseball game between the Tintic Titans and the Mammoth team advertised for last Sunday failed to materialize owing to the fact that the Mammothites were not on hand. It is said that the Eureka boys disappointed the Mammoth team in a like manner on July 1st and that the failure of the Mammoth team to come to Eureka on Sunday evening must be up. A picked team played against the Tintic Titans on Sunday and the game was quite an interesting one.

ROCK-EATING CATTLE

by E. S. Cameron

ONE CHEWING is a frequent cause of death among ranch cattle which also chew the shed antlers of mule deer. The bones usually become firmly fixed in the teeth of the lower jaw and the poor brutes wander about until they die of starvation. The late Henry Evans who made systematic search for dead deer during his long lease of Jura Forest found bone chewing to be a not uncommon cause of death but the victims were mostly stags and his own comment was: "Probably as in the human species females are more dexterous than males. Fortunately numbers of cattle are relieved in time and my neighbor (Lund) saved from death a famished cow which had mistaken a piece of tough cottonwood root for a bone. It was wedged transversely in her mouth (against the jawbone on one side but firmly embedded in the cheek flesh of the other) and was removed with difficulty after the animal had been roped and thrown. I think however that accidents of any kind arising from the bone-chewing habit whether to deer or cattle are transcended by the remarkable appetite for rock displayed by some of the cattle on a well known Montana ranch. This rock swallowing propensity (which is operative only in winter) is almost invariably fatal and but very few cases have recovered either naturally or when medicinally treated. The phenomenon was first observed on March 4, 1903 when the senior of two brothers (Archdale) had ridden out to look over his herd. To his consternation he found the bodies of fifteen steers which had died in some mysterious manner—nine in one place and six in another. At first sight the cattle appeared to be resting easily upon their chosen bedground and as there was no indication either of tympanites or a struggle death was presumed to have been painless. An autopsy revealed that the rumen of all the steers contained about a pint of fragments of red rock varying in size from a pigeon's egg to a pea and in the second stomach was a less amount of the same mineral. The mucous membrane of the paunch was so severely burnt that it would peel off at the touch. This brick like rock (called by geologists laterite) is composed of silicate of aluminum and iron oxide which latter gives it the red color. Archdale who has had a lifelong experience with cattle had never seen a similar case but rightly attributed poisonous qualities to the rock and immediately sent away samples to various chemists. Some of the replies were to the effect that no poison could be detected; others stated that potassium nitrate was present but not in sufficient quantities to cause the disaster. It remained for Mr. V. K. Chesnut (the eminent chemist of the Bozeman Agricultural experiment station) to clear up the mystery after he had examined numerous samples of rock. In a conclusive letter to Mr. Archdale he pointed out that the animals were poisoned by an efflorescence which exuded from the porous rocks containing nitric and sulphuric acid salts of sodium and potassium—in other words crude saltpetre. The quantity varied of course with different samples which would explain some of the favorable verdicts returned. The report went on to state: "Two ounces is sometimes sufficient to kill a horse and from four to eight ounces are nearly always fatal to horses and cows. No doubt remains as to the correctness of Mr. Chesnut's diagnosis as the chemist's description of all the symptoms and post mortem appearances exactly coincided with the careful observations made by Mr. Archdale. The latter was still further convinced by the following statement: 'The whole course of the sickness sometimes covers only a few hours and in a few cases death has been observed to follow within five minutes after taking the salt. Thanks to the skillful diagnosis of the Bozeman chemist the cause of the fatalities has now been decisively ascertained but the question still remains as to how these losses are to be prevented in future. The cattle in question (which are chiefly Hereford and Shorthorn) either roam over free prairie or are confined in a 5,000 acre pasture the country consisting of wide parks bisected with creeks and enclosed by steep ranges of pine clad scoria topped hills. These scoria crags are of several different colors many are red others yellow or green some even mauve—in fact almost any hue may be seen. The deadly fragments of white encrusted red rock lie scattered upon the sides of the hills or around their bases. In parts of the badlands where laterite has disintegrated a maroon powder is formed which may be collected with a spoon and was formerly used by the Indians as war paint. It is heartrending to ride among these hills off death and come suddenly upon a trembling eighty dollar steer which after reeling to and fro succumbs in an apoplectic fit or to see a favorite heifer vainly struggling for life as described to me (in lit.) by Archdale as follows: 'I saw her come from one of the rocky hills and take a drink of water. She commenced to shake and wobble about growing gradually weaker and when it seemed that all her strength had left her she lay down. I rode away and returned to her in about half an hour. The heifer was then upon her feet trying to walk but only went about fifty yards when after another attack of the staggers she lay down again and died. The cattle have had all the salt they could eat for six weeks prior to the death of this heifer and they would walk away from the salt to pick up a bit of this rock to chew. What is it that gives them such a craving for it?

While the loss in these cattle from the laterite efflorescence is inconsiderable when compared to that sustained from blizzards or wolves varying from about three per cent in one year to nil over the whole period of eight years since its commencement there can be no question that the rock swallowing tendency is very remarkable and to me it is inexplicable except on the ground of a depraved hereditary appetite in certain members of the herd. It cannot be due to the lack of salt, since the owners are accustomed to haul this out in 150 pound barrels and round up the cattle to it as alluded to in the letter already quoted. Rather may it be compared with the strange propensity of certain horses to eat hens eggs a case of which was recently brought to my notice. As justly observed by Mr. Chesnut the matter is of all the more interest because new to the country and I can myself assert after twenty two years residence that although similar red rock occurs extensively through the pine hills and badlands of eastern Montana no like fatalities have ever been thence reported.

As may be supposed many curious accidents to cattle are discovered on the biannual roundups. In two separate instances a steer was found dying of starvation owing to a firmly fixed tomato can on the upper jaw. In each case it was of course necessary to lasso and throw the animal before the obstruction could be removed. My neighbor Lund (previously mentioned) found one of his longhorned Texan steers with its head held fast between two ash trees as in stanchions. He rode to his nearby ranch for an axe and returning to the prisoner bound its head tightly around the base of the horns to one tree before proceeding to cut down the other. This precaution was necessary with the already infuriated steer.

Why is it that you insist on giving your daughter a college education while you are planning to make your son go to work as soon as he gets through the high school?

Well you see it's this way. I can't afford to send them both to college and the boy can get his training just as well by joining some athletic club.

Settled Long Ago

Now my dear said young Mr. Sunboy when he had signed the lease for the pretty little flat the first thing we shall have to decide is which of us is to be supreme in command here.

Oh no George you are mistaken she sweetly replied. I decided that while our friends were still throwing shoes at us.

Building Trunks for Flying Machines

Probably the biggest trunks ever built are four which were made to order about a year ago by a New York manufacturer and which were designed to carry aeroplanes.

There were two of these flying machines both monoplanes and to carry them there were built four giant trunks a trunk for each flying machine body one trunk in which the four wings each divided into two parts were packed and a fourth trunk in which were stowed four propellers.

Each of the body trunks is 36 feet long by about 45 inches square. The trunk for the wings is 25 feet long and 12 feet broad at one end and 9 feet broad at the other while the trunk for the propellers is 9 feet long.

These tremendous trunks are finished outside in the usual fashion on canvas covered with metallic trimmings. They are so strengthened and trussed as to enable them to stand the strains to which they are likely to be subjected in use. Of course no baggage man that ever lived could sling those trunks around and in fact the body trunks can't be got into an ordinary side door car and have to be transported in end door freight cars. The trunks have been at least once to the Pacific coast and so far under the stress of handling and travel they have stood up well.

Very likely these are the only aeroplane trunks ever built but there are made to order many trunks for many odd uses. Theatrical trunks built to order are designed to stand wear and they do. Besides trunks for the theatrical profession generally there are many special trunks made to contain apparatus used in special acts by stage performers and there are built also trunks for traveling musicians for orchestra players or for vaudeville performers.

Perhaps the most extraordinary of all instrument trunks is the harp trunk which is not only of great size but also of peculiar shape. Another big and remarkable trunk is that made for the carrying of a bass viol. This trunk like that for the harp is made to conform to the shape of the instrument. A bass viol trunk is 6½ feet in length. Smaller trunks of the same style are made for cellos.

Many brass instruments are carried by hand in specially made holders but brass instruments are also carried about in trunks specially made for them. The player of a big brass horn for instance may have a trunk especially built for it. This would be a big trunk in shape and proportions of a convention trunk type but inside there is formed a padded and plush lined deep pocket shaped everywhere perfectly to fit the instrument in all its varying dimensions including the big bell a pocket into which the big horn fits snugly and in which it rides safely. There may be brass instrument trunks in which several horns of smaller sizes may be securely stowed.

The xylophone player may have a special trunk. The xylophone when played rests on a table and the player wants a table that in every way just suits him. He is likely to have a table with folding legs or with detachable legs and if he travels he has a trunk into which the dismounted table and the instrument can be safely packed.

There are vaudeville players who play perhaps half a dozen instruments of widely diverse character and who may have a trunk built to contain them all. The violin player may have constructed in his traveling trunk a special compartment for his violin.

A WOMAN'S GOOD LOOKS

Depend on her general health and freedom from pain. Many a woman looks old before her time because of those irregularities which are essentially feminine. Starting from early womanhood she suffers from frequently recurring derangements that upset her womanly health. If she be beautiful she grows into that mellow age without wrinkles and crowfeet about the eyes or the blue circles underneath. It is invariably the rule that such women suffer little or not at all from womanly derangements which sap the health and leave in the face the tell tale story of pain and suffering. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the famous specialist in the diseases of women found a prescription in his early practice that soothed the organism peculiar to womanhood—soothed the machinery that secreted and aged her face. Thus remedy became the well known Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription that has benefited thousands of women and saved them from misery and suffering at different periods in life.

Mrs. HANLEY E. PIERCE, of 244 Bright Street, Santa Ana, Ont., writes: "I am now a well woman after suffering for three years and doctoring with several different doctors each one saying it was something different and the last one after putting me through a thorough examination said I was suffering from a growth which in time would result in cancer and said I would not live more than two years if not operated upon. I felt very discouraged and I became discouraged but would not consent to the operation as I was too weak and too much afraid. I had last through the advice of a friend I tried Dr. Pierce's medicine and after using two bottles of the Favorite Prescription I immediately felt a change. I also used two boxes of Healy's Suppositories and eight boxes of Lot on Thibault and can safely give the name of Dr. Pierce's medicine to all who suffer from any female disease for these medicines are all they are claimed to be and I hope will help others as they have helped me."

Something new is an experiment. Must be proved to be as represented. The statement of a manufacturer is not convincing proof of merit. But the endorsement of friends is. Now suppose you had a bad back. A lame weak or aching one. Would you experiment on it? You will read of many so called cures. Endorsed by strangers from far away places.

It is different when the endorsement comes from home. Easy to prove local testimony. Real it is case.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS OF WASHINGTON FANS

Pitcher Groom of Washington

There was a time when Washington would have been satisfied with sixth and hilariously happy at the thought of fifth place. Now it's worth one's life ever to talk cheerfully and as one satisfied of the possibility of a mere first division team. Its pennant or nothing. The fans have it all figured how the flag is to be landed and even Manager Griffith thinks he has a chance if he can land a couple of experienced pitchers to help out John Groom and Hughes. Already he has bought Barney Peltz and it is said that he has put in a bid for George Mullin on whom Detroit has asked waivers. Right now pitching is the only thing over which Griffith feels apprehensive. Right now Pitcher Groom is in rare form.

Boston Red Sox Have Fastest and Strongest Outfield in the American League

Taken collectively and considering every point of the pastime the Boston Red Sox boast of the greatest outfield parading in the major leagues in Left Fielder Lewis Center Fielder Speaker and Right Fielder Hooper. Other teams in both leagues have their bright stars but none can claim a trio that measures quite so high as that that looks after the Red Sox's gardens. Lewis Speaker and Hooper can do all that is necessary on the diamond. Each can throw like a shot their arms being feared by all the base runners each can field covering the territory coming in going back or hopping to his right or left and as hitters they are supreme. At present Speaker leads the American league's swat colony and Lewis and Hooper are up with the leaders as batters and run getters.

Gets Lot of Credit

The Climbers

Flora Dear Your letter rather plucked me. Your accusations were uncalled for. I am not secretive neither have I evaded your questions purposely. Judson Barnett or Jack as we now call him is a wonderfully clever interesting man and I admire him exceedingly. You may safely gratify your curiosity with the information that I am not in love with him.

Weren't you surprised to receive my card postmarked Switzerland? This has been rightly designated the play ground of Europe. I have had such a perfect time and dislike to think that but one more week remains to enjoy the scenery. I have actually climbed five giant mountains of the Alps. Aren't you envious? Our party arrived at Lucerne during the late afternoon and when I viewed those majestic mountains hedged about with mystery—the glaciers filling the neighboring valleys—the snowpeaks whose white outline against the sky was cameo like in its clearness I longed to reach their summits. Jack and a few others voiced the same desire and our consuming ambition became to add notches to our alpenstocks.

Early next morning we ascended Rigi to see the sun rise. What an inspiring sight! Far below flowed the River Reuss and there was Lucerne surrounded with its walls and nine toll houses resembling a fairy city held in the fastness of the mountains by some powerful enchanter.

The pinkgold light of dawn her aiding the approach of day touched each tip of the towers then spread over the flowery fields of the valley. This seemed strange when we were surrounded by snow fields.

The following week we went to Lake Brieng and crossed to Interlaken. Here the incomparable Jungfrau loomed invitingly in the distance. The mountain would not come to us so like Mohammed we went to the mountain. At Lauterbrunnen village we took the cable cars which lifted us 2200 feet to the famous Little alpine village of Murren.

Here we had a wonderful view of Jungfrau. This maiden of the Alps appeals strangely to one. She is surpassed in beauty by Monte Rosa and in grandeur by the Matterhorn. To me she is the loveliest of mountains. We reached the summit at sunset. I never imagined such wonderful coloring possible! The evening clouds and shadows gathered and finally night enshrouded the peaks with its dark silent pall. We descended half way down the mountain and spent the night at a picturesque Swiss inn, where we sat around the huge fireplace relating strange experiences.

The following day we journeyed to Byron's Lake Geneva with its roman castle of Chillon spending two weeks there. Then we came to Zermatt. I am a real mountaineer now. You should see me attired in a rough suit with spiked shoes green hat adorned with a sprig of edelweiss and my ruck sack strapped to my back. I somewhat resemble Pilgrim on his rough and weary way. First we ascended Monte Rosa and two days later braved the Matterhorn. I did not enjoy climbing this mountain and you will hardly blame me when you have heard all.

Six of us started out tied to the same guide. After climbing for hours and hours I became frightfully fatigued and while scaling a rugged crag I slipped and turned my ankle again. To proceed was impossible. The guide told us of several huts built to shelter stormbound climbers instructing us to remain there until he returned, and not to attempt a descent. Jack assisted me—in fact I was almost helpless—to the hut a quarter of a mile from the path. He built a fire and bandaged my ankle giving me instant relief and I fell asleep.

I awoke several hours later to find a tempting spread the contents of our ruck sack. We were ravenously hungry and ate everything in sight. At three o'clock a terrific snowstorm in all its fiendish fury burst upon the mountain. I tried my best not to appear frightened, but as the hours wore on and inky darkness enveloped us I wondered if the guide had forgotten to come. All night long we strained our ears for any sound which might foretell the approach of the party. Morning found the storm still raging. Jack showed signs of worry. Our food was entirely gone. At two o'clock the sky cleared and we started to descend. We hadn't gone far when we were met by a searching party. Two of them escorted us to Zermatt.

It was a wonderful experience but I haven't the slightest desire to repeat it.

Jack just brought the dreadful news that four of the original party were lost in the storm. What a horrible fate!

Tonight we stood upon the balcony and watched the calm sunset lights burn upon the Breithorn's crest. One last faint rosy glimmer touched the Matterhorn. Then all grew gray and colorless. Day was done. A shudder passed over us both.

Our unusual experience has drawn us very near dear Flora and I appreciate his bigness of spirit but I do not love him—yet. Ever fondly

FAMILY TELEPHONE ORGANIZATION

Modern conditions have brought about the need for what might be called a long distance telephone organization of the family. "When in doubt, telephone" is an axiom that ought to be impressed upon every member of the family going on a journey, or to live at a distance. The mother can reach her children at school, and children should be required to telephone home occasionally. When husband or wife set out on a journey a telephone itinerary should be jotted down and left behind.

Members of the family traveling should not be content with providing means by which those left at home may reach them quickly, but should communicate with the home frequently, and particularly when there is bad weather, transportation delay, disturbance of public order, or any other unusual condition on where the traveler happens to be. Bad news flies fast, and is magnified by distance. These things cause apprehension at home.

No other medium conveys the personal assurance and causes such peace of mind as the long distance telephone talk can give.

"THE CUSSING HABIT" By Walt Mason.

The Jackal is a beastly beast and when it hankers for a feast it has no use for nice fresh meat. The all-fired fool would rather eat some animal that died last year and so the jackal far and near is stunted by self-respecting brutes and slugged with rocks and sticks and boots. And men whose language is decayed who make profanity a trade are like the jackal of the wild that hunts around for things to defile. In all your roun is you'll never find a healthy clean and gentle man possessed by any sort of wrath whose language needs a lurk with. On a good occasion there is a excuse for turning ring-tailed cuss words loose. The Father of his country swore at Monmouth and then cussed some more that patient soul the man of U with boots so thick he couldn't buzz. ripped off some language rich and brown until old Bill called him down. Great man beneath some awful stroke let loose remarks that fairly smoke and we forgive them as we write the story of their deeds of might. But little men who swear and swear and thus pollute our common air are foul and foolish as the frogs that trumpet in their native bogs.

Sunday's Herald Republican contained a picture of the Spanish Fork firemen who are now hard at work preparing for the big tournament in this city next month. The Spanish Fork firemen made a good showing in the last tournament and the boys declare that they are going to walk away with some of the prizes this year. The convention in this city next month promises to be the most successful in the history of the Utah State Firemen's Association.

In the annual report from the Commissioner of Insurance for the state of Utah which has just been published in book form is the following paragraph which should be given the widest possible publicity:

From the unfortunate experience some of the citizens of Utah have had with promotion schemes which have come into the state from the outside I am convinced that a law should be passed at the next session giving the Commissioner of Insurance or some other state official jurisdiction over all such promotions and prohibiting the sale of stock therein to citizens of Utah until this official has passed on the merits of the proposition and found it sound and worthy. Whether this should include other institutions than projected insurance companies can be determined in the wisdom of the legislature but a great advantage would consist in making it include all investment schemes in which the people are asked to become interested. In such an event in order that no question need be raised as to the jurisdiction of the official performing this duty it would probably be well for some one to be designated whose powers are broader than those of the Commissioner of Insurance as to the classes of corporations he may supervise.

I am informed that in states where such supervision is had over promotion schemes many thousands of dollars have been saved to the citizens and public confidence in insurance companies and other legitimate institutions has been materially increased.

Ethan Allen Killed in Auto Accident

Ethan Allen, who has been an interesting character in the mining camps of the west for the past thirty years and who is well known to every old timer of the Tintic district was killed in an automobile accident at Murray on Friday of last week. Allen and John Sindar the owner of the machine were making the trip to Salt Lake from Bingham when the auto skidded and hit a telephone pole. Sindar was seriously injured and Allen was killed.

Allen was a descendant of the original Ethan Allen of Vermont and when gambling was legalized in the mining camps he followed the profession. At various times during his life he is said to have won and lost small fortunes over the faro table or wheel. Recently Allen has been following mining but meagre success. As a professional gambler Allen had a reputation for fairness and honesty and during his residence in Eureka made many friends who were grieved to learn of his death.

Will Harvest Large Crop of Grain

One of the largest dry farms in Utah is that owned by Hans J. Hassell and Samuel McIntyre Jr. both of Mammoth and which is located in Juab and Tooele counties about fifteen miles to the west of this city. According to Mr. Hassell the crop for this year should amount to fully twenty-five bushels to the acre and as 500 acres are to be harvested the ranch will yield about 1,250 bushels. The crop for the present year will include 400 acres of wheat, 40 acres of barley, 70 acres of oats and 40 acres of lucerne. Messrs. Hassell and McIntyre have been furnishing employment to a force of ten men and next year they will no doubt have a thousand acres of ground cleared.

Encouraging reports are being sent in from other dry farms in the Tintic valley and some very good crops are promised. Hendrick and Foote have an exceptionally fine crop of grain upon their dry farm land near the Boulder Summit and other owners of dry farms in the same locality are greatly pleased with the present outlook.

Death of William Bates

William Bates a well known resident of Robinson died on Tuesday of this week from miner's consumption from which he suffered a number of years. The deceased was 37 years of age and leaves a wife and three small children. Mrs. Bates being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Job Whitford. Mr. Bates has been a resident of Mammoth for the past eight or nine years and followed mining until work underground robbed him of his health.

The funeral services were conducted from the family residence in Robinson this afternoon and the remains were interred in the Eureka City cemetery under the direction of Undertaker Wallace.

Child Drowned at Warm Creek.

The two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Isaacson was drowned at Warm Creek near Goshen last Sunday. The small stream of water is but a short distance from the Isaacson home and the child slipped away from its mother and walked into the creek. It was in less than a few minutes later and a search resulted in the recovery of the body. The remains were brought to Eureka for burial and the funeral services being conducted here on Tuesday.

Political Dope.

F. O. Leatherwood district attorney of the first judicial district comprising Salt Lake Tooele and Summit counties and M. W. Bush sheriff of Tooele county were in Eureka on Saturday. Mr. Bush is a candidate for the nomination to the office of Congressman upon the Republican ticket and has a host of close friends throughout the state who are plugging hard in an effort to assist him in securing the nomination. As a public official Mr. Bush has an enviable record for clean competent work and should the people of this state send him to congress there is no question but what he would use his best efforts to advance the interests of Utah and her people.

Will Organize Republican Club

An enthusiastic meeting of the members of the Republican precinct committee was held at the city hall in this city last Monday evening the meeting having been called for the purpose of discussing the organization of a Young Men's Republican Club. Those present were heartily in favor of this proposition and the following call has been issued for a public meeting next Tuesday evening at which time the new club will be formally launched and its first set of officers selected.

All Republicans of Eureka who have the welfare of their party at heart and who are interested in seeing it succeed at the coming election are earnestly requested to be present at a meeting which will be held at the city hall in Eureka next Tuesday evening July 23rd at 8 o'clock. This meeting has been called by the members of the precinct committee for the purpose of bringing about the organization of a Young Men's Republican Club. It is desired that all Republicans and especially the young men attend this meeting and take an active part in the work. Clubs of this kind are being formed in various parts of the country and the local club will undoubtedly be an important factor in the coming campaign as its object will be to maintain in power the grand old Republican Party to which our country owes its position as the grandest and greatest Nation on earth.

(Intermountain Worker)

That the Tintic district and probably all Juab county will be swept by the Socialists this fall and that Socialists will break into the Utah state legislature for the first time is the deliberate opinion of Comrades Wm. M. Knerr and A. L. McKenney who returned from the mining district this week after having secured fifty new subscriptions for the Intermountain Worker from the Eureka local of the Socialist Party and $100 from the Eureka Miners Union to be applied to the purchase of stock in the Intermountain Worker Publishing company.

The Tintic district said Comrade Knerr is a perfect example of the industrial and political movements of the workers working hand in hand and they certainly are a lively bunch in the Tintic district. They are an intelligent lot and are doing most creditable things down there.

Our meeting with the miners union was splendid the reception accorded us being most enthusiastic and cordial which was substantially proved by the magnificent purchase of $100 worth of stock in the Intermountain Worker.

The Socialist local was not behind the union in any respect. They have ordered and will pay for five hundred subscriptions for the Intermountain Worker. They are now busy preparing lists of names to which to send the paper. The lists will cover all Juab county and they are carefully selecting those names where in all probability the most good will result.

Socialist State Convention

The Socialists of Utah will hold their state convention at Salt Lake City on July 24th and 25th at which time they will adopt a platform and nominate a complete state ticket to be voted for at the coming election. The delegates from this city to the state convention will be C. E. Berry and W. J. Fischer while Mammoth will be represented by Mayor N. J. Hanson.

An official call for a Roosevelt mass convention has been issued this meeting to be held at Provo on the 27th of this month at which time delegates will be selected to attend the national convention of the third party. This call is signed by Roosevelt supporters in various parts of the state.

Inc Ore at Yankee

Supt. Lou Merriman states that he has succeeded in opening some very fine bunches of zinc ore upon the 100 and 200 levels of the old workings of the Yankee. The zinc compares very favorably with that which is found in the neighboring property—the May Day—and will average up somewhere around 40 per cent. The miners are now breaking some of this ore and ready enough of it has been mined to load four or five cars. With the adjustment of the freight rate both on May Day and the Yankee will commence shipping zinc ore and on present indications the zinc product will be the means of putting the Yankee back upon its feet. Forty per cent zinc ore runs into money very rapidly and if the mine can ship a carload or better each week it will pay out wonderfully.

The development work which is being carried on from the main work shaft is progressing nicely and the 300 drift which has been pushed out a point almost directly under the old workings is showing up well. Work is also under way on the 1900 level where drifts are being driven both north and south and this morning Supt. Merriman also resumed work in the east drift on 2000 level. The low grade dump ore at the Yankee is being shipped at the rate of about one carload a day and it will probably take a couple of months to make a complete clean up of this ore.

Heavy Tonnage at Iron Blossom

With an output of 270 tons a day it is somewhat difficult to carry on an extended campaign of development work and yet there is a considerable amount of prospecting under way in the upper levels of the Iron Blossom. At the present time the deepest work is the No. 1 shaft which is being handled upon the 700 level and is showing there is exceptionally encouraging. The drift is following a vein in a southerly direction and tipping values are expected at any time. When the new hoisting plant is put into commission there will be something doing in the line of prospecting in the south end of the Iron Blossom mine as Supt. Charles Zaskie is longing for an opportunity more thoroughly out the ground on the 1000, 1200, 1700 and 1900 levels. He is showing on the 1700 level no doubt beats anything in the deep workings of this mine and a small amount of prospecting should be sufficient to get the ore at that depth. The output from the Iron Blossom mine is being taken in about equal proportions from the No. 1 and No. 3 workings and the general condition of the mine could hardly be better. The carpenters are making good headway with the buildings which will house the new machinery and the installation of the plant is going along in a satisfactory manner.

E. J. Raddatz came out from Salt Lake on Thursday and is now inspecting the Tintic Standard property which is under his management.

QUESTION—WHAT WILL FATHER SWAT?

At Centennial Eureka Mine

Upon the 2200 level of the Centennial Eureka mine the big electrically driven pumps are still grinding away at their full capacity which means that they are lifting about 1,500,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours. There has been little or no change upon this level of the mine during the past week and the bulk head door which holds the water in check and prevents the flooding of the pumps still remains closed.

The Centennial Eureka is producing its usual large tonnage of ore and Supt. Brown says that the mine never looked better.

Shipping Car a Day

Early in August the drift upon the 1350 level of the Eagle & Blue Bell mine will have reached a point at which it is being handled from the level above. Supt. Owens expects to have to drive a raise in order to get into the ore from the 1300 level but even though the ore is encountered at that depth the present plans call for a connection between the 1350 level and that section of the property from which the ore is now being mined. Such a connection will mean quite a reduction in the operating expenses as much of the ore from the Eagle is now handled a couple of times before it can be landed at the surface the large stopes having no direct connection with the main working shaft.

The Eagle & Blue Bell is shipping at the rate of about seven carloads each week and one car of this ore is 'high grade' taken from the new strike on the 700 level. The ore from the 700 is good for fully $5000 per car.

Case Still Hanging Fire.

The legal scrap which will decide the ownership of the old McIntyre mill dump from which Werrett and Orton made some heavy shipments earlier in the year seems to be progressing slowly. It has been several weeks since an injunction was issued preventing Messrs. Werrett and Orton from proceeding with the shipment of the ore. Samuel McIntyre from whom the dump was purchased alleging that fraudulent statements had been made by the purchasers regarding the amount of ore which the dump contained.

Beck Shipping Dump Ore

A few weeks ago the Bullock Beck company commenced the shipment of an old mill dump at Homansville and already about 800 tons of this ore have been placed upon the market. While the dump has been practically clean up Supt. L. C. Doty states that there is a slag dump containing about 150 tons which should carry even better values than the other dump ore and which will also be shipped at once. The Beck property is controlled by the United States people and this old dump is being handled at the company's own smelting plant. The dump ore which has already been shipped has netted the company in the neighborhood of $7 per ton the gross value.

ue of the ore being about $14

Some very nice ore is now being taken from the 600 and 400 levels of the Bullock Beck mine and while the deposits are not large the prospects of the ore leading to something better are very good. A car of this ore recently placed upon the market will bring about $25 per ton.

Shipping Old Spy Dump

Orris Jarman of Eureka who recently secured a lease upon the dump at the old Spy mine which is now a part of the Carisa has already loaded four cars of ore. The returns from the first car indicate that the ore will bring Mr. Jarman in the neighborhood of $250 per ton after the payment of all loading and treatment charges. The assays made recently show the ore to carry about 10 ounces silver, 2 per cent copper and some gold. The ore is being shipped to the Garfield smelter under a contract which will admit of the shipment of anything carrying values of $3 or better. The Spy dump is thought to contain several hundred tons of this ore.

Dally and Chatwin who have a lease upon the Carisa dump are now shipping about four carloads each week, this ore being of a better grade than that which is being taken from the Spy dump.

New Hoist Almost Ready.

A few more days work will be sufficient to put the new hoist in running order at the May Day mine. Supt. Griggs states that by Monday morning the new hoist will be ready to go into commission provided the electricians can finish their job of wiring and turn on the current. The new electric hoist will place this property in splendid condition for handling the large tonnage of ore especially the zinc product which is now being developed upon various levels.

Price Will Succeed Coffin

E. F. Price, a well known mining man who was formerly with the Mason Valley and Gunn Thompson companies has been selected to succeed E. C. Coffin as superintendent of the Lower Mammoth mine. Mr. Coffin has purchased a fruit farm in Vugnia and intends to take up his residence in that state.

The directors of the Lower Mammoth are pleased at being able to secure the services of Mr. Price who has been in the mining business all his life and who is in every way competent to handle the affairs of this Tintic property.

Lead Ore In Swansea Drift

In the north drift upon the 1000 level of the Swansea Cons. mine trade values are coming in again this week and Supt. John Hoffman believes that a small amount of work will result in the opening of some more good ore upon this level. Notwithstanding the fact that the drift has already been driven a distance of about 1000 feet north of the present working shaft the point where the work is now being carried on is thought to be in close proximity to some of the large ore bodies which were found in this mine years ago when the deepest level was the 800.

The Swansea is coming along with the usual large output and while the bulk of this ore is being taken from the 940 the 800 level is now in shape for ore extraction.

Report on Lower Mammoth

The officials of the Lower Mammoth mining company have just made public a statement in which it is shown that during the past six months 2,000 feet of drifting and 350 feet of raising has been done. The company had an indebtedness of $5,091.75 on July 1st but at that time $9,812.12 was due on assessment No. 30. J. C. Dick, the acting general manager of the mine submitted a lengthy report in which he covered in detail the work done during the past six months. In the future the shareholders of the Lower Mammoth will receive a complete report at least twice each year.

L. F. Loughlin, the manager of the Dragon Cons. mine returned to the capital on Wednesday after spending a few days in the district. The work at this property is going along in a splendid manner.

Gerald F. Loughlin of the U. S. Geological Survey was in the North Tintic district during the present week. He is making a preliminary survey of that district and has already covered the most important sections. Far y in the week he was accompanied by John Taylor and among the properties visited were the Tintic Hill, Bolde Tintic, Delmar, Wanless and others.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Richmond & Anaconda Mining company has been called for August 6th, the meeting being held for the purpose of giving the shareholders an opportunity of voting upon the proposition of transferring the company's property to the Uncle Sam Mining company. The consideration is 200,000 shares of the Uncle Sam stock. This stock to be raised by an increased issue of from 500,000 to 750,000 shares. The Uncle Sam company already owns four fifths of the Richmond & Anaconda stock.

SOME of the most fascinating chapters in the book of science deal with the story of the way the various animals which inhabit the earth each after its own kind have come about through long ages of tentative development during a thousand generations. When the fossil remains of other beasts than those we know were first studied at the beginning of the last century there were many searchings of heart among the looking of that day and instead of plying upon them as the most wonderful entries in nature's ledger some good people regarded them as the malicious inventions of the devil intended to lead astray the over curious.

In his book "The Ox and Its Kin" (Methuen) Mr Lydekker tells us the story of our domestic cattle as it is revealed by the examination of the various species living wild and in captivity and by the fossil remains of their progenitors. Although there are a very large number of species belonging to the sub order Artiodactyla (the Greek word artios meaning equal and dactylos, toe) which comprises the ox and the other ruminants (i. e. animals that have the power of regurgitating and remasticating their food) their history is not so well displayed by their fossil remains as that of the Perissodactyla or odd-toed hoofed animals which have only the horse and some half dozen other representatives.

Both families consist of course of hoofed animals but the ox group differs widely from the horse and its relations through the special development of the stomach required by ruminants instead of the simple and almost imperceptible divisions into cardiac and pyloric portions common to man and most other animals. The stomach of the ox has five chambers two of which constitute the rumen or paunch in this the grass is first stored after it is cut by the incisors acting against the pad which takes their place in the upper jaw. When the animal has taken in as much food as it requires it seeks a place of safety if wild or settles down in the field if domesticated and proceeds to regurgitate that is to say bring back the food it has taken in and chew it up in the powerful mill formed by its teeth and lower teeth. When the food has been re-swallowed it is taken into the reticulum or honey-comb chamber of the stomach where it is acted upon by the digestive juices and is then passed on through the pyloric opening into the small intestine.

When a ruminant is engaged in chewing the cud after a mouthful of food has been masticated and swallowed the animal as may be seen if a herd of recumbent cows are watched shortly after their meal will remain perfectly still for a few seconds after which a kind of convulsive movement will be observed in the throat followed by the sudden upward movement of a bolus through the gullet into the mouth to be masticated.

The most striking feature in the structure of members of the ox family is the development of the foot. Both the horse and the ox tribe have developed towards the one end of great speed over firm ground and both have become specialized almost as completely as possible but they have adapted themselves in different ways. In the case of the horse the middle toe has been developed and the others suppressed. The ox and its tribe on the other hand have developed the two central toes hence the name of their sub order Artiodactyla.

This specialization has entailed an enormous extension of the two bones corresponding to the middle bones of the hand (metacarpals) and of the foot (metatarsals) these have also become more or less completely fused in the different members of the family consequently the joint corresponding to the human wrist has become the knee in oxen. Our illustrations showing the bones of the fore foot of various members of these two sub orders Artiodactyla and Perissodactyla (or odd-toed) will make this point clearer than much discussion. It will be seen that the hoofed (ungulate) animals really walk on the tip of what corresponds to the finger nails in man and the claws in carnivora and not on their feet at all. If feet are looked at from the point of view of creatures like ourselves who walk in plantigrade fashion.

One of the most fascinating studies in connection with natural history is the way different members of the same family will modify and adapt themselves to the varying local conditions to be met with. A glance at our illustrations will show the wide extent of these variations. At first sight the weird aurochs or wild ox of Poland recorded by Count von Herberstein in 1549 bears a greater resemblance to the phantom of an evil dream than anything we know in our fields and parks to day and no doubt it owes not a little of its quaintness to the artist. Even more strange are the Kathiwar buffaloes of north western India with their pathetic expression caused by their curling ram-like horns an ungainly ill-made beast but powerful. It stands fully five feet high at the shoulder. At the other end of the scale comes the anoa or pigmy buffalo of the island of Celebes. It is the smallest of all the wild cattle and is about the same size as the dwarf giant domesticated cattle of India. It stands only three feet three inches at the shoulder though it is rather higher at the loins. Despite its slender build as compared with larger cattle its small neat ears and upwardly directed horns which incline upwards and outwards in the plane of the face without any distinct curvature the anoa is essentially a buffalo whose affinities are with the Indian species says Mr Lydekker.

Although the remains of the bovidae are slight comparatively speaking we have evidence that they formed the quarry of the men of the Stone Age because at Cambridge the skeleton of an aurochs or wild ox is preserved which was killed by a stone weapon and many other skeletons have been found which show that the animal was slain in the chase. There is one prehistoric drawing of an extinct buffalo which was found in North Africa but as a rule the artists of the prehistoric ages showed very little enthusiasm for the ox as a subject to sketch in spite of their obviously keen interest in him as an addition to the larger their pictures are chiefly concerned with horses men and dogs. Somewhat after the fashion of their modern brethren save perhaps Mr Arnesby Brown and some few others who achieve their greatest triumphs with these subjects. Though Mr Arnesby Brown be it noted seems to prefer the latter portions of his models for portraiture.

From the point of view of the geologist the ox tribe are a modern group and only date back to the early part of the Pliocene or upper division of the Tertiary epoch. They are related to the antelopes and may own cousinship with the genus of Africa but their direct ancestors are still unknown. The earliest representatives of the group are very similar to buffaloes which constitute in some respects the most primitive of the living forms and are those whose horns come nearest in shape to those of gnus.

The group is of old world origin and the bison were the only section which reached America. They traveled by way of Behring Strait and at one time reached as far south as Texas and California but never penetrated into South America. Seven species of American bison have been identified.

The extinct wild cattle of Europe and Western Asia are called aurochs (Bos taurus primigenius) they were represented in Algeria and Tunis by a local race (B. t. mauritanicus). A nearly allied species is the great extinct ox (B. namadicus) of the superfluous or Pleistocene gravels of the valley of the Narbada in Central India.

In Northern India in the well known Tertiary deposits of the Siwalik Hills and other low ranges at the foot of the Himalaya remains of several kinds of cattle are met with and as these Siwalik strata are at least early Pliocene their fossil cattle are the oldest known members of the group. The largest and most remarkable of these Siwalik forms of typical oxen is the one for which Mr Lydekker proposed the name B. acutifrons. From the aurochs and its relatives this Siwalik ox is distinguished by the sharp longitudinal ridge down the middle of the forehead. More or less perfect skulls of a very remarkable type of ox have been obtained from the alluvial upper Pliocene deposits of the Valdarno in Tuscany and corresponding formations in Southern France. This extinct Etruscan ox (B. elatus or B. etruscus) represents a distinct subgenus known as Leptobos and is characterized by the absence of horns in the cows and by those of the bulls arising on each side of the skull from a point nearly midway between the occiput and the socket of the eye the skull itself is also remarkable for its shortness.

Another interesting progenitor of the ox is the great extinct bison (B. priscus) of the caverns and gravels of England and the superficial formations of Europe. This animal differed from the living species in the enormous size of its horns.

DREAD CHILDREN OF WAR

War has had many children since the world began the new York Mail remarks. Some of them are dead now but others are alive. War's first born was slavery. The savage who conquered his neighbor in the forest killed him as a matter of course but he made captives of his family and his dependents and these captives were slaves. By and by it became so profitable to hold slaves that conquered men were not killed but spared for a fate worse than death. And in the measure that war drove and spread and became vaster and more dreadful slavery spread and flourished too. It was but yesterday that we ended it in America and it is not yet gone from the earth. Wars next child was pestilence. She was hideous! But not so hideous as slavery. She follows war like a shadow. With the wings of the vulture she hovers over the camp. Born on the battle field she flies over all the world for that point of vantage and her victims vastly outnumber those of war itself. She is so closely associated with her blood stained parent that it is probable that if war were no more on the earth there would be no more pestilence as long as the world endures. Then famine. This slither came later than pestilence and her ravages have been more dreadful. In this age and quarter of the world we do not have famine in the same guise as that in which she visited the middle ages and still visits Asia. Our people do not die and rot upon the streets as in Lucknow or Nanking. But famine stays longer with us when she comes.

SLAVERY DECEIT CRUELTY FAMINE ARSON PILLAGE AND

She visits us in unemployment and adversity. She drags out her curse over the years. The crust may not be wanting but the horrible waste and charge of the armaments upon the western world withhold from the mouths of countless thousands the nourishing food to which their hard toll entitles them. Famine as the child of war means for us the untold billions that are squandered on battleships which in a few years are junk to the robbery of legitimate industry. Hatred between peoples fratricidal enmity is another child of war. This ugly sister of pestilence and famine we have had with us many years in America. Even to this day after half a century she waves her bloody shirt in the halls of congress. Then there is arrogance which is war's legitimate offspring and deceit for all is fair in war and the student in the military academy is taught first of all to fool the enemy with all manner of lies the baser the better. And arson and pillage—are they not the children of war that survive to this day? Last of all the ultimate breeding power of war has been well expressed by one who said. War is the father of more wars. Never was there a war that did not leave its offspring in hatreds that had somehow to be worked out. The world is full today of wars that are merely awaiting their declaration. The state of Europe is more like war than it is like peace. Every dreadnought every added regiment of the mighty armaments is a war child of the monsters that Napoleon and Bismarck let loose upon Europe.

SYNOPSIS

At a private view of the Chatworth personal estate to be sold at auction the Chatworth ring, known as the Crew Idol, mysteriously disappears. Harry Crassy, who was present, describes the ring to his fiancée, Clara Gilsey, and her chaplain, Mrs. Clara Gilsey, who is a heathen god with a beautiful sapphire set in the head. Flora meets Mr. Kerr, an Englishman at the club. In discussing the disappearance of the ring, the exploits of an English thief, Kerrel, and are recalled. Flora has a fancy that Harry and Kerr are connected about the mystery. Kerr tells Flora that he has met Harry somewhere but cannot place him. A $1000 reward is offered for the return of the ring. Harry admits to Flora that he dislikes Kerr. Harry takes Flora to a Chinese goldsmith's to buy an engagement ring. An exquisite sapphire set in a hoop of brass is selected. Harry urges her not to wear it until it is reset. The possession of the ring seems to cast a spell over Flora. She becomes uneasy and apprehensive. Flora meets Kerr at a party. She is startled by the effect on him when he gets a glimpse of the sapphire. The possibility that the stone is part of the Crew Idol causes Flora much anxiety. Unseen Flora discovers Clara ransacking her dressing room. Flora refuses to give or sell the stone to Kerr and suspects him of being the thief. Flora's interest in Kerr increases. She decides to return the ring to Harry. But he tells her to keep it for a day or two. Ella Butler tells Flora that Clara is setting her cap for her father, Judge Butler. Flora believes Harry suspects Kerr and is waiting to make sure of the reward before unasking the thief. Clara seems to be in on something. Kerr and Clara confess their love for each other.

The child furtively tested her corn biting it as if to taste the glitter and Flora waited lost given up by her self passively watching for the room to be filled again with his presence. He was back after a long minute and this time took up his stand at the door where pushing aside the tight drawn curtain a little from time to time he looked out into the street. Sometimes his eyes followed the cracks of the plastered wall some times he studied the floor at his feet every moment she saw he was alert expectantly watching and waiting and though he never looked at her sitting behind him she felt his protection between her and the darkening street. She sat in the shadow of it feeling it all around her claiming her as it would claim her henceforth from the world. A ghost of light glimmered along the curtains of the window and stopped quivering in the middle of the curtained door. Then he turned and beckoned her. Sheer weakness kept her sitting. He went to her took her face between his hands and looked into it long and intently.

You don't want to go. The words fell from his lips like an accusation. His sudden realization of what she felt held him there dumb with disapproval. You have won me, her look was saying, and yet I have immediately become a worthless thing because I am going and I don't believe in going. She felt she had failed him—how cruelly was written in his face. But it was only for a moment that she made him hesitate. The next he shook himself free.

Well come he said. She felt that all doors would fly open at his bidding. She felt herself swept powerless at his will with all the yielding in her soul that she had felt in her body when his arms were around her. He had taken her by the hand—he was leading her out into the glistening night where all lights faded—the gaslights marching up the street over the hill into the unknown and the lights gleaming at her like eyes in the dark bulk of the carriage waiting before the door. It all glimmered before her—a picture she might never see again—might not see after she passed through the carriage door that gaped for her. The will that had swept her out of the door was moving her beyond her own will as it had moved her that morning in the garden beyond all things that she knew. There was no feeling left in her but the despair of extreme surrender.

She found herself in the carriage. She saw his face in the carriage door as pale as anger yet not angry. It was some bigger thing that looked at her from his eyes. He looked a long while as if he bade her never to forget this moment. Then I'll give you 24 hours, he said. This man will take you home. He shut the carriage door—shut it between them. Before she had gathered breath he had straightened fallen back raised his hat and the carriage was turning. Flora thrust her head straw hat and ribbons out of the window.

Oh I love you! she called to him. She sank back in the cushions and covered her face with her hands.

CHAPTER XVIII

Goblin Tactics

For a little she kept her face hidden shutting out the present jealously living with the wonderful thing that had happened to her. It was as wonderful as anything she had dreamed might come when she had written him that letter. And if she needed any proof of his love she had had it in the moment when he had let her go. There he had transcended her hope.

He had been wonderful in a way she had not expected. He had shown her so beautifully that he could be reached in spite of his obsession. Might not she hope to touch him just a little further? Was there any height now that he might not rise to? She seemed to see the possible end of it all shaping itself out of his magnanimity. She seemed to see him finally relinquishing his passion for the sake of something finer than both. She looked out of the window. The flickers of gas lamps fell intermittently through it upon her. Her queer vehicle was rattling cranily-jolting as if every spring were at its last leap. She was out of the quiet blue street Montgomery avenue with its lights its glittering gilt names and Latin in signa was traveling by on either side of her. The voice of the city was growing louder in her ears the crowd on the pavement increased. She sat looking out at the maze of moving lights and figures without seeing them. Her intent on an idea that was growing clearer larger moment by moment in her mind.

Kerr's appearance in her garden—his capture of her—had not been the fantastic freak it had seemed. He had had his purpose. He had taken her out of her environment he had carried her beyond succor or menace just that he might carry them both so much further and faster through their differences. They had not reached the point of agreement yet but might they not on some other ground where they could be unchallenged? It seemed to her if she could only meet him on her own ground for once—instead of for ever on Clara's or Harry's—only meet him alone where beyond their reach it might be accomplished. It might be brought to the end she so wished.

The hack which had been moving along at a rapid pace slowed now to a walk among the thickening traffic and from a mere moving mass the crowd appeared as individuals—a stream of dark figures and white faces. Her eyes slipped from one to another. Here one stood still on the lamp-lit corner looking down with lips moving quickly and silently. It was strange to see those rapid eager moving lips with no sound from their audible. Then her eyes were startled by something familiar in the figure though the direct downglare of the ball of light above him distorted the features with shadows. She pressed her face against the window glass in palpitating doubt. It was Harry.

She cowered in the corner of the carriage. In a moment the risks of her situation were before her. Had he seen her? Oh no at least not yet. He had been too intent on whomever he was talking to. She peered to make sure that he was still safely on the street corner. He was just opposite and now that the eddy of the crowd had left a little clear space around him she saw with whom he was talking. It was a small very small shabby nondescript man—possibly only a boy so short he seemed. His back was toward her. His clothes hung upon him with an odd un-Anglo Saxon air. He was foreign with a foreignness no country could explain—Italian Portuguese Greek—whatever he was he was a strange foil to Harry so bright and burnished.

The hack was turning. She realized with dismay that it was turning sharp around that very corner where they stood. Suppose Harry should chance to glance through its window and see Flora Gilsey sitting trembling within. The hack wheezed and cramped and all at once she heard it scrape the curb. Then she was lost. She looked up brave in her desperation ready to meet Harry's eyes. She saw the back of his head. For a moment it loomed directly above her then it moved. He was separating from his companion. With one stride he vanished out of the square frame of the window and there remained full fronting her staring in upon her the face of his companion.

Back flashed to her memory the goldsmith's shop—dull hues and odors all at once—and that wide unwinking stare that had fixed her from the other side of the counter. The blue-eyed Chinaman. In the glare of white light in his terrible clearness and nearness she knew him instantly.

The hack plunged forward the face was gone. But she remained nerveless powerless to move frozen in her stupefaction while her vehicle pursued its crazy course. It was clattering up Sutter street toward Kearney where at this hour the town was widest awake and the crowd was a crowd she knew. At any instant people she knew might be going in and out of the florists shops and restaurants or passing her in carriages. And what of Flora Gilsey in her morning dress and garden hat in a night hawk of a Telegraph Hill hack flying through their midst like a mad woman? They were the least of her fears. She had forgotten them. The only thing that remained to her was the memory of Harry and the blue-eyed Chinaman together on the street corner.

She had been given a glimpse of that large scheme that Harry was carrying—forward somewhere out of her sight—such a glimpse as Clara had given her in the rifting of her room as Ella had shown in her hysterical revelation. Again she felt the threat of these ominous signs of danger as a lone general at a last stand with his troops clustered at his back sees in front and behind on either side of him the glitter of bayonets in the bushes.

She was in the midst of the tangled traffic of Kearney street. Swimming lights and crowds were all around her. She peered forth cautiously upon it. She saw a blond face a woman she knew casually—and there her eyes fastened not for the woman's brilliant presence but for what she saw directly in front of it. Thrown into relief upon its background—a short and shabby figure foreign equivocal reticent the figure of a blue-eyed Chinaman.

He was standing still while the crowd flowed past him. This time he was alone. He seemed to be waiting yet not to watch as if he had already seen what he was expecting and knew that it must pass his way. It was an interval of his route standing as if he had stood there from the first patient expectant motionless. It was worse than uncanny.

All at once an idea wild and illogical enough jumped up in his mind. Couldn't this miserable vehicle that was lumbering like a disabled bug move faster and rattle her on out of reach of the glare of the publicity the threat of discovery and above all of her discomforting notion?

Go as fast as you can faster! I'll give you twice what he gave you. The words rang so wildly to her own ears that she half expected the driver to peer down like an old bird of prey from his perch and demand her reason. But he made no sound or sign. It may have been that in his time he had heard even wilder requests than hers. He only sent his whip crackling forward to the ears of the lean horse and the cab began to rattle like a mad thing.

Flora leaned back with a sigh of relief. The mere sensation of being borne along at such a rate the sight of houses lampposts even people herp and there flitting away from the eye unable to interrupt her course or even to glimpse her identity gave her a feeling of safety. The more she was getting into the residence part of the city the more deserted the streets the closer shut the windows of the houses the more it seemed to her as if the night itself covered and abetted her flight. So swiftly she went it was only a wonder how the cab held together. She had never traveled more rapidly in her light and silent carriage. Now they whirled the corner and plunged at the steep rise of a cross street. Just above over the crown of the hill she saw the sky moonless blackish spattered with stars. Then against it a little fluttering shape like a sentinel wisp—the only living thing in sight. It was incredible impossible horrible that he should be there in front of her waiting for her who had driven so fast—too fast it had seemed for human foot to follow. By what unimaginable route had he traveled? She was ready to believe he had flown over the rooftops. And above all other horrors why was he pursuing her?

The carriage was abreast the Chinaman now and immediately he took up his trot for a little while keeping up dodging along between light and shadow presently falling behind. At intervals she heard the pattering pattering of his footsteps following at intervals she lost the sound and shadows would engulf the figure and she would wait in a panic for his reappearance. For she knew it was there somewhere on one side of the street or the other. But on not to see it! To expect at any moment it might start up again—heaven knew where perhaps at her very carriage window. Her unconscious hand was doubled to a fist upon her breast fast closed upon the sapphire.

With all her body braced she leaned and looked far backward and far forward and now for a long time saw nothing. The distance was empty. The glare of arc lights showed her the shadows of her own progress—the shadow of her vehicle shooting huge and misshapen now on the cobble now along a blank wall wheels body and driver all lurching like one now heaped on each other now tenuously drawn out now twisting themselves into shapes the mind could not account for. For here whirling the corner the carriage seemed to wave an arm and now between the wheels fast twinkling she saw a pair of legs. She leaned and looked so mesmerized with this grotesque appearance that it scarcely troubled her that all the way down the last long hill she knew it must be that a man was running at her wheel.

The warm lights of her house were just before her offering succor stiffening courage. It would be but a dash from the door of the cab to her own door. There was no second course once the cab stopped. She felt that to lurk in its gloom would mean robbery perhaps death. She thought with a fear but with an intense calculation. Her hand held the door as if she were to leap. Before it should stop she must leap. She gathered her skirts and sprang—sprang clean to the sidewalk. The steps of her house rushed by her in her upward flight. Her bell pealed. She covered her eyes.

For the moment before Shima opened the door there was nothing but darkness and silence. She had never been so glad of anything in her life as of the kind astute yellow face he presented to her distressed appeal.

Shima she panted pay the cab and if there's any one else there say that I'll call the police—no no send him away. There was no question or hesitation in Shima's obedience. Through the glass of the door she watched him descend upon his errand until he disappeared over the edge of the illumination of the vestibule. She waited dimly aware of voices going on beyond the curtains of the drawing room but all her listening power was concentrated on the silence without—a silence that remained unbroken and out of which Shima returned with the same imperturbable countenance.

He wants ten dollars.

Oh yes give him anything. Flora gasped. If that was all the Chinaman had followed her. But her relief was momentary for instantly Shima was back again.

I gave him ten dollars the cabman.

Now she gasped again. Oh the cabman. But the other one. For an instant Shima seemed to hesitate glancing past her shoulder as if there was something that she doubted he had. Then as she still hung on his answer he brought it out in a lowered voice.

Madam there was no one else there.

CHAPTER XIX

The Face in the Garden

With her hand at her distressed forehead she turned and saw between the curtains of the drawing room Harry and behind him Clara looking out at her with faces of amazement and she fancied horror. Harry came straight for her.

Why you poor child what's happened to you?

She gave him a look. She couldn't forget their scene in the red room but the mixture of apprehension and real concern in his face went far toward melting her. She might even have told him something at least a part of the truth but for that other standing watching her from the drawing room door. With Clara there was nothing for it but to ignore her disorder hair her hat in her hand her ruffle torn and trailing on the floor.

She put on a splendid nonchalance as if it were none of their business. Oh I am sorry if I kept you waiting.

It was Clara who spoke to her past Harry's blank astonishment. Why we don't mind waiting a few moments more while you dress.

I shant have to dress. Such a statement Flora felt must amaze even Shima waiting like an image on the threshold of the dining room. But if these people were waiting to be amazed she felt herself equal to amazing them to the top of their expectations.

Oh but at least go up and let Marrika give you some pins. Clara protested hurrying forward as if fairly to drive her.

Thank you no this will do. Flora said. On one point she was quite clear. She wasn't going to leave those two together for a moment to discuss her plight not till she could first get at Harry alone. Then and there she turned to the mirror and with her combs began to catch back and smooth the disorder of her hair feeling all the while Clara's reflection hovering perturbed and vigilant in the background of her own.

While her hands were busy seeming to accommodate Clara her mind was marshaled to Clara's outwitting. The only thing to do was to tell nothing. Let Clara spend her time in guessing. Unless by some wild chance she had seen Kerr in the garden she couldn't come near the truth of what had happened. But what was to be done with Harry? Harry was too close to her to be ignored.

At that dreadful dinner where she sat a conscious frustrater of these two silent ones glancing at Harry's face she knew that if she didn't attack she would be attacked by him. It was here in the midst of the noiseless passings of Shima watching Harry's suspicious glances flashing across the table at her strange disorder that the idea occurred to her of a way out of it. She was bold enough to try a daring thrust at the mystery. If ever a hunter was to be led off on a false scent Harry was that one. She was amazed at the sudden fearless impulse that had sprung up in her. She wasn't even afraid to say to him under Clara's nose. Harry I want you to myself after dinner. Come with me into the garden study.

He was very willing to follow her. She thought she detected in his alacrity something more than curiosity or concern. It seemed almost as if Harry was ashamed of that scene in the red room and anxious to make it up with her. He even tried before they had reached the head of the stairs.

Oh Flora—I say Flora I—

But an explanation between them was the last thing she wanted just then. She fairly ran leaving him panting in the wake of her airy skirts.

For the first time since the thing began Clara was left out completely. Flora knew she was even left out of a possibility of listening at the key hole. For the bright tight little room into which Harry followed her was approached by a square entry and a double door. The room itself overhung the garden as a ship's deck overhangs the sea. Leather books and long red curtains were the note of it. She and Harry had often been here together before.

He hadn't got his breath. He had hardly shut the door on them before she began. Well something has happened. She had his attention. His other purpose was arrested. Oh something extraordinary. I would have told you on the spot only I thought you would rather Clara didn't know it.

I? What left him staring? What have I to do with it?

At this she gave him a long look. It was through you he ever had the chance of seeing me. I mean the blue-eyed Chinaman. He has followed me all the evening. He followed me here to the very door. Flora's array of facts fell so fast so hard so pointed that for a moment they held him speechless in the middle of the room.

Any fleeting suspicion she might have had of his complicity in the Chinaman's pursuit vanished. He showed plain bewilderment. For a moment he was more at sea than her self. The next she saw the shadow of a thought so disturbing that it sharpened his ruddy face to harshness. He stepped toward her. What did he say to you? He loomed directly above her threatening.

Nothing. He didn't say anything. But I know he followed me quite to the house. I saw his shadow all the way down the hill.

Harry still breathed quickly. Where—how did he come across you?

She'd been prepared for the question.

I was driving down Sutter street and he saw me at the carriage window.

Harry stood tense poised catching everything as she tossed it off their as if all at once he felt the full weight of the burden. Lord! he said and let himself down heavily into a chair. It was plain in his helpless stare that he knew exactly what it all meant. Laying her hands on the high chair arms leaning down so that she could look into his face Flora made her thrust.

What do you think he wants? she gently asked. It was as if she would coax it out of him. His answer was correspondingly low and soft.

It's that damned ring.

She heard her secret fear spoken aloud with such assurance that she waited certain at the next moment. Harry's voice would people the silence with all the facts that had so far escaped her. But when after a moment of looking before him he did speak he went back to the beginning which they both knew.

You know he didn't want to part with it in the first place.

Yes yes but he did. Flora in sisted.

Well he answered quickly but that was before—He caught him self and went on with a scarcely perceptible break. He may have had a better offer for it since.

He couldn't have put it more mildly and yet that temperate phrase brought back to her in a flash a windy night full of raucous voices and the great figures in the paper that had covered half a page—the reward for the Crew Idol. Could it be that—that sum so overwhelming to human caution and human decency which Harry had cloaked by his grudging phrase some better offer? What else could he mean? And what else could the blue-eyed Chinaman mean by his strange pursuit of her?

Some one must have wanted it awfully. Flora tried again keeping step with his mild admission.

Harry covered her with an impressive stare. There's something queer about that ring he nodded to her. He was going to tell her at last! She gazed at him in expectation but presently she realized that nothing more was coming. He had stopped at the beginning. She tried to urge him on.

Queer what do you mean? She was feigning surprise.

He looked at her cautiously. Why, you must have noticed it yourself when we were at the shop. And now, tonight his having followed you.

She could see him hesitate choosing his words. She knew well enough her own fear of saying too much—but what was Harry afraid of? Did he suspect her feeling for Kerr? Was that why he was holding back leaving out giving her the small expurgated version of what he knew. She tried again making it plainer.

You think the ring is something he ought not to have had something that belongs somewhere else?

He looked away from her around the room as if to pick up his answer from some of the corners. Well any way it's lucky we waited about that setting. He said with quick irrelevance. If you're going to be annoyed in this way you'd better let me have it.

Why hadn't she thought of that! It was what any man might say after hearing such a story as hers yet it was the last thing she had thought of and the last thing she wanted.

Oh leave it with me. she quavered at least till you're sure!

Oh no! He gave his head a quick decided shake. If something should come out you wouldn't want to be mixed up in it.

Then why not give it back to the Chinaman? she tried him.

Oh that's ridiculous. He was in a passion. His darkening eyes his swelling nostrils his aspect so out of proportion to her mild and almost playful suggestion frightened her. He saw it and instantly his mood dropped to mere irritation. Oh Flora don't make a scene about it. This thing has been on my mind for days—the thought that you had the ring. I was afraid I had no business to let you have it in the first place and what you've told me to night has clean knocked me out. I don't know what I'm saying. Come let me have it and if there's anything queer about the business at least we'll get it cleared up.

But smiling she retreated before him.

Why Flora he argued half laughing but still with that dry end of irritation in his voice. What on earth do you want to keep the thing for?

By this time she backed against the window and faced him. Why it's my engagement ring.

He looked at her. She couldn't tell whether he was readiest to laugh or rage.

You gave it to me for that she pleaded. Why shouldn't I keep it until you give me a real reason for giving it up? If you really know any thing who don't you tell me? She was sure she had him there but he burst out at last.

Modern conditions have brought about the need for what might be called a long distance telephone organization of the family. "When in doubt, telephone" is an axiom that ought to be impressed upon every member of the family going on a journey, or to live at a distance. The mother can reach her children at school, and children should be required to telephone home occasionally. When husband or wife set out on a journey a telephone itinerary should be jotted down and left behind.

Members of the family traveling should not be content with providing means by which those left at home may reach them quickly, but should communicate with the home frequently, and particularly when there is bad weather, transportation delay, disturbance of public order, or any other unusual condition on where the traveler happens to be. Bad news flies fast, and is magnified by distance. These things cause apprehension at home.

No other medium conveys the personal assurance and causes such peace of mind as the long distance telephone talk can give.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and number of patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

All of which seems to promise a vast improvement in the social condition of the steel workers whose great foes heretofore have been accidents from machinery and excessive fatigue.

Pittsburg.—At a conference between 15 representatives of the United Sons of Vulcan and representatives of the independent steel manufacturers of this district a new wage scale to go into effect July 1 was adopted for 1912 and 1913 and calls for $6 per ton and other prices in accordance. The new rates for motormen and conductors vary according to length and efficiency of service ranging from 23 cents an hour for beginners to 28 cents an hour after the fourth year. The average increase is about five per cent.

Indianapolis.—Arrangements are being completed for the entertainment of the delegates to the biennial convention of the United Garment Workers of America which will be held in this city the week of August 26. A large number of delegates are expected to attend the meeting and it is the wish of those in charge of the arrangements to make their visit a memorable one.

Prize Winners at Silver

Baseball game between two picked teams resulted in a score of 6 to 6. Alex Sutherland and Thomas Garfield entered the single hand drilling contest and the former won drilling 3 inches. William Sanford and Frank Beckstead won the double hand contest with 12 inches their opponents being George Gouley and George Green. By way of explanation for the short distance drilled the Reporter wishes to state that the rock used was an exceptionally hard iron pyrite formation upon which an ordinary drill had but little effect.

Eureka people copied off quite a bunch of the prize. Frank Cook's horse Proctor Nott winning the horse race. Jack Downey carried off the honors in the wrestling match. Mrs. James Wilson won the hobble skirt race and a local lad whose name we are unable to learn won the diving contest. For Eureka People Something new is an experiment. Must be proved to be as represented. The statement of a manufacturer is not convincing proof of merit. But the endorsement of friends is. Now suppose you had a bad back. A lame neck or a tingling one. Would you experiment on it? You will read of many so-called cures. Endorsed by strangers from far away places.

It is different when the endorsement comes from home. I say to prove it testimony. Real testimony. Mrs. James Shaw P. O. Box No. 320 Eureka Utah 1912. Having been troubled for some time with disordered kidneys which caused severe backaches I procured Doan's Kidney Pills which I saw advertised. Councilmen Fix Tax Levy Considerable business of a routine nature was transacted at the meeting of the city council held on Friday evening of last week. All members answered to the roll call and the mayor, A. I. Mitchell was in the chair.

The Fisher Brewing Co. presented an application for a wholesale liquor license to run for the period of one year. The application being accompanied by the necessary bond. The council approved the bond and granted the license.

People living upon the street leading to the Chief Cons mine presented a petition protesting against the present condition of this street which they state is badly cut up by heavily loaded ore wagons. The matter was referred to the proper committee for investigation.

A petition protesting against the construction of a concrete sidewalk upon the west side of Church street and signed by a majority of the property owners was presented. Upon motion of Councilman Church the proposed improvement was tabled indefinitely.

Rev. Powell, of the M. T. Church was present at the meeting and submitted a proposition to purchase a small strip of ground which has heretofore been used as a street and which is inside the new fence which was enclosed the property of his church. The council was adverse to selling this property but informed Mr. Powell that as the fence does not in any way injure or obstruct the street the church might have the use of the ground.

Recorder Bacon read a bunch of bills and after they had been audited and found correct he was authorized to draw warrants for their payment. These claims amounted in all to $2,638.

Councilman Church introduced a resolution fixing the tax levy for the present year at 11 mills. This is the same as for last year but a larger percentage of the money realized will be appropriated for street improvements. The levy will be apportioned as follows: 3 mills for the maintenance of the public library, 2 mills for sewer purposes, 2 mills for improvements to water system and 4 mills for street improvements.

Dr. Hensel the city physician was present at the meeting and made a verbal report regarding matters which had been brought to his attention. A number of business houses will be asked to connect up with the sewer and thus do away with existing nuisances.

HUGH S. FULLERTON

By TOMMY LEACH

Outfielder Chicago Cubs Recently Secured From Pittsburgh Who is Considered One of the Bravest and Cleverest Men in the League

A fellow usually makes his worst mistake about the time he thinks he is pulling off the smartest bit of play ever invented. I think mine happened that way. I tried to get away with something and got past with it and then made the mistake of trying to do it again. It is funny to think it over now but it wasn't so funny in the clubhouse after the game. I don't know that such a trick ever has been pulled off or attempted and hereafter I wouldn't advise any player to try it. It happened this way. One day we were playing on the Pittsburgh grounds and, late in the game, Chicago had us beaten. Besides that they had a runner on third with one out and the batter hit a long line fly straight out over my head. I was giving the ball a hard chase and jumped at it with my back to the field. The ball went right over my finger tips and hit the ground ahead of me. I was going at top speed and kept right on. The ball hit the ground bounced up instead of outward and right into my hands. I whirled around as quickly as possible and threw to Clarke to hurry the ball back to the infield snapping it to him backhanded and to my surprise he whirled and threw home. The runner scored and the next man fled out. To my astonishment the team jogged off the field. I knew there were only two out and was almost to the bench before I realized that they had given me credit for catching the ball on the fly instead of on the bounce. My body had been between the ball and the umpires and everyone thought I had caught the ball when I jumped for it. A few weeks later we were playing either Boston or Philadelphia on the same grounds. They had a runner on second with two out and the batter hit a fly of the same kind over my head. I came so near catching the ball that it touched my fingers dropped and bounded up into my hands the same way. As soon as it did I tried to get away from it and made a run for the clubhouse as it happened in the ninth inning. I thought the umpires would credit me with the catch and that it would end the game. But that time the umpires happened to see the ball hit the ground and while I was bluffing it out and jogging for the clubhouse the runner scored all the way from second tied up the score and they beat us out in the tenth. It rather cured me of trying to bluff umpires—at least with my back turned so that I can't tell whether they see me or not.

Cobb Places Hits
There's nothing in this stuff about a ball player being able to place his hits into right or left field at choice remarked a wise bug a day or two ago. And yet there is. It was not until three years ago Ty Cobb says that I began figuring upon the advantage of placing my drives. Now that system gives me a base hit that I used to lose. Take a man on first base ahead of me. The hit and run is then given. Either shortstop or second baseman is to cover the bag for the throw leaving one side of the diamond open. As the runner starts I watch the start of the rival infielder and then push the ball toward the open space. Any old kind of a tap will go for a base hit. You can't take a full swing and do this but you can at least push the ball in that direction.

T goes to Train at Gulfport
The Detroit management has signed the contract to train at Gulfport, Miss. and expects that point to be its permanent camp. It is splendidly equipped with hotel accommodations and New Orleans and Mobile are but two hours ride away from exhibition games.

ATHLETICS' CLEVER "SPITBALL" TWIRLER.

Cy Morgan, a Consistent Performer

Cy Morgan has pitched consistent winning ball all season for the Philadelphia American League champions and in all probability will be one of the Athletic entries in the pitching battle for a world's champion ship. Morgan pitched in the American Association a few years ago. He was with the St. Paul club and was known as one of the slowest pitchers in the league. The bugs disliked to see him toe the slab because he took the time limit in moistening and delivering each ball or strike.

Friends of Indianapolis
Since the elevation of Charley O'Leary to the managers' job an alliance has been formed by Indianapolis with Detroit and this together with the friendly relations that have existed with the Chicago Cubs makes it appear that some talent will be supplied by one of these clubs. President Navin has promised the Indians aid and a deal is already simmering with President Murphy of the Cubs.

Eddie Hahn Doing Well
Eddie Hahn, former White Sox outfielder is playing with the Des Moines team this spring and has been doing some great work for Frank Isbell. His throwing arm is as good as it ever was.

Scattering Notes of the Diamond

Jack Murray of the Giants still has a fine throwing arm.

Wolverton's new outfielder Pat Maloney is making good from the start. Larry McLean caught 38 straight games for the Reds before he took a day's rest.

Billy Phyle, the veteran third sacker has been appointed an umpire in the Canadian league.

Pobby Gilks, Nap scout has turned up in New Orleans. He reports material scarce as usual.

Earl Mack, Connie's son is managing the Atlantic City team this year. It seems to run in the family.

Ben Houser, the tall left-handed first baseman of the Boston Braves is a strong favorite with the crowds.

Pat Maloney, the outfielder the Highlanders bought to take Wolters' place, cost the tidy sum of $10,000.

Since Russell Ford joined the New York Americans in 1910 he has lost but two games to the Cleveland Naps.

Cy Seymour, formerly of the New York Giants is hitting the ball hard for Newark of the International league.

The bean ball has put many players on the shelf. Fred Clarke and Frank Chance being the latest important instances.

Jack Coombs is wearing a harness to protect himself when he pitches because of the many injuries he received last year.

Boston fans like the work of Young O'Rourke, the Bridgeport shortstop, now playing with Johnny Kling's Boston Braves.

Ted Easterly uses the biggest bat in the major leagues. An average player can't lift it up unless he's feeling extra strong.

Denny Sullivan for two seasons outfielder for the Kansas City team has been sold to Indianapolis. He formerly was with Toledo.

It is rumored around the circuit that much of the poor showing of the Naps is due to internal strife and that it is not a happy family by any means.

Holdenville won a freak game from Oklahoma City in the Oklahoma State league recently. Holdenville made but one hit off Fuch of Oklahoma City but it was a homer with two men on bases and it won the game.

At the meeting of the council the other evening the members discussed the failure of the telephone company to make the long promised improvements in this city. At the time this matter was being agitated almost a year ago the telephone officials promised that the work would be taken up as soon as spring weather would permit. Spring has come and gone and summer is fast passing away and yet nothing has been done. The city attorney has been instructed to serve notice upon the telephone company informing this corporation that further delay will not be tolerated. The city officers should insist upon this work being done immediately. There is absolutely no reason why the telephone company should be allowed to monopolize the streets with two rows of unsightly poles and a net work of wires.

"LITTLE GIRL" By Walt Mason

Little girl so glad and jolly playing with your home made dolly built of rags and straw fill the sunny room with laughter heedless of the sorrow after—that is childhood a law! Let it sail and sail and sail in the boat of the joy flysian that to youth belongs let no prophecy of sorrow scheduled for a sad tomorrow still your joyous songs! Soon enough will come the worry and the labors and the hurry soon you'll cool and scrub soon with milliners and drapers you will fuss and read long papers at the Culture Club. Little your form but soon you'll force it in a torture chamber corset that will make you bawl and those little feet that twinkle you will squeeze until they wrinkle into shoes too small. And those sunny locks so angled will be tortured and kinked into waves and curls and you'll buy complexion powder and your bonnets will be looser than the other girls. Little girl with home made dolly cut out was an melancholy jump and sing and play! Till the rippling air with laughter! Tears and corns will follow after! This is childhood's day!

Brief Comment.

Salt Lake telephone subscribers are howling long and hard because of the poor service. There is room for improvement here in Tintic.

Visiting motorcycle riders seem to think Main street is a race track. An ordinance regulating the speed of motorcycles and automobiles might be worth considering.

According to the figures published elsewhere in this issue the total assessed valuation of the property of Juab county is practically five and a half million dollars being about half a million dollars more than for the previous year. In the matter of wealth Juab county is well along toward the top of the list.

The interstate commerce commission has notified shippers of liquor that the barrels must not be filled but that a small air space must be left in every cask. It's too bad the commission cannot enforce the same regulation upon those who are in the habit of drinking it making it compulsory for them to stop drinking while there is yet a small air space in their anatomy.

No one objects to the youngsters getting all the pleasure possible out of the swimming hole which they have constructed near the Holden Tunnel but wouldn't it be better if the officers insisted upon the boys wearing some sort of bathing caps even if they were only a breech cloth made out of Teddy Roosevelt's battle flag—a bandana handkerchief. It wouldn't be so bad if the boys remained in the water but it seems that they spend the bulk of the time in parading around in the sunlight. The place is too public for such unrestricted bathing.

Convention Notes

A message from the firemen of Sandy states that they will operate a special train to Eureka for the convention and tournament next month. A band will also accompany the Sandy firemen.

An effort will be made to induce the Spanish Fork firemen to bring the splendid Commercial Club band of that city. This band is one of the best in the state.

Provo will be represented at the convention and the team from that city expects to give a good account of itself in the various contests.

The convention will open on the 20th and on the 21st the Miners Union program of sports will be carried out. On the 22nd the big firemen's tournament will take place at the ball park.

According to the Springfield Independent the firemen of that city are preparing to send a big delegation to Eureka for the tournament.

Knights of Pythias Install Officers

At their meeting on Tuesday evening the members of the Knights of Pythias Godiva Lodge No. 8 installed the newly elected officers of the order and then enjoyed a social session which included a nice luncheon.

The new officers of the lodge are: C. V. Firth, chancellor; commander W. H. Bacon, vice; chancellor J. W. Ellersbrecht, prelate; O. J. Akin, master of work; J. P. Griggs, keeper of records and seal. Adam Sweigert, master of furnace; J. W. Hurd, master of exchequer; Henry Jarvis, master at arms; Charles Barker, inner guard; John Cramer, outer guard.

Law Up To His Old Tricks

Arthur D. Law has been arrested at Salt Lake charged with obtaining property under false pretenses. In default of bonds in the sum of $500 he was locked up in the county jail. Law is alleged to have received a worthless check in payment of $1000 from a resident of the county who stole on July 2nd.

Death of Harry S. McLean

Harry S. McLean, a well known resident of this city and the father of Edward McLean, one of the shift boys at the Centennial Eureka mine died at the St. Marks Hospital at Salt Lake on Saturday after a few days illness from pneumonia. McLean was taken to the hospital on Tuesday morning of last week. While his condition was known to be serious the news of his death came as a surprise to his family. The deceased was 51 years of age. The funeral services were conducted from the Evans undertaking chapel at Salt Lake at 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon and the remains were interred at the Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

Witness Secures Bond

William Hanson, one of the state witnesses in the case against James Hickman charged with murder in the first degree, was able to secure the necessary $500 bond for his release. He was last Saturday evening. Hickman was arrested at this city and William B. Steele of Ogden the latter being Hanson's stepfather. Edward Gibson, the other witness who was placed under a bond in the same case expects to be able to secure the necessary security within the next few days.

Cris will not doubt be able to secure a bond as soon as he can communicate with his relatives and in order that he may return to his work at the Page & Bellumine office he has allowed him to go upon his recognizance. He will be required to report to the officers each day.

20 Days for Getting Room and Board Under False Pretenses

George Whiting was arrested last Saturday on the complaint of Mrs. Dan Tranter for obtaining board and lodging under false pretenses. He is charged with obtaining board and lodging for himself and his wife and two children at the Bullock Hotel for the past 20 days. It seems that on the eighth day of the month he gave the Bullock Hotel Mercantile company an order on his uncle in the same day he obtained board from Mrs. Tranter at the Union Hotel to whom he also gave an order on the time he had already signed over. Local merchants state that cases of this kind are by no means unusual but it is a serious offense and the maximum penalty is a fine of $100 or three months in the county jail or both and a fine and imprisonment.

New Postmaster On The Job

E. W. Redmond who was appointed as postmaster of Eureka to succeed Herbert Hopes received his commission on Tuesday morning and has since taken active charge of the local office. The appointment of Mr. Redmond was confirmed by the Senate on June 17th.

Griggs Selected As President

A large gathering of well known Republicans met at the city hall last Tuesday evening and took the preliminary steps to organize the organization of a Young Men's Republican Club for this city. J. D. Stack presided at the meeting and D. A. H. Hays was the secretary. A committee of five, William Home J. H. McKnight, J. A. Miner, Lawrence J. Lockett and C. A. Hays was appointed to draft the constitution and by laws.

C. O. Griggs, who has been prominently identified with the Republican party of Eureka for several years, was the unanimous choice of those present for the office of president of the new club and the following officers were also chosen in a like manner: Gus J. Henn, first vice president; William V. Hent, second vice president; J. H. McKnight, secretary and treasurer. A membership committee was elected and the selection of the next meeting was postponed until the next meeting of the club which is to be held on Tuesday evening of next week. The following Republicans have been selected to serve on the membership committee: Charles Zabriskie, C. F. Hays, Lawrence J. Lockett, J. W. Reel, J. H. Hays, J. H. Allen and James D. Hays.

After the meeting next week at which the organization of the club will be completed the club will hold its first meeting. Practically all of the Republicans of the city will be enrolled in the club within the next few weeks and the new organization promises to be an important factor in the coming campaign.

At the Socialist convention which was held at Salt Lake this week, a complete state ticket was nominated. Homer P. Birt being the candidate for governor. Mayor Mitchell of this city was nominated as one of the four presidential electors from Utah for the Socialist party.

Will Organize Wilson Club

The Democrats of Eureka have called a meeting for next Tuesday evening at the county court house at which time a chairman and secretary will be elected for the local precinct committee. At this meeting the preliminary steps will also be taken to organize the organization of a Woodrow Wilson club. The local advocates of Democracy are highly pleased with the recent prospects of the party both nationally and locally and declare that they are going to do their part toward putting Wilson in the Democratic column. An invitation has been extended to W. R. Wallace, national committeeman from Utah to attend the meeting next Tuesday and it is understood that he will accept.

H. S. Joseph who is a candidate for nomination and election to the office of congressman upon the Republican ticket has forwarded the following letter to a number of his friends throughout the mining districts of the state.

Dear Sir: Your attention has doubtless been called to my candidacy for Representative to Congress. Up to this time my friends have made no appeals to particular classes of the citizenship of Utah. It now seems opportune to direct the attention of the men engaged in mining in the state of Utah to the fact that no industry in the West is suffering so greatly from the ignorance and misapprehension displayed by the law makers of the nation and those delegates to execute the mining statutes as to the actual conditions which confront us in the field.

Since the days of Henry M. Teller in the Senate of the United States the mining interests of this country have not had an enthusiastic earnest advocate in Congress and there has been observed by people everywhere the utter indifference shown by our National Legislators as to the vital needs of this great industry.

The intimate connection of the industry with the mining interests of this state for the past twenty five years his long experience in dealing with the actual conditions which confront the practical mining operators and the thousands of mine operators who spend their lives in underground toil and his active work in the state of Utah in using his efforts to remedy evils which could be and in some measure have been reached by local legislation justify him in the belief that he can do something that will contribute to the welfare of the mining industry and it is his confidence in this belief that induces him to appeal to you for your support in his endeavor to secure the nomination for one of Utah's two representatives to Congress.

The past and present activities in connection with the American Mining Congress, the Utah Mine Operators' Association, the Tintic Mine Operators' Association as Director of the Mineral Exhibit of the Utah State Fair Association warrant him in believing that you will feel that the mining interests will be greatly promoted by his candidacy.

Yours truly,

Harry Joseph

Eureka People Married

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Roberts House in Provo last Tuesday morning when A. W. Young, assistant cashier of the bank of McCormick & Co. of this city, was joined in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Ella Dalin, daughter of the late Cyrus Dalin of this city and one of the most popular young ladies in the camp.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop Burg of Provo, the groom's brother Harold Young and his sister, Miss Verna Young, acting as groomsmen and bridesmaid. The parlor of the hotel in which the ceremony took place was tastefully decorated with pink and white carnations and after the ceremony the guests sat down to a delicious wedding breakfast.

The guests present besides those already mentioned were the groom's father and mother Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Young of Salt Lake, Quinby Stewart of Provo and Mrs. Rose Tredder of this city.

After the ceremony the young couple left for a week's honeymoon in Provo Canyon after which they will return to Eureka. The Reporter joins with their friends and relatives in wishing them a long happy and prosperous married life.

Chief Breaks All Previous Records

During the month of July the Chief Cons mine broke all previous records in the matter of ore production. The shipments for that period aggregating 10 carloads. Notwithstanding the fact that this is an exceptionally heavy output for one month there is a possibility that the output of this mine for August will be even greater. The Chief Cons officials are not doing much talking but there is no getting away from the fact that the conditions underground are excellent and that it is a comparatively easy task to take out a couple of cars of ore each day.

Zinc From East Tintic

From present indications the East Tintic Development property in the eastern end of the Tintic District will come into prominence as a producer of zinc ore. Some time ago Samuel Buckley of this city secured a lease on this ground and during the past two weeks he has had a man at work upon the dump. In the neighborhood of forty tons of good zinc ore has already been piled up on the dump and a trial shipment will no doubt be sent out just as soon as a suitable contract can be secured. Some of the ore which is now being sorted will carry better than 40 per cent zinc. Mr Buckley has not yet started work underground but will do so at once as there is undoubtedly a large amount of this character of ore exposed upon the various levels of the mine.

The lead ore which was taken from the East Tintic Development property a few years ago carried some zinc but at that time there was no demand for the metal and the rock which carried nothing but zinc was either left in the mine or thrown over the dump.

C C Griggs and C E Hush have secured a lease upon the Provo property which adjoins the East Tintic Development and are now preparing to commence work. At this time it is not known whether or not there is zinc ore of a commercial grade in the Provo property.

New Hoist Goes Into Commission

The electric hoist at the May Day mine went into commission on Monday of this week and since that time the new machinery has been doing splendid work. The switch from the steam plant to the electrical equipment was made without delay and the change will mean a substantial reduction in the operating expenses at this property. The May Day company will secure power from the Knight people.

The above photos by Orson Daniels a local photographer were taken on Main street after the water had subsided to some extent. While the storm was at its height it was practically impossible to get good pictures owing to the fact that it was too dark. The bulk of the water came down in the rear of the Main street buildings and while many snap shot photos were made in the flooded district they are hardly clear enough for reproduction in a newspaper.

Gemini Shipping Good Tonnage.

The bunch of lessees who are at work in the Gemini mine shipped about 1000 tons of ore during the month of July. The gross returns from which will probably amount to nearly $30,000. Supt. John H. McChrystal stated that while this amount is not high when compared with what some of the great mines of the district are earning it will mean that most of the lessees will receive very good returns for their work. He also says that during the past month there has been a substantial improvement in the character of ore which is being sent out from the Gemini.

Eagle Will Have New Ore House

The officials of the Eagle & Blue Bell Mining company are preparing to let a contract for a large ore house which they propose to have erected at their lower end of the tramway which conveys the ore from the shaft to the loading station. The ore house now in use at the Eagle is much too small for the proper handling of the heavy tonnage of ore which is being taken from this mine.

E J Raddatz returned to Salt Lake last Saturday afternoon after spending a couple of days at the Tintic Standard property in the eastern end of the Tintic district. The work there is being handled under the direction of John Westerdahl and everything is going along in good shape.

Serious Storm Visits Eureka

A very serious cloudburst the worst since the big flood of sixteen years ago visited Eureka on Wednesday evening and before the waters subsided a large amount of damage had been done in various parts of the camp. The north side of Main street suffered the most and practically every business house from a point opposite the postoffice to the lower end of the street was damaged to some extent. Cellars were flooded and in the business district the saloon men were the heaviest losers. The old water course which passes through the business district overflowed and for almost an hour two or three feet of water poured down Main street. Much of the water which came down from the northeast part of town struck the rear of the Tintic Mercantile store. Wirthlin's Meat Market the Finn Saloon the Elite Saloon and the large barn which is used by the Jefferson Thompson company as a store room for hay. The brick buildings withstood the flood without serious injury but the Finn saloon building and the old barn adjoining were badly damaged the water entering through the rear and coming out through the front. The proprietors of the Finn saloon lost heavily as their stock and fixtures were ruined. The building owned by Wilt Price was also damaged quite seriously.

A heavy rain which started at about five o'clock preceded the cloudburst and within a few minutes it became so dark that lights were turned on in various business houses and residences. The bulk of the water evidently fell in the eastern part of town although the side hills to the north and south contributed a good portion of the water which soon transformed the main gulch where Eureka's business district is located into a seething river. When everything is taken into consideration it is really remarkable that at the loss was not greater.

The cloudburst was mild however when compared with the one of sixteen years ago which not only destroyed considerable property but resulted in loss of life.

James L. Williams now an engineer at the Chief Cons mine was running the engine at the Eureka Mill at the time of the cloudburst in July 1896 and as many old timers remember the water threatened to flood this mine. About 125 men were at work underground at the engine room and a shaft house was flooded while an immense stream of water poured into the shaft as the men were being brought to the surface. As cage and after cage load of men ascended the shaft the water fell upon them and it was with difficulty that they were able to hang to the bar at the top of the cage. It was the excitement in connection with this flood that caused the death of John McChrystal Eureka's pioneer mining man and the first mayor of this city. Two people also lost their lives in the flood of 1896 and there were many narrow escapes.

The local shareholders of the Opohongo company received their dividend checks on Tuesday. The amount of the dividend which has just been distributed by this company was $20,000.

Plutus' Lessees Quit Work

The lessees who recently secured a lease upon a portion of the Plutus property and who were operating through the Godiva have discontinued work for the present and it is barely possible that the lease will be forfeited. One shipment has been sent out by the lessees but it seems that there is no large amount of ore available and that the old workings are in such shape that expensive timbering would be necessary if the work is to be continued.

Two blocks of ground in the Godiva mine which are reached from the tunnel level are now being worked under the leasing system and these lessees have a fair showing of ore.

Visited Centennial Eureka

O I Allen mine manager for the United States Mining Company J D Kendall and W M Bradley of Salt Lake and Pev Clarence Brown of Chicago but who was formerly connected with the Congregational Church at Salt Lake were in Eureka on Monday and Tuesday coming here for the purpose of visiting the great Centennial Eureka mine. Mr Kendall was the first superintendent of this mine and is well known to many of the old timers of the district. He took charge of the Centennial Eureka in the year 1881 when the property was in a prospective stage and remained in charge of the mine until it was sold to the United States people about fifteen years later. Mr Kendall was not only a mining man of considerable reputation but a thorough machinist and it was under his direction that the present hoisting equipment was installed at the Centennial Eureka mine. In fact he designed the entire plant which at that time was far ahead of anything in the state. Notwithstanding the fact that the hoist has been in continuous operation for over a score of years it is good for a long time to come. Mr Kendall had not visited Eureka since 1899 and while he has kept pretty well informed regarding the mine he was somewhat surprised to see such a large amount of ore exposed in the underground workings.

Grand Central and Gold Chain

According to W D Loose the drift upon the 2000 level of the Grand Central is now within 20 feet of the winze which was sunk in ore from the level above. This indicates that it will be but a short time until a shaft is made at a depth of 2300 feet. In Grand Central the drift is not cutting a very good looking line and while the ore may not be found upon the main level a small amount of work should be sufficient to locate it. There can be little or no question but what the ore extends to the 2000 level as the shaft was not sunk to this point until the management had every assurance that the big deposit could easily be picked up at that depth.

Mr Loose states that while the output from the Gold Chain mine for the month of July was somewhat smaller than for the previous month owing to the holiday shut-down and cut shortage of the present week the earnings of the mine will be practically the same as the July tonnage showed somewhat higher values.

Opohongo Looking Fine.

Just why the stock of a mine that is shipping four cars of ore each week and paying quarterly dividends of 2 cents should be selling at the remarkably low price of 12 or 13 cents per share is somewhat of a mystery. In a brief way the above statement outlines conditions at the Opohongo. However the market price of the company's stock is not causing officials of the Opohongo to lose any sleep. The mine looks good and the ore is being sent forward to the smelter in a manner which insures dividend money for a long time to come. Manager William Hatfield made an enviable record in the development of this mine and while he does not claim that it will be a world beater, owing to the limited territory he realizes that it is a splendid little producer with ample ore to keep it in the dividend paying class for a year or two even though there are no new developments.

For the week just closed the Opohongo was on the market with four cars of ore and Supt Samuel Cox says that two more cars could have been loaded had it not been for the fact that the railroad company was unable to supply the cars. The stop above the 600 level are widening out in a satisfactory manner and recent assays show that the copper values are increasing practically everything shipped during the past few weeks carrying in the neighborhood of 10 per cent.

E L Wolcott the assistant secretary of the American Mining Congress was in Eureka on Sunday and Monday for the purpose of interesting local mining and business men in the work of this organization. He visited a number of the mines and succeeded in securing a number of new members of the Congress. Just at present the members for the Mining Congress are at work trying to bring about a modification of the recent ruling from the Department of the Interior regarding the patenting of mineral ground.

At a private view of the Chatworth personal estate to be sold at auction the Crews mysteriously disappears Harry Cressy who was present describes the ring to his fiancée Flora Gilsey and her chaperon Mrs. Clara Britton as being like a heathen god with a beautiful sapphire set in the head. Flora meets Mr. Kerr an Englishman. In discussing the disappearance of the ring the exploits of an English thief, Percival Wand are recalled. Kerr tells Flora that he has met Harry somewhere but cannot place him. $2500 reward is offered for the return of the ring. Harry takes Flora to a Chinese goldsmith to buy an engagement ring. An exquisite sapphire set in a hoop of brass is selected. Harry urges her not to wear it until it is reset. The possession of the ring seems to cast a spell over Flora. She becomes uneasy and apprehensive. Flora is startled by the effect on Kerr when he gets a glimpse of the sapphire. The possibility that the stone is part of the Crews Idol causes Flora much anxiety. Unseen Flora discovers Clara ransacking her dressing room. Clara refuses to give or sell the stone to Kerr and suspects him of being the thief. She decides to return the ring to Harry but he tells her to keep it for a day or two. Ella Butler tells Flora that Clara is setting her cap for her father Judge Butler. Flora believes Harry suspects Kerr and is waiting to make sure of the reward before unmasking the thief. Kerr and Clara confess their love for each other. Clara is followed by a Chinaman.

"Well for a fact I know it is stolen. He leaned toward her and his arms still flung out with the hands open as argument had left them seemed to her frightened eyes all ready for her ready with his last argument his strength.

She pressed back against the glass until she felt it hard behind her.

Harry she whispered if you care anything if you ever want me for yours you'll take your hands away. She meant it she was sincere in that moment for all she shrank from him her body and mind would not have been too great a price to give him for the sapphire.

Then all at once she felt his arm around her neck. She couldn't move her body. She could only turn her head from his hot breath. For a moment he held her and yet another moment and then terrified at what this strange immobility might mean she roused her eyes and saw he was not looking at her. Though he held her in countenance was not conscious of her. Straight to her head he looked through the window and down into the garden. Her eyes followed. It lay beneath the wonder of its morning aspect all blanched and dim. She saw the silhouette of rose branches in black on the sky. She saw the flowers and bushes all one dull tone. But in the midst of them the oval of the path shone white and there as in the afternoon standing looking upward was the dark figure of a man.

Her heart gave a great leap. Just so she had been summoned once before that day but what infernal freak had fetched him back to repeat that dangerous sally and brought him finally into his enemy's grasp? She tried to make a gesture to warn him and just there Harry released her dropped her so that she half fell upon the window seat, and made a dash across the room for the light. In a moment they were in darkness. In a moment to Flora pressed against the window the garden sprang clear and on the formless figure below the face appeared white in the starlight looking up. She cried out in wonder. It was not Kerr it was the blue-eyed Chinaman.

After her haunted drive after her escape after Shima's search he was there still inexorably there small diminished by the great facade of the house but looking up at it with his calm eye surveying it measuring its height numbering its doors trying its windows Harry was beside her again. He was tugging frantically at the window. It resisted. She saw his hands trembling while he wrestled with it. Then it went shrieking up and he leaned out.

"What do you want?" he called and though he used no name Flora saw he knew with whom he was speaking. The Chinaman stood immobile lifting his round white face whose mouth seemed to gape a little. Harry leaned far out and lowered his voice.

"Go away Joe! Don't come here never come here. There was a quiver in his voice. Anger or apprehension or both whatever his passion was for the moment it overwhelmed him and as the Chinaman stood unmoved unresponsive at his commands Harry turned sharp from the window and dashed out of the room. Flora heard him running running down the stairs. She hung there breathless waiting to see him meet the motionless figure but while she looked and waited that motionless figure suddenly took life. It moved it turned it fitted it mixed with shadows became a shadow and then there was nothing there.

In her turn she ran up and up a twisted side stair shortest passage to her own rooms. At least lock and key could keep her safe for the next few hours. After that she must think of something else.

CHAPTER XX

Flight

By five o'clock in the morning she was already moving softly to and fro so softly as not to rouse the sleeping Marrika. By seven her lightest bag was packed herself was bathed brushed dressed even to hat and gloves and standing at her window with all the listening alert look of one in a waiting room expecting a train. She was watching for the city to begin to stir, watching for enough traffic below in the streets to make her own movement there not too noticeable. Yet every moment she waited she was in terror lest her fate should take violent form at last and assail her in the moment of escape. She listened for a foot ascending to her room with a message from Clara demanding an audience. She listened for the peal of the electric bell under Harry's hasty hand—Harry arrived even at this unwarranted hour with heaven knew what representative of law to force the sapphire from her.

But all her household was still un stirring when at last she went softly after step down the broad and polished stair and across the empty hall. She went quiet direct determined not at all as she had fled on her other perilous enterprise only yesterday. She shut the outer door after her without a sound and with great relief breathed in the fresh and faintly smoky air of morning.

She walked quickly. It was a cross town car bound for quite another locality that she climbed aboard. It was filled only with mechanics and workmen with picks and shovels. She sat crowded elbow to elbow among odors of stale tobacco stale garlic stale perspiration and looking straight before her through the car window watched the aspect of the city still gray grow less gleaming and formal and finally quite dirty and quite quite dull.

This was all as she had intended very much in the direction of her errand and safe. But in Market street the car line ended and she was turned out again in this broad artery of commerce where she was in danger of meeting at any moment people she knew. She made straight across the thoroughfare to its south side turned down Eighteenth and in a moment was hidden in Mission street.

It was ten o'clock in the morning three hours since she had left her house and a most reasonable time of daylight when Flora turned out of the flatness of south of Market street and began to mount a slow rising hill.

As she neared the hilltop she glanced at a card from her chaperon consulting the address upon it. Then anxiously she scanned the house fronts. It was not this one nor this but the square white mansion she came to now stood so far retired at the end of its lawn that she could not make out the number. As she peered a young girl came down the steps between the dark wings of the cypress hedge a slim fair even-gaited creature dressed for the street and drawing on her gloves. As she passed Flora made sure she had seen her before. There was something familiar in the carriage of the girl's head and hands something also like a pale reflection of another presence. Pale as it was it was enough to reassure her that this was the house she wanted.

This appearance of the place began to bring before Flora the full enormity and impudence of her errand but though her heart beat on her side as loud as the brass knocker upon the door she had no mind for turning back.

A high cool darkly gleaming inter for mellow with that precious tint of time which her own house so lacked received her. And here as well as out of doors all the while she waited she felt that protected space was still the deity of the place. And Flora's eager heart tone was straining by but the tall clock facing her measured it out slowly. Its longest golden finger had pointed out five minutes before the sweeping of a skirt coming down the hall brought her to her feet.

Mrs. Herrick came in hatless a honeysuckle leaf caught in her gray crown of hair geraniums in her hand. Flora had never seen her so informal and so gay.

Flora apologized. I knew if I came at this hour I should interrupt you but really there was no help for it. She glanced down at her satchel. I had to go this morning and before I went I had to see you about the house. I'm going down to look at it and—and to stop a while.

Mrs. Herrick hesitated deprecated. But you know Mrs. Britton wasn't satisfied with the price I asked.

Oh said Flora promptly but I shall be perfectly satisfied with it and I want to take possession at once. The positive manner in which she waved Clara out of her way brought up in Mrs. Herrick's face a faint flash of surprise but it was gone in an instant supplanted by her questioning puzzled consideration of the main proposition.

Oh I hope you haven't come to tell me you want it changed she protested. You know it's quite absurd in places—quite terrible indeed. Its 1870 straight through and French at that but even such whims acquire a dignity if they've been long cherished. You couldn't put in or take out one thing without spoiling the whole character.

But I don't want to change it I want it just as it is. Flora explained. It isn't about the house itself I've come it's about going down there. You see there are—some people some friends of mine I haven't promised them to show the house but I have quite promised myself to show it to them and they are only here for a few days more. They are going immediately. She was looking at Mrs. Herrick all the while she was telling her wretched ed he and now she even managed to smile at her. I thought how lovely it would be if you could go there with me. I should like so very much to be in it first with you to have you go over it with me and tell me how to take care of it as it's always been done. I should hate to do it any day respect.

Her hostess smiled with ready answer. Of course I will go down. I should be glad but it must be in a day or two. Indeed perhaps it would be better for you to have your people first and I can come down say Monday afternoon or Tuesday.

Flora faced this unexpected turn of the matter a little blankly. Ah but the trouble is I can't go down alone.

It was Mrs. Herrick's turn to look blank. But Mrs. Britton?

Mrs. Britton isn't going with me she can't.

I see. Mrs. Herrick with a long soft scrutiny seemed to be taking in more than Flora's mere words represented. And you wouldn't put it off until she can?

I couldn't put it off a moment. Flora ended with a little breathless laugh. I do so wish you would come down with me this morning for I must go and you see I can't go alone.

Mrs. Herrick sitting there composed in her cool flowing white and violet gown with the red flowers in her lap still looked at Flora inquiringly. But aren't there some women in your party old enough to make it possible and young enough to take pleasure in it?

Flora shook her head. Oh no she said. Her house of cards was tottering. She could not keep up her brave smiling. She knew her distress must be plain. Indeed as she looked at Mrs. Herrick she saw the effect of it.

Her heart sank. If only she had told the truth—even so much of it as to say there was something she could not tell. What she had said was unworthy not only of herself but of the end she was so desperately holding out for. Now in the lucid gaze confronting her she knew all her intentions were taking on a dubious color stained false like her words under the dark cloud of her own misrepresentation. Yet they were not false she knew. Her motives the end she was struggling for were as austere as truth itself. She could not give up without one bold stroke to clear them of this accusation.

Do you think there's anything queer about it?" she faltered.

Queer? To Flora's ears that sounded the coldest word she had ever heard. I hardly think I understand what you mean.

I mean is it that you think there's more in what I'm asking of you than I have said? The two looked at each other and before that flat question Mrs. Herrick drew back a little in her chair.

I have no right to think about it at all she said.

Well there is. Flora insisted. There's a great deal more. I am sorry I should have told you but I was afraid I don't know why I was afraid of you except that in this matter I've grown afraid of every one. It's true that there may be people going down—at least a person. But it isn't as I let you think it a house party at all. It's for something something that I can't do any other way—something she had a sudden flash of insight that if I could tell you you would believe in too.

Mrs. Herrick's look had faded to a mere concentrated attention. "You mean that there is something you wish to do for whoever is going down?"

Oh something I must do. Flora insisted.

Mrs. Herrick considered a moment. Why can't he do it for himself? she threw out suddenly.

It made Flora start but she met it gallantly. Because he won't. I shall have to make him.

You. For a moment Flora knew that she was preposterous in Mrs. Herrick's eyes—and then that she was pathetic. Her companion was looking at her with a sad sort of humor. My dear are you sure that that is your responsibility?

Flora answering smile was faint. It seems as strange to me as it seems absurd to you but I think I have done something already.

Are you sure or has he only let you think so? We have all at some time longed or even thought it was our duty to adjust something when it would have been safer to have kept our hands off. Mrs. Herrick went on gently.

Oh safer Flora breathed. Oh yes indeed I know. But if something had been put into your hands without your choice if all the life of some one that you cared about depended on you would you think of being safe? Flora leaning forward chin in hand with shining eyes seemed fairly to impart a reflection of her own passionate concentration to the woman before her.

Mrs. Herrick so calm in her reposeful attitude calm as the old portrait on the wall behind her none the less began to show a curious sparkle of excitement in her face. If I were sure that person's life did depend on me she measured out her words deliberately. But that so seldom happens and it is so hard to tell.

But if you were sure sure sure? Flora rang it out certainly.

Mrs. Herrick in her turn leaned forward. Ah even then it would depend on him. And do you think you can make a man do otherwise than his nature?

Flora answered with a stare of misery. I know what you must be thinking—what you can't help thinking she said—that the whole thing is unheard-of—outrageous—especially for a girl so soon to—to be—She caught her breath with a sob for the words she could not speak. But there is nothing in this disloyal to my engagement even though I cannot speak of it to Harry Cressy and nothing I hope to gain for myself by doing what I am trying to do. If I succeed it will only mean I shall never see him—the other one—again.

Mrs. Herrick rose in her turn be seething. Oh I can't help you go into it! It is too dubious. My dear I know so much better than you what the end may mean.

I know what the end may mean and I can't keep out of it.

But I cannot go with you. There was a stern note in Mrs. Herrick's voice.

I'm afraid I didn't quite realize how much I was asking of you. You have been very good even to listen to me. It's right I suppose that I should go alone.

Mrs. Herrick looked at her in dismay. But that is impossible. Then as Flora turned away she kept her hand. Think think she urged how you will be misunderstood.

Oh I shall have to bear that—from the people who don't know.

Yes and even from the one for whom you are spending yourself!

Flora gave her head a quick shake. He understands she said.

My dear he is not worth it.

Flora turned on her with anger. You don't know what he is worth to me.

Mrs. Herrick looked steadily at this unanswerable argument. Her hold on Flora's hand relaxed but she did not release it. Her brows drew together. You are quite sure you must go?

Flora nodded. She was speechless.

Did Mrs. Britton know you were coming to me?

No. She doesn't even know that I am going out of town. She must not.

Indeed she must. You must not place yourself in such a false position. Write her and tell her you are going to San Mateo with me.

Oh if you would. Tears sprang to Flora's eyes. But will you even if I can't tell you anything?

I shall not ask you anything. Now write her immediately. You can do it here while I am getting ready.

She had taken authoritative command of the details of their expedition and Flora willingly obeyed her. She was still trembling from the stress of their interview and she blinked back tears before she was able to see what she was writing.

It had all been brought about more quickly and completely than she had hoped but it was in her mind all the while she dictated her message to Clara that Kerr for whom it had been accomplished was not yet informed of the existence of the scheme or the part of guest he was to play. Yet she was sure that if she asked he would be promptly there. She wrote to him briefly.

At San Mateo at the Herricks I want you to meet me. I have made up my mind.

As she was sealing it she started at a step approaching in the hall. She had wanted to conceal that betraying letter before Mrs. Herrick came back. She glanced quickly behind her and saw standing between the half open folding doors the slim figure of a girl—slimmer younger even than the one who had passed her at the gate—but like her with the same large eyes the same small indeterminate chin.

Just at the chin the likeness to Mrs. Herrick faded with the strength of her last generation—but the eyes were perfect and they gazed at Flora wondering. With the sixth sense of youth they recognized the enactment of something strange and thrilling. Another instant and Mrs. Herrick's presence dawned behind her daughter—and her voice. Why child what are you doing there?—and her hands seemed apprehensive in their haste to hurry the child away as if truly in this drawing room for the first time something was dangerous.

CHAPTER XXI

The House of Quiet

The day which had dawned so still and gloomy was wakening to some thing like wildness threatening brightening gusty when they stepped out of the train upon the platform of the San Mateo station. Clouds were piling gray and castle like from the east up toward the zenith and dark fragments kept tearing off the edges and spinning away across the sky. But between them the bright face of the sun flashed out with double splendor and the thinned atmosphere made the sky seem high and far and all form beneath it clarified and intense.

There upon the narrow platform Mrs. Herrick hesitated a moment looking at Flora. What train do you want to meet? she asked. Flora stood perplexed. I hardly know. You see I can't tell how soon my letter would reach—would be received.

Then we would better meet them all the elder woman decided.

They drove away into the face of the wet fresh wind and flying drops of rain. Flora leaning back in the carriage looked out through the window with quiet eyes. The spirited movement of the sky the racing of its shadows on the grass the rolling foliage of the trees seen tempestuous against flying cloud were alike to her consoling and inspiring. She had never felt so free as now driving through the fitful weather nor so safe as with this companion who was sitting silent by her side. She was driving away from all her complications.

The house when finally it loomed upon them with its irregular roofs topped by curious square turrets with its deep upper and lower verandas looked out upon by a multitude of long French windows seemed too large too strangely imposing for a structure of wood. But whatever of original ugliness had been there was hidden now under a splendid tapestry of vines and Flora looking up at the rose and honeysuckle that panopied its front felt her throat swell for sheer delight.

For a moment after they had left the carriage they stood together in the porte cochere looking around them. Then half wistfully half humorously Mrs. Herrick turned to Flora. I do hope you won't want to buy it.

Oh I'm afraid I shall. Flora murmured that is if—She left her sentence hanging as one who would have said if I come out of this alive and Mrs. Herrick with a quick start of protection laid her hand on Flora's arm.

If you must she said lightly if you do buy it then at least I shall know it is in good hands.

Were the colors fast on the new goods you bought?

Fast? My dear, they fairly ran into one another they were that fast.

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well being Every woman, young or old should know herself and her physical make up A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book such for instance as The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser by R V Pierce M D which can readily be procured by sending thirty one cents for cloth bound copy, addressing Dr Pierce at Buffalo N Y

The womanly system is a delicate machine which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism Mental depression a confused head backache headache or hot flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women

Mrs G H WILLIAMS of Lynnhaven Va wrote It is six years since my head gave way I had female trouble and all the doctors (I employed three) said I would die I was not able to do my work had to hire someone to do it for me Finally I read in the papers about Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription and decided to try it I had not taken but one bottle until I found I had done me good I took in all five bottles of favor to Prescription and two of Golden Medical Discovery and now I am able to do all my house work and have gained fourteen pounds I feel like a new woman who suffer from female trouble to try your Favorite Prescription It is the only medicine on earth

Modern conditions have brought about the need for what might be called a long distance telephone organization of the family. "When in doubt, telephone" is an axiom that ought to be impressed upon every member of the family going on a journey, or to live at a distance. The mother can reach her children at school, and children should be required to telephone home occasionally. When husband or wife set out on a journey a telephone itinerary should be jotted down and left behind.

Members of the family traveling should not be content with providing means by which those left at home may reach them quickly, but should communicate with the home frequently, and particularly when there is bad weather, transportation delay, disturbance of public order, or any other unusual condition where the traveler happens to be. Bad news flies fast, and is magnified by distance. These things cause apprehension at home.

No other medium conveys the personal assurance and causes such peace of mind as the long distance telephone talk can give.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called "Dyspepsia Cures" on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat everything you stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 150 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Chambers Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

When purchasing Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefitted the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand the loss. All we ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will.

London Eng.—There has been a large increase in the membership of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants in England Ireland Scotland and Wales. The fortieth annual report shows an increase from 75,163 to 116,516 during the year. The society's income was $561,000 being nearly $100,000 in excess of the last fiscal year. The historic national railway strike is the evident cause of the tremendous growth in the organization.

Hastings on the Hudson—The strike which has been in progress for two weeks at the National Conduit and Cable works is over and the men returned to work. The company has agreed to give them advances of five cents in wages—the men wanted an increase of 25 cents—and the company has also agreed to recognize the American Federation of Labor although they will not make the shop a strictly union one.

Sharon Pa.—After a three days shutdown for the Fourth of July all of the mills of the United States Steel corporation in Sharon and Farrell resumed operations in all departments. The sheet iron mill of the American Sheet & Tin Plate company which closed down about ten days ago for repairs resumed. The National Malleable Castings company's works also started.

Chicago—The thirty seventh annual convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers recently held here arrived at a decision to ask for an advance of 25 cents a ton on the rate of puddling making the base $5.25 on a 1 cent card rate each succeeding advance giving the puddler an increase of 15 cents instead of 12 1/2 cents as at present.

Omaha—It is reported that the eighteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Musicians held recently started a plan to raise funds for the purpose of relieving the widows and orphans of the members of the Titanic band and in addition to erect a marble shaft to the memory of the musicians who perished in that disaster.

Tucson Arizona—The governor of Arizona has approved a bill passed by the legislature of that state prohibiting exactions from workmen as the price for employment. The new law carefully defines the rates that may be legally charged for finding employment and provides punishment for its violation.

Wheeling W. Va.—The electrical workers of this city will enjoy the Saturday half holiday granted voluntarily by their employers. There has been no change in the wage rate.

Washington—A third labor exchange has been opened in Tokyo and efforts have been made by the government to have other Japanese cities follow the example.

New York—Legislation passed at the recent convention of the International Association of Granite Cutters makes it obligatory for all members to secure 50 cents an hour before June 1, 1917.

London Eng.—The labor unions of this city are preparing to start two daily newspapers.

Ottawa Can.—There are 1741 unions in Canada.

Baltimore Md.—A Baltimore taxicab company will test the law requiring professional chauffeurs to pay an annual fee to the state $5 for a license to operate automobiles.

Washington—The organization of migratory workers which began a year ago at the instance of the American Federation of Labor is a difficult problem but the efforts expended have begun to show tangible results. There are locals of migratory workers in San Francisco Oakland Richmond Stockton San Jose Fresno Bakersfield Los Angeles and Riverside. The membership of the San Francisco local reaches two thousand while that of Oakland is one thousand.

Wilkesbarre Pa.—One thousand miners and laborers went on strike in the Wyoming valley. Five hundred men employed by the Susquehanna company at Nanticoke went out because a number of men refused to join the union. The union men declare if underground workers want to enjoy the benefits of the recent strike they must join the union. At the Butler colliery Pittston 500 miners quit because a slate picker was discharged.

New York—The Transport Workers Federation of America is about to start a lively agitation among all the workers engaged in the transport industry. Laurie's Unexpected Game

By A MARIA CRAWFORD

(Copyright 1912 by Associated Literary Press)

"Hello!" said the big hunter in brown corduroy. "What if I taken you for a rabbit or a shot you?"

The figure of the child on the frightened up and she pushed blue cap from her eyes.

"Might have missed me. There of folks that carry a gun that boot and hit a thing. Maybe I thought I don't mean that couldn't apologized Kitty puz by the man's sudden laughter.

"That's all right. You didn't hurt feelings. Your remark couldn't been personal for I have never a these mountains before and don't know a thing about me. I cold out here? What's that doing?"

"Getting galax leaves for Miss shrine."

"Is there a Catholic about?"

"Don't know bout her being a answered Kitty. These are love shrine. It's all like the beautiful story mother says. We Miss Anne's lover died."

"Women usually erect shrines their lovers have gone said Thorne bitterly. I'd rather a few flowers while I am living have a cemetery full after I am"

"Are you going up the mountain?" asked Kitty. "If you are I wish you carry this little basket of hickory nuts. Miss Anne wants them for a cake."

"I'll carry them for you," answered the hunter gallantly, but not for a hysterical woman who builds shrines to dead men.

"Well I don't care who you think are doing it for," said Kitty stub

"In Sight of the Cat's age."

"Miss Anne gets them here all winter and for its company. I know my father sells mother and I are staying contains this winter so as not am alone so much."

"I trudged bravely along behind six foot man for a long the rocky road then she sitting down in the announced. You go on Anne's cottage—you get to do to the hotel where we'll her to send somebody too tired to move."

"That cold ground de I'll carry you. I do it with that gun and hat in that sack?" she suddenly looking at the game sack over his shoulder.

"Two or three wild turkeys. One more bird won't make any difference. He swung her up on his shoulder and she sighed contentedly."

"I'm awfully tired. I guess I walked too far. Mother'll scold if she finds out I went so far alone."

"Right she'll be to scold and spank you too young lady. This mountain is no place for stray babies."

"I'm not a baby any more. I'm nearly seven. Any way I had to get those leaves. The old ones in the bowl right his picture have turned nearly yellow. Miss Anne loves him dreadfully."

"I don't know. If she is like most memory is a thing to cherish a romance. I bet a doll that Miss Anne is a sour who never had a bean in her eyes said blushing you."

"I said Kitty promptly seen about a hundred men to since she came last summer young and too beautiful to be all. She looks like a fairy princess. A sure enough duke came to see her last, but she shipped him easy as dad's sells logs he said."

"Is that the place?"

"They had come in sight of a gray stone cottage and the glow from the log fires within made the windows bright crimson in the early twilight."

"Yes I'm going to halloo like Fritz does when he brings eggs to the hotel to sell. I want Miss Anne to see my new horse," laughed Kitty.

"No you don't. If Miss Anne is such a desirable beauty I'll just wait until I clean up before I meet her. My valet and guide have gone on ahead with my traps."

"Oh yes they came in an automobile this morning and look awful expensive rooms mother said. I guess you're rich."

Turning a curve in the road the young hunter and his charge came to the entrance of the cottage. A woman in gray with soft silver fox under her throat stood on the top step looking off over the valley where a deep orange burned in the sky above the fringe of dark cedar trees.

The man stopped suddenly. Miss Anne called Kitty here's the man that's going to stop at the hotel."

Anne turned slowly and the quiet look of peace in her face gave place to astonishment.

"Is it really you Laurie?" she asked wonderingly.

"Yes," said the man putting Kitty down and handing the nuts to her. "Yes it's I. Of course you understand this is an accident. I supposed you were abroad."

Anne came down the steps holding out her hand. "Won't you say that you are glad to see me anyway?" she asked tremulously.

"No," said Laurie for the sight of you has opened the old wound. Here's your leaves for the love shrine. Miss Anne and the hickory nuts for the cake. I'll have to run on now. Mother'll be looking for me. Muca obliged to you for carrying me. It was most polite of you. Added Kitty with all the grown up dignity she could summon to her service."

"Come in Laurie for a minute. I've urged the girl hospitably. I have wanted to see you again."

He held open the door for her with his old time deference and charm then went in after her leaving his game sack and gun on the porch.

The little living room was warm with bright rugs and hangings and the big fire of black jack wood sent out a welcoming cheer. Laurie's quick eyes looked for the shrine. On a small inlaid ebony table stood a picture in a silver frame but in the dim light the face of the man was not clearly seen. A bowl of galax leaves was on one side and a tiny incense jar of curious design stood on the other. A volume of Mrs. Brownings poems was there too and Laurie thought instantly of the night he had carried that same little leather book to Anne. She had stood behind his chair reading to him and he remembered that when she repeated I love thee to the level of every day's most quiet need by sun and candle light she had leaned over and kissed him softly on the forehead. But that he recalled was before she had come into her Aunt Patricia's vast estate.

"Wont you sit down Laurie?" Anne's voice was low and musical and played on the man's heart strings like magic.

No Anne. The quietness of his own voice startled him. I came here on a hunting trip. I'll move on in the morning. The game is pretty well killed out."

He was trying to talk of common place things and keep his eyes from seeing the picture of the man Anne loved.

Yes the natives hunt a great deal.

She lighted a tall standing lamp and Laurie watched the flame flicker and then burn steadily. He looked again toward the shrine. The picture in the silver frame was his own.

Anne what does that mean? The child out there said that you kept a shrine to the memory of some man you loved. Anne what does it mean?

You left me because somebody told you that Aunt Patricia had left me her fortune together with her godson Lord Dunsford. You believed and—"

Your cousin Tom your own lawyer told me. I thought you didn't care Anne whom do you love?"

Anne threw the yellowed galax leaves into the fire where they burned sputtering then replaced them with the fresh ones Kitty had gathered on the mountain. She turned back then to the figure in brown corduroy. Did you think I—I could forget you for all the money and lords in the world?" she sobbed.

I came looking for game he said his arms about her and I have found the most desirable game in the world and yet I don't want to shoot it. Will you let me put this game in captivity—in my heart—for always Anne?"

For always said Anne softly. No matters what comes will you love me on and on dear?"

Then came her answer that sent hot blood racing in his veins. I will love you to the level of every day's most quiet need by sun and candle light."

Gathered Smiles

ROUGH ON THE RABBIT

The confurer in the village school room had invited any gentleman from the audience to step up on the platform and a rustic in a velvet coat responded.

Now sir said the professor I suppose you consider it a matter of impossibility for me to make that rabbit in the box on the table pass into your coat tail pocket?

I dunno about impossible," came the reply but I wouldn't do it if I was you sir.

Oh you'll be in no danger I can assure you smiled the sleight of hand man airily.

I won't thinkin about myself the rustic answered. I were studyin the rabbit I've got a couple o ferrets to that there pocket.

Domestic Troubles

Husband—What's the matter dear? Why do you look so worried?

Wife—Oh I've just got everything all ready for Mrs. Meatleigh's visit. I've done up all the curtains and pillow shams and bureau covers and center pieces and they're all spick and span.

Husband—Well if everything is in such apple pie order why look so disconsolate about it?

Wife (bursting into tears)—Oh I just know as soon as she sees them, she'll know I cleaned everything all up because she was coming—Judge.

A CASE IN POINT

De Quiz—Do you believe in palmistry?

De Whiz—Yes to some extent.

De Quiz—Do you think the hands can indicate that a man is about to acquire wealth?

De Whiz—I do in the case of pick pockets.

Transposed

When Tommy had the tummyache and the doctor came said he "Are you in pain? and Tommy sobbed, "No sir the pains in me."

Leap Year

A local youth is having trouble with his girl.

Why wont you marry me? he demanded the other day.

I'll marry you but not until next year.

Why the delay?

I'm not going to have it said that I did the proposing.

Poor Proof

It's astonishing how much more important women are than men.

But are they?

Of course. My wife wouldn't wait a half minute to let me speak to some girls I once knew.

But she'd stand up for three mortal hours while a dressmaker fitted her.

Their Worth

The girl had demanded her letters back and he was shipping them by express.

"Valuation?" said the clerk.

What's that?

Valuation. What are the contents of this package worth?

Put it at 30 cents answered the young fellow with a scowl.

Misnomers

Funny about those German baths sent it?

What's funny?

They call them all bad and then expect them to make good.

SERIOUS OBJECTION

Mrs. Wilson—Ain't you proud since your daughters engaged to that French nobleman?

Mrs. Bilson—No I can't pronounce his name.

A Flustered Bird

The dove of peace. Men like to boost, But won't give her a place to roost.

Always a Way

I am beginning to fear said Rev. Mr. Goodman that I may be injecting too much humor into my sermons. The people may fall into the habit of neglecting to take me seriously.

Oh don't worry about that dear his wife replied. Whenever you begin to notice that they are not taking you seriously just ask them to raise your salary.

A Character Test

When I was a young man I was very fond of music remarked Mr. Cumrox. My singing laid the foundation of my fortune.

You sang so well?

No the captain of industry who started me in life said that anybody who would get up before folks and sing as I did had marvelous nerve and indomitable will power.

Wish Realized

While the mercury was snuggling close to the zero mark the charter member came into the Curbstone club headquarters.

Where's the Ancient Carpenter? he asked.

"Oh he hasn't been here," replied the Prominent Plumber since that evening when he was wishing for an other good old fashioned winter.

Facilities to Economize

Our forefathers lived much more simply than we did said the man who takes everything seriously. They did not hesitate to economize.

Yes but look at the room they had to economize in. You couldn't expect us to churn in a fat or keep chickens and a garden on the fire escape could you?

Between Lawyers

I won't defend a man whom I believe to be guilty.

Now my boy said the older lawyer you mustn't set your judgment up against that of the majority. I have defended plenty of men whom I believed to be guilty but the jury decided otherwise.

Not Content to Speak

Pa do you know anything about the Thirty Years war?

No son. Your mother and I have only been married 15 years.

Reason Enough

Figge—Don't you wish you could live your life over again?

Fogge—Well I should say not. I've got a 20-year endowment policy maturing this month.

NEEDED NO HELP

Tatters—Dat's a funny sign yer got up dere boss.

Housekeeper—What? Look out for the dog?

Tatters—Yes dat dogs big enough and ugly enough ter look out for his self.

INDUSTRY AND MECHANICS

MATERIAL FOR HIP SHINGLE

No Necessity for Fancy Kinds as Ordinary Shingles Last Long Enough and Look Better

(By A. O. STEIN, Minnesota)

There are many fancy hip shingles to be had. Some use tin or galvanized iron cut to suitable length and width.

Have you ever tried using ordinary shingles cut to a level at the butt to conform with course line?

I use the hip shingles four and one half inches wide on the roof of a house if lower down for window hood porch roof etc. I use the shingles narrower—about two and a half to three inches wide.

After laying the double course a on both sides of the hip you lay shingles b and c. The dotted lines above a indicate chalk lines which to make plain are not spaced right but too far apart.

You may shingle by straight edge I never do. The dots represent nails which should be just far enough up on shingles to be covered by the next course.

The second course is laid over c and b then d is laid on the second course. e shows ordinary course cut to conform with hip.

Shingles laid along the hip with the grain of wood nearly straight do not have the tendency to split like the three-cornered pieces but rather help to hold down those underneath.

In trimming off the three-cornered pieces of the regular courses I use a sharp chisel about one and one half inches wide and to finish off I use a smooth plane with handle having iron set quite coarse is easier and quicker than paring all with a chisel getting the edges of shingles straight and a better fit.

As the hip shingles will be of the same quality as the rest of the roof they ought to last as long and they certainly look right too.

MEASURING TOOL IS UNIQUE

Feature Is Series of Gauges of Varying Thicknesses Pivoted Together in an Encasing Handle

An unusual measuring tool has been designed by a New York man. The feature is a series of gauges of varying thicknesses that are pivoted together in an encasing handle. One part of the handle is marked off into an ordinary rule and the other has perforations of varying diameters. Each gauge is numbered according to its thickness and one tapers and has a graduated scale along its length.

Measuring Tool

As will be understood this tool is for ascertaining the depth of openings such as slots and the like. One or more of the gauges can be brought together until a thickness is formed that will just fit the cavity to be measured. The device folds up.

Artificial Sponge

It is said that the Germans have recently succeeded in making artificial sponge which takes the place of the genuine article in many respects. Pure cellulose and zinc chloride make a pasty viscous mass which is mixed with coarse rock salt. A quantity of this is then placed in a mold and then pierced with needles penetrating into the interior in all directions. The salt is then removed by a prolonged washing and the result has the appearance and qualities of sponge absorbing water in the same manner and drying when its interior is freed of the water. It may also be used for filtering purposes.

Excellent Whitewash

Ten parts of slaked lime to one of hydraulic cement mixed with salt water makes a whitewash that will not easily wash or rub off.

FORTUNE IN WASTE PRODUCT

Process Discovered for Converting Ore Dust Formerly Thrown Away Into Briquettes

As industries grow older the profits get smaller and human ingenuity is forced to do what it might have done all along if it hadn't been too lazy—save the waste matter or at least make a great reduction in its total. The French people are not more saving than American because they are brighter but because they have been forced by circumstances and necessity to be. Perhaps that explains why the great steel corporation has just awakened to the fact that it has been throwing away hundreds of thousands of dollars by letting the ore dust from its steel making operations go to the waste dump and lie there neglected. A process has been discovered by which this ore dust can be compressed into briquettes and utilized for making pig iron. The dust is bound together with a composition composed principally of lime which acts as a flux in the smelting process. Along the terminal railroads of the Carnegie Steel company, just one branch of the United States Steel corporation are 200,000 tons of ore dust piled into dumps. Iron ore is worth $4 a ton and pig iron which is made from the ore is worth considerably more.

FOR SAVING LIFE OF MINER

Apparatus Patented by Colorado Man Has Mask Over Face Shutting Out All Impure Air

An apparatus which may be the means of saving many a miner's life has been patented by a Colorado man. A mask fits over the user's face so that no outside air can get into his nose or mouth. Below this mask is a bag through which fresh air is supplied from an oxygen chamber. In addition to this however there is a pressure equalizing reservoir connected with the water reservoir and with tubes leading into the respirator. When the air pressure in a mine becomes dangerous this apparatus will give the miner ample warning by pumping water into his face and he will then know that it is time to retreat.

LOST TREASURES UNDER THE ENGLISH FLAG

Gold and Jewels still waiting to be found by some Modern Adventurer

by Buffington Phillips

COPYRIGHT BY THE RIDGWAY CO

TREASURES where the cows find them treasures which the divers can see but cannot reach treasures where only superstitious fears stand in the way of recovery—such is the state of affairs in and about Great Britain proper one of the richest fields in the world for the treasure-hunting adventures.

The most ardent seeker of these troves was King John. Most of his time was spent in hunting buried treasures of other centuries assembling the gold and jewels of England and burying them again. Only those groups of known value and of certain or nearly certain location can be mentioned in this article so numerous are they.

It was known that the King had knowledge gleaned from old documents that the Romans during the time of their occupation had great quantities of gold silver jewels and plate in a fashionable resort in the north of England and being cut off in the rear by an invasion of Picts and Scots buried it in a vast trove near the old Roman wall in Northumberland.

King John made extensive explorations and found a large cache made at a later period but did not find the more important store of wealth. He removed his find to Hermitage Castle and according to all accounts the masonry of the wall was opened from the outside and the treasure hidden once again.

Once since his day the true clue to the Roman cache was found and lost again through the brutality and stupidity of some English county of feuds in Northumberland.

Two poor and ignorant farm laborers were working in a field on the line of the old Roman ruin one day and saw down in the shade of a heap of stones for their lunch. Idly they turned over a large stone and in the bottom of the cavity left they saw an enormously heavy chain.

Pushing away the dirt until they could get hold of it, they drew it out. It was several feet in length and weighed enough to make a burden for both of them. Seemingly it was brass and they left it till the next day when they were working with a cart. At evening they loaded it in the cart and carried it home leaving it against the wall of the stable as a curious but useless find.

One Sunday when idling with some neighbors they fell to discussing the chain and one of the neighbors scraped it with a knife. He said it looked and felt more like gold than brass and was very soft. Taking a broken link to the market when he next went the elder of the two finders submitted it to a jeweler who pronounced it solid gold of a very fine quality.

The neighbor who had made the discovery of the nature of the find thought he should have half and be let in on the secret of the remainder. This was refused so he informed the authorities and the two peasants were arrested, spent a long period in jail and as a result of the ill treatment one of them went insane.

The older had steadfastly refused to disclose the spot where the chain was found having taken an oath when he was flogged in prison that he would never tell any one. This was his method of getting even and it proved very effective.

It is curious indeed that the termination of the great treasure hunter and his career should be marked by the interment of wealth in an amount as great, or greater than that involved in any of his previous exploits.

In his historic flight King John's party carried with it not only an enormous treasure in the store of gold that represented the royal funds but a cumbersome weight of treasures he had acquired and more valuable today than all the others—the full regalia crown jewels and in signa of the great orders of which the King was head.

The British Museum and the various orders would pay at least $25,000,000 for the recovery of these and yet it does not seem a difficult matter. Some individual or syndicate with the proper backing could easily look up the circumstances as contained in the old records and make a consistent determined effort.

The royal fugitive and retinue were riding in haste around the dip of the Wash and the animals on which the precious load was carried mired so frequently in the lowlands that it was decided to cache the treasure.

The King and a few faithful noblemen superintended the work impressing some peasants for the labor. The records state distinctly that the interment took place precisely where the road crosses the river to Lynn.

The old road ran where there is now a morass in spring and fall baked dry in summer. A few years ago during the drought season some farmers sinking a well so as to water the cattle that were feeding on the marsh grass struck an odd crown of solid gold but made no further excavation.

By the time London heard of the find the sea son had changed and the spot was a swamp once more. There is no question in my mind after reading all accounts that the treasure is there and can be excavated with a steam shovel floated on a barge into the mouth of the great Ouse.

In 1709 when England was at war with the Netherlands H. M. S. Lutine sailed from Yarmouth for Cuxhaven. She sank off the island of Veleland at the mouth of the Zuyder Zee and only two of those aboard were rescued. She carried gold and silver specie. It was later learned that she was insured for $5,941,665.

The United Kingdom was literally girdled with sunken treasure in the latter part of the sixteenth century. Sir Francis Drake returned in 1580 from his great journey of exploration to California and he had an adequate idea of the vast amount of gold which was being carried in Spanish ships from Mexico and South America to Spain. As a matter of fact there was so much of it in Spain that the possessors did not know what to do with it and the idea of the great Armada may have been conceived as much to find a glorious means of expending the royal wealth and the wealth of the ambitious nobles as to have a method of diverting the attention of the poorer classes who were very little better off in spite of the flood of gold that had come to the Peninsula.

However that may be the great Armada is usually considered a magnificent adventure which was meant to crush the power of England at sea and to humble the kingdom of a state of practical vassalage to Spain her bitter enemy.

The English ships were well trimmed meagerly fitted vessels for war—war and nothing else. The Spanish ships had in some cases silken sails many splendid canopies on poop decks gold mounted cannon and even the lowest estimated accounts say that from seventy to one hundred millions in Spanish gold and silver was the sum total in treasures distributed among eighty great ships.

How Sir Francis Drake and the British admirals and captains fell on the fleet and scattered it how in battle after battle it was worsted is a matter of history familiar to every one. The bull of the Armada driven by a great storm was hurried into the North Sea and vainly endeavoring to circle by the Orkneys and the Shetlands and get back to the Bay of Biscay through the Minches, the North Channel Irish Sea and St. George's Channel was wrecked in strange waters.

It is impossible in brief space to go into detail concerning all of these rich sunken wrecks. Each of them that is known has its more or less definite history and from some of them millions of dollars worth of trappings and treasure were recovered in the years following soon after the gigantic disaster.

One of the Spanish Armada ships the Florenca went ashore in the Sound of Mull in 1588. She had a vast treasure aboard and when she was attacked by a band of Scots her commander blew her up. The Duke of Argyll spent a fortune in the search. His ancestors have been hunting since 1664 and in 1667 an announcement was made public that the old records showed that there was $30,000,000 in money on her besides the gold and silver plate. None of it has ever been recovered although the Argyll family have the full information of where the wreck lies.

The Cavalier treasure of Marston Moor is an other famous cache. For centuries the villagers near the historic field where the Roundheads and Cavaliers contended have been thrown into great excitement by finds of gold pieces and by the arrival of parties of strangers who the villagers imagine have come to look for the treasure.

The story of this trove is that before the battle owing to the necessity of shifting headquarters of the King's government so often the army funds in four chests each of which could be transported on pannel between two large horses was brought to the Cavalier camp. A sudden descent of the Roundhead cavalry cut off the treasure and its guardian who held out stubbornly till dark then buried the treasure hastily.

The Cavaliers retreated expecting to receive reinforcements and regain possession of the treasure but the battle of Marston Moor followed. The ground was torn up with hoofs fire swept part of the plain and the marks were gone so it has remained undisturbed ever since. No not quite undisturbed—a village cow found it but she did not appreciate her advantages and could not have told her master if she had.

It is a well known fact that when certain forms of stomach trouble affect cows dogs and other animals they seek metal oxides and will swallow nails rusty iron and bits of jewelry. This particular cow was so troubled. Her grazing ground included part of the general locality in which the treasure is known to lie. She was noticed licking the rusty hinges of the pasture gates licking an old plowshare and some weeks later she gave evidences of being in great pain. The wisecracks of the village were called in council and decided that she had swallowed something that disagreed with her and partly out of curiosity and partly through desire to save the beef by killing her before she died the owner had an end put to her misery and an autopsy was held. Imagine the excitement when the butchers opened the stomach and amid nails bits of iron and copper found a number of gold pieces of the Cavalier treasure and a small latchlock of the type of which there must have been several on every one of the treasure chests. The soil had been washed or had been plowed over the treasure and the cow had found it and absorbed her mortal end. The wisecracks then told the owner that if he had but kept the cow alive till she returned to the spot where she had found the treasure he might have watched her and soon discovered it. He worried over his folly till he grew so despondent that he hanged himself.

The square face of Gibraltar made so familiar in America by use in advertising in reality fronts the landward side. Between the Rock and the mainland runs a flat sandy strip that is neither British nor Spanish. Gibraltar has always been a great haunt of smugglers and the neutral strip has always been their greatest danger ground.

In 1870 the dangerous Theron band desisted from smuggling long enough to run some cargoes of arms into Spain for the use of Don Carlos and his army. After securing some $450,000 they set out to effect a retirement from Gibraltar and made their way to Jaen where a wealthy merchant was known to have some $600,000 collected in readiness for use in the Carlist cause. Under pretext that they had instructions to deliver a shipload of munitions to him at Malaga and displaying the documentary evidences of their late deal with Don Carlos they persuaded the merchant to accompany them on the road to Malaga.

When a fitting opportunity came they murdered him threw his body into a dry ravine and with their weight of wealth in gold and English notes set out for Gibraltar. The body was found sooner than they had expected and they were pursued. Some ten miles from the neutral ground they were overtaken and a running fight occurred in which Casprey one of the outlaws was killed in a most spectacular manner.

Four of the outlaws crouched among the rocks and held the pursuers at bay anxiously awaiting Theron's return. Put when the dawn came they found that he had buried the treasure turned the mules loose and was making his way back to them when a bullet had stretched him out dead on the sand.

Seeing this the four now tried to retreat to ward the Rock one after the other but they were shot down.

When it was found that there had been over a million dollars in booty with the party a careful search was begun but the drifting sand had obliterated the necessary traces and it has never been recovered.

The wind is constantly carrying away the sand on this zone and the Gitan and others who frequent it keep a sharp eye out for the rusted corner of a steel box. Some day the money will be found in fact search with a magnetic instrument could disclose it today if some one on the spot only thought of such a device.

FAMOUS "BONEHEAD" PLAYS ON MAJOR LEAGUE DIAMONDS

Explained by Leading Baseball Players to

HUGH S. FULLERTON

By JACK LELIVELT

Former Utility Man Washington Team and One of the Hardest Hitters in the Business Now Starring in International

The worst mistake I ever made was in trying to be too wise as an outfielder. I would have gotten away with it clean and saved a ball game but for the stitches on the ball and if I had it would have won instead of lost a game for Washington.

The team was all shot to pieces and we were shifting men around and around to try to keep a respectable club in the field. Every day some one would get sick or get hurt and they chased me from infield to outfield from right to left and from first all around the infield looking for some place where I could play. I guess I had played left field only a few times but one day while waiting out there I hit on a scheme. The stands on the old grounds came out into left until the corner of the seats was only about six feet from the foul line and often fair balls would hit inside of third base curve out just miss the corner of the stands and disappear entirely rolling out of sight of the umpire and infolder down a hill to the fence. No one could see after the ball passed that corner where it went. Before going out to play left I would hunt up a couple of fair practice balls and plant them along the seats on the ground for use in case anyone hit the ball down that way. We were playing Detroit and I had the Tigers beaten by one run late in the game when Delehanty came to bat and whipped a hit down just inside of third. I tried hard to get over to cut it off before it could pass the corner of the stands and for an instant I thought it would hit the boards and angle out. It just skimmed past the corner and went on and I went in pursuit. I ran out of sight dug one of the hidden balls out of the grass ran out and threw to third driving Del back to second. The ball he had hit was rolling down toward the fence and I think I could have stopped him at third had I gone after it. I felt pretty good until the pitcher got the ball and I heard Jennings yell at the umpire to let him look at it. The umpire took the ball from the pitcher glanced at it an instant tossed it out to the bench and motioned Delehanty to go on home. The only trouble was that somewhere we had accumulated a bunch of National League balls to practice with and the stitches on those balls are all one color while on the American League balls they are red and white. I had thrown in a National League ball and we didn't have a chance even to argue the case.

ZIMMERMAN IS A REAL HERO IN THE BRONX

UTAH, AUGUST 9, 1912

Heavier Pumps

Heinie Zimmerman Slugging Chicago Cub

The proudest men in the Bronx today are those who can look up from the baseball extras and regale their young hopefuls with tales of the time when Heinie Zimmerman was carrying plumbers tools and earning $2 a day. Every citizen of that sequestered section of New York who can faintly remember the occasion when Heinie repaired a leak in his bathtub today refers to the sensational batter of the Cubs as one of his boyhood friends.

In New York a ball player may get lost in the shuffle but no so in the Bronx. When the Cubs are in New York Young America waits in droves for the arrival of Zimmerman at his home after the game and not to know where Heinie lives is not merely looked upon as ignorance—it is a crime.

During the recent series with the Giants in which Zimmerman banked the ball into the stands for three home runs excitement in the Bronx ran riot. Heinie was counting on a few quiet days at home but such pleasure was denied him. Friends came so thick and fast he couldn't get a minute to himself and finally in desperation sneaked downtown in New York and joined the team to escape the demonstrations.

Zimmerman is 6 feet tall in his stocking feet weighs 180 pounds and never had a day's illness in his life.

OLD TIMER IS PASSED ALONG

John Titus for Years a Favorite of the Philadelphia Fans is Released to Boston

"THE DYING FISHERMAN" By Walt Mason

Once a fisherman was lying in his little lowly cot and the pastor sat beside him saying things that hit him so hard that all his futile efforts left the dying man's heart and he said: "The journey is lonely but I'm ready for the start. There is just one little matter that is fretting me. He sighed and perhaps I'd better tell it ere I cross the Great Divide. I have got a string of stories that I've told from day to day. Stories of the fish I've captured and the ones that got away, and I fear that when I tell them they are apt to stretch a mile. And I won't even when I'm waited to that land that is free from guile if they'll let me tell my stories if I try to tell them straight or will angels lose their tempers then and chase me through the gate? Then the pastor sat and pondered for the question vexed him sore. Never such a weird conundrum had been sprung on him before. Yet the courage of conviction moved him soon to a reply and he wished to fill the fisher with fair visions of the sky. You can doubtless tell fish stories," said the clergyman aloud but I'd stretch them very little if old Jonas is in the crowd.

Brief Comment.

The telephone company's officials seem to be unusually slow in taking up the long promised improvements in this city. Some little time has passed since the city officers served notice that the work must be taken up at once and yet there has been nothing done.

George B. Greenwood, a well known attorney who has been a resident of Milford for several years has announced his candidacy for nomination to the office of district judge upon the Republican ticket. Mr. Greenwood's announcement appears in this issue of the Reporter.

If you are a candidate for office let the people know it. The Reporter will be pleased to publish your announcement. Our columns are open to the members of the various political parties—the Republicans, Democrats, Socialists and even to those who are waving Teddy's red bander.

Diphtheria Causes Child's Death

Jasen Beebe the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin T. Riding of Mammoth died last Saturday morning from diphtheria. The child was ill but a few days prior to its death and as the illness was not considered serious a physician was not called. In view of the fact that a quarantine was not established at the home until the death of the little one a number of people may have been exposed to the disease. The remains were interred in the Eureka city cemetery on Sunday, there being no services owing to the highly contagious nature of the disease from which the child died.

W. P. Wallace national committee man for the Democratic party of this state was in Tintic last Saturday for the purpose of looking after his business as a mining interests. He found time to circulate around among the local followers of Democracy and passed out a very cheerful line of talk. Mr. Wallace came back from the Balmore convention literally bubbling over with enthusiasm regarding the chances of the Democratic candidate for the presidency in the coming campaign.

The Young Men's Republican Club held an interesting meeting last evening at the C. C. Gr. presiding and D. A. J. acting as secretary during the absence of J. H. McKnight. William H. Vasey selected chairman of the membership committee who had been appointed at the previous meeting of the club. J. H. McKnight, Ralph B. Dyer, J. E. Dr. Col. Alex. G. Arley and William H. McKnight were elected to serve on the executive committee while the program committee consists of J. D. Sutherland, J. B. Sylvester, F. A. Miner, W. C. Carter and David M. Sullivan. A number of the members of the club were present at the meeting and the club will act upon the executive committee. The next meeting of the club will be held at the city hall on Tuesday of next week at which time other committees will be appointed. The report of the membership committee will also be submitted at that time.

The Democrats of Eureka held a caucus meeting at the county courthouse on Tuesday evening, and in addition to electing a chairman and secretary for their precinct committee took the preliminary steps to organize a Young Men's Republican Club for this city. Joseph Phillips called the meeting to order and read the call after which I. C. Doty was elected precinct chairman and T. L. Sullivan as secretary of the precinct committee. W. B. Thurmond was also selected as committeeman in district No. 3 succeeding Walter Henry who has left the city. The secretary then read a communication from the state chairman, R. H. Thurmond of Salt Lake upon matters pertaining to the organization of local clubs and later the rolls of the local club were opened and twenty-three Democrats signed. Brief speeches were made by prominent Democrats and the local club will no doubt start off with a good membership. Another meeting will be held at the city hall next Monday evening to perfect the organization and until the club officers are elected the precinct officers will act. The membership committee which is now at work securing members includes the following: W. L. Evans, Joseph J. Phillips, John P. Shea, Edward Pike, Dr. A. H. McChrysal, Mesdames Alex. Blight, James Welton, Del Roberts, Edward Pike and W. E. Evans.

H. L. Cummings secretary of the Republican state committee has issued a call for the state convention which is to be held at Salt Lake on September 5th. Juab county will be entitled to eighteen delegates to this convention. The state ticket to be nominated includes four presidential electors, two congressmen, one judge of the supreme court, governor, secretary of state, attorney general, state auditor, state treasurer, state superintendent of public instruction and a new state committee.

The Democratic state convention will be held at Salt Lake on August 20th. Juab county is entitled to 22 delegates to this convention.

THE CHALICE OF COURAGE

A New Serial Story Which Will Appeal to the Readers of This Paper

We have been fortunate in securing a serial story which we believe will please all our readers as it is one which comes to us highly recommended.

The Chalice of Courage by Cyrus Townsend Brady the opening installment of which will appear in this paper upon the completion of The Coast of Chance is a masterly romance of a man and a maid alone in the mountains of Colorado. It is a western story of love and adventure but one unlike any other ever before written. A virile powerful and with a fascinating plot that will hold you a willing and pleased reader to the end as we leave you will pronounce The Chalice of Courage one of the strongest serial stories ever published in this paper.

Watch for the opening chapter. There will be no need to advise you to watch for the succeeding installments as you will be eagerly looking forward to the coming of your home paper each week during the publication of this intensely interesting story.

All Union Men Are Invited to Attend Meetings of Miners Union

At the meeting held on Saturday evening of last week the members of the Tintic District Miners Union passed a resolution which they intend to have all the members of all labor organizations as well as the ladies who are on basis of the auxiliary organization to attend the meetings of the Miners Union. This means that every union man as well as women who are interested in the work which is being performed by the organization will be welcome to the meetings of the Miners Union. The meetings of the union are held on Saturday evening of each week.

Tournament Program Sent Out

The officers of the local fire department this week sent out to various parts of the state copies of the official program for the tournament which is to be conducted here on the 21st and 22nd of the month. The program contains a list of the prizes and outlines the rules which will govern the various contests.

Boy Receives Serious Injury

Shortly after six o'clock last Friday evening Victor the 10 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan H. Harris of Silver City was thrown from a horse sustaining injuries which may prove fatal. The boy accompanied his father to the Tintic Mine and then started to take the horse home. The horse reared and threw him. He was injured in two places and a mother immediately secured help and started searching for the boy who was found in an unconscious condition at the side of the trail. It is thought that he was thrown from the horse and that his foot caught in the stirrup allowing him to be dragged some little distance. The boy's skull was horribly fractured the scalp being torn from the back part of his head. The boy has been at the Tintic Hospital at Mammoth ever since the accident and his condition is still very serious although it is quite evident he is going to recover.

Eureka Man Came Very Near Getting In Bad with Uncle Sam

The attention of the postal authorities was recently called to the fact that John Lehtinen of this city has been using the mails to circulate petitions which contain an urgent request for campaign contributions to be used in behalf of the Republican party, and last Saturday an inspector was sent here to investigate the matter. Mr. Lehtinen who is a Finlander now in the employ of the Centennial Eureka mine with absolutely no connection with the Republican party of Eureka informed the inspector that no money has been collected as the result of the circulation of these petitions which he stated were printed at his request by a Michigan publishing house. The heading of the paper contained a well worded appeal for funds and was signed Eureka Republican Committee. J. Lehtinen made an effort to convince the inspector that he really intended to use the money in case he collected any in furthering the interests of the Republican party. It is unnecessary to say that the inspector had his doubts about this but after looking into the case thoroughly he decided that the evidence to secure a conviction was lacking. Lehtinen has however been impressed with the seriousness of his offense and in the future will no doubt carry on his campaign work without using the mails.

Police Court Affairs

I. K. Ayerson arrested some time ago for disturbing the peace and quiet of Main street and especially at part of the thoroughfare which is near the resort of the Galtley brothers appeared before Judge Dewar on Wednesday and entered a plea of guilty. Ayerson excused himself by saying that at whiskey does not agree with him at this altitude and that in the future he will drink it only in moderation. The court decided that a fine of $5 would amply satisfy the dignity of the city which has been impaired through the disorderly and tumultuous conduct of the defendant. The fine was paid.

Strike on 2300

Level of Central

In the Grand Central mine ore has been encountered at a depth of 2300 feet and while the assays which have been made during the past few days indicate that the ore is hardly rich enough to ship Assistant Manager W. D. Loose is expecting to get into the higher grade rock with every round of holes. The main drift on the 2300 by which the ledge was cut was driven about 15 or 20 degrees south of east and since getting into the ledge matter which carries both gold and silver but no copper work has been taken up to the north and also to the south. Upon the level above there are two nice bodies of ore one upon the hanging wall and the other upon the foot wall some thing like 100 feet away. It is upon the hanging wall that the work is now being prosecuted upon the 2300 level but Mr. Loose will drift on over to the other wall as he expects to get ore in both places.

The Grand Central has the deepest working shaft of any of the Tintic properties and the strike upon the 2300 level is an important one because it will show something regarding the great depth to which the ore bodies extend in this district.

Will Build Switch for Chief

The Chief Cons. officials are now making an effort to have the Rio Grande R. Y. construct a switch which will make it possible for them to load their ore directly upon the cars without a wagon haul. It is understood here that this switch will be built sometime within the next few months or before the winter weather puts the wagon roads in bad condition again. The haul from the Chief Cons. mine is a very short one but with the present heavy tonnage it is no easy task to handle the ore. The mine is now shipping at the rate of about four car loads each day and this output is keeping the company's ore hauling outfits upon the jump.

The special stockholders meeting of the Uncle Sam Consolidated company scheduled for Wednesday afternoon was postponed until August 21st there not being a quorum present. The Richmond Anacanda meeting likewise was postponed as no action on the merger between the two companies can be taken by the Richmond Anacanda until the Uncle Sam shareholders authorize the proposed increase in capitalization for this purpose.

THE CRY OF THE FARMER OF THE WEST.

Chief Cons. Has Better Than $150,000 Cash.

The shareholders of the Chief Cons. this week received an interesting statement from the officials of the company. This statement shows that on January 1st 1912 the company had a cash balance of $22,230.86 and that since that time the ore sales have brought the mine $202,182.11. The operating costs and other expenses for the first six months of the present year total $72,303.66 and as the report shows the surplus in the treasury on July 1st was $152,108.81. Manager Walter Fitch publishes the following statement in connection with the report regarding the company's finances:

The results gained during that period lead us to hope that the balance of the year's work will be as favorable in which case sufficient profit will be realized to provide the balance of the treasury reserve desired and thus pave the way for the initial dividend. The reserve already accumulated insures the safe and economical operation of the mine and the carrying out of the comprehensive plan of development projected.

Taking into account the results so far gained in the preliminary development work and in view of the large holdings of the company it is safe to predict that as the work progresses additional ore channels will be encountered and the multiplied producing points thus gained will not only insure the perpetuation of profits but permit of their probable increase over the present scale.

The report of Supt. Cecil Fitch gives in detail the work handled during the past six months as well as figures showing the mineral contents of the ore. The tonnage for six months was 7,968 tons of the average gross value of $31.25 per ton.

Tunnel In 1,450 Feet

Manager George Nichols of the Lehi Tintic was in town during the early part of the week and talked in his characteristic cheerful manner regarding this property. Mr. Nichols and his associates have absolute faith in this ground and are not afraid to back up their judgment with the hard cash which is needed for development work. They have an exceptionally fine showing and are no doubt nearing the stage where they are to recover the benefit from their labor. The tunnel at the Lehi Tintic is now in something like 1,450 feet and is undoubtedly nearing its objective point. A number of very promising looking fissures have been cut in driving that distance and in addition to the work in the main tunnel Mr. Nichols is also driving a crosscut for what is known as the Empire vein. The face of the main tunnel now has a depth of 800 feet.

Heavier Pumps

For Centennial.

It is understood here that the officials of the Centennial Eureka Mining company have placed an order for additional pumping equipment to be used in unwatering the 2300 level of the property. The big electrical pumping plant which is in operation upon this level of the mine has for some time been lifting water at the rate of 1,500 gallons per minute but recent developments have shown that if work is to be continued there with any degree of success heavier pumping equipment will be needed. While no ore has yet been found on the 2300 level the ore deposits have been followed nearly to that depth and it is almost a cinch that a small amount of work in addition to that which has already been done will be sufficient to locate the ore.

Nothing Doing at Old American

There has been some little activity in the stock of the Old American company during the past few weeks and this has resulted in the circulation of a story to the effect that work is soon to be resumed upon this ground. As near as we are able to learn however there is no truth in this report. The drift which is being pushed over into the Colorado ground from the Crown Point shaft has an important bearing upon the future of the Old American as anything encountered in that particular part of the Colorado territory would most likely make over into the Old American ground. This new work to doubt accounts for the recent sales of Old American stock at prices which are slightly higher than what this issue has been bringing for some time past.

Reduced Rates for Hauling Zinc

John Dern and Harry S. Joseph are back from their trip to Denver and it will be good news to the mining men of this section to hear that they were successful in securing a special rate upon zinc ore between the Tintic district and the Kansas gas belt where the smelters are located. The rate secured is $7.20 per ton on ore of $60 valuation. While this is 50 cents a ton higher than the rate now existing between Park City and the same common points it is a very substantial reduction from the rate which the railroads formerly asked. An effort will be made to have the Interstate Commerce Commission waive the regulation thirty day publication of tariff schedules for this particular occasion and in that event some of the Tintic mines among them the May Day and Yankee could at once commence the shipment of zinc ore.

The Scranton mine of this district has been producing a large tonnage of zinc ore for several years but aside from this there has been no zinc shipped from this section.

Inspected Galena King Property

P. J. Fennell, J. E. Driscoll, R. P. Petty and John Adams made a trip to Stockton last Sunday in the latter's automobile going there to inspect the Galena King property which is being worked under a lease held by a number of local people. About forty car loads of ore have already been sent out by the leasing company but owing to the fact that it was necessary to spend a large amount of money in putting the mine in shape for work the lease has not been a very profitable one. The lessees believe that there is sufficient ore in sight to enable them to get out with a profit but the deposits seem to be pocketed. On Sunday the mine was sampled for zinc ore and the assays which have been made by Mr. Petty indicate that it may be possible to make shipments of this character of rock.

Leaving Stockton at about dark and being unfamiliar with the road the Eureka people got lost in the jungles and the trip which could ordinarily have been made in three hours required almost the entire night it being about 5 o'clock in the morning when the party pulled into town.

At The Eagle & Blue Bell

Encouraging reports are still coming from the Eagle & Blue Bell mine and it will probably not be many months before there is money enough in the company's treasury to justify a dividend. Notwithstanding the fact that there is some lost motion in the handling of the mine's output the ore is now going forward to the smelter at the rate of about a car load each day and the completion of the connection between the main working shaft and the large ore deposits will undoubtedly mean cheaper ore extraction and much heavier shipments. The raise which will connect the main ore zone with the 1300 level will be started on Saturday according to Supt. William Owens. The distance that this raise will have to be driven is 115 feet and it is estimated that about five weeks will be required to drive the raise and put in the chutes. The lower portion of the raise will be 6x14 feet and the upper part 6x8 and steel chutes will be installed owing to the fact that a large part of the mine's output will be brought to the shaft through this opening.

Diamond Drill Shut Down

The diamond drill which has been in use upon the south end of the Dragon Cons. ground for the past month or six weeks was shut down a few days ago. The drill was operated by power secured from the big copressor plant of the Knight companies and owing to the great distance between the compressor and the drill this power was hardly satisfactory. Assistant Manager Birch of the Knight companies is of the opinion that this development work will be taken up in the near future and that the drilling equipment will be operated by steam power. In the Dragon the drill was used in sinking to a depth of about 500 feet.

Ruling Injures Mining Industry

Walter Fitch of this city was one of the speakers at a meeting of mining operators held at the Commercial Club rooms in Salt Lake on Friday evening of last week. This was the largest gathering of mining men ever held in the state and during the evening resolutions were adopted for presentation to Congress asking for relief from certain rulings from the Department of the Interior. These rulings undoubtedly being detrimental to the mining industry not only in Utah but in other western states. The committee on resolutions consisted of Harry Joseph, Walter Fitch and G. W. Ruter. The recent ruling of the department in the matter of the mineral entry of the East Tintic Cons. Mng. Co. in the opinion of well known mining men establishes a precedent that will have a tendency to discourage prospecting to unsettled mining titles and to retard development of mining property and for that reason mining men have asked for a rehearing of the case.

May Day Ready to Ship Zinc

Supt. C. C. Griggs of the May Day and Uncle Sam mines returned home this morning after a short business trip to Salt Lake and says that the adjustment of the freight rate between Tintic and the smelters which are located in the Kansas gas belt will no doubt make it possible for the May Day to start the shipment of zinc ore some time next week.

Mr. Griggs believes that it is safe to say that the May Day mine contains fully 10,000 tons of high-grade zinc ore which will be the means of placing a nice piece of money in the company's treasury during the next few months. There is also some of this character of ore in the Uncle Sam and this mine may also commence the shipment of zinc in the near future.

The fact that the management has been able to arrange matters for the shipment of zinc has already had a noticeable effect upon the May Day stock which has again passed the 10 cent mark.

Important Change at Iron Blossom

Upon the 800 level of the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom mine there has been an important change during the past few days and a vein which was recently cut at that depth now carries some good looking copper ore. While this work is being carried on at a point some little distance to the west it will probably be found to connect up with the main ore channel. What is practically all of the ore which is now being shipped from the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom is coming from a point above the 800 level. The officials of the mine are now of the opinion that the present campaign of development work on the 800 will result in the opening of a nice body of shipping ore.

The buildings which will house the new hoisting plant at the No. 1 workings of this mine are now nearing completion and some of the machinery is being put in position.

While at work in the Chief Cons. mine last Monday John Sullivan fell a distance of about thirty feet and sustained some very bad bruises. He was attended by Dr. Laker and is now well along toward recovery. Sullivan recently came here from Butte.

World of Labor

News from All Parts of the World,
of General Interest to the Worker

Geneva Switzerland—In Switzerland the people act on the theory that a man who is unemployed is left to himself liable to become a waste by being a subject of charity and a tax on the community. Therefore the problem is regarded as an economic question. The purpose is to assist the unfortunate unemployed to secure work not only for the sake of his family but in the interest of the state. There is no toleration for the loafers. Begging is prohibited by law and vagrancy is classified as a crime. If an unemployed person does not make a serious effort to find work the authorities will find it for him and he is compelled to perform it. If he refuses he is placed in the workhouse where strict discipline is kept and every inmate is required to work to his full capacity receiving therefor his board and lodging and from five to ten cents a day in wages. There are also institutions where temporary employment is furnished to persons out of work through no fault of their own and comfortable accommodations and some money compensation given until they can find more remunerative wages.

Chicago—The Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company is defendant in a civil action filed in the United States District court by James H. Wilkerson. United States attorney in which violations of the sixteen hour law are alleged. The government seeks to recover penalties amounting to $7,500 charging fifteen specific violations on the railroad between Savannah and Galewood Ill. It is charged that the crews of trains traveling between these points were permitted or compelled to work for a continuous period of more than sixteen hours.

New Bedford Mass.—Twelve New Bedford cotton mills employing 13,000 operatives were closed for an indefinite period as a result of the strike of weavers and loom fixers which went into effect today. The loom fixers went out in sympathy with the weavers as did also the twisters and smoothers. A notice posted by some of the mills announcing a proposed new system of grading cloth to determine the pay of the weavers was the direct cause of the strike.

Boston—Boston U. A. Steamfitters Union 537 reports that the strike of its members since May 1 with the General Fire Extinguisher company has been settled and the union men have returned to work under an agreement calling for the employment of U. A. men minimum wage rates of $4 a day for fitters and $2.25 a day for helpers and the payment of all expenses for work out of town the conditions for which the men struck.

Boston—Labor conditions in Massachusetts today are worse than at any other time in the history of the Bay State according to the records today in the offices of the state labor officials. Fifty two strikes are on. Twenty thousand workers are idle as a result. The largest strike is at New Bedford where 13,490 cotton mill operatives struck for abolishment of the graduated pay system.

Mount Vernon Ill.—The shortage of George Wilson secretary treasurer of the seventh subdistrict of Illinois United Mineworkers of America is now believed to be $15,000. The reward for his apprehension has been advanced from $500 to $1,500. A number of locals have asked for the resignation of several district officers for freedom with funds allowed Wilson.

New York—Thirty college boys sixty negroes from Baltimore and fifty firemen acting as strikebreakers manned the American liner St. Louis and it managed to leave for Plymouth and Cherbourg. The entire crew of the liner struck for higher wages and better living conditions. The agents refused to grant the demands and the ship was tied up for a time. The college boys were employed as coal passers.

Youngstown O.—At the bimonthly wage settlement between the Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers and the Republic Iron and Steel Company held here the rate for puddling under the new scale was advanced for July and August to $5.85 a ton with a 1 per cent advance for finishers. About fifteen thousand skilled workmen are affected.

Toledo O.—The Toledo Typographical union has signed a contract with local newspaper publishers. One of the provisions is: This contract shall be null and void in case of trouble with an allied craft providing such trouble can not first be settled by arbitration such arbitration to be in accordance with the provisions of his contract.

Kalamazoo Mich.—Four of the biggest mill companies here have announced a voluntary increase to their employees. To all workmen receiving less than $2.25 per day an increase of seven and one-half per cent has been granted to workmen receiving over $2.25 per day two and one-half per cent increase is given. Over 1,000 men are affected.

Hale Springs Tenn.—At the recent convention of the International Printing Pressmen's union it was decided to make an additional expenditure of $60,000 for improvements and additions to the Pressmen's home.

Albany N. Y.—The returns gathered by New York bureau of labor statistics for the first three months of the year show that there are at present 2,450 labor organizations in the state with a membership of 497,000. The membership of the men's unions has decreased about 1 per cent during the last twelve months and the roll of the women's unions has decreased about 4 per cent. About 20 per cent of the union workers were idle on the last working day in March and nearly 10 per cent are reported as continuously idle throughout the first quarter of the year. The average per diem wage paid is increasing steadily. An index figure adopted by the bureau several years ago sets the level of wages for 1911 at 125 points and for 1912 at 128 points indicating an increase during the year of about 2 1/2 per cent.

Berlin Germany—The number of trade unionists in Germany is about two million five hundred thousand as against one million in 1904. The increase last year was about five hundred thousand. The expenditure for strikes and lockouts last year was $20,000,000. During last year they obtained shorter hours for 1,250,000 persons involved in strikes and lockouts amounting to two million hours a week. They raised the wages of three hundred thousand workmen about eight hundred and fifty thousand marks a week. More than 30 per cent of all industrial disputes are lockouts and last year more than three hundred thousand men were locked out. Yet it is remarkable that the employers were successful in only 7 per cent of all lockouts.

Washington—The house passed the bill to establish a department of labor the secretary of which shall have a place in the cabinet. The measure long has been pressed by organized labor. This bill provides a secretary of labor three assistant secretaries, a solicitor a chief clerk a disbursing clerk and other minor employees. The bill gives the department of labor the right to collect and publish all statistics relative to labor. It also authorizes the secretary of labor to act as a mediator in questions of industrial dispute and to appoint commissioners of conciliation in labor disputes.

Port Huron Mich.—The International Longshoremen's Association concluded its annual convention here with the election of officers for the ensuing year and the selection of Boston for the 1913 convention. T. V. O'Connor of Buffalo was re-elected president. The only new officers elected were the following vice presidents: John Kean of San Francisco W. F. Dempsey of Boston and James Tighe of St. Johns N. B.

Indianapolis—In the two years from July 1, 1910 to June 30, 1912 the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America paid out through its office in this city a total of $562,697.07 in death and disability claims according to the biennial report which is being prepared under the direction of Frank Duffy general secretary for submission to the general convention which meets at Washington September 16.

Indianapolis—Iron Molders Union No. 56 has signed up a new scale with the shops at which its more than four hundred members are employed. The increase is about 15 cents a day for each man. The three crafts affected are machine operators coremakers and bench molders.

Pittsburg—Almost 6,000 workmen of the Jones & Laughlin Steel company will be affected by a wage increase which was announced by the company. Although the amount of the advance was not officially given out by the company it is generally understood that it will average 10 per cent over the former wage scale paid to workmen employed by the day and hour. This increase affects all laborers and all workmen paid on the hourly basis and includes several thousand men. Day labor is advanced to 17 1/2 cents an hour.

New York—New York Typographical union No. 6 recently adopted a new scale which calls for an increase of $1 per week beginning October 1, 1912 and continuing until January 1, 1914. The scale will be $80 per week for evening papers $33 for morning papers and $36 per week for lobster shift.

Pittsburg—A tentative agreement on a wage scale insuring a final settlement was reached by the joint conference of coal operators and miners and was ratified by the special convention of District No. 5 United Mine Workers of America. The agreement is for one year and affects 40,000 men.

London England—In Lancashire Yorkshire Derbyshire and Cheshire cotton mills the campaign against half timers is being pushed vigorously by trade union officials. A late report from Blackburn the largest cotton weaving center in the world shows that half timers in that borough have decreased the last ten years from 2,532 to 1,599.

Washington—There are 500,000 men employed in the iron and steel industries in this country who receive in wages alone more than $400,000,000 annually. There are $225,000,000 invested in this industry.

LIBERAL BALL PLAYERS NEVER LOSE OUT.

Chick Gandil Washington's Crack First Baseman

Whether it pays to go into the market and bid for young players of promise even if the price seems high is answered in the case of Gandil whose addition to the Nationals virtually made the team says Joe Jackson in the Washington Post. He continues: It is generally understood that Gandil cost $15,000 including the assessed valuation of four players and a cash balance the deal being similar in this sense to the one by which Russell went from Baltimore to the Athletics. Russell's purchase was a dead loss but that was entirely the fault of the player who put himself out of the game. So far Gandil has been a success. He has proved that he is a star fielder and while possibly he may not hit quite as well after he has been in a time he shapes up like a man who should at worst bat around .280. And that kind of binger is not found every day.

If Gandil cost $15,000 he was not expensive as far as can be judged from results to date. None of the players who were let out would be useful right now as Cunningham was doing bench duty exclusively and Griffith was not using either Akers or Becker to any extent. The difference in receipts since Gandil joined between what the club would have drawn without him and what it has drawn with him to say nothing of the money the club should get at home will pay what he cost and leave a balance. The club would have won some games without him but never could have compiled its long streak of consecutive victories.

ZINN PROVES CLEVER PLAYER

Highlanders' Young Outfielder Has Been Hitting Ball Hard Especially When in Pinches

There was no blare of trumpets when the Highlanders bought the release of Guy Zinn from the Altoona club of the Tristate league last year. Guy was no high priced highly touted phenom of the O'Toole-Marquard Russell class but an ordinary garden variety of green rookie. Guy jimmied his way into about a dozen games on the hilltop last season—not enough to get into the official averages. He played a few good games but did not look as if he possessed big league caliber. Before going south this year Guy was not conceded a chance to stick with the big fellows as it was thought that Wilfred Osborn the former Phillie would land the substitute outfield vacancy.

However Zinn not only landed the job as substitute outfielder but in three days clinched a regular position. The poor showing of the team has thrown a shadow over the good work he has been doing. With Kilites up in the race the praise of this youth would be sung all over the city. Zinn gives promise of developing into a great batter. He hits the ball hard and what is more does his hitting in the pinches. Many times this season he has made good with runners on the trails. Zinn is no Ty Cobb on his feet but he covers a big area of ground in the outfield and is fairly fast on the bases. He has made more hits than any other member of the Kilites this season and it looks as if he is in the big leagues to stay.

BALL-BAT NOTES

Gandil and Milan are the only Washington regulars batting over .300.

George Roche is leading the Pelican batters. What do you know about that?

With the scalps of O'Toole and Marquard at his belt young Mr. Lavender looks like a real pitcher.

John Titus is hitting well for the Boston Braves but the Phils are using Miller only as a pinch hitter.

Ty Cobb's recent home run at Cleveland was measured. The ball went 450 feet and struck on top of a house.

Cub fans after that first victory over the Giants considerably refrained from painting the town red. They merely gave it a smear of Lavender.

Walter Regt grabbed by the Pirates from the Boston Red Sox has been turned off to St. Paul with a string attached.

Pitcher Jack Pfeister once famous south paw of the Chicago Cubs is pitching for the independent team at Middletown O.

Clark Griffith of the Senators believes the hit and run play is more effective than the sacrifice and uses it every opportunity.

Al Orth the former big league pitcher has made a hit as an umpire in the Virginia league and may be given a trial in the major leagues.

The Reds are surely slumping at the bat but its one of those calms that precede the storm. They'll begin slaying the pellet in the near future.

Jack Coombs now has a harness constructed of straps and chains that he has been using since his injury—sort of human hoppers as it were.

Somebody said that Johnny Evers was going back. Lots of infielders now in the fast company would be glad to be no further back than Johnny is today.

After firing Hub Perdue J. Kilgus grabbed off all authority over his players and will not hereafter be interfered with by John Ward or anybody else.

When his pitching days are over Otis Crandall of the Giants who is leading the National league in hitting will still be able to stick in the game as an outfielder.

Chick Gandil peevish by various charges of rough work on the bases says that the Athletics infielders are cold footed except Barry. He says the rest of them squeal before they are hurt.

Harry Davis kidded Clark Griffith a good bit when the Fox coughed up more than $10,000 for Chick Gandil a player who had been juiced there and slumped back. The joke doesn't look funny to Davis now.

FEAR MIX-UP OF FALSE HAIR

Why Women Apparent Strangers Insist on Occupying Adjoining Berths in Pullman

Nobody can tell funnier stories about the false hair craze than railroad employes.

For some time after women began to swell their heads out with such enormous quantities of hair said a Pullman conductor we couldn't quite understand why women who were apparent strangers to each other should insist upon occupying neighboring berths even bargaining to exchange with other passengers to obtain the desired accommodations. Finally a girl wearing about a bushel of blonde hair enlightened me.

Have you noticed she said that a blonde insists upon sleeping near another blonde and a brunette near another brunette? They do that to prevent ludicrous mistakes in an emergency that necessitates quick dressing. Supposing there should be an accident in the night and every body would have to throw on their clothes and hair in the dark. If I am shut up in the same compartment with a brunette I am likely to mix some of her black hair with my blonde puffs and she mine with hers. What we would both look like can be imagined. That happened to me once so now I insist upon sleeping near a blonde neighbor even if I have to pay extra for it.

Growth of St. Petersburg
That St. Petersburg is rapidly growing in population is evidenced by the census taken in December 1910 which showed the population including certain suburban villages formerly not covered to be 1907788. It is pre-eminently an office town and also a seaport for six or eight months of the year.

The principal industry is the manufacture of cotton textiles although its advantage as a port of entry for the interior is gaining recognition. A line of steamers has been established to Libau connecting there with a transatlantic line to New York. This enables American shippers to send goods direct to this port without the delays of transshipment in foreign ports.

The Day After the Fire

It is then too late to inquire into the value of your fire insurance policy or the financial standing of the company or the past record of their adjustments. True every company must comply with certain requirements before they can legally transact business in this state but that is no guarantee of their permanency.

Investigate Before the Fire

Does your company operate under the Safety Fund Law of the State of New York thereby being proof against another great conflagration? Did they pay face value without discount in the San Francisco conflagration? Or did they pay about 50 per cent of their losses after considerable delay? Have they a reputation for promptness and courteous and liberal treatment of their patrons at time of loss? The best insurance is always the cheapest. Any insurance policy will do if you have no loss but in that case none at all is just as good. Our companies are time tried and fire tested.

A Big Success

Vitagraph right at the Crescent judging from two packed houses was a great success. If Friday night's business is as good Manager Rhoads says he will interpret it to mean that his patrons favor special nights for special pictures and there will be Vitagraph Edison Essanay Lubin Kalem Selig and Pathe nights.

Of the three Vitagraphs on now it is hard to call any one best. Every one has the snap and go strength and tenderness that make up Vitagraph quality. Every one has the grip of realism the appeal to heroism that give a picture character.

AFTER WILD SHEEP in CENTRAL ASIA

TA WEI TI

WONG the many happy hunting grounds in which I have found myself during the last thirty years I know of none which has interested me more than the Great Altai mountains where last year I had the good fortune to spend a month in search of the Ovis ammon. I have said interested me and it should be understood that this interest and experience were from the sportsman's point of view quite unique owing to the total absence of any native hunters to assist or even to give the least clue as to where the great sheep might be found. It may be superfluous to add that one invariably has the services and benefit of a second and usually very keen pair of eyes to assist in finding the game and subsequently to help in the stalk. In the present instance however it was a case of single blessedness with a vengeance. The reason of this absolute dearth of local shikaris is accounted for by the rooted objection which the native inhabitant of these wilds the nomad Hassack has to walking. To his ideas it is not the thing to do. Ponies and camels again are plentiful and the Hassacks of both sexes when on foot shod as they are in a kneebot with a grotesquely high heel stump along in a most uncomfortable manner as though every step would bring them down. Luckily I had hunted the big sheep before and was fairly conversant with his ways so one morning soon after dawn I started off to search the valley at the mouth of which we were encamped. The morning was beautifully clear and I took matters somewhat easily as I had left directions for one of our Mongol escort to follow me up with the lunch and my pony for as usual with these gentlemen he was late and enjoying his easily earned twelve hours repose. Needless to add I saw nothing of him—nor of the lunch—that day. Working my way steadily up the half frozen stream at the bottom of the valley after a while I made out the forms of two rams at the head of the nala. They appeared to suspect nothing and soon began to feed on the new grass shoots. Then two finer rams came to view. I felt I was in luck but there were many a slip. Scanning the rugged ground and looking for the best way to approach them I soon recognized that it was not such an easy matter. To follow up the stream bed over the snow and ice meant being seen. The left side of the valley a slope of broken rocks and shale was equally out of the question. I therefore resolved to try the right side though not without misgivings on account of the snow slopes and forbidding looking precipices. I concluded that if I succeeded in tracking this right side that I should be able to work round and above the sheep. After waiting for an hour the fine beasts made things somewhat easier for me by feeding down and behind a small rocky point. During my long watch I had been dreading lest the Mongol with the ponies should appear and scare away the sheep. Chancing this however and judging I knew my Mongol I started off up the stream. Some little way on I managed to cross on a snow bridge expecting at any moment to disappear through the soft snow. Then followed a long and steady ascent over huge boulders of broken rock interspersed with soft wet shale. Here was where the local knowledge of the man on the spot would have been invaluable for I had not been able up to this to discern that to reach the high ridge immediately above the sheep was impracticable. A change of plans was therefore necessary. Holding on I tried to scale the rocks to the right which rocks I am convinced would have delighted the heart of an ibex or thar. Had a hunter been with me I could have succeeded in this clambering ascent as it was I had to work down to the lower ground again and make the best of a bad job across the open. A bad job too it turned out for having got within one hundred yards of the ridge behind which the sheep had disappeared to my disgust I discovered two rams standing on the top staring straight down at me. Sinking slowly to the ground I sat motionless. One ram then moved behind the ridge and the other having been joined by a third followed suit. The last sheep carried a fine head and was very white—evidently an old one. As they had moved off slowly I hoped that I might find them feeding and be still able to get on terms but they took no chances and when I got to the top of the ridge there was not a sign of them. I was just about to retire when I saw a grand light. Several thousand feet above me were my five rams stalking quietly away along the top of a stony ridge. The leader who was the largest and whitest had thick massive horns and they all with one exception would have made a fine trophy. I congratulated myself on thus getting a second chance and watched them as they went stiltly along in the way they move when scared. At length the procession stopped and they lay down on the steep side of the slope from whence they commanded the whole of the valley. Off I went again over huge sharp boulders of broken rock but I was soon held up on coming to a large open patch of deep snow. There was nothing for it but to wait patiently and make myself as comfortable and warm as possible among the boulders.

After an hour or so about 1:30 p.m. they rose stretched themselves scanned the whole country side and again moved slowly off away to the north. They were evidently in a nervous mood. Following them after a while I crossed the snow patch plunging through the snow which in places was up to my middle and following in the deep tracks of the herd.

It was stiff work and was followed by a still stiffer climb to the top of a razor-backed ridge. This I descended the rams still in view. The ground here was quite open but wild sheep usually look for danger from below and I remained unnoticed. They finally disappeared slowly round the slope of a high rounded hill about eight hundred yards ahead. I quickly started off to gain the crest of this hill hoping to intercept the game but was doomed to further disappointment. There was not a sign of them. My aneroid here registered eleven thousand feet and we had reached the highest part of the downs. A cold wind was now blowing mist came rolling up out of the valleys and it looked like snow.

Taking up a couple of holes in my belt and a pull at my flask I followed along the north face of the mountain. Avoiding the patches of soft snow in which I noticed the marks of sheep's hoofs suddenly on the opposite side and some way below I saw my five old friends evidently bent on shifting their quarters still further to the west. They must have got my wind. Clouds occasionally hid me from the sheep so under cover of these I determined to make a dash back for less open ground and to move down and try to get in a shot. I had now been steadily on the move for over twelve hours and had worked back towards the open valley though away from the camp. My hurried move failed. Now that the excitement of the stalk was over I vented deep anathemas on the Mongols' head for not having brought up the ponies. When within a mile or so of camp I was met by our whole retinue who had turned out to conduct me in search parties had gone out thinking I was lost. After a hearty meal of our standing dish—Hassack mutton—I soon turned in and thus terminated one of the hardest and most pleasant days which have fallen to my lot and certainly one that I am never likely to forget.

The next few days I spent looking for those fine old rams again but without success for these sheep when thoroughly scared travel many miles and successfully hide themselves.

Leaving camp at 4:30 one morning shortly before dawn the two hunters and I had not been long at work when the Kalmuk pulled up short but too late for we had been seen first by a flock of nine rams who were taking their early feed on the side of a steep ravine. Off they went towards higher ground but in no great haste. Riding up to the ridge along which they had disappeared we dismounted and soon viewed them again. They were some distance off feeding on an open slope which appeared to be secure from attack but there was one weak spot. After scanning the herd and noticing three or four good heads among them I started off with Hussein to stalk. A warm job it proved up that steep loose shale slope and the pace was perforce slow. At length we made the crest and took it easy to study the situation. The wind though light was shifty but all seemed well for the herd were busy feeding. They were what appeared to be about one hundred and fifty yards off but on a slope somewhat below us. The difficulty was to select the finest head for to raise one self more than enough to just peep over would have soon ended matters. Under such circumstances one is always apt to be deceived as to which head is going to beat previous records. The question however was brought to an abrupt conclusion by the herd getting their heads up and beginning to look suspicious. In another second they would have been off so taking a quick aim I fired at the chest of what looked like the largest as he stood head towards me. A rush and a stampede ensued across the soft face of the steep slope below us. The animals were so bunched up that it was impossible to pick out the largest and the result of my three shots was to bowl over a moderate-sized one only. The herd then disappeared at racing speed and when next seen they were in the big valley a long way below. We descended and cut up the dead sheep. This finished and the old Kalmuk carrying the head over his shoulders we rode off round the slopes after the herd, eventually pulling up and dismounting at the end of a long spur. Here while on the look out we suddenly saw the herd now only seven in number come bolting back towards us evidently disturbed in their flight by my fellow sportsman who just then appeared on the top of the mountain. The ovis looked like a charging straight at us but swerved off and made up the mountain except one who over come by fright or curiosity forgot his usual cunning and stopped to have a look at me. I heard the clomp of the bullet as it struck and he jumped completely round then disappeared round a small spur a short distance off. Feeling quite elated at such good fortune I followed up expecting to find the sheep lying dead. Imagine my disappointment—he had vanished. There was no time to be lost so starting the Kalmuk off in pursuit over the shoulder of the mountain Hussein and I took up the blood tracks. Twice during this latter proceeding I heard the report of the Kalmuk's blunderbuss and momentarily expected to see him return smiling thus thinking all was right we returned to where the ponies had been left. They also had all three vanished leaving portions of the first dead sheep's carcass scattered about the mountain side. It was some time before we had all collected again and the Kalmuk returned having I understood had a great chase after the wounded ram and marked it down in a nala not far from where we had started the day's work. Loading up the ponies away we went again searching fruitlessly for a long time among the numerous nalas. Things looked bad. It was getting late and we were just about to abandon the search till the morning when as good luck would have it the old Kalmuk stopped and pointed below as he did so. I was off my pony in a second and peering over saw the fine old ram only just able to stand and looking very sick about fifty feet below. One shot in the shoulder finished him. It shows the extraordinary vitality of these fine animals that though badly wounded he had been able to keep going for so long. My shot had missed the middle of his chest and had caught him near the point of the right shoulder and raked along his ribs. His horns measured fifty inches.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Ipepa Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat every thing you or stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and number of patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 10 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to the Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Chambers' Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

When purchasing Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefited the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand the loss. All we ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will.

DRY FARMING OPPORTUNITIES

THOUSANDS OF ACRES OF UTAH LANDS BEING CULTIVATED WITHOUT IRRIGATION

It is an Indisputable Fact That Dry Farming Pays. Failures Being Practically Unknown as Result of Scientific Tilling of Soils.

The agricultural future of Utah must depend largely upon arid farming. It matters not how many millions of money we may spend on building irrigation projects and in conserving the water supply of the state. There are millions of acres of our land that can never be reached by the irrigation canal—there are vast empires of soil that will never blossom with anything but sage greasewood and cacti except they be redeemed by dry farming methods.

Of our 22,000,000 acres of arable land less than 3,000,000 acres can ever be irrigated—the remaining 19,000,000 acres must produce if at all with only such moisture as falls directly upon them from the sky. The Mississippi valley farmer would probably wonder at such a statement. His acres get more of such precipitation than they need. Not so in Utah. Here our desert lands are likely to receive ten and seldom as much as twenty inches of precipitation in a year. In order to coax from these parched soils a sufficient quantity of farm products to pay for the trouble and yield a profit scientific methods must be followed. It is not enough to turn the crust and plant the seed. The soil must first be analyzed—the seed must be tested and it must be planted and cultivated with due regard to the character of the soil, the average precipitation in the locality being cultivated and the needs of the variety of grain being grown.

This prospect is by no means discouraging. President John A. Wadsworth of the Agricultural college of Utah says in the preface to his able treatise on Dry Farming in "The Rural Science Series":

The possibilities of dry farming are stupendous. In the strength of youth we may have felt envious of the great ones of old of Columbus looking upon the shadow of the greatest continent of Balboa shouting greetings to the resting Pacific of Father Escalante pondering upon the mystery of the world alone near the shores of America's dead sea. We need harbor no envious for in the conquest of the non-irrigated and non-irrigable desert are offered as fine opportunities as the world has known to the makers and shapers of empires. We stand before an undiscovered land through the restless ascending currents of heated desert air the vision comes and goes. With striving eyes the desert is seen covered with blossoming fields with churches and homes and schools and in the distance with the vision is heard the laughter of happy children. The desert will be conquered.

Nearly six tenths of the earth's surface receive an annual rainfall of less than twenty inches and can be reclaimed for agricultural purposes only by irrigation and dry farming. A perfected world system of irrigation will convert about one tenth of this vast area into an incomparably fruitful garden leaving about one half of the earth's land surface to be reclaimed if at all by the methods of dry farming. The noble system of modern agriculture has been constructed almost wholly in countries of abundant rainfall and its applications are those demanded for the agricultural development of humid regions. Until recently irrigation was given scant attention and dry farming with its world problem of conquering one half of the earth was not considered.

The necessity of her people caused Utah to become the pioneer of the west in the adoption of irrigation—that was in 1847. As early as 1870 crops were grown successfully without irrigation in Bear River valley, Cache valley and Davis county in Salt Lake valley.

During the 80s the thoughts of Utah farmers turned to the possibilities of the dry lands for the growth of the population was more rapid than the construction of canals. Many of the conservative farmers began to realize that wheat production on irrigated lands considering the cost of water did not return a fair interest on the capital invested. As a result some attempts at dry farming were made in the central part of the state but with rather discouraging results.

Today many thousands of acres are being cultivated without the addition of water by artificial means in every valley in the state from Cache valley on the north to the Kanab desert and the Arizona strip on the south and from the Uintah country on the east to the Nevada line. Failures are practically unknown. The proportion of yield has depended mainly on the intelligence used by the farmer in preparing his soil and planting the seed and the care used by him in cultivating and gathering the yield. Precipitation and weather conditions have become of minor if not practically negligible quantities. The profits have varied somewhat according to the varieties of grains grown. Many farmers have not heeded the gratis advice given out by the experiment station experts. They have either plowed the soil too deeply or not deep enough have grown varieties of grain not suited to their soil conditions and climate and have refused to abandon old and unprofitable methods.

As a consequence they have barely more than paid expenses while their neighbors have made handsome profits. Arid farming cannot succeed on any other than a thoroughly scientific plan. It does not have the great advantage that humid farming enjoys. It presents obstacles which have been only slightly overcome in all the centuries of the past. It is either an intrepid or foolish farmer indeed who will undertake to wring profits from an arid soil with the due regard to approved and tested methods.

The state of Utah is doing a wonderful work along the line of encouraging the extension of dry farming methods. At each of the dry farm experiment stations tests are being made in the open in the growth of wheat, oats, corn, barley, rye, alfalfa, potatoes, fruit and vegetables and the results of these experiments are published and distributed without charge to all who are interested. We wish that every reader of this article could have for ready reference and for a study of dry farming methods Bulletin No. 112 prepared by Professor Lewis A. Merrill and published by the Utah Agricultural college experiment station. It contains a report of seven years in investigation of dry farming methods. The farmer who studies this and the other bulletins issued from the experiment stations and profits by the experiences of the experimenters will be able to make his arid acres yield an abundance scarcely believable thus assisting in the redemption of our desert empires and in enriching the commonwealth.

And dry farming pays. That fact is indisputably settled. President Wadsworth says 1,000 bushels of dry farm wheat contain as much nutritive matter as 1,025 bushels of wheat grown and kept under humid conditions. Utah dry farming wheat will gain 2 1/2 per cent in weight on being shipped into eastern markets. That significant fact is worth remembering. It is conceded by all that last year was a severe test to dry farming the prices because of the low precipitation yet the Utah yield was good and the profits fair. This year under somewhat more favorable conditions a big crop was harvested.

It is estimated that ten to fifteen bushels to the acre will pay the expense of farming by dry farming methods where everything is hired. Twenty bushels yield a fair profit and forty bushels amount to a bonanza.

A great boon to the commonwealth is seen in the Enlarged Homestead or Smoot act. Hundreds of citizens of the state have taken up half sections and some hundreds of settlers have taken up residence in Utah but millions of acres still bristle with sage and greasewood awaiting colonization. Homes for hundreds of thousands of denizens of the crowded east can be made in these now desert wastes. It is up to the state of Utah and her people to lend encouragement to immigration and to dispel the prevailing notion that new-comers are not welcome among us and that here under skies that are ever blue and al most perpetual sunshine sheltered from the rigors of the wintry blasts by mountain ranges which afford an abundance of fish and game for vacation times and joy supreme for lovers of scenic grandeur can be found opportunities galore for comfort and wealth. Here they may build up communities that will revel in the good things of life. Here labor may receive its full reward. Here may will ing hearts and sturdy hands come into their own.

Measuring Light From Stars. Starlight has been measured in comparison with sunlight and the following results have been announced. The light received from a star of the first magnitude like Vega is about one sixty thousandth million of the sun's. Young places the total starlight received by the earth at the value of 300 first magnitude stars thus making the whole starlight to be sixteenth that of the full moon. Light has an actual mechanical pressure and can be measured in the laboratory. It has been found that the sun's light in itself presses against the earth with a force something like 70,000 tons. As the surface of a sphere varies as the square of the radius and as the volume of mass varies as the cube of the radius and as the mechanical pressure of light on the whole surface varies as that surface and as the force of gravity varies as the mass—if a sphere were made smaller and smaller it is easily seen that the pressure of light would not decrease so fast as the force of gravity so bodies beyond a certain minuteness could not reach the sun but would be repelled by the mechanical force of its light.

Reports from the Hassell & McIntyre ranch in West Tintic indicate that an immense crop of grain will be harvested during the latter part of the present month. The yield for this year will be about 12,500 bushels of wheat and 500 acres of alfalfa. Many improvements have been made at this dry farm during the past year. The Hassell & McIntyre ranch have been cleared for next year's crop. New buildings have been erected and a new wagon road constructed placing the farm in close and easy touch with the railroad.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet collects the invisible germs of diseases spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alterative made entirely without alcohol a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot golden seal, Oregon grape root queen's root, mandarin and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

NELLIE GRANT WEDS AGAIN

The marriage recently of Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris to Frank H. Jones, a Chicago banker, was in sharp contrast to her first marriage 33 years ago to Algernon J. Sartoris, an English army officer.

Nellie Grant was then the idol of the nation and her marriage took place in the east room of the White House while her distinguished father was president. It was one of the greatest social events the White House had seen up to that time or perhaps since. Simple, amiable and unaffected, Nellie Grant, the only daughter of General Grant, had endeared herself to the American people and she went with her husband to their English home accompanied by the heartiest good wishes.

In England she was presented to Queen Victoria and dined at Windsor Castle. Yet her life in England proved most unhappy. Her husband treated her with injustice and cruelty so much so that her father-in-law's sympathy was aroused in her behalf and he made earnest efforts to effect a restoration of good feeling between husband and wife. Failing in this, he gave her a small London house in Cadogan place, forced his son to give her a country home near Hampton and settled a handsome income upon her. Upon his death in 1890, he left her the town house in which she had lived after her separation from her husband and also settled upon her $25,000 a year.

Three years after the death of the elder Sartoris, her husband died and Mrs. Sartoris received the principal of his income as guardian of her children and the lease of the country house.

BIDDLE'S UNIQUE METHODS

It is a far cry from prize fighting to religion. At first blush it seems most sacrilegious to associate the two subjects. But it has been done successfully not only in words but in deeds and as results have proven it is the basis of one of the most remarkable religious movements this country has ever seen.

The man back of this novel idea for furthering the cause of Christianity is Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, millionaire of Philadelphia, Pa., who but a few years back became famous as an amateur boxer and an object of criticism and source of disgust to the ultra-exclusive set of the Quaker City of which he is a member. But withal, Tony Biddle proved himself a practical pugilist—one who loved the manly art only for the manliness which it brought out in one who stood for honesty and high ideals and who was ever a gentleman.

When Mr. Biddle conceived the idea of his Bible class movement, his secret motive—if such it may be called—was to introduce athletics as an inducement to young men and when he took charge of his first class in the Sunday school of Holy Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, Philadelphia, four years ago, he had but three members and the attendance of the school was very slim at the time.

So rapidly has the Drexel Biddle Bible class grown that it now numbers 700 members and it is the ambition of the originator to make it of national scope.

MARSHALL NEW IN POLITICS

Gov. Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, the Democratic nominee for vice-president, rode to the front of his party on a wave of reform. But the Indiana wave was not so hoisterous as those that broke on the New Jersey coast and elsewhere. Governor Marshall believes in reform—in moderation. Also he believes in progressing—with moderation. He does not believe that this great and glorious commonwealth is going to the demerit bowl, as it were, in its fight with pride to his belief that the country is just a little bit better politically, financially and morally than ever before.

It required heroic measures on the part of his friends to induce Governor Marshall to take his presidential chances seriously and even then he refused to allow any effort to be made in his behalf outside of Indiana.

Governor Marshall was born in Manchester, Ind., in 1854 and has spent his entire fifty-eight years in his native state. He was graduated from Wabash college in 1875 when he was twenty-one years old. He practiced law in Columbia City, Ind., until he was elected governor two years ago. He is a member of many clubs and holds LL.D. degrees from Wabash, Notre Dame and the University of Pennsylvania. He married Miss Lois I. Kimsey of Angola, Ind., in 1883.

In the Literary State they call Marshall the Little Giant. When one sees him for the first time he wonders why because there is nothing colossal about the slender, undersized man with sloping shoulders and quiet mien. His hair and mustache turning from gray to white do not bristle his brows do not bristle so one can notice it and even his violet blue eyes are mild. It is only when one knows him and his political history that that Little Giant term is understood.

HILL'S REMARKABLE CAREER

The retirement of James J. Hill from his position as chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern railroad, which has just become effective, was officially announced Monday from the office of the company at St. Paul.

The resignation of Mr. Hill was presented to the board of directors June 7 and unofficial reports of the changes were made at the time but the statement with which Mr. Hill accompanied his resignation was made public only a few days ago.

Louis W. Hill, who was recently succeeded by Carl R. Gray as president of the Great Northern, succeeds his father as chairman of the board of directors. James J. Hill will remain a member of the executive committee of the board.

With his retirement, Mr. Hill completed thirty-three years of active service in the northwest beginning with his purchase of an interest in the St. Paul and Pacific of which he was made general manager to the time of his resignation from the office which he has held for five years since he resigned the presidency of the Great Northern road.

James J. Hill rose from a job as a day laborer to the presidency of the Great Northern railroad. He was cut out for the pulpit dreamed in his youth of war and literature and when a man turned his tremendous energies to the making of money. He was born in Guelph, Ont., in 1833.

FAMOUS "BONEHEAD" PLAYS ON MAJOR LEAGUE DIAMONDS

HUGH S. FULLERTON

BY JOE TINKER.

Premier Short Stop of the National League and Captain of the Chicago Cubs Who Appears to Improve With Age

Just about the time a fellow thinks he has pulled off something and escaped with it, he is likely to discover that the other fellow was doing some thinking for himself. I believe the worst break I ever made on a ball field was in trying to put over some wise stuff. And it was old silent Fred Titus who slipped it over on me. I never had a chance to make a kick. I simply had to swallow hard a couple of times and take off my hat to him and it lost a game for us.

We were fighting for the pennant that season and doing everything we could to hold our own as both Pittsburg and New York were giving us a battle. The other teams didn't know it but we did that our pitchers were tired out and not very good and we were worried in spite of the fact that we kept on telling it was easy for us. We had a long lead for the pennant but were counting every game and figuring whether we could last or not and there never was a club that had a harder time clinching a pennant after it was within reach than we did.

We were playing Philadelphia and I think the game was between Reulbach and Earl More who always gave us a lot of trouble. The score was very close and we were hanging on with one run to the good, hoping that Reulbach would last it out although we knew he was tired. He had worked a double header in Brooklyn only a few days before and we expected that he might tire toward the end. We hoped he would last it out and give the other pitchers a rest as everyone was in the same boat. Titus got on first with one out. I don't remember how and Magee smashed a hit past me so fast that it was a thousand to one Titus couldn't go to third. I dived at the ball then straightened up and as Titus crossed second I cut across in front of him just to throw him out of step and make him slow up with out interfering with him or touching him at all. Hoffman had fielded the ball and was ready to throw in so there wasn't a chance for Titus to go to third even if I hadn't moved. You may judge my surprise when that quiet, inoffensive guy took a running jump at me, bumped me as hard as he could, threw his arms around me and wrestled me down to the dirt. I shook loose wondering what had happened but Titus was gone. He was running at the umpire claiming I had bumped him and held him.

Titus had seen that neither umpire was looking and when I cut across to slow him up he grabbed me and when the umpires did look they saw us all mixed up so they let him jog on to third on account of my interference. Titus scored on an out tied it up and they beat us out of the game.

And I couldn't say a word. He had slipped it over me. The other fellows kicked but I knew I had made a blunder and that he had taken advantage of it and won.

Modern conditions have brought about the need for what might be called a long distance telephone organization of the family. "When in doubt, telephone" is an axiom that ought to be impressed upon every member of the family going on a journey, or to live at a distance. The mother can reach her children at school, and children should be required to telephone home occasionally. When husband or wife set out on a journey a telephone itinerary should be jotted down and left behind.

Members of the family traveling should not be content with providing means by which those left at home may reach them quickly, but should communicate with the home frequently, and particularly when there is bad weather, transportation delay, disturbance of public order, or any other unusual condition where the traveler happens to be. Bad news flies fast, and is magnified by distance. These things cause apprehension at home.

No other medium conveys the personal assurance and causes such peace of mind as the long distance telephone talk can give.

SYNOPSIS

At a private view of the Chatworth personal estate to be sold at auction, the Jeweled mysteriously disappears. Harry, who was present, describes the scene to his fiancée, Flora Gilsey, and her sister, Mrs. Clara Britton, as being a scene of the most beautiful and rare. Harry tells Flora that he has met her somewhere but cannot place him. A reward is offered for the return of the Jeweled. Harry takes Flora to a Chinese restaurant to buy an engagement ring. An exquisite sapphire set in a hoop of diamonds is selected. Harry urges her not to wear it until it is reset. The possession of the ring seems to cast a spell over Flora. She becomes uneasy and apprehensive. Flora is startled by the effect on Kerr when he gets a glimpse of the sapphire. The possibility that the stone is part of the Jeweled causes Flora much anxiety. Unseen, Flora discovers that Kerr is waiting to make sure of the reward before unmasking the thief. Kerr and Clara confess their love for her. Clara is followed by a Chinaman. Harry admits to Flora that he knew the ring was stolen. He attempts to take it from her. Flora goes to the San Mateo place with Mrs. Herrick and writes Kerr and Clara to come.

It was plain to Flora from the moment she set foot over the threshold that the house was to be no mean ally of theirs but Mrs. Herrick was making it help them doubly in their hard interval of waiting. Alone to gether with unspoken unspeakable things between them—things that for mere decency of honor could not be uttered—with nothing but these to think of nothing but each other to talk at they must yet in sheer desperation and suspense have inevitably burst out with question and confession had not the great house been there to interpose its personality. And the way Mrs. Herrick was making the most of that! The way immediately even before she had shown anything she began to revivify the spirit of the place as the two women stood with their hats not yet off in the room that was to be Flora's talking and looking out upon the lawn!

And her silence with her expressive self as well with her words Mrs. Herrick was reanimating it all the while they lunched and rested still in the upper rooms overlooking the garden. And later when they made the tour of the house she began unwinding from her memory incidents of its early beginnings pieces of its intimate personal history as one would make a friend familiar to another friend. And these past histories and the rooms themselves were leading Flora away out of her anxious self were soothing her prying apprehensions were giving her a detachment in the present till what she so anticipated lay quiescent at the back of her brain.

But it was there. And now and then when in a gust of wind the lights and shadows danced on the dim polished floors it stirred and at the sound of wheels on the drive below it leaped and all her fears again were in her face. At such moments the two women did look deeply at each other and the suspense the premonition hovered in Mrs. Herrick's eyes. It was as unconscious as involuntary as Flora's start at the swinging of a door but no question crossed her lips. She let the matter as severely alone as if it had been a jewel not her own. Yet it came to Flora all at once that here for the first time she was with one to whom she could have revealed the sapphire on her neck and yet remain unchanged.

Ah, you're too lovely! she burst out at last. It is more than I deserve that you should take it all like this as if there really wasn't anything. The elder lady's eyes wavered a little at the plain words.

I'm too deeply doubtful of it to take it any other way, she said. That is why I feel most guilty. Flora explained. For dragging you into it and then—bringing it into your house. She glanced around at the high quiet damasked room. Such a thing to happen here!

Ah my dear—Mrs. Herrick's laugh was uncertain—the things that have happened here—the things that have happened and been endured and been forgotten!—and see she said laying her hand on one of the walls the peace of it now!

In spite of the consciousness of a friendly presence in the house her fears increased as the afternoon waned and her thoughts went back to what she had left behind her and forward to what might be coming—the one person whom she so longed for and so dreaded to see. He might be on his way now. He might at this moment be hurrying down the hedged lane from the station and when he should come and when they two were face to face there would be no other next time for them. Everything was crystallizing getting hard. Every thing was getting too near the end to be allenable any more. It was her last chance to make him relinquish his unworthy purpose perhaps his

The wind which had fallen with approaching evening was only a whisp per among the trees. The greenish white bodies of statues in the shrub bery glowed ruddy. Gathering their skirts from the grass that glittered with the drops of the last shower arm in arm the two women walked down the broad central gravel drive between ribbon beds of flowers. From here numerous paths paved with white stone went wandering under snowball trees and wild apple losing themselves in shrubbery. But one made a clear turn across the lawn for the rose garden where in the midst a round pool of water lay like a flaming bit of the sunset day. Among the bushes red and rose and white the elder woman in her black the younger in her gown more glowing with a veil over her hair walked and looking down into the water seeing their faces reflected and behind the tangled brambles and the crimson sky. They did not speak but at last their companionship was peaceful was perfect.

Loud and shrill and shriller and more piercing from the west wing of the house overhanging the garden the sound reached them—an alarm that set Flora's heart to leaping. Startled apart they listened.

Would that be—is that for you?

I think it's for me.

The words came from them simultaneously and almost at the same instant Flora had started across the lawn. The sight of an aproned maid coming out on the veranda and peering down the garden set her running fleetly.

It's a telephone for Miss Gilsey the girl said.

Oh thank you Flora panted.

She knew so well the voice she had expected at the other end of the wire that the husky boyish note which reached her attenuated by distance struck her with dismay and disappointment.

Ella oh yes yes Ella. What was she saying? Ella was using the telephone as if it were a cabinet for secrets.

Clara told me you were down there she was explaining. I saw her this morning yes. Well—and she could hear Ella draw in her breath—I'm so relieved! I thought you'd be too to know I was perfectly right. She was after him.

Flora faltered. After whom? There flashed through her mind more than one person that by this time Clara might possibly be after.

Why after papa of course. Ella's injured surprise brought her back to the romance of Judge Buller. Her voice rose in sheer bewilderment. Well?

Ella's voice rose triumphantly. I got it out of her myself. I just came right out to her at last. She seemed awfully surprised that I knew but she owned up to it, and what do you think? I bought her off.

Bought her off? Flora cried. Each fact that Ella brought forth seemed to her more preposterous than the last.

Why yes it's too ridiculous what do you think she wanted?

At that question Flora's heart seemed fairly to stand still. That was the very question she had been asking herself for days and asking in vain.

Ella's voice was coming to her faint as a voice from another world. She wanted that little little picture—that picture of the man called Farrell. Wand. Don't you remember papa mentioned it at supper that evening at the club? Isn't it funny she remembered it all this time? Well she wanted it dreadfully but Harry wanted it too and papa said he had promised it to Harry but I got it first and gave it to her. Ella's voice ended in a high note of triumph.

Flora's if anything rose higher in despair. Oh Ella.

Doesn't it seem ridiculous. Ella argued that if she really wanted him she'd give him up for that?

Oh, no—I mean yes. Flora stammered. Yes of course thank you. Ella very much—very much. The last words were hardly audible. The receiver fell jangling into its bracket and Flora leaned against the wall by the telephone and closed her eyes.

For a moment all she could see was Clara with that little little picture. How well she could remember how Clara had looked that night of the club supper.

From the moment Judge Buller had spoken of the picture how all three of them had changed. Clara and Kerr and Harry. Everything that had seemed so phantasmal then every thing she had put down as a figment of her own imagination had meant just this plain fact. All three of them had wanted the picture. For his own reason Kerr had turned aside from the chase but Harry had stood with it to the last and now when finally the prize had been assured to him Clara had it!

At this moment she had it in her hand. At this moment she knew what was the aspect of the figure in the picture whether it showed a face and if a face whose Flora's hands opened and closed. Oh she whispered to the great silence of the great house awaiting him where is he? Why isn't he here?

All those terrible things which might be happening beyond her reach processioned before her. Had Clara already snapped the trap of the law upon Kerr? And if she hadn't yet what could be done to hold her off? Flora turned again to the telephone. Slowly she took down the receiver and gave into the bright mouth piece of the instrument the number of her own house.

Let Us Be Continental

Presently the voice of Shima spoke to her. Mrs. Britton had gone out to dinner.

Tell her Shima. Flora commanded. Tell her to come down on the earliest train. She hesitated then finished in a firm voice. Tell her not to do anything until she has seen me.

Shima would tell her—but Mrs. Britton had been out all day. He did not know when she would be back.

The words sounded ominous in Flora's ears. She turned away. Was everything to be finished just as she had light enough to move but before she had a chance?

The sound of spinning wheels on the drive started her to fresh hope and sent her hurrying down the stair. It was the phaeton returning from the last train. Through the open door she saw the figure of Mrs. Herrick expectant on the veranda. Then the carriage came into the porte cochere and passed. With a rush she reached the veranda and stood there looking after it. She wouldn't believe her eyes—she couldn't—that it had returned again empty.

Mrs. Herrick's voice was asking her. What shall we do? Shall we serve dinner now or wait a little longer?

Oh it's no use. Flora murmured. He won't come to night. He'll never come. She drooped against the tall porch pillar.

My poor child! Mrs. Herrick too her passive hand. If she read in the profound discouragement of Flora's face that something more had transpired than a mere non-appearance she did not show it but waited alert and quiet while they gazed together out over the darkening garden.

They clung to each other peering timorously down the drive. A little gust of wind took the garden and before the trees had ceased to tremble and whiten a man had emerged from their shadow and was advancing upon them up the middle of the drive.

Flora's heart leaped at sight of him. All her impulse was to fly to meet him but she felt Mrs. Herrick's hand tight on her wrist as if it divined her madness.

His light stick aswung in his hand his step free and incautious as ever gray and slender and seeming to look more at the ground than at them the two women watched him drawing near. His was the seeming of a quiet guest at the quietest of house parties. To meet him Flora saw she must meet him on the high ground of his reserve. As he came under the light of the porte cochere his look his greeting his hand were first for Mrs. Herrick.

We were afraid we had missed you altogether, said she.

It was I who somehow missed your carriage was hardly expecting to be expected at such an hour.

Flora watched them meeting each other so gallantly with a trembling compunction. Mrs. Herrick who trusted her was giving her hand in sublime ignorance. It was vain that Flora told herself she had given warning. She knew she had thrown the softening veil of her spiritual crisis over the ugly material fact. Had she said I want you to uphold me while I meet a thief whom I love and wish to protect. Her magnificent in all other ways except for this one obsession she knew Mrs. Herrick simply would have cried. Impossible out of rageous. Let there they stood together and as Flora looked at them she could not have told which was of the finer temper. Kerr's bearing was so unruffled that it seemed as if he had flown too high to feel the storm. Flora was passing through. But when he turned toward her in spite of himself there was eagerness in his manner. He looked questioningly at her as if no time had intervened as if a moment before he had said to her through the carriage window. I will give you 24 hours and now her time had come to speak.

It was the appearance of the aproned maid that broke their unity. The last course was on the table the last taste of its pungent fruit essence on their tongues—and what was the girl's errand now? The eye of her mistress was inquiring.

Some one has come Mrs. Herrick. The woman's proper formula seemed to fail her. She looked as if she had been frightened.

Some one? Mrs. Herrick showed asperity. What name?

He is coming in. As she spoke the girl shrank a little to one side.

With his long coat open hanging from the armpits with ruffled hair and lips apart and from breathlessness a little smiling Harry appeared in the doorway. Kerr leaned forward. Mrs. Herrick did not move. She was facing the last arrival and she was smiling more flexibly more naturally than Harry but it was Flora who found the first word.

You I—I thought it was Clara. She was struggling for nonchalance for poise at this worst blow so unexpected.

Clara won't be down. Harry said advancing. How d'ye do Mrs. Herrick? How d'ye do Kerr?

How d'ye do? said the English man without rising.

Flora gripped the arms of her chair to keep from springing up in sheer nervous terror. A possible purpose in Harry's coming that even Mrs. Herrick's presence would not defer shot thro' her mind. Was he alone? Or were there others—men here for a fearful purpose—waiting beyond in the hall? But Harry had turned his back upon the door behind him with a finality that declared whatever danger had come into the house was complete in his presence.

I've dined thanks he said but stripping off his greatcoat accepted a chair and the glass of cordial Mrs. Herrick offered him. The ruddy hard quality of his face were it divested of its present smile Flora thought might well have frightened the maid but for all that it was not so implacable as Kerr's face confronting it. The look with which he met the intrusion had a quality more bitter than the challenge of an antagonist more jealous than a mere lover's and that bitterness that jealousy which was between them also out stungly through their small pleasantness. It could not be Flora thought in terror that Mrs. Herrick intended to leave these two enemies to each other. Mrs. Herrick had risen and Flora follow ing saw both men also uprisen hang hesitatingly as if unready to be deserted yet with well filled glasses and newly smoking tobacco both were caught.

Then Kerr with a quick dash of his hand picked up his glass. Let us be continental he begged and followed close at Flora's side. Without moving his lips Kerr was speaking. What does this mean?

She sensed the anger in his smothered voice but she dared not look at him.

I have no idea but I will see you when?

Her answer leaped to her mind and her lips at the same moment.

In the rotunda where the house is quiet.

Harry had followed leisurely in their wake. The flush of haste had subsided in his face and when the four regrouped themselves in the high darkly paneled room among the low lights Flora remarked his extraordinary composure. Bitter he might be but all the nervousness suspicion uneasiness that he had shown of late had vanished. There was a tremendous confidence about him the confidence of the player who holds cards that must win the game and sits back waiting for his moment.

But she was ready to laugh at him in his security. He had underestimated his opponent. In spite of him she was to have her meeting with Kerr. Harry had waited too long to prevent that whatever he might do afterward. In this inspired moment she felt herself touching conquering heights which before she had only touched in imagination. She felt enough power in herself to move even such a mountain of obstinacy as Kerr. She stole a look at him—a look of glad intelligence. He understood as if she had spoken. They were to meet while all the house slept fast to meet for his great renunciation. Then in the morning when Harry was ready with whatever move he was holding back Kerr would be gone. There would be no Kerr—but she must not think of that. She glanced at him again in the thick of the talk and caught his eye upon her puzzled and she thought with a glimmer of doubt.

In the room where some eight hours before she and Mrs. Herrick had talked Flora waited fully dressed. It had been early when they had separated. The strain of the four together had been terrific and she was still feeling it though an hour had passed. She was feeling that now her situation was upon her she was alone. Mrs. Herrick could only be near her not with her and Kerr was still an unknown quantity—except that he was free.

And there was Harry with his terrible certainty and no apparent thing to account for it. It could not be there were men in the house without the servants remarking it but in the garden? She peered out upon it. Only tree shadows moved upon the lawn. Nothing glimmered in the walks or drives. The solitude held her like an enchantment. She listened for the small sounds in the house to cease for the lights in the lower story to go out proclaiming all the servants were in bed. Even after the stillness she waited—waited to be sure it was the long stillness.

Finally she crept to the door and opened it boldly wide.

She stood where she was upon the threshold trembling in a cruel fright. A gas jet burning far up at the end of the hall threw a dim light down the pale pinkish naked vista void of furniture window or curtain and leaning against the blank wall almost opposite her door and directly facing her was Harry.

Without speaking they looked at each other. He was fully dressed but lacking his shoes as she noted in the acuteness of her startled senses. The furtive suggestion of those shoeless feet struck her with horror—formless unreasoning. It was like an evil dream to find him there stolen to her door in the night waiting outside it without a sound looking her steadily hardly in the eye without a word.

She tried to speak but with terror sobbing in her throat the words failed. She made a step forward with a crazy impulse to rush past him.

He straightened with a quick movement toward her. She recoiled before him precipitately retreated closed the door shot the bolt and leaned for faintness against the wall. She expected each moment to hear him tap. She neither heard a knock nor the sound of soft departing feet. He was still there. He was on guard. He had had good reason for his terrible certainty. He had foreseen what her plan might be and she knew he would no more let her get past him down the hall than the turnkey would let the wretched prisoner escape.

CHAPTER XXII

Clara's Marvel

All night she sat awake huddled under her greatcoat in the chilly darkness. She could not lie down she could not close her eyes. At long intervals she heard the tread of unshod feet along the hall and then she held her breath lest at her slightest stir they approached her door. Why since he wanted the sapphire hadn't he tried to get it from her when he had had her unawares upon her threshold with the house asleep? It began to seem to her as if he were waiting as if he were forced to wait for some appointed moment. She knew if it were his moment it would be hers too as long as she had the sapphire upon her. She recalled fearfully the moment when she had crouched against the window with her hand protecting the Jewel and Harry's hand grasping her wrist. He would know well enough where to find it now. Oh the restless unconcealable thing. Where could she hide it?

She took the pear-shaped pouch that swung always before her on her long gold chain. She had repudiated that hiding place before but now that both men supposed she carried the Jewel far hidden out of sight. With out removing from the bed where she was crouched cramped and cold she made the exchange leaving the chain still around her neck dropping the Jewel into the pouch where it would swing free so carelessly dangling as to be beyond suspicion but never beyond the reach of her hand.

It was a pale splendid dawning full of clouds when she fell asleep.

Broad sunlight filled her room when she was awakened by a knocking at her door. She sprang from the bed and went to it. She was not to be come in upon by any unwelcome visitor. But it was Mrs. Herrick and Flora with a murmur of relief since this was the one person she did want to see drew her inside.

Why my child you haven't slept at least not properly. Mrs. Herrick herself looked anxious and weary. I've come to tell you that Mrs. Britton is here. She came an hour ago.

Where is she?

In the breakfast room with Mr. Cressy.

Oh Flora cried you know I didn't expect them. I didn't want them. It wasn't for them I asked you to come.

But can't you tell me what it is you're afraid of? the other urged. Between us can't we prevent it? Is there nothing I can do to help you?

Ah if you knew how much you have already helped me by just being here.

Her companion laughed a little. Can't I do something more active than that?

Flora pondered. Where is Mr. Kerr?

In the garden in the willow walk. Do you think you can manage that the others don't get at him?

I can if he doesn't want to get at them. Mrs. Herrick replied. Against a man like that my dear she aimed it gravely at Flora. One can do nothing.

But Flora had no answer for the warning. I must see Clara immediately she said.

But not without breakfast. Mrs. Herrick protested. I will send you up something. Remember that she never abuses herself so she's always fresh—and so she's always equal to the occasion.

Mrs. Herrick went. Flora looked into the mirror. Almost for the first time in ten days she thought of her appearance. If it was as Mrs. Herrick said a factor of success something must be done for it. It was dreadful. The best she could do was to revive a pale replica of the vivid creature who had been wont to regard her from her glass. Yet her black gown thin and trailing far behind her and her hair wound high by very force of their contrasted color gave her a real brilliance as they gave her a seeming height. But she descended to the breakfast room with trepidation and stood a full minute before the door gathering courage to go in.

When she did open it it was so suddenly that both occupants faced her with a start. They were standing close together and between them on the glare of the white tablecloth lay a little heap of gold. As they peered at her she saw that both were highly excited but in Clara it showed like a cold sparkle in Harry it gloomed like a menace. His hand hovered clenched above the money in a panic of irresolution then as if with an involuntary relax of nerves opened and let fall one last piece of gold. Like a flash the whole disappeared in a sweep of Clara's hand. It passed before Flora's eyes like a prestidigitator's trick so rapid as to seem unreal and left her staring. Harry gave Clara a look half sly half half entreating and then to Flora's astonishment turned away without a word to either of them.

Clara stood still even after the door had closed upon Harry and oddly and rather horribly she wore the same aspect she had worn the day when she had looked intently and absently upon the rifled contents of Flora's room.

Immense Leather Belt

The largest leather belt ever made was completed recently by a New York manufacturer for a Louisiana lumber company. It was 243 feet long six feet wide and three ply thick. The hides of 540 steers were utilized in the manufacture of the belt. As its delivery was a matter of urgency the great roll of leather was shipped by express and the bill for this service was $43.67.

"USELESS GRIEFS" By Walt Mason

A hundred years ago and more men wrung their hands and walked the floor and worried over this or that and thought their cares would squash them flat. Where are those worried beings now? The bearded peasant and the festive cow eat grass above the mottled bones and jay birds call in strident tones. And where the ills they worried over? Forgotten all the more. Gone all the sorrow and the woe that lived a hundred years ago! The grief that makes you scream today like other griefs will pass away and when you've cashed your little string and jay birds over your bosom and the stranger passing there to view the marble works that cover you will think upon the uselessness of human worry and distress. So let the worry business slide live while you live and when you've died the folks will say around your bier: "He made a hit while he was here!"

Enlund Back From European Trip

John Enlund the foreman of the Centennial Eureka mine is back home again after a few months absence during which he visited a number of European countries among them Finland, Germany, Sweden and Denmark. He was in Stockholm during the time that the Olympic games were in progress and returned home upon the Louisiana the boat which carried most of the American athletes home. John had a swell time and notwithstanding the fact that he was going some from the time he left until he got back he took on considerable flesh. His two children, Nora and Alben Enlund met him at Salt Lake on Wednesday.

Fishermen Outnumber The Fish.

George Jones and N. W. Parker of Robinson accompanied by their wives went to Springville last Saturday evening making the trip in the former a Ford machine. The following day Spring creek near Springville was opened to fishermen and Mr. Jones says that nearly five hundred people were scattered along the banks of the stream within a few hours after daylight many making the trip from Salt Lake upon a special train. The fishermen seemed to be more numerous than the fish but notwithstanding this some nice trout were caught during the day. None caught the limit or anywhere near it however.

Serious Fire at Robinson

Robinson was visited by another disastrous fire at an early hour on Monday morning when two buildings and the contents of one of them were destroyed entailing the loss of perhaps $4,500. In one of these buildings was the post office and a confectionery and ice cream parlor while the other was used as a moving picture theatre. The proprietors of the show being McIntyre & McGee. Both buildings were the property of the Tintic Lumber Co. at Robinson. The fire started in the northeast corner of the post office building and was first seen by J. O. Brock, a Robinson saloon man who gave the alarm. The entire building was in flames within a very short time after the alarm was sounded and the post office equipment and everything that the place contained was destroyed. The theatre building located to the west soon caught fire and burned to the ground although all the fixtures were removed. Those who volunteered to fight the flames put forth every effort to save the big Mammoth hotel building and were successful. For a time however it seemed that this splendid structure was doomed. Only a day previous to the fire the city officers of Mammoth put into service a new hose system of fire fighting apparatus and it is equipment undoubtedly saved the hotel building. There was some delay in finding a nozzle for the hose other wise the theatre building might also have been saved.

Victor Fitzgerald the postmaster says he left the building in which the fire started a short time before midnight. The origin of the blaze discovered an hour later is somewhat of a mystery. Fitzgerald had $1,400 in insurance which will fully cover his loss while the buildings valued at $3,000 were insured but for $1,800. McIntyre & McGee had no insurance on their moving picture equipment all of which was saved.

It was only a few months ago that a fire destroyed a bunch of buildings upon the opposite side of the street, the post office being burned out at that time together with a moving picture house.

The officers of the Tintic Lumber Co. may decide to erect another moving picture house at once but at this time are not prepared to make a definite statement.

Miss Duffin Will Act As Goddess

Miss Carol Duffin has been chosen as Goddess of Labor for the celebration of the Tintic District Miners' Union which will form a part of the program of the convention of the Firemen. The members of the union are going to celebrate with the firemen and pass up the regular Labor Day program. Instead of electing a Goddess by popular vote or by votes that are sold at a fixed price the members of the Union several years ago adopted the system of placing the names of all young ladies who are eligible for this honor in a hat and then drawing out a slip containing a name. The young lady so selected to be the Goddess. President Hanley, Walter Ellersbrecht and other members of the committee placed nearly a score of names in the hat and the editor of the Reporter was asked to take out one of the slips of paper. This slip contained the name of Miss Duffin who will undoubtedly make an attractive Goddess.

Death of "Jack" O'Neil

John M. (Jack) O'Neil who moved his family from this city to Canada a little over a year ago died last Sunday according to a telegram which was received by Silver City friends. Mr. O'Neil came to Tintic about fifteen years ago from Lawrence County, New York and shortly after his arrival here married Miss Lucy Paxman a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Paxman of Silver City. Besides his wife he is survived by three children, the oldest a boy of 12 years. It is thought that the remains will be shipped back to the old family home in New York for burial as other relatives are living there. It is understood here that Mr. O'Neil's death resulted from inflammatory rheumatism.

During his residence here Mr. O'Neil followed blacksmithing his last work being at the Eagle & Blue Bell mine. He was also employed as an engineer at a number of the mines and before coming to Tintic engaged in railroad work both as fireman and engineer. The deceased was about 43 years of age and was a member of the local lodge of Knights of Columbus.

His death is sincerely regretted by a host of friends whose sympathy will go out to the members of the family.

Will Commence Work on Sewer

When the city council held a special meeting last Saturday for the purpose of opening the bids for the construction of the proposed additions to the sewer system they found that the local contractors had not taken enough interest in the proposition to submit prices upon the work. After some little discussion the councilmen decided that perhaps it would be to the advantage of the city to have the new sewer constructed under the direction of City Engineer Arthur A. Miller. The job is a large one and the work cannot be done next as cheaply by laymen. Mr. Miller will make a trip to Salt Lake for the purpose of securing the pipe and other material needed for the sewer extensions and the work will be taken up at once. The Main street sewer is to be extended a distance of 12 feet in an easterly direction and the new sewer which will connect the public school buildings with the Main street line will be about 500 feet in length.

Were Married at Farmington

The many friends of Ross Cole and Miss Lydia Jensen were greatly surprised this week when the young people informed them of their marriage which took place over three months ago at Farmington. The marriage was performed by F. H. Haynes of Farmington and only the necessary witnesses were present. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John Dunn and both she and the groom are well known and popular. They will continue to make their home in this city.

Tuberculosis Claims Mrs. Franco

The death of Mrs. John Franco in this city last Sunday called the attention of the public to the pitiable condition of the family. Mrs. Franco was 31 years of age and her death resulted from tuberculosis. Her husband has also been a helpless invalid from the same disease for the past two or three years. Notwithstanding her illness Mrs. Franco has been doing her best to support the family which also includes a son (about six years). The three of them have been living in a small home in the vicinity of the public school buildings and considering the nature of the disease which claimed the mother and with which the father is hopelessly ill it can easily be seen that the child's future is a sad one.

The members of the Miners' Union have been exceptionally kind to the family assisting them in many ways. Since Mr. Franco has been too ill to work and in addition to making a $100 appropriation toward the funeral expenses the officers of the union also circulated a petition and raised the balance of the money needed for the funeral which was conducted from the Catholic church on Tuesday morning. The union officials were also assisted in this good work by the members of the Tintic Auxiliary and the Degree of Honor.

The News from the Tintic Mines

Chief Cons Nears Dividend Stage

May Day Loading Zinc Ore

Deep Mining at Grand Central

The heavy tonnage of ore which has been billed out from the Chief Cons mine during the past few weeks is causing some little surprise among the mining men of the state but those who have been keeping close tabs upon this property have been expecting just such a record as this mine is now making. The Chief Cons is undoubtedly one of the coming bonanzas of Tintic and there are several reasons why big things can be expected of this mine. In the first place the extensive mineral ground which this company owns is undoubtedly traversed by four distinct ore zones while most of the other properties of the district are located upon but one zone. Of course the Chief Cons people have a large amount of work ahead of them before these four zones are prospected but they are right on the job all the time and are pushing out in a half a dozen different directions upon almost as many different levels and while they are doing but little talking the fact that the mine can be called upon for an output of from 25 to 30 carloads of ore each week is sufficient proof that on 8 big ore bodies have already been located and that it is not necessary to depend upon any one stop or any one level for the present tonnage.

It will perhaps take years to finish the drifts and complete the other work which has been mapped out by the management but from the looks of things the Chief Cons has passed through its period of uncertainty and is almost ready to take its place among the dividend payers. When Walter Fitch came to Eureka and undertook to put the Chief Cons ground upon a paying basis many people were of the opinion that he was up against a hard game but he had all the faith in the productiveness of the Tintic limestone and was willing to back up his judgment with the cold cash. In the matter of development work he is exceptionally progressive in his methods always keeping well ahead with the prospecting but when it comes to taking down the profits he is equally as conservative. There must be about $250,000 in the company's treasury before Mr. Fitch will consent to a dividend but the bulk of this money has already been secured and the mine should earn the remainder of it within the next few months thus insuring a dividend before the close of the present year.

Yesterday at the May Day mine Supt. Griggs commenced loading zinc ore for shipment to the zinc smelter which is located at Argentine. Kansas the efforts of the Utah mining men and the congressional delegation from this state to secure a waiver of the publication clause before the new freight rate could go into effect having been successful. At the May Day there is said to be fully 1,000 tons of this ore which can be placed upon the cars almost immediately and the mine assays show that the ore will carry from 37 to 40 per cent zinc. Arrangements are now being made to have this ore sampled at the Silver City plant of the Utah Ore Sampling Co. and in this event it will be sent direct to Kansas from the Tintic district instead of being switched in to the sampler at Murray.

There is a large amount of zinc ore now exposed in the various parts of the May Day and the returns from the few trial shipments which have already been made lead the officials of the company to believe that this character of ore will be the means of putting the mine back among the dividend payers.

The new hoisting equipment which is operated by electricity is giving splendid service at the May Day and this property is in exceptionally fine shape for handling a heavy tonnage of ore. It is the intention of the management to market the zinc ore at the rate of about a car each day.

New Ore House for Eagle

Supt. Owens of the Eagle & Blue Bell states that a contract for the construction of an ore house large enough to hold 300 tons of ore has just been awarded to Alex. McDonald, a local contractor. T. B. Billings, the engineer for the mine, is out from Salt Lake and the foundation of the building is now being put in under his direction. By Monday or Tuesday of next week everything will be in readiness for the carpenters to commence work and the new building will not doubt be in use within a few weeks. The ore house will be connected with the mine dump by a short trestle and the gravity tram way which is now in use will go out of commission.

Work was taken up on Wednesday in the raise which is to connect the 1350 level with the big stopes from which the bulk of the mine's tonnage is now coming. This raise which will furnish a direct outlet to the shaft for much of the ore and waste will be equipped with steel chutes.

There has been some little delay in getting into the snipping ore upon the 2300 level of the Grand Central owing to the fact that a few days were required to put in track and timbers but Assistant Manager W. D. Loose says that the showing is getting better with every round of holes and that the last face sample showed 35 in gold and nearly enough silver to bring the ore up to the point where it could be shipped at a profit. He figures that he has about forty feet of drifting ahead of him before reaching a point directly beneath the waste which was sunk from the level above and this being the case it is a little early to expect the high grade material.

Conditions are highly satisfactory throughout the Grand Central mine and the present shipments are bringing in a nice piece of money.

Sampler Doing Rushing Business

The Silver City plant of the Utah Ore Sampling Co. is now being operated with two shifts and between 700 and 800 tons of ore is being sampled each day. For some time the sampler has been getting some ore from Nevada properties which are shipping over the Salt Lake Route and commencing next week the zinc ore from the May Day mine and perhaps the Yankee Cons will be handled at this plant and then started upon its long trip to the smelters in the Kansas gas belt.

The rate on zinc ore from Tintic to the gas belt smelters will be $30 per ton.

Ore Buyer After Zinc Output

A. F. Strike, an ore buyer for the Kansas Zinc Co., visited Tintic this week and made an effort to contract for zinc ore from some of the local mines. He states that his company is anxious to get about 1,500 tons of zinc ore each month from Tintic properties. The demand for this character of ore seems to be far in excess of the supply and the local zinc producers will have no trouble in securing desirable contracts. While here Mr. Strike visited the East Tintic Development mine where Samuel Buckley is operating under a leasing agreement. Mr. Buckley now has about 100 tons of nice zinc which he has sorted from the dump ready for the market and believes that as soon as he commences work underground he will be able to take out about fifty tons each week.

Yankee Will Be Able To Ship

Among the Tintic mines which will be benefited by the adjustment of the freight rate between this district and the zinc smelters which are located in the Kansas gas belt is the Yankee Cons. Supt. Meniman states that his company has not yet closed a contract but that it is quite probable that the zinc ore from this mine will be sent to Kansas City, Kansas. Enough zinc ore to load five or six cars has already been broken down at the Yankee and is now awaiting shipment and the present showing indicates that the mine can be depended upon for about six cars a month. The ore will compare very favorably with that which is being mined at the May Day running very close to 40 per cent.

Two weeks work will probably be sufficient to clean up the low grade dump at the Yankee this ore now being lifted upon the market at the rate of about a carload each day.

Lower Mammoth Improving

Supt. Price is making a very good record over at the Lower Mammoth mine and notwithstanding the fact that he has been upon the job but a short time he has succeeded in opening some good ore. The best showing is perhaps on the 1500 where there is not only a nice body of zinc of a commercial grade but a small bunch of silver lead ore which is in virgin territory and which will be persistently developed to the fact that there is a good chance for it to make into something big. The silver lead ore is fully 400 feet farther west than anything that has previously been found in this mine. There is also a small stringer of the same character of ore upon the 1000 level.

Mr. Price is devoting considerable time to the development of the zinc ore on the 1000 and 1500 levels and believes that but a small amount of work will be needed to put the mine in line for a very respectable tonnage of this ore. At one place in the mine there is a face of zinc ore fully 10 feet in width and recent assays show that a good portion of it is of shipping grade.

Swansea Now Has Surplus

The Swansea Cons people were knocked out of a couple of days work this week on account of an accident to one of the boilers but at this time the usual amount of ore is being hoisted. Supt. John Hoffman states that the ore has now been opened to very good advantage upon the 800 and that by taking a good share of the regular tonnage from that level he is able to do a little more development work on what has for some time been the main ore level of the mine—the 940. The north drift on the 940 is still going forward and is no doubt nearing that part of the mine from which some good silver lead ore was shipped a number of years ago when the deepest level was the 850. Jesse Knight has expressed a desire to have this drift driven clear through to the northern boundary of the Swansea ground and for that reason it may be pushed out 400 or 500 feet farther in that direction. The present plans call for a good deal of cross cutting on the 940 as there seems to be an opportunity of opening other ore bodies at that depth.

The Swansea has not only cleaned up all its indebtedness but it now has a little money in the treasury which is being increased from week to week. The ore which the mine is shipping while not of high grade is setting the company a good sum of money owing to the very favorable smelting contract.

Grand Central Dividend

Col. C. E. Loose, who has had wonderful success in his mining operations in the Tintic District during the past twenty years, now has two regular dividend payers—the Gold Chain and Grand Central—among his list of properties. The Gold Chain paid its mutual dividend a month ago and at Provo on Saturday the Grand Central directors ordered the distribution of 5 cents per share or about $30,000 the company's outstanding stock amounting to 600,000 shares. The Grand Central is an old timer in the dividend paying game with a total of $1,632,500 to its credit but for the past year or two the dividends have not been coming along with any degree of regularity. The last payment from this mine was in December of last year. The dividend which has just been declared will be paid on August 25th the books to close to the transfer of stock five days earlier.

The present condition of the Grand Central mine indicates that dividends will be forthcoming regularly in the future. There is a large amount of ore in sight upon the various levels and only last week the ledge matter was encountered in the drift upon the 2300 level. This is the deepest point at which work is being carried on in the Tintic district the shaft of this mine being the deepest in the state.

Good Showing on 600 Level

No important strike has yet been made upon the 600 level of the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom but Supt. Zabriske expects to get in to some good ore at this depth almost any time. Some fine ore is now being stopped just above the 600 level and only this week the drift which was being driven in a westerly direction upon this level broke into another cave. Mr. Zabriske says that while he has not explored the cave very thoroughly he has done enough work to learn that it contains some ore. It is doubtful, however, whether it will be of a commercial grade. A drift is now being driven for the purpose of getting under the cave where the ore is usually found.

At the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom conditions are pretty much the same as they have been for some time with plenty of ore in sight to maintain the present heavy output. The work of installing the new hoisting equipment is going forward rather slowly but it has now reached the stage where better time can be made.

Mining Notes.

The annual meeting of the Black Jack Cons. mining company will be held at Provo on Tuesday, September 18th. At this meeting there will be election of officers and the transaction of other business.

Supt. William Owens of the Eagle & Blue Bell mine went to Salt Lake yesterday for a few days rest. Mr. Owens accompanied him upon the trip.

Samuel McIntyre, Sr., was in the district during the early part of the week. He visited with his sons at Mammoth and inspected the Mammoth mine. On Monday he took an automobile ride to his big ranch in the Tintic Valley and also visited his

The Tintic Standard Mining company has just levied another assessment of $\frac{1}{2}$ cent per share this being assessment No. 8. The assessment will be delinquent on September 10th sale day October 5th.

James Dick was out from Salt Lake early in the week for the purpose of looking after operations at the May Day, Uncle Sam and Lower Mammoth mines. He found everything in very satisfactory condition at these properties and was especially pleased with the May Day where new electrical hoisting equipment was recently installed. Mr. Dick returned home on the afternoon train on Monday.

Elmer Duncan returned to Silver City the other day after spending a few days in the Santaquin district. He states that everything is moving along in good shape in that section and that work is being carried on at half a dozen different properties. At the Union Chief the ore has been encountered in the lower tunnel. The Fva is getting out a good tonnage of nice ore. The Eureka Leasing company people are mining some high grade lead silver ore and work is being prosecuted on various other properties.

Films From Tintic Scenery.

J. S. Dawley, general stagedirector for the Edison people, has been in the state for the past few weeks for the purpose of directing a corps of motion picture experts who are now taking pictures of the many points of interest in Utah. A list will be given to Tintic people to learn that some of these films will be made here.

It was Manager Riberdes of the Crescent Theatre in this city who first became interested in this proposition and after calling upon a number of local business men and getting assurance of their support he made a trip to Salt Lake where in company with Frank D. Kimball, the local banker, he was successful in getting the Edison people interested in the Tintic District. Mr. Dawley of the Edison company promised Messrs. Kimball and Riberdes that he will bring his corps of assistants to Eureka within the next few weeks and that he will not only make some films from Tintic scenes but the mine's cities etc. but that he will stage a mining film drama at this place. One of his leading actors who participates in most of the big feature pictures and who takes the part of the daring miner, the cliff jumper, wounded soldier, swimmer and general dare devil was injured a short time ago while taking part in a photo play at Cheyenne and for that reason the trip to Eureka will be delayed giving him a chance to recover.

The films of the Tintic mining scenes will doubtless be of great benefit in advertising this district throughout the country.

THE LOST TREASURES OF THE ORIENT

GOLD AND JEWELS STILL WAITING TO BE FOUND BY SOME MODERN ADVENTURER

by
BUFFINGTON PHILLIPS

COPYRIGHT BY THE RIDGWAY CO.

THE mind is staggered the imagination atrophied in contemplation of the lost treasures of the East—gold silver and jewels—which lie in the graves of dead emperors in the ruins of ancient capitals under centuries of desert dust and in the forgotten mountain temples almost any one of them sufficient in amount to make the true adventurer who finds them amazingly rich. The East today is wealthy in gold vessels ornaments and precious stones but think what it must have been four thousand or even eight hundred years ago when it was the worlds center of wealth!

One of the most elusive clues to any of these very great treasures is what is now called the Spaulding quest, bearing the name of the young American who disappeared probably forever three years ago while trying to retrace a trail with two billmen to what is undoubtedly the famous mountain of the tombs of the Great Khans of Tartary.

Two years ago news came out of Bokhara that a young American named Spaulding had found two young tribesmen in the market of that city endeavoring to sell hand fuls of huge diamonds rubies and pearls and had learned that the two men had found them in cave-graves in the mountains many miles to the northeast—evidently the lost tombs of the Khans—and that there were tons and tons of the treasure left behind. This first report proved to be inaccurate.

It is a little peculiarity of the native correspondents of English papers that they are rather devoid of imagination and their reports feel infinitely short of satisfying the world-wide demand for more details. The news spread to Morocco and an English author and traveler a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, who was more interested in the archaeological research in that section than in the recovery of the vast treasures tried through the London papers to get more definite data but the matter had been forgotten by that time or was treated as a joke.

It was months before the truth was forthcoming. Then it was found that Spaulding bringing the two tribesmen had arrived in Bokhara from Samarkand by caravan from Kashgar and that the woman and child was approximately sixty miles north of the Kasimir border instead of Bokhara on the way to Yarkand in the Chinese portion of Turkestan in other words in the heart of almost unexplored and unknown Asia. Bokhara was the first point of touch with the outside world and Spaulding had come there to raise money and organize an expedition. This he had little trouble in doing for all that part of the world has been dreaming for centuries of the recovery of the treasures of the Khans. He was last heard from three years ago and it is now believed that he and the men with him died somewhere in the wilds of the Dapsang.

The unadorned tale of the adventure of the two billmen reads like a chapter from the Arabian Nights. The two men belonged to a trading caravan and being dissatisfied left it and set out for Yarkand which is a town on the Yarkand river, one of the main tributaries of the Tarim a mighty stream draining a region twice the size of the state of Texas and emptying into the Lob Nor which has no visible outlet. They got lost in the mountains and turned into a trail heavy in the rock wide enough for but two men to pass abreast and, traveling for some time along the cliffs, they came to a great cave with a number of huge images in a row before the door.

The entrance was a square open portal and within were a series of tombs each with its pocket in the rock filled with many objects of great value. They said that they saw more than enough precious stones to load sixty camels yet all that they could bring away with them was what they could put into the receptacles of their clothing. Many of these they lost before they found the regular route to Yarkand. They made careful observations of the trail and left heaps of stones to mark it to a certainty. Even when they came to a greta cave with a number of the value of their find.

When discovered by Spaulding he had great difficulty in persuading them to go with him. He started to organize an expedition in Yarkand as they reached the market town they had no idea there was danger of his being murdered and robbed by the half savage men he would have had to employ. There are many persons in the region who believe that he found the tombs secured a portion of the treasure went on into the British Indian state of Nepal and was robbed and murdered there as many very large stones and pieces of Tartar worked gold have been coming out of that state in the past two years without any adequate source being ascribed to them.

It is just south of the region described that the Karakoram Mountains lie but where is the lost city of Caracorum or Karakoram the ancient capital of the great Tartar state? Where are the enormous treasures lost at the time of its destruction? History shows that it was a very large stone-built city that it stood within sight at least of the mountains that bear its name and that it was the wealthiest of all the cities of central Asia. Marco Polo visited it on his famous journey about 1292 A. D. and on his return to Europe described it in detail to his chronicler Rusticano.

Eight hundred years ago it was the capital of the Tartar Empire and literally reeked with wealth, all established under the financial genius of that strange half mythical character Prester John. Marco Polo told of rooms in which the decorations were heavy embossings in gold and silver set with great jewels and his references show that he was surfeited with the sight of the wealth displayed.

The city fell before the assaults of the wild tribes of the ambitious and ruthless Umayyad or Turkmen. Previous to the attack all the treasure that could be assembled was put under the great gateway in the center of the city and when the defenders were driven away they took the secret of the hiding place with them and later were either made slaves or killed. Umayyad collected much treasure and removed it to Candur but he did not get the great hidden store of wealth though he laid the city in ruins and filled a whole tower with prisoners whom he roasted alive in vengeance. Today no man seems competent to say where those ruins lie and no one has gone over the old records to trace out the geographical points that are known and fixed in relation to the unknown site of the lost city whose treasure would run into the hundreds of millions. It is thought to be in Turkestan.

Equally uncertain is the spot where lie the ruins of the splendid summer capital of Candur. Marco Polo even furnished a more or less accurate map of the city proper. It was in Cathay and built in the bend of a great river with miles of defenses on the banks and extending toward the mountains behind it. In many ways its description corresponds to the modern town of Khotan in eastern Turkestan on the Khotan river yet other indications point to Leh in Kashmir on the Indus river and it may mean Kunduz on the great Amu Darya river a stream as long as the Ohio but in so remote a part of the world that it is rarely even heard of.

Genghis Khan which means chief of all chiefs was Temudjin a Mongol and chieftain of the Golden Hordes. His domain in 1203 comprised all of China Turkestan Persia and Kaptchak or southern Russia and it was about this time that he established his summer capital at Candur. Here it was that he instituted the peculiar system of flat money which made gold pieces playthings for the children of the poor. Round pieces of the inner bark of the mulberry tree were stamped with the royal mark and so passed current as money. Within the bounds of the country all trading was done with these pieces of bark backed by the force of imperial arms instead of by a treasury reserve.

Merchants came in caravans from all western Asia bringing gold jewels and merchandise of all sorts and all these they exchanged for mulberry bark flat money and with it bought freight for their caravans. The result was that finally all the gold and jewels of all Tartary drifted in thin but steady streams to Candur and stagnated there decreasing in value till they were useless. They were stored in vaults and buried in great caches in tens of millions dollars worth. When the empire fell the flat money became useless. The possessors of the gold were being slaughtered and driven off as slaves leaving the treasure behind them in quantities too great for the mind to comprehend. Where is it now? In what dust drifted valley? What student of oriental literature and European accounts will trace out the location of Candur and recover the vast hidden fortunes?

Some one will doubtless uncover a very large treasure in the natural course of events in or about the strange gigantic castle of Marid at El Jowf Arabia. Every new advance made by the antiquarians and the Biblical scholars makes it a little more clear and certain that here lies a hoard that is one of the richest in the world.

In a large oasis supporting the largest population of Northern Arabia El Jowf is a peculiarly isolated spot best reached by riding from the Mecca pilgrimage railway or by caravan from Ithra. The castle stands to the north a monster pile of ruined sandstone now utterly deserted and feared and shunned by the Jofees of the region. They say strange sights and sounds are to be seen and heard there at night and that once a year before the Feast of Ramadan all the blood that has been split about it oozes up from the ground making a great red pool around the fortress and dripping from the walls till daylight.

The early Arabian chieftains were great looters hunters and hiders of treasure and the traditions are that El Hadj one of the builders of the castle during a life that extended over more than one hundred years spent his entire time not only in robbing all the rich caravans within striking distance of El Jowf and in warring on his neighbors but in tracing out the traditions of all the tribes. And in this work guided by dreams and visions he recovered vast quantities of treasure bringing it all to El Jowf and hiding it in the castle.

Twenty five years ago this tale was put in the same category with the entertaining yarns of the Arabian Nights. But each year of study of the relics of the ancient peoples of Egypt Arabia and Palestine produces corroborative evidence in carvings writings and traditions that El Hadj was a great treasure-collector that the supposed fabulous hoards he is supposed to have found once existed and that so far there is nothing to show that El Hadj was ever despoiled or that his treasures were found and dissipated by his successors.

Carroll Nelde Brown in 1896 or 1897 discovered nineteen Greek inscriptions built into the outer face of the Acropolis at Athens in that corner where there are evidences of Turkish or Roman repairs. These inscriptions have been translated after a great deal of study of the older languages and they tell of the stowing away of many gold and silver vessels and in many cases give the localities and the date of the burial of them. There are the troves of Nineveh Babylon Tyre and Sidon the gold of Ophir of Solomon and of the eastern emperors. In eleven cases the dates of caches location and the value are given and there is inscribed a note of a treasure which is interred with a vase dedicated to Athena near the Erechtheum. Twenty years before the finding of this tablet by Carroll Nelde Brown the vase referred to was found but the treasure was not. It is expected that great discoveries will be made at Hessaielek and Elalea by following out the directions of the ancient Greeks.

It has been said that the life of the Dutch soldier of today consists of three periods. Anxiety over and enthusiasm concerning the life of Inundation dreams of the buried treasure of Soerabaya temples figuring out the days till pens on time. One portion of this is literally true so far as it pertains to the troopers sent out to Sumatra Java and the other islands after they have been properly drilled and seasoned in Holland. Over one hundred thousand men are maintained in the Dutch possessions in the East Indies where there has been constant warfare for over one hundred years though the world pays it no attention what soever unless a post gets wiped out and then there are a few lines in the world's morning cable news and that is all.

On the way out the soldier will begin to hear aboard ship of concealed treasures in the strange land to which he goes and never an hour of the time he serves in the tropics will he be free from the sense that at any moment he may pick up the clue to vast wealth. Many men have gone home wealthy as the result of smaller finds and always always there is the possibility just in front of their noses.

Strictly speaking the treasure haunted temples are not those near Soerabaya alone for from Acheen in Sumatra to Kupang in Timor one is never sure when one is not walking over the site of a cache from some temple or shrine not far away. The mountains are a continuous ridge in the center of the long narrow islands and in the dense growth of the sides stand old buildings of uncertain age though it is now believed that they were built some twelve hundred years ago at the time of the conquest of the islands by people of Aryan blood and Buddhist belief from India. A great and prosperous empire once existed there falling at last before disease and insular wars.

When the final calamity was at hand and raiding piratical bands according to the old Sanskrit records were devastating the realm the priests in each locality were compelled to despoil every temple and shrine of the great wealth of jewels gold and silver and hide it in the earth in caves in the mountains. Then came the Moslem raiders and that was the end of all hope of ever restoring to the temples the gold and silver overlaid work and to the eyes ears and fingers of the idols the beautiful jewels taken from them. Gradually the secret of each cache has perished save in one or two localities where Buddhist priests have been able to remain continuously and pass the secrets on from generation to generation.

All through the East Indies are places where pirates have hidden treasure. One of these is on the island of Celebes on the Macassar Strait side where the great Dyak robber Sauk Brul put in with his proas and pinnas and according to the British Admiralty records took all of his wealth ashore and came boldly out to fight the sloop-of-war Nestor only to be blown out of the water by her guns. As nearly as this can be traced it was at the mouth of a little river that runs down to the sea between Macassar and Paloa.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat every thing you stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and number my patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Day After the Fire

It is then too late to inquire into the value of your fire insurance policy or the financial standing of the company or the past record of their adjustments

True every company must comply with certain requirements before they can legally transact business in this state but that is no guarantee of their permanency

Investigate Before the Fire

Does your company operate under the Safety Fund Law of the State of New York thereby being proof against another great conflagration?

Did they pay face value without discount in the San Francisco conflagration? Or did they pay about 50 per cent of their losses after considerable delay

Have they a reputation for promptness and courteous and liberal treatment of their patrons at time of loss?

The best insurance is always the cheapest. Any insurance policy will do if you have no loss but in that case none at all is just as good

For Union Workers

Important Happenings in Industrial Circles in This Country and Europe

Muncie Ind.—At the Indiana state conference of typographical unions held here only routine business was transacted the conference being largely for the exchange of ideas and to hear reports of the progress of the conference. Secretary Hays in his address said that in the last two years the membership of the International union had increased more than seven thousand and that there is now a total of 59,903 members with every prospect of continued growth. These figures he said indicated that the nonunion shops are not making progress and he advised the union printers not to be alarmed on that score.

New York—The system of conciliation which ended the strike in the garment industry in New York was utilized in the settlement of 1,418 grievances in 1911 of which 1,283 were brought up by the labor unions and 135 by employers. Of these 405 were dropped or withdrawn all were settled by conciliation 270 decided in favor of labor unions and 209 against them. There were 325 grievances connected with the wage scale 239 caused by alleged discrimination in the distribution of work and 216 complaints of discharge without cause. Only 40 dealt with hours of labor and overtime.

New York—W. W. Atterbury vice president and operating head of the Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburgh before the arbitration board came to the defense of his colleagues and showed using his own road as an example that if the wage increase demanded by the engineers is awarded the surplus of the system will be wiped out. To grant the demands he said would add to the operating expenses $911,580 a year and if proportionate increases are made in the pay of all other employees the cost would be $11,878,688 which meant the wiping out of the roads surplus in one year.

Indianapolis—The Central Labor union has taken steps to aid in raising a local fund for the defense of the men indicted in the dynamite cases which are set for trial in federal court October 1. The action was taken at the request of the Marion County Building Trades council which called attention to the fact that some of the members of the council and of the C. L. U. are among the defendants. The central body voted to appropriate $100 to help the trades council finance a plan it has for raising some money for this purpose.

Indianapolis Ind.—From the annual report of the secretary treasurer of the International Typographical union total membership of the International union 59,708 an increase of 8,518 members average number for the year paying per capita tax $3.807 an increase of 2,712 number of members on the pension roll 1,038 an increase of 228 for the year total earnings of members $53,378,902 an increase over previous year of $3,608,234 average yearly earnings of members $992.04 an increase over previous year of $17.31.

Kansas City Mo.—The receivers of the Kansas City Mexico & Orient rail way acting on the demands of the trainmen engineers and yardmen of the road in the United States refused to grant a direct increase, but promised a betterment of conditions that will result in a wage increase.

Sheboygan Wis.—The Wisconsin Federation of Labor adopted resolutions urging members to vote for the political party which stands for the economic program of the federation. Indorsed woman suffrage deplored honorary memberships being granted in labor unions to partisans and requested Governor McGovern to pardon John F. Dietz of Cameron Dam fame.

Philadelphia—At the session of the National Association of Steel and Copper Plate Engravers the following officers were chosen: President Peter T. Hoehn Buffalo vice president R. E. Noble New York treasurer James J. Motter Cincinnati secretary Theodore A. Izit Louisville.

Washington—The proposed department of labor for the creation of which the house passed a bill was indorsed by the senate committee on education and labor and will be reported by Senator Borah with a recommendation for its passage.

Milwaukee—The convention of the International Iron Molders of North America has been postponed from September 9 to September 25. More than five hundred delegates are expected and they will convene in the Auditorium.

Chicago—Plans for the formation of a Theatrical Trades council were discussed at a meeting of delegates of the billposters stage employees sign and scenic artists and musicians. It was agreed that such a council should be formed and a committee was appointed to draw up a constitution and bylaws and report at a future meeting.

Washington—That the American Federation of Labor will send financial assistance to the London dock strikers who cabled to Samuel Gompers president of the federation was indicated by Mr. Gompers.

Philadelphia Pa.—A strike of twelve

Holyoke Mass.—Things in the local labor movement are looking up. The paper mill workers are organizing. There is something doing all the time for them. There are probably 5,000 workers in this industry in this section and they are joining the unions of their respective branches of the industry in large numbers as many as 100 being taken in at a meeting on several occasions. As a result of the organization of these men and women the American Writing Paper company and the independent companies have granted the eight hour day or the three tour system as it is called in this industry in most of the mills and are to give it in others as fast as workers can be secured to man the machines.

Boston—The official report of the investigation of the Boston elevated railroad strike conducted by the state board of conciliation and arbitration finds the employees justified in believing that many men were discharged because of forming a union. It recommends that the two parties confer with a view to reaching an amicable agreement. The evidence presented shows that immediately after the employees formed a union 262 men were discharged for various offenses 149 of that number without explanation other than unsatisfactory service. The situation obviously aroused the temper of the men to a point beyond control the report says and some 1,600 employees voted to strike.

New Bedford Mass.—The first week of the big cotton mill strike in this city resulted in the loss to the operatives of $104,000 in wages and to the business men of the city an almost equal amount in trade. The mills lose in fixed charges a production cost which moves along every day in the year whether the mills are running or not the sum of $50,000. The stopping of the spindles and looms means a loss in production of 4,000,000 yards of finished product. Roughly figured the dozen mills closed would turn out more than 75,000 pieces of goods a week. The mills use about 2,200 bales of cotton a week.

New York—Men who run the electric engines that haul all passenger trains to their terminals in this city testified before the railroad wage arbitration committee. They based their plea for higher pay upon the same ground taken by other members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers who are striving through arbitration to induce the fifty two trunk line railroads of the east to increase and standardize their pay.

New York—A general strike of union musicians in New York theaters for higher wages was declared by W. J. Kerngood president of the Musical Mutual Protective union at the conclusion of a meeting held at union headquarters. Many of the theaters are closed for the summer and other houses having had intimations of trouble had recently dispensed with orchestras.

London England—The chancellor of the exchequer David Lloyd George announced in the house of commons the intention of the government to introduce a bill to deal with labor disputes such as the present dock strike. The chancellor did not define this measure but indicated it was likely to involve compulsory arbitration and financial guarantees for observing agreements.

Brooklyn—The Central Labor union has bought 65 acres of land at Medford L. I. and intends to establish thereon a sanitarium for the cure of tuberculosis. Certain philanthropists have offered to furnish the money for the buildings if the labor unions will supply the running expenses. It is proposed that every member in Great New York contribute one cent per month. Six hundred dollars is in the treasury at present. Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale university stated recently that the annual money loss due to tuberculosis in the United States is half a billion dollars.

Racine Wis.—Union labor organizations are to appeal to the county board to have contractors in the construction of the new county building to employ union labor only. The board five months ago voted against the demand for employment of union labor.

Washington—The seventeenth biennial convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners will be held in this city next September and local unions throughout the jurisdiction of the brotherhood have been served with a notice of the convention.

Chicago—All the plants of the United States Steel corporation are said to be running to full capacity. At the South Chicago mills and at Gary two shifts of men are used frequently. Orders the last week are said to have aggregated 40,000 tons a day. It is estimated that the earnings for July if work is kept up at the present pace will reach $10,000,000.

Sacramento Cal.—The labor unions have decided to ask the board of education of that city to declare Labor day a holiday for the public schools to give the children a chance to participate in the festivities of that day.

"BIG ED" WALSH'S SPITTER RANKS AS BEST

Marty O'Toole $25,000 Pittsburgh Beauty

Marty O'Toole says Hank O'Day manager of the Cincinnati Reds has a spitball that breaks something like Walsh's but he has nowhere near as much speed nor anything like as good control and yet he is getting more strikeouts—getting them against good batters too. Rather hard to figure but he's getting away with it in clever style.

Notwithstanding the Reds can't understand how O'Toole gets away with it it is probable that he will be a successful pitcher unless something happens to his arm.

There is no greater pitcher than Ed Walsh of the Chicago Americans and in intelligence Big Ed also ranks high.

Big Ed Walsh

He says the spitball is and will continue to be the most effective ball a pitcher can throw.

One can understand how O'Toole could fan Bescher (a star hitter on the Cincinnati team), three times straight and also make every other man on the team miss them after reading what Walsh says he can do to such hitters as Cobb Crawford and Jackson the stars of the American league. The White Sox twirler says: "When I've got my spitter breaking right I can beat any ball club in the world. No use trying to bat against it. It's simply unhittable. Larry Lajole Ty Cobb and other hitting stars of the American league will tell you the same story. Ask Lajoie about the time I fanned him in Cleveland with the American league championship at stake.

The spitter is a terror when it works right. One day I had Detroit in the nine hole and you know the Tigers are some hitters. I think Cobb and Crawford are two of the greatest strikers the game ever produced. The spitter had them all standing on their heads. Neither Ty nor Sam could get it out of the infield. I held them hitless for eight rounds and had two gent's gone in the ninth when my catcher muffed a foul tip. If he had only held the leather it would have meant another out and given me a no hit game against the Tigers. The muf gave the batsman one more chance. He dumped a roller to Tannehill who had a hard play to make and missed his man. The scorer called it a hit.

Finer Stricklett invented the spit ball in 1904. I swiped the idea from Elmer and have been perfecting it ever since. Now I think I've got the spitball down finer than any other man in the game.

STORIES OF THE DIAMOND

John Titus is just slamming that old globe for the Boston Braves. Cleveland has grabbed from its Toledo farm outfielder Arthur Hanger. This Speaker is 23 years old. Five years ago he cost the Boston management $800.

Pitcher Collins of Vanderbilt fame is desired by Clark Griffith for the Washington club.

Last year fans stopped going to games in St. Louis. This year there aren't any fans there.

Ray Caldwell's bad arm is still bad and it may be a long time before he will pitch any real ball.

Never has Charlie Wagner's work with the Boston Red Sox been more brilliant than at present.

Boston—first in the American last in the National! New York—first in the National last in the American!

Three times this season the Giants have run up nine wins in a row, besides their sixteen straight victories.

Dave Altizer was treated to a fine of $50 for jawing with a spectator in a recent American association game. They call Mr. Marquard Rube but he has demonstrated that he is not entirely unsophisticated in the art of pitching.

Exciting Experience of English Officer Who Intruded on Sacred Monkeys of India

In various parts of India monkeys are regarded as objects of worship. One of the principal monkey temples is at Nuddea. Such veneration is shown here to Huniman the monkey god that visitors may not enter the court of the temple without removing their shoes.

On one occasion an English officer in passing up the country near Nuddea chanced to stroll into a bamboo jungle when his boat had put to for the night. He had not advanced far before he heard a terrific uproar all about him and was not a little alarmed to behold a whole army of the largest monkeys he had ever seen making toward him from all quarters.

Some jumped on the ground before him others swung by the bamboos over his head and many closed up the path in his rear. Several females had young ones clinging to them but this fact did not seem to render them less agile than the others.

The Englishman knew not what to do. He yelled at the top of his voice for assistance. To his intense relief each time that he yelled the monkeys retreated a bit. This encouraged him to persevere in his shouting but he observed that when he himself began to retreat the monkeys would again begin to close in upon him.

Then he stood still and gave one tremendous shout whereat the monkeys went back again. This time the man had gained fully 20 yards and was about to repeat the call when there appeared a new figure upon the scene in the person of an aged, decrepit woman hobbling through the midst of the animals.

This aged person shook two or three of the monkeys by the paws as she passed. No sooner had she come within hearing of the Britisher than she opened upon him the vials of her wrath for disturbing the sacred animals in their retirement. She bade the intruder depart and that quickly an order which he lost no time in executing. The monkeys all seemed implicitly to obey the old woman's bidding making a way for the man's retreat.

The old woman it appeared was employed by the Brahmins to supply the monkeys with their food each day. They were worshiped by all of the people in the country round who brought offerings of rice and sweet meats to them continually—Harpers Weekly

Cruelty to Parents

That whimsical philosopher James Douglas in London Opinion writes of the crying need of a new society urging that it is high time to do away with the society for the prevention of cruelty to children and substitute therefor one for the prevention of cruelty to parents. He remarks that donations and subscriptions for such a beneficent organization would pour in from those who know by sad experience how sorrowful is the lot of the father who finds himself abandoned to the ferocity of his children. Too long he writes has the cry of the parents fallen upon deaf ears. Do you hear the parents crying O my brothers? The young lambs are playing in the meadows but the old people are weeping bitterly. Many a fat city merchant conceals behind his waist coat a heart that is lacerated by the savagery of his children. Many an alderman dilutes his turtle soup with tears of anguish as he thinks of the torments his children are preparing for him in the dark precincts of his suburban home.

Collapsible Army Cart

A collapsible military cart has been invented by an officer of the army service corps in London. The cart will be tested during the grand manoeuvres of the army next September. The cart is built entirely of tubular steel and canvas and is extremely light to haul though it will carry up to a ton dead weight. Several of these can be carried in a motor lorry of the type now in use in the army and would be instantly available for use in any desired direction. It is claimed by the inventor that no country is too rough for the cart and that it is practically indestructible.

It costs very little to build these carts since all the parts are interchangeable a temporary breakdown would not be a very serious matter since spare parts could easily be carried on the motor wagons.

MRS. LITTLETON SCORES VICTORY

Mrs. Martin W. Littleton wife of Representative Littleton of New York won a notable victory the other day before the senate committee on library when she secured by unanimous vote an authorization for a favorable report on Senator Martine's resolution authorizing the appointment of a joint committee of five senators and five representatives to investigate and report on the feasibility of having the government acquire Monticello the home of Thomas Jefferson.

Mrs. Littleton became interested in having the government acquire the estate and tomb of Thomas Jefferson and preserve it like Mount Vernon and Arlington after she had made a visit to the place. A year ago she sent out an interesting pamphlet devoted to proving the patriotic duty of the government to acquire and preserve Monticello. Since then Mrs. Littleton has kept up the fight over many obstacles.

The most formidable of these has been the opposition of Representative Jefferson M. Levy who owns Monticello and declares that he will not sell it to the government. When Mrs. Littleton appeared before the committee she found confronting her Judge R. T. W. Duke Jr. of Charlottesville Va. who appeared as the representative of Mr. Levy and who took issue with Mrs. Littleton's statement in regard to the present condition of Monticello.

She had told the committee that the residence needed painting and that the general appearance of the place was one of neglect and decay. Mr. Duke explained that Representative Levy had no desire to sell Monticello even to the government. He insisted that the place was kept in repair. Senator Cummins a member of the committee suggested that Monticello might be acquired by the exercise of the right of eminent domain.

We have taken private property from private owners for public purposes heretofore and there is no question that we can do so in this case if it becomes necessary suggested Senator Cummins.

The force of this suggestion appeared to appeal to Judge Duke who observed that in spite of Mr. Levy's unwillingness to sell the property he believed that if the congressman could be convinced that there was a wide popular interest in acquiring it for patriotic use that he would yield.

COUSIN OF CZAR IS UNDER GUARD

Grand Duke Gabriel Constantino vich a cousin of the czar twenty five years old supplies the latest court romance. He insists on marrying Xenia Ivanovna formerly his sister's governess and now his mother's companion.

Gabriel is an officer of the house hold troops and enjoyed life like his comrades up to two months ago. Then he began to sit at the feet of Xenia whom he had known for years without taking particular notice of her.

Xenia owns to being thirty is dark slim and by no means a beauty.

People recall the Emperor Paul's infatuation for a middle aged maid of honor who had more influence over him than anyone else. But Gabriel's father Grand Duke Constantine is of course angry and insists on having the boy banished to some distant province. The czar objects saying that sort of punishment has always resulted in lovers getting married. So Xenia has been sent to Moscow with a handsome pension which will be stopped the moment she renews association with her high born lover.

Gabriel went mad with disappointment and rage when he learned that his love had left the ducal palace. It was a long time before he found out where she had gone. Then he determined to follow her and escaped from his rooms by a rope ladder but was caught at the gates and ignominiously hurried back. Since then he has been under a strong guard ostensibly because he committed some military blunder in his regiment though every body knows his father is keeping him from Xenia.

When he has been tamed by solitude one of the ducal household is to organize orgies in the city's night haunts. But Gabriel tells his mother that nothing will make him forget his dear Xenia and that he means to marry her even if he has to wait years. Those who know him say he is capable of pretending indifference and running off to church with Xenia as soon as parental vigilance is relaxed. His infatuation remains a nine day wonder at court. All efforts parental and otherwise to chaff or bully him out of it having been of no avail an investigation into his sanity is being considered.

SURRENDER FOR LORD KITCHENER

It can be predicted with confidence that as soon as the facts which are about to be set forth are known in London society there will be an immediate rush of marriageable grand dames to Egypt. And the exodus will include especially those impressionable American widows—one hesitates to embarrass them by mentioning their names—who in the past have made a dead set for that hitherto most determined of bachelors—Lord Kitchener.

For Lord Kitchener at last has determined to marry. Before many moons have run their course a roid and happy Lady Kitchener will rule the household of the greatest and most picturesque soldier of the present day. But before that time what a fluttering of middle aged hearts there will be in Mayfair!

The writer has the news of Kitchener's change of heart from one of his close personal friends who recently returned from Egypt. Said this friend Lord Kitchener is no longer the confirmed bachelor who was the despair of countless women in English society. He is beginning to soften toward the fair sex. He is getting along in life and has reached that period when every man longs for the constant companionship of a good and loving woman. He is looking forward to the time when he will be able to retire from active work and settle down on his beautiful English estate and when the help of a wife will be almost imperative. Furthermore he believes that he has done most of his life work that requires a single undivided attention and which he long believed could not be done properly with a woman hanging on to his coat tails.

One thing that makes me believe that he is most anxious to marry as soon as possible is the extreme probability of his being transferred to India as viceroy. That is the supreme ambition of his life.

By Imitation

The maiden aunt had come to call. It was very early for callers but Mrs. Marsh knew that the maiden aunt needed help so she left the baking and went to her cheerfully. The aunt looked quite worn out and very nearly distracted. But what can you expect when a person without previous experience steps in and tries to take care of four healthy children for six weeks? The aunt had been there only two weeks but such weeks!

What is the reason said the aunt almost tearfully that yours are so good and mine are so bad? Why do you know the twins were actually fighting this morning and Edith is so horrid and selfish. She won't let Edna touch a thing and Edna cries when nothing at all is the matter.

"Can't you give them something to do?" asked Mrs. Marsh.

But what? said the maiden aunt. Oh anything if they suggest any thing let them do it if you possibly can. If not you suggest something if your invention runs out you might look out of the window and see what mine are doing.

She beckoned the aunt to a window. A hum of busy voices arose from the lawn below.

Why they're washing. Yes it's the doll clothes and the boys not to be behindhand are washing their baseball suits.

"But they will get their clothes soiled."

Yes they're bound to do that in any case. They have on their rompers and gingham aprons so it won't matter. After the washing is dry there will be the ironing so you see they will be busy all day.

"I'm going right home and ask mine if they want to wash things."

They will want to. And then tomorrow if you can't think of anything you might telephone over and find out what we are doing.

The aunt departed with hope in her bearing. Her young charges agreed to the wash day program with the enthusiasm of children who have been repressed for two weeks. She took off the pretty clothes in which she had been keeping them and searched out the despoiled rompers. Then the children with arms full of doll clothes went out to the back lawn and washed themselves into a state of quiet good nature. The dinner hour was absolutely peaceful. The aunt took them upstairs afterward and told them stories. Then it was time for the bath and bed.

The next day a cautious inquiry went over the telephone. What to do?

They're working in their gardens was the answer.

Children have you any gardens? said the aunt.

They had had some but investigation showed that they had disappeared under the onslaught of the weeds. The aunt who was really a clever person clothed the reclaiming work in the guise of a battle against insidious dragons that wanted to eat up the lovely flower maidens. With the little tools and watering pots the children worked with a will. When a plot was nicely cleaned the aunt transplanted some blooming petunias from the mother's garden. The petunias stood the transplanting nicely. They were too thick in the garden anyway and besides the children now had immediate results to show for their work.

The next day's inquiry showed that Mrs. Marsh's children were playing milkmaid with a tub of water and all the measuring cups in the house. You'll find that children will play anything that allows them to splash in the water said Mrs. Marsh. For this you'd better put on their bathing suits.

This can be a lesson in mathematics too said the aunt as she gave them gill pint quart and gallon measures.

On the succeeding days there were trips to the woods playing in bathing suits under the garden hose a day of Indian camp in the back yard rainy days when they rearranged the record albums strung beads and used water color paints they gathered up their despised blocks and laid out an artistic village on the sand pile they organized a telephone system in the back yard and gave a circus with the aid of the dogs and cats of the neighborhood.

The remaining four weeks slipped away quickly and happily and the children's parents returned. Great was their wonder and many were the compliments the aunt received upon her management.

Why said the mother they're heartbroken to have you go and they do nothing but talk of the delightful times you had together. I never thought you could manage children so well. I was really afraid that you would fairly hate each other by the time I got back.

The aunt visited Mrs. Marsh before she went away. She thanked her quite extravagantly. It was you who saved me from ignominious defeat she said. And I have one golden motto that I am going to carry with me for future use. It is Give the children something to do.—Mother's Magazine.

Most women regard men as they do the Ten Commandments—something to be studied but not obeyed.

SYNOPSIS

At a private view of the Chatworth personal estate to be sold at auction, the Crew Idol mysteriously disappears. Harry Cressy, who was present, describes the ring to his fiancée, Flora Gilsey, and her chaperon, Mrs. Clara Britton, as being like a heathen god with a beautiful sapphire set in the head. Flora meets Mr. Kerr, an Englishman, in discussing the disappearance of the ring, the exploits of an English thief, Farrell Wand, are recalled. Kerr tells Flora that he has met Harry somewhere but cannot place him. A $1000 reward is offered for the return of the ring. Harry takes Flora to a Chinese golden shop to buy an engagement ring. An exquisite sapphire set in a hoop of brass is selected. Harry urges her not to wear it until it is reset. The possession of the ring seems to cast a spell over Flora. She becomes uneasy and apprehensive. Flora is startled by the effect on Kerr when he gets a glimpse of the sapphire. The possibility that the stone is part of the Crew Idol causes Flora much anxiety. Unseen, Flora discovers Clara ransacking her dressing room. Flora refuses to give or sell the stone to Kerr and suspects him of being the thief. She decides to return the ring to Harry but he tells her to keep it for a day or two. Ella Butler tells Flora that Clara is setting her cap for her father, Judge Butler. Flora believes Harry suspects Kerr and is waiting to make sure of the reward before unmasking the thief. Kerr and Clara confess their love for each other. Clara is followed by a Chinaman. Harry admits to Flora that he knew the ring was stolen. He attempts to take it from her. Flora goes to the San Mateo place with Mrs. Herrick and writes Kerr and Clara to come. Ella Butler bribes Clara to leave the judge alone by giving her a picture of Farrell Wand. Kerr and Harry unexpectedly arrive at San Mateo.

"Good morning," she said, and pushing up her little misty veil sat down with her back to the deserted breakfast table and waited meekly like one who has been summoned.

I am very glad you've come, Flora said. Her wits were still all a flutter from the appearance of that little heap of gold. She came forward and stood in Harry's place. She was face to face with the person and the question before the great import of it and before the marble front of Clara's patience she felt helpless. There was silence in the room, perfect silence in the garden, but moving along the hedged walk all at once she saw the flutter of Mrs. Herrick's gown and then in profile Kerr beside her. The sight of him gave her her proper inspiration. She turned upon Clara.

What are you going to do with the picture of Farrell Wand?

For the first time she saw Clara startled. Her lips parted and the breath that came and went between them was audible. But she was herself again before she spoke. Do with it? Why I don't know. Her fingers drummed the table.

Whatever you do, Flora began, please, oh please don't do anything immediately.

Clara's eyebrows rose like graceful swallows. You seem to anticipate pretty clearly what I am going to do.

I suppose you're going to do what any one would who had a clue and could bring a person to justice. Flora candidly responded. But if ever I have made anything easy for you, Clara, won't you this time make it easy for me? I'm not asking you to give up the picture. I'm only asking you to wait.

Clara nodded toward the window through which Kerr could still be seen with Mrs. Herrick. On account of him?

On account of him.

For the first time Clara smiled. It crept out upon her face as it were involuntarily, but she sat there smiling in contemplation for quite ten seconds. At last. You want me to suppress my information? My dear Flora, don't you think you want me to do more than is honest?

Honest, Flora cried. The words sounded hideous to her on Clara's tongue, and yet what right had she she thought with shame to judge of Clara's honesty when she herself was leagued with a thief? Clara said humbly before this upholder of the right. I can't pretend I'm not suppressing things. I've only asked you to see me before you do anything more. Now you've come. Will you tell me one thing—did you bring the picture with you?

Clara weighed it. Well, if I did—

This was the considering Clara and Flora realized whatever she could expect from her she couldn't expect mercy. It was another thing she must appeal to.

Clara she urged wait three days and you shall have the whole of it. You have only the picture now. You shall have the jewel too. Then you can get the reward and still be honest.

She let the word fall into the silence fearfully, as if she were afraid Clara might detect its sneer. But this time Clara neither smiled nor frowned.

Isn't the reward I'm thinking about. That's really very little considering Twenty thousand dollars.

Would that be much to you?

No, Flora admitted at least I mean I could pay it.

Well then, Clara triumphed, why the picture alone if it's worth anything is worth more than that. With a birdlike lifting of the head she gave a sidelong interrogative glance.

Flora for a moment steadily returned the look. It was coming over her what Clara meant a meaning so simple it was absurd she had not thought of it before—so hateful that it was all she could do to face it. She felt a tightness in her throat that was not tears. Shame and anger contended in her. Oh for the power to have refused that shameful bargain—to have scorned it! She turned away. She closed her eyes. In her mind she saw the figure of Kerr moving quietly about the winding walks with Mrs. Herrick. She faced sharply about.

What is it worth to you?

Clara put her head with the last sweet meekness of her cleverness. Whatever it's worth to you—and him.

Flora was in command of herself now. There are some things I can not set a price on. If this is what you have come down for we are simply waiting for you to name it. She looked over Clara's head. She had stood abashed when Clara had put on the majesty of right but now it was Clara herself who was abashed, not at the thing itself but at the fact of having to utter it. She sat grasping one of her gloves in her doubled fist and leaning forward with her eyes like jewels in her little pale face.

and the white aura of her veil waited as if she thought that by some silent agency of understanding Flora would presently take up a pen and write the desired figure in her check book.

But Flora stood inexorable straight and black crowned with her helmet of gleaming hair and, with her hands behind her looked over Clara's head through the window into the garden. She would not help Clara gloss over this ugly fact.

A curious grimace distorted Clara's features as if with an effort she gulped something bitter and then into the silence her voice fell—a gasp a breath—Fifty thousand.

All sums had become the same to Flora even her years' income. As if she were verily afraid Clara might take it back she turned precipitately to a writing table. But Clara had risen and though still pale in a measure she seemed to have recovered herself.

Wait. I can't give it to you now. I will meet you here in two hours and bring the picture. You can let me have it then.

Oh two hours! Flora objected.

But Clara was firm. No, I can't bring it sooner. It will make no difference in your affair. She was panting in her excitement. In two hours you shall have the picture here. I promise you.

Very well in two hours—but take this now. I would rather you did.

Clara reached the tips of her fingers touched the paper—and then it was no longer in Flora's hand and Clara was walking from her across the room.

CHAPTER XXIII

Touche

Left alone, Flora glanced rapidly around her. Now for a rally now for a dash straight for Kerr. The shortest way was what she wanted. Open the door, push aside the long curtains and stepped out through the French window upon the veranda.

A hundred yards distant she saw the two standing. Kerr presented his back and with his head a little canted forward seemed to listen absorbed in his companion. But that companion was a smaller figure than Mrs. Herrick's and her veil made an aura of filmy white around her face. The sight of her was enough to stop Flora short and in that instant Harry making a cut across the flowerbeds caught up with her. He stopped as abruptly as she and gazed with a dismay that surpassed her own. For an instant she thought he was about to make a dash down the walk for them. Then he caught Flora's hand and pulled her back. There was no help for it she thought. Her other hand crept downward stealthily and gathered up her swinging pouch of gold. Trembling she let him drag her back, but when they faced each other behind the plumes and swords of a great pampas clump she was shocked at the emotion in his face, and as if what he had just seen had given the last touch his voice had risen a key and between every half dozen words it broke for breath.

Look here, Flora, he began. I know you've been trying to give me the slip ever since night before last. I frightened you then. I didn't mean to but you had no business to keep the ring after what I told you. No, I'm not going to touch you as she shrank back against the pampas swords, but I want you to give it to me yourself right here and now.

She looked up into his face burning fiery in the sun beating down on his bare head. No, no Harry, I shan't give it to you. Last time I said I would give it to you for a good reason, but now I wouldn't give it to you for anything.

You don't know what you're doing, he cried.

I do. I know as well as you that this is a part of the Crew Idol. I've known it all along and when the time comes I'm going to give it myself to Mr. Purdie but not until that time.

Harry passed his hand over his face with an inarticulate sound. Then you will ruin us! he choked.

I shall tell the truth whatever comes, she exulted. To tell the truth and keep on telling it—that in her passion of relief at speaking out at last was all she wanted. But Harry fell back. He changed countenance. He recovered himself.

Look here, Flora, if you do I'm going to leave you. I'm going to leave you to what you've chosen.

She met it steadily. I'm glad you say so. I've been thinking for days that it would be better so.

Have you? he said in a low voice looking at her earnestly. Of course I know the reason of that. I meant it to be different but now there's no help—I—

With a motion too quick for her to escape he stooped and kissed her lightly. To that moment she had pitied him but his touch she loathed. She thrust him away with both hands. He turned. Without speaking with out looking at her again he walked away. She watched him with a desperate feeling of being abandoned of losing something powerful and valuable. The faint thin screech of a locomotive from a station far down the line made him pause and turn and gaze under his hand in the strong sun. So for a moment she saw him a lowering peering figure moving away from her over the lawn between broad flowerbeds. Then he disappeared among the shrubbery.

This encounter that had stopped her in full open field had not been the fatal thing she had feared. It had been a peril met that nerved her to a higher courage. Now she could walk gallantly to the most uncertain moment of her life. Between the glimmering willows down the long avenue she passed her flowing draperies borne backwards as by triumphant airs. The wind of her approach seemed to reach the two still far in front of her.

They turned and watched her drawing nearer and before she had quite reached them Kerr stretched out his hand as if to help her over a last rough place and drew her toward him and held her beside him with his fingers lightly clasped around her wrist. She saw that he looked pale worn as he had not been last night and what struck her most strangely angry. The hand that held hers shook with the violent pulse that was beating in it. He turned to Clara.

Will you pardon us, Mrs. Britton? Then after another patient moment Miss Gilsey has something to say to me. Still he made no motion to move away and at last Clara seemed to understand what was expected of her. She flushed and in the middle of that color her eyes flashed double steel. For the first time in Flora's memory she was at a loss. She passed them without a word.

Kerr looked after the little brilliant figure moving daintily away through sun and shadow with deep disgust in his face. But when he turned to Flora disgust lifted to high severity. Why didn't you come last night?

I couldn't. He was there. Harry outside my door.

In God's name! What did you tell him?

Nothing. We did not speak—but I couldn't get past him. The suspicion in his face was more than she could bear. You must believe me—for if you don't we're both lost!

He had her by both wrists now and gently made her face him. I have believed in you to the extent of coming alone to a place I know nothing of because you wanted me. Now that I am here what is it you have to say to me?

Oh nothing more than I have said before she pleaded only that ten times more earnestly.

You extraordinary child! At first he was pure amazement. You've brought me so far you've come so far yourself—you've got us both here in such danger to tell me only this? How could you be so mad—so cruel?

She had locked her hands in front of her until the nails showed white with the pressure. It was more dangerous there than here. You don't know what has happened since I saw you. And I thought if you and I could only be alone together without the fear of them always between us I could show you I could persuade you—Before his look she broke down. Well—you see they followed us—they are here.

Grant it they are. He seemed to laugh at them. You have still your chance. Give everything to me and I can save you still.

Save me? Oh nothing could happen to me so terrible as having you break my heart like this! If I should give the sapphire to you I should lose you—even the thought of you—for ever. Nothing could ever be right with us again! Won't you—she pleaded won't you go? and lifting her hands taking his face between them. Won't you because I love you?

He stood steady to this assault and smiled down upon her. Without you and without it I will not budge. Come now this is the end. I never meant to do anything there.

She covered her face with her hands.

Come come. His voice was urging her now very gentle. It's more for your sake than for the jewel now. And his arm around her shoulder was gently forcing her to walk beside him not toward the drive but away into the tree-grown sheltered wing of the garden. By interlacing paths from the tremulous gray willows under the somber clashing eucalyptus spears under dark wings of cypress they were moving. She was bracing in every nerve against the unnerving of his presence.

Where have you got it now? she heard him asking and she pointed downward toward where the pouch at her knee was swinging to and fro. Take it up then and I'll be a hypnotized creature she gathered it into her hand. But once she had it she held it clenched against him.

You're going to give it to me, he prompted. Aren't you?—aren't you? and looking steadily in her face his hand shut softly on her wrist and held out her clenched hand in front of her. And still they walked slowly. Like a pendulum the long gold chain swung from her clenched fingers to the tree-top birds they seemed as quiet as two lovers speaking of their wedding day. She felt her tension give way in this quiet—her hand relaxed.

Dearest. The word brought up her eyes to his with a start of tenderness. Open it, he said, and her hand involuntarily sprung the pouch wide. They stared together into it. The little hollow golden shell was empty.

For a moment it held her incredulous. Then faint and sick all the foundations of her faith reeling she slowly raised her eyes to him in accusation. She was not ready for the terrible sternness in his

Have you lied to me? he asked in a low voice. Have you given it to Cressy?

No no no she cried in horror. It was there! I put it there myself this morning. They looked at each other now equally sincere and aghast.

But you have seen him, you've been near him? he demanded. She gasped out the whole truth. This morning. He left me. He kissed me.

Then my God where is he? He gave a wide glance around him. Then raising his voice. Stay where you are! he commanded and began to run from her through the trees.

She stood with her hand to her breast with the empty pouch spinning in front of her hearing him crashing in the shrubbery. Then in sudden panic at finding herself alone she fled back down the willow avenue and burst out on the broad drive in full view of the house.

Kerr was not in sight but there was a tremor of disturbance where all had been still. Clara's face appeared at one of the upper windows and looked down into the garden. Then Mrs. Herrick came down the stairs and showing an anxious profile as she passed the door hurried away along the lower hall. There was a flutter in the servants' quarter and from a side door the coachman appeared hatless in his shirt sleeves and ran toward the stable. All the people of the house seemed to be running to and fro but she didn't see Harry. This struck her with unreasoning terror. She fled up the drive and Clara's small face at the window watched her.

As she came into the hall she heard Kerr's voice. He was at the telephone speaking names she had never heard in sentences whose meaning was too much for her stunned senses to take in but none the less while she listened the feeling crept over her that there was some strange revolution taking place in him. It might be transformation. It might be only a swift increase of his original power. Whatever it was he seemed to her superhuman. The house was full of him—full of his rapid movement his ringing orders. If he knew that the sapphire was gone what was the meaning of this bold command? Was he knowing all lost plunging gallantly into the clutches of his enemies? Or was this only a blind a splendid piece of effrontery to cover his too long delayed retreat? She sat like a jointless thing on the fauteuil in the large hall and all at once she saw him in front of her.

She looked at his hat, his overcoat, his slim glittering stick—all symbols of departure.

Wait here, he said and turned away.

CHAPTER XXIV

The Comic Mask

She listened to the sound of wheels first rattling loud on the gravel slowly growing fainter. Then stillness was with her again and inaction. She looked around and up and had no start at seeing Clara's small face watching her over the gallery of the rotunda. It seemed to her that appearance was natural to her existence now like her shadow. She looked away. When she raised her eyes again Clara was crouching down the stairs and even at that distance Flora saw she carried something in her hand—something flat and small and wrapped in a filmy bit of paper.

Out of the chaos of her feeling rose the solitary thought—the picture which she had bought that morning the picture of Farrell Wand. She watched it drawing near her with wonder. She sat up trembling. She had a great longing and a horror to tear away the filmy paper and see Kerr at last brutally revealed. She could not have told afterward whether Clara spoke to her. She was conscious of her pausing conscious of the faint rustle of her skirt passing conscious finally that the small swathed square was in her hand.

She tore the tissue paper through. She held a photograph a mounted kodak print. She made out the back ground to be sky and water and the rail of a ship with silhouettes of heads and shoulders a jungle of black and in the middle distance caught in full motion the single figure of a man back turned and head in profile. He was moving from her out of the picture and with the first look she knew it was not Kerr.

Her first thought was that there had been a trick played on her! But no—across the bottom of the picture in Judge Butler's full round hand was written Farrell Wand boarding the Loch Etive. She held it high to the light. Clara had been faithful to her bargain. It was the picture that had deceived her. She studied it with passionate earnestness. She did not know the bearded profile but in the burly shoulders in the set and swing of the body in motion more than all in the lowering peering aspect of the whole figure she began to see a familiar something. She held it away from her by both thin edges and that aspect swelled and swelled in her startled eyes until suddenly the figure in the picture seemed to be moving from her not up a gang plank but through a glare of sun over grass between broad beds of flowers.

She was faint. She was going to fall. She caught at the chair to save herself and still she was dropping down down into a gulf of spinning darkness. Oh Harry! she whispered and let her head roll back against the arm of the fauteuil.

With a dim sense of rising through immeasurable distances back to light she opened her eyes. She saw Mrs. Herrick's face and as this was connected in her mind with protection she smiled.

Died While Under Anaesthetic.

Homer Steele the 12 year old son of Mr and Mrs James I. Steele of Mammoth died from anaesthesia at the Judge Mercy Hospital at Salt Lake on Tuesday of this week. The boy met with an accident about nine weeks ago when he was thrown from a horse his leg being broken between the knee and hip. For some reason the fracture did not heal properly and an X-ray examination at the hospital disclosed the fact that an operation would be necessary. While the boy was under the anaesthetic his death occurred. The remains were brought to Mammoth on Wednesday and the funeral services were conducted from the family residence this afternoon. The interment took place at the Eureka city cemetery under the direction of Undertaker Wallace.

"Borrows" Rig and Has Accident

Iward Giall drove over to Silver City on Monday and while he was getting a hair cut at Garrity's barber shop Tel Carter of Mammoth borrowed his outfit and started down the canyon at a lively clip. Carter was soiled and he rattled around in the rig like a pea in a wash boiler but in some mysterious manner he managed to stick until the horse carried him to the Tintic Smelter at Silver City. At that point he tumbled out but failed to fall clear of the rig and was dragged for some little distance sustaining some bad cuts about the head. It seems that the kind Providence which guides the footsteps of children and drunken men protected him and he escaped without serious injury.

The News from the Tintic Mines

New Pumping Equipment

The new units which will practically double the capacity of the big electrical pumping plant that is now in operation upon the 2200 level of the Centennial Eureka mine will probably not be delivered here before the end of the year owing to the fact that the machinery must be shipped from the west. Perhaps it will be five months before the capacity of the pumping plant is increased to a point where work can be taken up on the water level of this mine. At the present time the pumping plant is lifting about 1000 gallons of water a minute and notwithstanding the fact that the two units have been kept continuously in operation during the past two or three months the pressure has not been entirely removed from the back head door which is used in keeping the water in check. Supt. Brown states that he will make no effort to resume operations of the 2200 level until the capacity of the pumping plant is increased but that he will keep the present pumps in operation believing this to be the best course.

It will be good news to the people of Tintic to learn that the Centennial Eureka officials have decided to continue operations below the water level and as there is little or no doubt that at the high grade ore will be found at that depth the installation of adequate pumping equipment to completely unwater the mine thus allowing uninterrupted prospecting would make a new mine of this wonderful old producer which at the present time is one of the greatest bonanzas of the state.

Sends out Good Tonnage

The Beck Tunnel property is shipping quite heavily from the Humbog ore chute the present daily output of the mine being about thirty tons. This ore body is holding out exceptionally well and within a few weeks the drift which leaves the shaft at a depth of 175 feet should be connected up with the ore. This connection meaning more rapid and less expensive ore extraction. It will no doubt be necessary to raise before getting into the ore as the object in driving this drift was to get well under the ore deposit. The Beck Tunnel's old workings are producing a portion of the present tonnage and the general condition of the mine is good.

At the Eagle & Blue Bell Mine

This week carpenters started work on the new ore house for the Eagle & Blue Bell mine and the building will probably be ready for use within the next three weeks. Work is now under way in the big raise which is to connect the large ore bodies of the mine with the .300 level and according to Supt. Wm. Owens the raise is now up a distance of about twenty five feet.

May Day Sends Out Zinc Ore

The first zinc ore to be shipped from the May Day mine was sampled at the Silver City plant of the Utah Ore Sampling Co. during the week and is now enroute to the smelters at Argentine, Kansas. The May Day ore carries from 37 to 40 per cent zinc and the present plans call for the shipment of about a carload each day. Over 1000 tons of this ore is now awaiting shipment at this mine which promises to make quite a record in the production of zinc.

Operations at the Opohongo

Supt. Samuel Cox states that things are moving along in the usual nice shape at the Opohongo mine the present output coming from the various stops which are located between the 350 and 600 levels. At the present time there is no work under way on the 1000 level but it is the intention of the management to get busy at that depth in the near future. Some new prospecting is being done on the 300 level and one of the drifts is headed toward the east. In view of the fact that this drift is cutting through virgin ground it is being watched with more than ordinary interest.

The ore which is being shipped from the Opohongo is running from 8 to 10 per cent copper about 12 ounces silver and from $1.50 to $2.00 in gold.

In the South End of Tintic

Frank Thornberg of Silver City is now doing some development work in the main tunnel at the Elgin property in the extreme south end of the district. Mr. Thornberg states that Johnson and Dally are operating the Butcher Boy property under lease and expect to get some good ore as soon as they can sink the shaft a short distance. In the south end of the district conditions are brightening up somewhat and the United Tintic people expect to be able to resume operations within a very short time.

Yankee Ships Zinc Ore.

Two hundred tons of zinc ore the first to be sent out from the Yankee Cons. mine at this place was sampled at the Tintic plant of the Utah Ore Sampling Co. during the week and today this ore was billed out over the Rio Grande by the ore being consigned to the Kansas City Zinc Co. at Altona, Kansas. Supt. Lou Merriam of the Yankee is highly pleased with the present showing of ore and believes that he will be able to ship one or two cars of zinc each week. The returns from this ore will undoubtedly bring into the treasury sufficient money to cover all the operating expenses of the property.

The usual amount of prospecting is in progress from the lower levels of the company's new shaft and there is a particularly nice showing in the east drift on the 2000 level. This drift is now cutting through a loose well mineralized formation in which there are many small caves and the assays which have recently been made show fair values. The west drift on the 1800 is now nearing a point directly beneath the old workings of the Yankee. This is the objective point of the 1800 drift and the chances of getting into the ore at that depth are said to be good. At any rate it is an important piece of prospecting. Supt. Merriam is also using a portion of his force in the development of the 1900 level where some low grade ore has been located.

Uncle Sam Secures Adjoining Ground

The Uncle Sam company at a meeting held at the capital on Wednesday absorbed the adjacent holdings of the Richmond & Anaconda company. In order to bring about this consolidation of interests the Uncle Sam capitalization has been raised from $300,000 to $750,000 the increase going to the Richmond & Anaconda shareholders in full payment of their interests. To some time the Uncle Sam people have practically owned this adjoining ground and the action taken this week will simply mean that the Richmond & Anaconda company is to be dissolved.

Colorado After Humbug Ore Chute.

The drift which was driven over into the Colorado from the Crown Point shaft did not develop anything of interest and consequently the work has been discontinued. The Colorado people have considerable faith in being able to open some ore as the result of the work which is now being done through what is known as the American tunnel. The portal of this tunnel is on Leek Tunnel ground but another hundred feet of work will take it to the Colorado valley and across the country to a considerable depth. The showing is already very good and it will not be long before some fine ore is located. The face of the tunnel is now being through an iron staining formation and the gray lime and quartzite is indicating the close proximity of the ore. One of the reasons for driving this tunnel is to try and locate the southern extension of the Humbog ore chute now being mined in the Beck Tunnel and which is expected to make through this part of the Colorado ground.

Good Showing at Swansea Ext.

At the Swansea Extension property the east drift on the 400 level is now nearing the vein which is the objective point in this work. The showing in this drift is entirely satisfactory and it is said that the showing is equally as good in the drift which is being sent over into this property from the Centennial Eureka mine.

The Swansea Extension is one of the Knott properties and Mr. Knott is determined to place it in the producing class being favorably impressed with the splendid surface showing on this ground and confident that some of the Centennial Eureka ore will continue in that direction.

Shaft Passes 500 Level

At the property of the Tintic Mining company at Mammoth the shaft is now down over 500 feet and it is generally understood that sinking is to continue without interruption until the 800 level is reached. At the 300 the sinking was so encouraging that some prospecting was done but the management is again rushing the shaft work as rapidly as possible.

Mining Men Will Organize

The mining men of the district of the Interior are causing a great deal of activity among the mining men of this state who believe that unless more liberal construction is placed upon the mining laws a great injury will be done to this industry. The mining men now propose to form a permanent organization to look after the mining industry. Senator Smoot, Senator Sutherland and Congressman Howell have each sent telegrams pledging their support in this important matter and stating that they are already at work with the officials of the Interior Department. In one of their recent rulings the officials of the department refused a patent upon the property of the East Tintic Cons. company on the ground that one of commercial value had not been uncovered.

Hy Straw arrived in Tintic on Wednesday from the West Tintic section where he has been engaged in mining operations for the past month. He is greatly pleased with the outlook there and believes that there are several properties upon which the showing will justify the installation of small concentrating plants. One of the lower grade which occurs in large quantities throughout the West Tintic section cannot be shipped at a profit owing to the fact that a lengthy wagon haul is necessary to get it to the railroad.

Will Fill In Big Bridge

The Reporter learns from a very reliable source that the officials of the Denver & P. O. Grand Ry. have planned some extensive improvements for the Tintic branch among which will be the filling in of the biggest bridge which is located just above the big double loop. This work will probably be taken up within the next few months as the bids are already out.

Machinery For Carpenter Work

New machinery operated by an electric motor has just been installed in the carpenter shop of McDorald & Campbell on lower main street giving these contractors everything that is needed for the rapid and economical handling of all kinds of carpenter work.

Mining Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Farnes of Salt Lake were here this week for a visit with R. A. Brown the superintendent at the Centennial Eureka mine.

William Mathews the superintendent of the Utah Cons. mine who has been seriously ill with typhoid fever for the past few weeks is now well along toward recovery and will soon be able to return to Tintic.

H. F. Gear has just completed a clean up of the old Shoshone mill dump which is located near the McIntyre ranch and which he leased some time ago from the Eureka Hill company. The dump ore carries very good values in copper.

Sgt. R. A. Brown of the Centennial Eureka mine came out from the capital the other day coming through to Tintic in a brand new auto having disposed of the small car which he has been using for the past few years. His son accompanied him upon the trip.

The mining operators at Bingham have just announced an increase in wages which will amount to about 25 cents per shift for all underground work. At Bingham the wages have for a number of years been somewhat lower than in Eureka Park City and other mining camps of the state.

Shipments of ore from the Tintic mines as reported on another page of this paper are somewhat below normal owing to the fact that most of the mines closed down on Wednesday and Thursday giving employees a chance to participate in the firemen's celebration.

The Gold Chain people are preparing to move their dynamo from the mine to the compressor plant which is located at Robinson. The dynamo is now being operated by compressed air but upon its removal from the mine it will get its power from the boilers which are now operating the large air compressor and this will lighten the load on the compressor plant quite materially.

The Knight Consolidated Power Company has been granted a franchise to run pole lines on all county roads between Provo and Pleasant Grove. According to the report made by P. Merrill of the Knight Company it is the purpose of that concern to furnish light and power to the farmers and fruit growers in that section. It is also stated that at some future time the company may ask for a franchise to run an interurban line out into the fruit district of Utah county.

Old Prospector Found Dead

Late on Saturday afternoon the lifeless body of John M. Bestlemyer, one of the pioneer prospectors of Tintic, was found lying in the side of the trail leading to his claim near the Grullin line in the eastern part of the district. As near as could be determined the aged prospector had been falling his way home after a trip to a creek when he slipped and plunged head first down the side of the steep hill. An attack of apoplexy or heart trouble may have had something to do with Mr. Bestlemyer's fall as the conclusions found upon his head were hardly sufficient to have killed him.

It was at about four o'clock on Saturday when Mrs. John Westley, who was driving to her home at the Tintic Standard mine, discovered the body. She immediately notified the men who were working at the East Tintic Development mine a short distance away and called the police to the location. The body was found about 100 yards to the west of the cabin which Mr. Bestlemyer has occupied during the many years that he has been engaged in mining in the eastern end of the Tintic district.

Det. Sheriff A. C. Hills, Coroner Ed L. Jones and H. C. Hicks, the secretary of the Grullin mining company, came from Provo on the evening train Saturday and after visiting the scene of the accident decided that an inquest would not be necessary. In company with a son of the deceased John Westley they took the remains to Provo the following morning and the funeral services were conducted there on Tuesday.

Mr. Bestlemyer was born in Nuremberg, Bavaria in 1843. He served as a member of the 1st Cavalry where he was a young man and was a sergeant in the German allied army which besieged and finally entered Paris. He came to America in 1880, living for a few years in New York and Brattleboro then coming to Utah. At one time Mr. Bestlemyer was employed as a cooper at the State mental hospital at Provo for fully twenty five years. He has followed mining in Tintic, as a prospector, promoter and operator owning a large number of claims at the time of his death.

In 1900 when there was great activity in the east Tintic section, Mr. Bestlemyer sold some of his mining interests to a partner for a few years and spent his time with his family at Provo. Recently, however, he has been devoting his time to the development of some of his claims.

He leaves a wife and four children. John Bestlemyer of Bingham, Aug. 1st, Bestlemyer of Salt Lake and Katje and Clara Bestlemyer whose wife with three mother at Provo.

Notes of the Convention

The Carpenter's Union was well represented in the parade, most of the members marching behind an appropriate float.

Practically every business house was decorated for the convention. More of them should have been represented in the parade.

The Sandy band, one of the best musical organizations in the state, accompanied the firemen from that city and rendered a splendid music throughout the day.

Fire Chief Bywater came out from Salt Lake by auto on Tuesday and was also here again on Thursday in time for the parade. His big red auto made some record breaking runs between Tintic and the capital.

Ed Burkhardt, the lone delegate to the convention from Spy Hollow, was much hurt when he found that his credentials did not entitle him to a seat.

While there were several isolated instances of superb and exuberant taking everything into consideration the three days passed off without any serious breach of peace.

Travelling Passenger Agent Lee of the San Pedro Ry. was in Eureka last Thursday. He came out on the special over his road this train carrying about 175 people.

Little Miss Frances Hunsawth with her team of black Shetland ponies and a nicely decorated carriage represented the Eureka Reporter. The float also contained three other little girls: Adel Griggs, Alice Hanson and Helen Beasley.

Arthur A. Miller, the 'Potash Kid', entered into the spirit of the firemen's celebration with the enthusiasm of a youngster. He appeared on Main at resplendent in white shoes and claret colored socks.

The Eureka Hill railroad, that taps the Knight properties on the east side of the district, closed down on Wednesday and Thursday and the sampler at Silver City closed down yesterday giving employees a chance to celebrate at Eureka.

Miss Carol Duffin made an attractive Goddess of Labor. Upon the float with her were Miss Jane Risell representing Independence, Miss Desdan Stotter representing Education and Miss Bettie Nelson representing Organization.

A fair sized crowd turned out last night to see Demetral the Greek light heavy weight champion throw George Nelson. The former agreed to throw Nelson twice in a 15 hour bit. He succeeded in getting one fall and that in forty minutes' wrestling. A preliminary bout was pulled off between John Downey and Frankie Byrne, which resulted in a draw.

Both moving picture shows put on special programs during the week. Manager Allcock of the opera house, had a special feature film Buffalo Bill's Wild West show on Tuesday and Wednesday nights and on Thursday staged the Demetral Nelson wrestling match. At the Crescent special pictures were shown on Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday the Volga River fight pictures were put on. Large houses were in order throughout the week.

Device of a Brandy Smuggler. To conceal dutiable goods among free goods in any importation is the prime offense against the customs laws yet the high rates of duty on some articles such as tobacco and spirits offer great temptation to illicit traders who employ all sorts of artifices to smuggle—or evade the notice of the customs officers.

When silk was dutiable women were the chief offenders and as they sometimes wound the contraband articles around their persons under their ordinary clothes it was found necessary to employ female searchers now no longer brought into requisition. One of the latter on one occasion made a curious discovery.

A female smuggler had had contraband—but not for running silk contraband—an India rubber dress for wearing under her ordinary clothes. She appeared when this contrivance was in operation to be a very fat woman. In reality she was abnormally thin. But the India rubber under wear was double and hollow and the space between the skins so to speak was filled with brandy.

The Day After the Fire

It is then too late to inquire into the value of your fire insurance policy or the financial standing of the company or the past record of their adjustments. True every company must comply with certain requirements before they can legally transact business in this state but that is no guarantee of their permanency.

Investigate Before the Fire

Does your company operate under the Safety Fund Law of the State of New York thereby being proof against another great conflagration? Did they pay face value without discount in the San Francisco conflagration? Or did they pay about 50 percent of their losses after considerable delay? Have they a reputation for promptness and courteous and liberal treatment of their patrons at time of loss? The best insurance is always the cheapest. Any insurance policy will do if you have no loss but in that case none at all is just as good. Our companies are time tried and fire tested.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood and by a germ killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished. To put the body in healthy condition to feed the system on rich red blood and throw out the poisons from the body nothing in the past forty years has excelled Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glyceric extract (without alcohol) of bloodroot, golden seal and Oregon grape root, stone root, mandrake and queen's root with black cherry bark.

My husband was a sufferer from stomach trouble and impure blood, writes Mrs. JAMES H. MARTIN of Frankfort Ky. He had a sore on his face that would form a scab which would dry and drop off in about a month then another would immediately form. It continued this way for a long time. He tried every remedy that any one would suggest but found no relief. He then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which completely cured him. He has stayed cured now for two years and I recommend this valuable medicine for all impurities of the blood.

For Union Workers

Important Happenings in Industrial Circles in This Country and Europe

Chicago—Organizer John C. Harding of Typographical Union No. 16 received an ovation yesterday at a meeting of the union when he reported that the board of education had given a contract for school readers to an employer of union men and that the work would be done in Chicago. Besides Charles Scribner's Sons who secured the contract guaranteed to replace without charge any copies of the text books which show defective material or workmanship. There will be a saving to the pupils of 77 cents compared with what they have paid heretofore said Organizer Harding who is also a member of the board of education. Besides they will get better readers. This victory for the printing trades of Chicago was won over the protests of those in the ranks of labor who should have supported us.

Washington—After many years agitation the Bricklayers and Stone masons International union has voted to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor. President Samuel Gompers attended the last convention of the bricklayers and urged them to take the action. The international union has about 100,000 members. Before being given a charter however the bricklayers will settle all jurisdictional squabbles over members with other organizations. Its charter will then contain the work over which the bricklayers will have absolute control. Two of the jurisdictional disputes are with the granite and stone cutters.

Chicago—More than 13,000 employees at the freight depots of railroads throughout the central west will enjoy Saturday half holidays. Announcement was made at the headquarters of the roads here that not only in Chicago and Kansas City as announced recently but also in other cities of the territory between Chicago and the Missouri river the Saturday half holiday would be in effect at once. This means that in the cities included teams will not be permitted to enter the driveways leading to the terminals after 1 o'clock to receive or discharge freight.

Minneapolis—The late general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church adopted several planks in its platform which read as if they might have been written by a committee at a labor convention. The conference went on record as being in favor of equal rights and complete justice for all men in all stations of life for the abolition of child labor for the conservation of health for a release from employment one day in seven and for a living wage as a minimum in every industry and for the highest wage that each industry can afford.

Boston Iron Molders Coremakers and Brass Molders and Coremakers unions at a mass meeting decided to ask for a uniform standard minimum wage rate of $2.50 for the nine hour workday for all the men on and after August 1. Another mass meeting will be held to receive the reports International Vice President Michael J. Keough of Cincinnati is acting for the international in the matter and will remain in this city until the scale is adjusted. Many of the men now receive the $3.50 a day rate but many average but $3.25 a day.

Augusta Maine—New England Telephone company advanced the eight hour workday for the day operators and granted a number of other concessions including wage increases to the operators of the Greater Boston district. The operators union voted to ask President Keller of the company for another conference to clear up the matter of shorter hours for the night operators which was one of the original requests of the organization.

Boston—All seven of the Boston Electrical Workers unions have sent protests to International President F. J. McNulty against the proposed transfer to another district of Peter F. Lenthian of New York who has been the general international representative and organizer in this vicinity for some months.

Washington—The war department has been instructed by the attorney general of the United States that it must observe the eight hour day provision included in the fortification appropriation act of June 6 1912 in so far as it applies to the manufacture of ordnance and ammunition.

Boston—Secretary E. C. V. Hernandez of Boston Carriage Wagon Automobile and Aeroplane Workers union has been appointed the international organizer for New England.

Aberdeen Scotland—The first case in Scotland under the Shop Hours act was heard when a firm of fruiterers was charged with failing to give their assistants a half holiday in the first week of June. They had assumed that Aberdeen would be declared a holiday resort and they could remain open for several months but the town council decided otherwise.

New York—Old Colony Lodge of Railroad Clerks has received semi official notice that the clerks requests will be the next to be taken up by the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. management.

Washington—Plans to organize the labor of the iron and steel industry of the United States are about to be launched by the American Federation of Labor. The campaign to bring the greatest open shops in the country into the union is about to begin with the holding of organization meetings simultaneously in every city and town having an iron or steel plant. A circular announcing the movement is sent at federation headquarters here indicates the movement will take consideration of the large foreign element in the steel industry.

Charleston W. Va.—Plans of the battalion of the Second Regiment, West Virginia National Guard to camp at Mucklow were frustrated when reports of trouble with the miners were received from Tomsburg and Burnwell where several of the Paint Creek collieries are located. One company was sent to Burnwell and another to Tomsburg. Reports received here state that many armed miners have been going to the upper end of Paint Creek during the day.

Belfast Ireland—Owing to continuous disputes between Orangemen and Catholics over the home rule agitation which have resulted in many Catholics being prevented from working the ship building firm of Harland & Wolff has closed down some of its departments. It was announced today by the firm that it will be unable to continue other departments which will ultimately result in the whole works stopping unless the disturbances are discontinued.

New York—Four hundred girls members of the dressmakers union employed at a Brooklyn factory are on strike against the use of profanity by the foreman and other male employees of the shop. The strikers hope to bring about a series of walkouts in other factories to enforce the demand for a rule that foremen and others be instructed that no profanity or abusive language shall be used in the work rooms at any time no matter what the provocation.

Cripple Creek Colo.—After selecting Hancock Mich. as the next meeting place the twentieth annual convention of the Western Federation of Miners adjourned at Victor. The convention voted its confidence in President Moyer and his unrestricted control of federation matters. It was also decided to take his advice and endeavor to drive the Industrial Workers of the World faction from the various locals.

Chicago—Sixty thousand union workmen paused for five minutes in their work from 10:55 to 11 a. m. while mass was being said for the late Martin B. (Skinny) Madden. Permission to stop work for this period was obtained by a joint committee of the Building Trades council and the Associated Building Trades at a conference with representatives of the Building Construction Employers association.

New York—After a series of conferences over the strike situation the New York fur manufacturers have agreed to stand together indefinitely until the employees come back under open shop conditions. Nearly 10,000 furriers have now been out on strike for two months. The strikers assert there has been no break in their ranks. The deadlock is one of the longest in the garment industry.

London England—The dock workers strike was suddenly called off. It had lasted for more than 10 weeks and reduced the strikers and their families to such destitution that some have literally starved to death. Strike leaders say they have secured assurances that the agreements between the employers and the workmen which were in force before the strike began will be kept intact.

New York—The end of the sea men's strike in New York was officially recorded in a statement from James Vidal secretary of the Marine Firemen's Union. The leader declared that the strike of seamen and long shoremen had failed owing largely to the bribery of a number of strike officials. The strike of the marine firemen will be continued however.

New York—With the withdrawal of the extra policemen and the return to work of most of the sailors long shoremen and some of the firemen the strike on the coastwise lines practically is broken. Leaders of the unions declare that organizations in the other ports Boston Philadelphia and New port News are being formed. As soon as these organizations are perfected a renewal of hostilities is threatened.

Washington—In his report on the strike of the textile mill operatives in Lawrence Mass. Charles P. Neil United States commissioner of labor criticizes the millowners for not reaching some understanding with their employees by which the strike might have been averted. Failure to do so declares the report precipitated an industrial conflict which had some of the aspects of a social revolution.

South Berwick Maine—C. E. T. Caswell of this city deputy grand president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Station employees addressed the meeting of Boston division.

MAKE GOOD AS INSTRUCTORS

Veteran Major Players Are in Big Demand as Coaches—Where Some Are Now Located

It will not be long before all the major league teams are carrying former players as coaches. The Giants have the veteran Wilbert Robinson of the champion Orioles of 1894 to direct matters on the lines in addition to McGleason Harry Davis of the Cleveland Indians and the Detroiters are carrying the old time catchers Jim McGuire and Joe Sugden. The Philadelphia are paying Paddy Moran to coach the pitchers and steer the base runners. The Chicago White Sox have an able war secretary in Kid Gleason. Harry Davis of the Cleveland Indians relies upon Paddy Livingston for expert advice and the Detroiters are carrying the old time catchers Jim McGuire and Joe Sugden.

Some of the young players just breaking into the big leagues never heard of their veteran instructors before. Charley Farrell better known as the Duke of Marlboro who is in the employ of the Boston Nationals as head coach recently took a youngster in hand and tried to show him something about the fine points of the game.

Say you big lobster exclaimed the new recruit what did you ever do to be telling me how to play ball? Hey?

Farrell was dumfounded and couldn't speak. John Ward however came to his rescue and said:

Young fellow I'll tell you what he did! He was the best catcher in the National league in 1897 when he handled Rusie and Meekin for the Giants under my management. He also caught great ball for the Chicago Dons, Washingtons and champion Brooklynians.

That may be all true replied the cub but he's a new one on me and he can't play ball now.

If you'll listen to his advice said Ward you'll succeed. But the recruit was as stubborn as the proverbial mule and soon drew his walking papers.

DOWNEY BACK WITH CHICAGO

Player, Who Was Let Go to Cincinnati and Then to Philadelphia, Rejoins His Old Team

Tom Downey has been added to the Cub roster by the waiver route and has rejoined the same team with which he first broke into the major league ranks. Tom was let go to Cincinnati and played short for the Reds. Then he was disposed of to Philadelphia and filled in at third during Roberts' absence. The Phillies asked for waivers and Manager Chance refused to waive claim.

Tom Downey

Pittsburg papers allege that they believe the Pirates and the Cubs may yet hustle the Giants some at the finish.

Jake Weimer former star of the Cubs Giants and the Reds is now a commission merchant in the stock yards.

Pitcher Hanke who trained with the Athletics in 1910 has been signed by the Allentown team of the Tri State league.

Jimmy Digt's unconditional release didn't keep him out of a job long. He signed within a few days with Providence.

Anybody who believes the rumor that Boston wants to trade Vin Campbell for Rebel Oakes of the Cardinals is entitled to Davy Altizer continues to play wonderful ball in the American association. In that company Davy is always a genuine whale.

Arthur Shafer the young substitute infielder with the Giants is showing all the signs of a future star. He is fast runs bases well and hits the ball hard.

John Kling has a discouraged look on his face these days. He does not think that managing a tail end combination is nearly as much fun as he did last summer.

SWEET MUSIC TO HIS EARS

Orator's Revenge on Trousters That Had Proved Treacherous at a Most Important Time

Uncle Hank Barnhart who represents part of the state of Indiana in the lower house shook the campfire out of his dress suit one evening in preparation for a public address. He was booked for and discovered that his figure had grown too prosperous for the open faced garb that had once been ample and comfortable. It was then too late to get another outfit and Barnhart thought that by breathing only in the upper parts of his lungs he might avoid catastrophe.

About five minutes before he was going on the stage where the speaking was to take place Barnhart heard felt and otherwise became conscious of that lugubrious ripping action of trousers that one has outgrown. It was an exciting moment. There was no Retail Dress Suit agency in town and no time to send out a hurry call to such a plant if there had been. The best that Barnhart could do was to get a man to pin the hiatus together and then murmur a prayer that no cataclysm should occur.

By standing sway backed Uncle Hank got through his part of the exercises without mishap. His perspiratory glands were overtaxed so great was his apprehension but the pins did their work well and when he retreated he did so in good order.

Then what do you suppose Barnhart did? He retired to a secluded corner back of the stage raised himself to his full height and then bent over and tried to touch his fingers to the floor without bending his knees. Again he heard a large assure making its way up and down the seams in those commodious trousers.

Rip golden you said Barnhart and see if I care!

Ah but was music says Barnhart telling about it to hear that low ripping sound knowing full well that there was no one around to see.

True Art

Critics had praised me academies had granted me exhibition space said the artist still I was modest enough to think I wasn't any great shakes as a painter. The thing that finally convinced me that maybe I was no dub after all was the remark of a woman who knew a good deal more about bargain counters than she knew about art. She studied a picture that had made critics overwork their vocabulary in praising it and her only comment was: My ill bet the Henrietta cloth in that woman's tea gown cost every cent of $2.50 a yard.

Just as a matter of curiosity I looked up my model and found that the dress she wore had cost just that a yard. Then I knew that I had been gifted with the divine fire. To depict values so faithfully that experienced shoppers can tell the most of the cloth you paint seems to be hitting old art up at a pretty lively gait.

Writers Cramp a Misnomer

Medical authorities now claim that writers cramp and other similar states of apparent muscular paralysis are actually due not to the tiring of the muscles but to brain lag. It appears that the particular part of the brain which controls special combinations of muscle action such as the movements of writing or the working of a telegraph key tends to become more quickly exhausted in some individuals than in others. Such exhaustion leads to a state in which the brain is actually unable to send out its necessary messages to the hands and fingers to write tap a key hold a violin bow etc. Furthermore once the nerve cells the batteries of the brain get thoroughly run down it is not easy to restore their energy. Herein lies the trouble. It has been supposed that all troubles of the kind were due simply to overworking of the muscles concerned.

Saving Two Cents

A boy not much more than eight years old boarded a Nostrand avenue car in Brooklyn the other morning and on paying three cents car fare demanded a transfer. The conductor complied with the boy's request and speaking to a rear platform passenger said: Just watch that little chap.

The car proceeded two blocks to the intersection of Gates avenue. Then the boy left the car and meeting a man evidently his father handed the transfer to him. The father took it and boarded a Gates avenue car bound for Manhattan.

Nice example to place before a boy simply to save two cents said the passenger.

Yes and it happens every morning said the conductor.

"THE PASSING YEAR" By Walt Mason

The year is growing ashen and weary and gray full soon he will cash in and mosey away. A while yet he'll totter along to his grave, has marked for the slaughter and nothing can save. The year that is leaving seems weighted with woe and Nature is grieving because he must go. The forests are sighing and moaning all day the night winds are crying upon their sad way the gray clouds are taking a threatening shape the dead grass is shaking like billows of crepe. Dame Nature is tender and dreads she'll croon regretting the splendor and glory of June she knows that tomorrow the old year will sleep she knows that the sorrow of parting is deep. In this world O never can friends with us stay! Some loved one forever is going away! And that is the story of people all years a morning of glory an evening of tears an hour of caressing a call at the dawn a prayer and a blessing and then they are gone.

Brief Comment.

The cost of living is high but it is worth the price.

The world is looking for the man who does things not for one who can explain why he did not do them—Ex charge

Almost every month some cheap john outfit drifts in to Eureka with a bankrupt stock of clothing and makes an effort to land a few suckers. It is pleasing to note that there are but few people who are foolish enough to go against this brace game. Cheap shoddy merchandise is dear at any price and the chap who slips into town along about pay day time with a few trunks full of clothing should be passed up completely by the buying public. When you buy a suit of clothes a pair of shoes or any thing else for that matter go to your home merchant who will be in town long enough to guarantee good service from the article purchased.

An ordinance might be passed making it more difficult and less profitable for these cheap john clothing fakirs to visit Eureka.

These are busy days for the politicians and in all parts of the state one can find men who need little or no urging to get the n-o jump into the race.

In an effort to land state or county offices Office holding is a good deal like other bad habits inasmuch as it is hard to shake it off. About the live liest test that the people of Utah have witnessed in many years is the fight among about a dozen prominent Republicans for the nomination to the office of congressman. The fact that the two congressmen are to be nominated only tends to make the scrap more interesting. Governor's party will no doubt be renominated while C. S. Hiley, present secretary of state will have pretty strong opposition owing to the fact that he has been in the office a mighty long time. The only thing to off at this is the fact that he has made a good record. Tingey was originally elected from Juab county but he has lived at Salt Lake for so long that he must now come before the convention as a Salt Lake candidate.

School Opens on September 3rd

The members of the school board held a meeting on Saturday evening and decided to open school on the morning of Tuesday September 3rd. In most of the cities of the state the high schools are not opened until about the middle of September and the date on which the Eureka High School will open is September 16th. The factors are of the opinion that the school can have the new building ready by that time but in the event that the structure is not completed the school work will be taken up in the same building in which the work was carried on last year. A north-south preliminary work can be started then without the least inconvenience.

Improvements at Public Schools

The new building which will house the heating plant, toilets, etc. at the public school grounds in this city is now under construction and James Devine who has charge of the work will make an effort to have the new building completed by the time school opens on September 3rd. The new building is located between the two large school buildings and this arrangement not only puts the heating apparatus in a safer position but gives both buildings better service. The toilets will have connection with the sewer and will be strictly sanitary in every respect.

Charged With Obtaining Money Under False Pretenses

This week G. A. Franke swore to a complaint charging Dan Lynch with obtaining money under false pretenses. According to the complaint Lynch forged his wife's name to a certificate of deposit which he cashed at Franke's Furniture Store sometime last September and immediately left town. The certificate was for $110 and Mr. Franke gave Lynch $20 in cash and a personal check for the balance.

Sheriff Hennrich arrested Lynch at Mammoth on Wednesday. The defendant immediately gave up and set out by paying Mr. Franke the amount due as well as the court costs. Upon motion of Edward E. Lake, acting county attorney the case against him was dismissed.

Compliment for Country Papers

Comparing the honesty of the country papers with the dishonesty of the metropolitan city papers the Ogden Evening Standard concedes the city papers are not as a rule a safe guide in political affairs that they color and misrepresent the news to advance their political interests. While the country papers close to the hearts and interest of their communities—their expressed sentiments are the sentiment of an honest opinion.

In commenting on this that paper says: What is the explanation? Why are the people beginning to look to the weeklies and other country papers for impartial news? The answer is that two thirds of the big dailies are owned by men of wealth whose interests are those of the predatory. Those papers are not fair and cannot be while their owners are demanding that they be special pleaders.

Men of money buy papers not to serve the dear public but to gain an advantage for themselves and their interests and where ever that condition exists the public should be distrustful.

The majority of the country papers are free from this baneful influence and generally the editorial utterances of those papers can be accepted as the opinion of the editor who almost invariably is editor, reporter, printer, janitor and devil and in his battle to exist is held sufficiently close to the man who eats his bread by the sweat of his brow as to be possessed of a bond of sympathy for the struggling masses.

Chief Cons. Has $200,000 in Cash

The reporter learns from a thoroughly reliable source that the treasury of the Chief Cons. company now contains $200,000 and that the mine between 30 and 41 carloads of ore which the smelter has not yet settled. This means that when the shareholders will draw down some dividend they will actually draw near by the Chief Cons. company. The payment of a dividend as soon as the cash surplus reaches $200,000. The net profits of the Chief Cons. for the month of July amounted to $901 and it is understood that the mine will close the present month with a most satisfactory record. A large amount of development is under way at this property where the usual mine showing upon the various levels. For the week which has just closed the mine was on the market with 26 carloads of ore.

His Vacation Joys Will Soon Be Over.

Tintic's Big Bridges Will Soon Be Thing of Past

The big bridges which have made the Tintic branch of the Pio Grande Ry. one of the most picturesque and interesting pieces of railroad work in the state will soon be a thing of the past. As stated in our last issue the railroad company have contracted to have these bridges filled in and this week the contractors who are to handle the job arrived here with all the material and help needed for this big undertaking. It is understood that the present plans call for some other improvements upon the Tintic branch and that all of this work will be handled by the Kilpatrick Brothers well known railroad contractor.

While the big frame ties on the local branch have always been considered absolutely safe by the Rio Grande's most competent engineers many people who have had occasion to travel over this line in going and coming to Tintic have breathed easier after passing over them and the announcement that the bridges are to be filled in will no doubt be good news in this section.

In June 1910 one of these bridges was destroyed by fire and it cost bet ter than $30,000 to rebuild it to say nothing of the loss which the company sustained by not being able to take care of the Tintic business. This fire perhaps caused the officials to get busy. The two largest bridges are nearly 500 feet in length and about sixty feet in height.

Knight's New Coal Road.

John Cronin of Silver City was in Provo on Sunday for the purpose of conferring with Jesse Knight regarding the new coal road which the latter is constructing to his coal mines which are located about five miles from Helper. This piece of railroad is being built under Mr. Cronin's direction and will be finished within the next two months. Wasa Straw of Springville has the contract for the grading which is already well under way and the steel rails ties one engine and cars will soon be delivered. Mr. Knight has already purchased an 80 ton Baldwin engine and the road's equipment will include another engine of the same size. Mr. Cronin will leave for that section again about the first of September.

Gold Chain Has Splendid Month

The drift which was driven over in to the Gold Chain property from the 1500 level of the Lower Mammoth mine is now fully 400 feet within the former company's ground and for the past few weeks it has been cutting through some good looking quartz. Some ore has been found but it has not been of a permanent nature. This is an important piece of development for the Gold Chain as the drift will cut the ore bearing section of the property fully 700 feet below the deepest point at which work has been prosecuted.

Assistant Manager W. D. Loose states that while the figures showing the Gold Chain's profits for the past month are not available at this time he feels quite confident that the record which the mine has made during August will compare very favorably with any previous month in its history.

Lower Mammoth Will Ship.

Over at the Lower Mammoth mine Superintendent Price is hard at work lining things up for the shipment of some zinc ore the first consignment of which he expects to have on the market within the next ten days.

The Lower Mammoth's best showing of zinc ore is on the 1800 level where a four foot vein carrying from 35 to 40 per cent has been opened for a distance of not less than 100 feet. On the 1500 level there is also a very nice bunch of the same character of ore but in order that it may be mined to good advantage it will be necessary to do some work in one of the old drifts. The campaign of development work which is now being mapped out for this mine will undoubtedly result in the opening of other zinc deposits and the officials of the company are naturally feeling exceptionally good because of the encouraging outlook.

Safety Appliance Does Its Work.

That money spent in safety appliances or in placing safe guards around the men who follow an occupation which at its best is somewhat hazardous is an investment which pays big dividends in the prevention of serious accidents was shown the other night at the Chief Cons. mine. It is by no means an unusual accident among the mines of this section or any other section for that matter to have something go wrong allowing the cage to go into the shafts and that is what happened at the Chief Cons. a safety appliance which was installed over a year ago prevented serious damage. The object of this appliance is to hang the cage up and disengage the cable ties preventing a serious smash up. On Tuesday night the engineer had difficulty in getting the brake to work and allowed the cage to go into the shafts but the safety appliance did its work splendidly and while it took some little time to block up the cage and again attach the cable no serious damage resulted. The Chief Cons. shaft is single compartment and as there is no other outlet from the mine the night shift men were forced to remain underground until about six o'clock in the morning.

Copper From Iron Blossom

The Iron Blossom mine is again sending out some very nice copper ore about 100 tons of which is being mined each week from the 600 level of the No. 1 workings. Some months ago several shipments were sent out from this copper deposit and later the mining of this character of ore was discontinued. Recently however Supt. Fabris received word that the smelter was ready to handle this ore at the rate of about a couple of cars a week. The ore which is now being hoisted will average up better than 10 per cent copper with a little silver and enough gold to run it up to about $10 per ton and this means a net profit of better than $3.00. The cave which was opened from the 600 level of the No. 3 workings has been pretty thoroughly explored and while it contains strings of good copper the ore does not appear to be in commercial quantities. Practically the same condition exists in the drift which is now being driven under the cave. Prospecting at this depth will be continued and the present splendid showing indicates that some good ore will soon be encountered.

Ore shipments stock quotations and additional mining news on page 3.

Of course you know that dressing the children well is a necessary part of the education. Dress them well, and they will study their lessons better.

W. F. SHRIVER

Three Cars Bring Victoria $6,000.

While the Victoria's output is not high when compared with that from some of the neighboring properties the mine is earning a substantial sum each month and it will not be long before the indebtedness which was incurred by the purchase of adjoining territory is entirely wiped out. Only a few days ago the management ordered the payment of a portion of this overdraft and the balance will soon be upon the right side of the ledger. The ore now being mined from the Victoria carries splendid gold values and only a few days ago a check for a little better than $6,000 was received in settlement for three cars of ore. This was by no means an unusual lot of ore but simply a fair sample of what the mine is producing.

The Victoria people will undoubtedly make some change in existing equipment within the next few months. The present boilers are hardy adequate for the extensive work which is now being done and the management is undecided whether to secure new boilers or to switch over to electricity. The cost of putting in electrical equipment would not be heavy as the hoisting engine which is now in use is good for many years to come.

Crown Point May Sink

John Poundy, who was in Tintic during the week states that the officials of the Crown Point company are now considering the advisability of sinking the shaft another 10 feet. Prospecting is still under way upon this property and while the showing has for some time been quite encouraging it is thought that greater depth will be necessary before the ore will be located.

Dragon Cons Developments

In that part of the Dragon Cons. property which is being developed through the Iron Blossom ore is now being mined from both the No. 1 and No. 2 raises. The latter raise has now reached a point 112 feet above the 600 level having cut the ore for a distance of about twenty five feet. The ore which has been found in the No. 2 raise while it does not carry the same high gold values as found nearer the Iron Blossom lode is of a nice shipping grade and in addition to the gold and silver contains some lead. The south drift is being driven forward with a view to not only following the ore but ultimately con necting up with the work which is now being handled from the old Star section of the Black Jack.

Iron Blossom's New Plant.

Gas Hindbeck master mechanic for the Knight mines is making very fair progress with the installation of the new machinery at the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom mine and some of the heavier pieces were placed upon the beds during the past few days. It will take some little time perhaps a couple of months to put the finishing touches on the job and get the new equipment in running order but when once the hoist goes into commission the Iron Blossom will have one of the best plants in the entire state.

Hitch In Adjustment of Rate

There is some hitch in the adjustment of the freight rate between the Tintic district and the smelters which are located in the Kansas gas belt and on Wednesday the Pio Grande Ry. received a message from the interstate commerce commission stating that the shipments of zinc ore from this section would have to be discontinued. It is understood here that the matter will be adjusted within a day or two and that the local mines will then be able to resume the shipment of this character of ore.

The old rate of $9.50 per ton was cut to $7.30 and through the efforts of prominent mining men and Utah's congressional delegation the local shippers secured a waiver of the publication clause thus making the reduction effective at once. Now it seems that the interstate commerce officials have discovered some technical error which it will perhaps take a few days to correct.

Before the order came to stop shipping the May Day had sent out four cars of zinc the Uncle Sam one and Yankee Cons four. The zinc ore will probably bring the Tintic mines in the neighborhood of $30 per ton. Under normal conditions the May Day people expect to send out a car each day. A car each week can also be mined at the Uncle Sam and the Yankee Cons management expects to be on the market with about 100 tons a week.

M. C. Morris formerly manager of the Horn Silver mine in Beaver county was in Tintic a short time ago and visited the Iron Blossom and Colorado mines. In an interview with the mining editor of the Herald Tribune he gave an interesting report regarding these mines and was particularly enthusiastic about the Iron Blossom which he declares is a whale of a mine. He states there is so much ore in sight at this property that the force could be practically doubled if the management desired a heavier tonnage.

Sarah Bernhardt in Camille; The Great Titanic

In Motion Pictures Big Bill at Opera House, Sept. 5th

The interest of all theatregoers is centered on the above double bill. Either attraction would draw record attendance.

CAMILLE

Once suppressed by government edict it came near being a still born play but finally came to life and was an instantaneous success. To day it is the most widely known play.

Rebel forces struggle in the souls of every one of us. The extent of the battle ground depending largely upon our experience. Most of us are humanly recognizing our many weaknesses. We are of the opinion that we might have done better under circumstances other than those that led us to error and we know that there is good in every woman torn and mangled by the world has treated her.

This idea of the author is exquisitely set forth in the photodrama 'Camille' as recently staged in the Bernhardt Theatre in Paris and played by the world's most famous tragedienne. The portrayal is that of a refined woman in matters of taste—the gown she wears is a creation—and her conduct is little removed from that of our little fies of society. There is nothing of the show girl in her movements. Nothing that

THE TITANIC

The Titanic as given with lecture slides and special music equals a two reel feature. Owing to change of programming shifts those who could not see it before will have an opportunity to do so now but will get more than do it. The usual interest as a special lecturer explains the pictures, the entire time they are on the curtain, calling attention to various details of the vessel and showing position of the notable persons and will lecture all the views.

The slide views are the latest taken and show the Carpathia survivors Halifax morgue, Collis Ship, check a millionaire gave as a bribe (and which created a sensation). Funeral place etc. The Titanic special songs 'My Sweet Heart Went Down With the Ship' and 'Just As the Ship Went Down' will be sung here for the first time.

When shown in the past the culture audience has been noticeable many coming by auto and carriage as though it were Bernhardt in person.

The Day After the Fire

It is then too late to inquire into the value of your fire insurance policy or the financial standing of the company, or the past record of their adjustments.

True every company must comply with certain requirements before they can legally transact business in this state but that is no guarantee of their permanency.

Investigate Before the Fire

Does your company operate under the Safety Fund Law of the State of New York thereby being proof against another great conflagration?

Did they pay face value without discount in the San Francisco conflagration? Or did they pay about 50 per cent of their losses after considerable delay?

Have they a reputation for promptness and courteous and liberal treatment of their patrons at time of loss?

The best insurance is always the cheapest. Any insurance policy will do if you have no loss but in that case none at all is just as good.

Blessed be hobbie skirts Alison ejaculated surveying her slim lithe-ness in the long mirror.

Rose her sister laughed softly as she returned. Better say blessed be flesh! If grandad hadn't weighed near three hundred you'd never get a skirt out of his Sunday best black broadcloth trousers.

Don't you dare! If one breathes real loud in this village folk are sure to hear. Alison adjured turning to look at herself over her own shoulder. And the gossips would say sacrilege rather than thrift. I'm sure grandad himself would approve—dead this ten years what harm can it do to have his left over clothes help us round a hard corner?

None in the world. Rose assented merrily adding with a touch of wistfulness. It is so hard—our stock passing dividends just at this special time. We could do so much with that five hundred we haven't got.

And other people doing all sorts of things. This town is going to be real giddy. Alison answered sighing at the end of a giggle. Three wed-dings already announced—that means at least a dozen parties of sorts—luncheons not counted.

And tableaux for the Missionary society and two Germans if no more. Rose chanted.

Alison took up the chant with 'And three strange—very strange—young men a coming to the weddings—and likely to stay on awhile with their kin. Rosyposy I tell you it's distinctly hard lines. A new party frock apiece is the most we dare hope for—and even they spell a month without butter. Praise be you didn't make that new melton last fall—you would hardly have put it on with Aunt Anne so ill. But whatever we would do if you hadn't thought of grandad I surely don't know. Really I believe though it sounds like magic I'll get a swaggy outfit from his suit.

He wore it only once—poor dear. Rose sighed. And he was always particular as to his clothing. I wish we dared spend a little for touches of color—though you can stand all black with your yellow hair and blue eyes I hate to see you nunlike.

O! if I only dare! Alison exclaimed.

Dare what? Rose asked. Alison answered with a breathless giggle. Sacrifice our best heirloom—but Aunt Anne will never agree—

You mean the waistcoat? Rose cited catching her breath.

Alison nodded. Rose darted away—up the stairs to the garret where the waistcoat which had come down from a beau of colonial times lay linen wrapped in lavender. In a wink she was back with it unwrapping the swathings. They fell apart revealing a fabric of degree. Brocade whose satin ground once a royal scarlet powdered with rosebuds yellow white and pink had faded to a soft delicate Indian red. Time had likewise improved the rose hues—they seemed to melt one into another. Alison gasped at the sight of the rich blendings. It—it seems wicked—even to think of cutting it up she said. But O!—wouldn't it set off my black?

It shall set it off. Rose said stoutly. Aunt Anne would never agree—her conscience wouldn't let her. But once the thing is done shall be glad I found her crying yesterday over our bank account—she seems to feel it was her fault that things are as they are.

Why! I do believe there's enough for a narrow panel besides revers and cuffs. Alison answered eagerly—she had been measuring the waistcoat while her sister spoke.

It was very long and had been built for a man over six feet. It was neither frayed nor spotted and had still its full complement of carved rock-crystal buttons. No wonder Aunt Anne cherished it—it was all that had come down to her in the division of ancestral treasures from the most distinguished of her great grandfathers.

Fate ordered it that she came through the door from the living room just as Alison scissors in hand made to begin snipping the fine hand set stitches. She had slipped a ki-mono over the unfinished frock she had contrived—the short coat which would be new and jaunty by and by hung raw and limp over the back of a chair at her side. All about was the litter and disorder inevitable to close contriving. Rose stood gazing at her sister—both were too intent to note the opening door. Suddenly Alison's hand fell—she held the waistcoat away from her saying in a choked voice. Rose—take it—back I—I—somehow I can't spoil it—it feels as though it would be spiritual murder.

A hand fell upon Aunt Anne's shoulder—a soft hand heavy with rings and only faintly wrinkled. It drew her back leaving the door a little ajar. Very shortly the owner of it was saying hushing Aunt Anne sobs the while.

To think you wouldn't come to me your oldest friend. Anne dear I'm ashamed of you—you know your girls feel almost as though they were mine. But your pride has had its reward. Not many girls under the conditions would forego as nobly as our Alison. Don't tell her and Rose we overheard—not yet at least. It would hurt them to know we knew. But you are going to be sensible and let me advance you those delayed dividends. Also you are to remember cabs are a wicked extravagance when one has friends with cars and next to nobody to fill them.

At that Aunt Anne cried harder, than ever but after a little agreed meekly to do as her friend bade. The friend Mrs. Norris Lane a rich widow childless with two adored and adoring nephews, was unobtrusively the great lady of Charlotte town.

Perhaps there was no direct sequence of events—but people began to notice early in the season that Lane Norris and Howard Lane the great lady's nephews were mighty attentive to the Agnew girls. Rose and Alison felt as if they had found a fairy godmother—all at once Aunt Anne had ceased worrying—she had only smiled mysteriously, and told them things were not so bad as they had threatened to be. Then at Christmas she surprised each of them with a dainty new gown—to which Mrs. Lane had added all the other things—gloves fan slippers silk stockings and cobweb kerchiefs. Alison was not able to say thank you for the lump in her throat. Even Rose had to turn away her eyes. And that night hand in hand they told Aunt Anne of their plotting—and what had withheld them from carrying it out. She patted their bent heads saying as tears dropped upon Alison's bright hair.

It would have been murder dear children—murder of something in yourselves—reverence for family ties and traditions. I am glad indeed you made the blank frock—much better use the cloth than let let moths ruin it in the end. But the waistcoat means something—it is a sort of patent of nobility. Only fine gentlemen wore such garments—

I know! Rose broke in. And we came near showing we didn't deserve to belong to him. Then the two ran away to make ready for a very late party. Aunt went too. And as she came away she had the happiness of sealing with her approval a double betrothal.

REMAINS TRUE TO INSTINCT

True It Is That a Sheep May Become a Wolf But Never a Wolf Be comes Sheep

One Sunday at the house of Anatole France they were talking of the admirable romance he had just published. The Gods are Thirsty. M. Paul Souday expressed in the warmest terms the enthusiasm with which this work had inspired him. Above all he vaunted the character of Evariste Gaudin whom a false revolutionary philanthropy had transformed from a bleating sheep to a devouring wolf.

A Russian lady who was present said she knew of wolves that had become sheep. The Prince Troubetzkoi she said has two of them. He brought them from Russia. They had been tamed and he led them in a leash like greyhounds. You know that he is a vegetarian. He has imposed this diet upon his beasts. He feeds them vegetables and salads.

In fact then said Anatole France I met him the other day with his wolves of which you speak in the street. He had stopped before a fruit stand and he was plundering a basket of carrots to regale his beasts.

That is an excellent example for vegetarianism said the lady. Seduced by such an example I acquired a wolf and fed him myself. But I feared that he would fade away. But as I did not intend to renounce my vegetarian ideas I continued to make him nibble fruits and roots in public while at home secretly I gave him fresh meat. In this way I was able to keep him for some time. He died a while ago. I do not understand how Prince Troubetzkoi succeeded in keeping his wolves. I suspect he employed the same method as myself.

In short said Anatole France one often finds sheep that become wolves, but never wolves that become sheep. —Le Cri de Paris

In Dreams I know Charley enjoyed being a delegate at the convention said young Mrs. Torkins.

How? I heard him talking in his sleep and some of the language he used was exactly the same as that which he employs at a baseball game.

CONSTITUTION'S MIGHTY BLOW WON A FLAT

SINKING OF THE GUERRIERE

LATE on the afternoon of August 19 one hundred years ago Captain Isaac Hull one of America's greatest naval commanders won a wager of a bat from Captain James Richard Dacres of the British navy. In addition to the hat the Englishman lost the first action between frigates in the war of 1812 and his country suffered a blow to its pride and prestige from which it was long in recovering. A few days later the Constitution one of the vessels which the British commanders had sneeringly called the first built Yankee frigates flying a piece of striped bunting at their mastheads appeared off Boston Lighthouse gaily decked with flags and proudly passed up the harbor to fall of the capture and destruction of the Guerriere.

Only a month before this momentous engagement Captain Hull had had an exciting experience with the Guerriere and her consort the Bezdere and Leolis. These three vessels pursued the Constitution for more than 66 hours and Captain Hull escaped only by indomitable perseverance and most skillful seamanship putting into Boston for supplies.

Early in August the Constitution started out again on a hunt for the enemy and on August 19 a sail was sighted that proved to be a British frigate which from her maneuvers was evidently desirous of engaging. When the vessels were three miles apart Captain Hull sent down his royal yards reefed his topsails and sent the crew to quarters. This crew was remarkably disciplined and drilled at the guns and more than that scarcely a man of them but had a score to settle with the English. On the bare backs of most of them were the scars made by the lashes of the brutal English press gangs and many were descendants of American sailors who had suffered martyrdom in the British prison ships during the Revolution. Hull himself kept in mind the fact that his father died in a pest ship from the cruel treatment he had received.

Hull Wanted the Hat

Soon after 4 o'clock the two frigates exchanged ineffectual broadsides while maneuvering for position and constantly drawing closer. About 6 o'clock Hull becoming impatient ordered the Constitution to be steered directly for the enemy and rapidly closed upon his port quarter. By the orders of Hull the Americans now ceased firing and made all preparations for an effective broadside reload. The guns were carefully with round shot and grape and training them upon the British ship. The Englishmen were to be seen working their guns steadily and their frequent cheers were plainly heard. What followed is thus told by Edgar S. Macley in his History of the Navy.

As yet no order had come from the quarter-deck of the American frigate and perfect quiet prevailed along her decks as the men stood by their guns nearly all of them barefooted and many stripped to the waist ever and anon casting inquiring glances at their officers. At this moment a shot struck the Constitution's bulwarks and threw innumerable splinters over the first division of the gun deck wounding several men. Observing the effect of this shot the Englishmen gave three cheers but still the American frigate remained silent. First Lieutenant Morris now approached the quarter-deck where Captain Hull was coolly pacing back and forth and said. The enemy has opened fire and killed two of our men. Shall we return it? Not yet sir as the response from the quarter-deck and the men saw their mutilated shipmates hurled below to the surgeon's table while they stood silently at their guns in momentary expectation of meeting a similar fate. Nothing but the perfect discipline in the American frigate restrained the impatience of the gun crews and prevented them from returning the Englishman's cannonading. Three times Lieutenant Morris asked if he could open fire and three times he was answered with a calm Not yet sir.

But at last having gained a position about 40 yards off the enemy's port quarter Captain Hull gave the order to fire as the guns bore. In an instant the frigate belched forth a storm of iron hail that carried death and destruction into the opposing ship. The splinters were seen to fly over the British frigate like a cloud some of them reaching as high as the mizen top while the cheers of her men abruptly ceased and the shrieks and groans of the wounded were heard. The Americans had struck their first earnest blow and it was a staggering one. The Englishman felt its full weight and perhaps for the first time realized that this was no child's play.

British Vessel Shattered

Serving their guns with extraordinary rapidity and accuracy the Americans inflicted great damage on the Guerriere's hull and rigging and a round shot brought down the Englishman's mizenmast. This brought the Guerriere up into the wind and the Constitution got in two raking broadsides. The vessels came together with the Englishman's jib boom extending across the Constitution's quarter deck. Both crews prepared for boarding but the rolling of the ships prevented this. Meanwhile the sharpshooters in the tops were working with energy and several officers and many men on both sides were killed or wounded. Captain Hull stepped upon a chest to lead the board but a seaman pulled him down begging him not to so expose himself while wearing those swabs referring to his epaulettes. The ships were so close together that an American sailor after firing his pistol at an Englishman threw the weapon at his enemy hitting him in the face. Another of the Americans young John Hogan won a pension just about this time. The American flag at the main top gallantmast head was carried away by a shot and Hogan ran up the rigging and nailed the flag to the mast descending unhurt. Captain Dacres was among those wounded by the riflemen a bullet striking him in the back.

The frigates now fell apart and in dropping astern the Guerriere's bowsprit struck the Americans' tailrail, her foremast was slackened and her foremast went by the side falling across the main stays. This brought down the mainmast and the vessel fell into the trough of the sea, a complete wreck at each wave rolling the main deck guns in the water.

Captain Hull seeing that the enemy was done for drew off to repair damages so that he should not be caught by any other British vessel that might come along and returning later set Lieutenant Read to take possession. Captain Dacres reluctantly admitted that he could not continue the combat and accompanied Read to the Constitution. As he came up the side on a rope ladder Captain Hull assisted him saying Give me your hand, Dacres. I know you are hurt. And when the conquered commander offered his sword Hull cried. No I will not take the sword from one who knows so well how to use it, but I'll trouble you for that hat.

The wager on the outcome of a possible meeting between their respective flags had been made before the breaking out of hostilities.

Hull did all that was possible to relieve the suffering of the wounded Englishmen. The Guerriere was found to be in a sinking condition and was blown up.

The victory of the Constitution was the first of moment won by the Americans in the war and cheered up the young nation mightily. It was followed by many another one of the most famous being Commodore Perry's victory in the battle of Lake Erie the centenary of which is to be celebrated next summer with great ceremonies and long continued fetes.

INDUSTRIAL AND MECHANICS

HANDLE BRICKS WITH PALLET

General Appearance of Implement is That of Baggage Truck—Invented by Kansas Man

A pallet designed for a different way to handle bricks than has been in vogue in the past has been patented by a Kansas man. The general appearance of the affair is that of a baggage truck but the metal edge that runs across the lower end is so constructed that a row of bricks can be arranged on it in a tilted line, resting on their edges and end to end. The stack of bricks then can be piled up on top of these but at right angles to them the bottom row supporting the whole.

Pallet for Bricks

stack. By moving the whole stack bodily the bottom layer of bricks is turned over so that they rest on their flat sides and support the rest in that way at the same time projecting far enough outside to hold another row. Piled up in this fashion the bricks can be trundled to any part of a building operation and dumped there.

PROGRESS IN FUEL BRIQUETS

This Country Still Lags Far Behind Some of European Countries Especially Germany

Considerable progress has been made in the development of fuel briquetting in the United States during the last two years according to Edward W. Parker in a statement just made public by the United States geological survey. This country however still lags far behind some of the European countries particularly Germany in this line of industrial activity. In 1903 the production of fuel briquets in the United States was 139,661 short tons valued at $652,697, an increase of nearly 55 per cent in quantity over 1902. In 1911 the production amounted to 212,443 short tons valued at $769,721 the increase in two years amounting to 72,782 short tons or 52 per cent in quantity and to $317,024 or 70 per cent in value.

In Mr. Parker's opinion more attention should be given to this industry as on it depends to a considerable degree the utilization of some grades of fuel which are now wasted or sold at less than the actual cost of production. The reprehensible practice of shooting bluminous coal off the solid—a practice notably prevalent in the fields of non-coking coal in the Mississippi valley—produces an inordinate proportion of slack which might be made into briquets.

WORKED LIKE FOUNTAIN PEN

No Time Lost With New Paint Brush by Dipping It Into Can—Does Its Work Evenly

Most ingenious is the fountain paint brush patented by a New York man. This device will not only save time because it does not have to be continually dipped into a can of paint but it will do its work much more evenly as it will always have the same amount of paint on its bristles. It is very simple like most really ingenious things. The head and handle of the brush instead of being a solid piece of wood is hollow metal form ing a paint reservoir. A number of perforations lead to the bristles and through these the paint continually leaks keeping the brush always filled with paint and the same amount of paint. Or the brush can be made with a wooden handle and with a removable reservoir setting into the middle of it.

HOME VACUUM ICE MACHINE

German Invention of Particular Interest Because of Elimination of Dangerous Acids

A German vacuum ice machine made in sizes adapted for use in the home is of interest because it does not involve the use of sulphuric or other dangerous acids. It may be operated by hand or by a small electric motor the smallest type of machine producing from 4 to 6 pounds of ice at each operation.

The apparatus consists essentially of two communicating drums attached to a common shaft the smaller drum being provided with an outer casing having insulating walls. The ice is formed as a circular shell between the smaller drum and the outer casing with which this drum is provided. The larger drum which is hermetically sealed contains an absorbent liquid chloride of zinc containing a small proportion of water. This liquid half fills the drum the remaining space being a vacuum and serves during the life of the machine.

In the operation of making the ice, gas jets under the large drum are lighted and the drum slowly rotated, the heat driving off a part of the water in the absorbent liquid the water passing in the form of vapor into the smaller drum where it is condensed by means of cold water, which is made to flow over this drum. When the distillation of the liquid has proceeded sufficiently the flame is extinguished the smaller drum is then covered with its annular casing, and water is poured in until the space between the drum and cover is filled. A water jacket is then clamped over the larger drum and water is passed through it to cool the absorbent liquid. The apparatus is then again slowly rotated and as the absorbent liquid cools it causes evaporation and absorption of the distilled water in the smaller drum. Thus the temperature of the smaller drum is greatly lowered and the water between this drum and its casing is frozen.

Firemen Pleased With Reception

That the delegates from Park City to the Firemen's convention in this city went home pleased with the reception accorded them is evinced by the following item taken from the columns of the Record.

The Park City Volunteer Fire Department was ably represented this week at the State tournament in Eureka by J. J. Fitzgerald, W. J. Birum, Shaw, William Berry and Robert Wright. All five ones and they report the time of their lives. The Eureka people simply turned their town over to the visitors and then put in nearly all their time in showing them a good time. It was a most successful meet and the unanimous verdict is that Eureka and its people are all right. J. J. Fitzgerald was elected first vice president of the state organization.

Members of the Utah State Firemen's Association who were here last week for the annual convention declare that the program prepared for their entertainment was by far the best in the history of the organization. One prominent Salt Lake fireman said Eureka firemen and people certainly gave us a splendid reception and our convention which has just closed was a great success from every point of view. Barring the difficulty in securing hotel accommodations which was to have been expected in a mining camp the immense crowd was handled most creditably.

Sanger's Greater European Shows

A large elephant as gentle as a kitten and trained to act in the ring like our elephant Ding Dong is worth $10,000 or even more. I very much doubt if the management would take $10,000 for Ding Dong from a commercial point of view. Very few men are worth as much as such elephants.

It is a pity that the elephant can not express himself by means of articulate speech. He is certainly the most intelligent of beasts. He has a brain two and one-half times the size of that of a man and what is still more significant it is richly convoluted. He learns readily and never forgets. He is not a mere cipher of other men's thoughts and acts either but when occasion demands he can do his own thinking. In India some years ago an elephant chanced to fall into a pit. There was some lumber and odd pieces of wood at its bottom. After some deliberation he went to work and made a pile of lumber and wood then ascending to its top was able to clamber out of the pit. One of the elephants with the show known as the Queen was one day trying to push a big cage into place in the menagerie tent but the ground was soft and the harder she pushed the deeper the wheels went in to the mud. Finally she stepped back and seemed to deliberate for a moment. Then she stepped forward again, took hold of the wheels with her trunk and gave a mighty lift and at the same time a push with her head and the cage came out of the mud.

Sanger's Greater European Shows carry the largest as well as the smallest elephant in the world.

Nor has the circus department been neglected for more special feature acts will be offered than ever before. Enlivened with new and amusing antics by over two score of funny clowns.

The big show will exhibit at Eureka on Thursday Sept 4th.

Judge For Yourself

Something new is an experiment. Must be proved to be as represented. If statement of a manufacturer is not a convincing proof of merit. But the endorsement of friends is. Now supposing you had a bad back. A lame neck or aching one. Would you experiment on it? You would read if many so called cures. Endorsed by strangers from far away places.

It is different when the endorsement comes from home. I say to you local testimony. Read this case.

Mr. James Shaw, P. O. Box No. 320 Eureka, Utah, says: "Having been troubled for some time with a sore back, which caused severe back aches, I procured Doan's Kidney Pills which I saw advertised. Although I have not as yet been cured, I have received relief. I always keep them on hand and highly recommend them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Almost a Miracle

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man according to W. B. Holclaw (Laredo, Tex.) was effected years ago in his brother. He had such a dreadful cough, he writes, that all our family thought he was going into an assumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was completely cured in ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for coughs and colds with excellent results. It is quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at all druggists.

TRY THIS DESSERT RECIPE

Honey Mousse That Is Said to Be Delicious Comes to Us From Belgium

This is said to be a recipe of Mme Maeterlinck wife of the great Belgian writer

Beat thoroughly the yolks of four eggs and then beat into them gradually one cupful of strained honey. Put vessel over hot water and beat until thick stirring constantly and keeping the sides and bottom of the pan clear of adhesions.

As soon as thickened pour into an other vessel or set the saucepan containing the hot mixture into a bowl of cold water and stir until cooled somewhat.

When cold add the whites of the four eggs that have been whipped to a stiff froth then add a pint of whipped cream and lightly blend all together.

Pack in ice and salt after turning into a mold which can be closed airtight and binding a strip of greased cloth closely about the rim of the lid. Leave several hours to congeal. Wipe carefully with a cloth wrung out of warm water before unmolding. Serve with little cup cakes or ring cookies.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

An envelope pasted in the cover of the cook book is a handy device for keeping loose recipes.

When selecting soup meat choose meat which has a little fat surrounding it and a cut from the round.

Put chimneys into a kettle of cold water and gradually heat until it boils and then let as gradually cool and the chimneys will not be broken by the ordinary fluctuation of the flame of the lamp.

When beating white of egg for sponge cake when it becomes dry and light test its stiffness by turning the dish containing it upside down. If it is beaten to the proper point not a particle will become detached.

To remove ink from the furniture add a few drops of spirits of niter to a teaspoonful of water and apply just to the spot with a camel's hair brush dry off at once and wipe with a cloth dipped in cold water dry and rub with oil.

Fruit can tops have an annoying habit of sticking. Have two strips of coarse sandpaper an inch wide and eight inches long in the kitchen fold the strip of sandpaper around the can top and give it a twist. It will loosen immediately.

To save trouble after opening a bottle of glue or cement rub mutton tallow upon a sound cork before inserting it in the bottle. This prevents the cork from sticking fast only to be broken in small bits when an attempt is made to remove it.

Fruit Drink
Put a pint of red raspberries and a quart of currants into a preserving kettle and mash them thoroughly. Set the kettle over a moderate heat and let the fruit cook gradually. When the mixture begins to boil take it at once from the fire and strain it through a jelly bag into a big bowl. When it is clear and cold sweeten to taste and put against the ice to chill. This is generally served in small wine glasses.

Dandelion Cordial
Cover the flowers with boiling water and set at side of fire where they will keep very hot but not boil for five minutes. Strain off the liquid pressing the flowers very hard. Add sugar to taste and to every two gallons of liquid allow one pint of brandy. Mix well and put into bottles or casks and leave uncorked until all fermentation ceases then rack off carefully bottle cork and seal.

Fried Fish
Fish fresh from the water and fried in a spider with coarse cornmeal are the height of perfection. Use the meal as you would cracker crumbs and fry in salt pork fat tried out in the spider if you can have the fire with safety. Great care should be taken that there is no possible danger of causing brush or forest fires as so many have been set by careless or vicious campers that most of the country people would rather see beachy cattle in their fields than the careless camper or picnic party.

To Cut Thin Materials
Great difficulty is often experienced when cutting thin materials such as chiffon net and maline. If the material is planned to paper it will remain firm and the trouble will be overcome.

HER FUTILE LOVES

By ROSE L. HONEYMAN

Land of love! left again sobbed Nancy as her eyes fell no the head lines at the top of the society columns.

He had to go and marry that freckle faced Kitty after all—as if he couldn't get a pretty girl like me. It's the limit. That means no roller skating this month only moping at home. Instead don't deserve to decorate a corner seat either. Even homely Lisa got a good man the other day. She just sat around or went shopping didn't try to make a living or anything and she's no richer than I am either. But lordy she's provided for now. Jim never would have looked at Lisa if her Uncle Moses didn't have all those buried money bags. Bet not wouldn't that just beat you! The way men go after girls with prospects. Wish I had some rich uncles aunts and things. A bank book is mighty attractive. Wish I had one to carry in my hand as I saunter up Main street. It would catch fellows just as my father does flies. Never did have any luck though—only work work work. Don't deserve it either—not to have any fun. It isn't my fault I don't have any gentlemen company. I try hard enough goodness knows. That evening Oscar came I passed the ice water the smiles and the angel cake which I made myself. I told him so too but it didn't do a bit of good. He ate four pieces though. He didn't have to get sore because I smiled at Charley. It isn't my fault that Charley thinks I'm the prettiest girl in town. I learned a lesson though. So when Shorty called I was as plim as could be kept my skirt pulled over my ankles and looked straight ahead. I aired all my high school studies and told him I was going in for a career. Marrying was the least of my thought. Any women could marry I said with an expression on my face to show that I was not sitting around waiting for him to ask the privilege of paying my charge accounts ever after. One must not appear anxious about a man if she wishes to catch him. Aunt Julie always said so. I just told him right out—that none of this marrying business for me. Of course I didn't mean it but he never came back. He took up with that snippy Anna Lee who has a thimbleful of gray matter. As I didn't care Aunt Julie always said.

Keep the men in the places and they will respect you. I wonder if Aunt Julie knows for sure. Susie Bradshaw got married to a swell hard ware clerk and she said she used to hold hands with Willie. I wonder if she did? It's mighty hard to know what to do in such delicate matters. Every girl in town is changing her name to Mrs. Lysander Jones Mrs. Sam Hill and other aristocratic names. Wish I could. Everybody says I am pretty and I am too. Charley Rob and Rollo look at me so that I have to pull my hat down on the side towards them as I pass by. It is so embarrassing. Nannie Ray and Martha Little stand and goggle on the street corner with the boys for an hour. Aunt Julie told me it wasn't nice for girls to talk to boys on the street and I never do it. I look straight ahead and pass on.

One Sunday afternoon I put on my new white dress with short sleeves and a blue sash. I must have looked right cute. I guess for a fresh Alexander called to me. Where are you going sister? I didn't say anything. If I had he might have treated me to an ice cream soda. I wish I had now. I guess I'm too distant. I'll have to change my manner.

The other night when Rollo took me home from the surprise party and squeezed my hand at the gate. I jerked it away and fixed him with my glittering eye as best I could in the dark because Aunt Julie always told me it was an insult for a man to lay the tip of his finger on a girl. I wasn't going to have a man insulting me and I told him so. Gee but he needn't have gotten so mad! I didn't do anything. I am always putting my foot in it for all I try to do just as Aunt Julie says is proper. But I never have a gentleman friend while all the other girls who are not so lady like as I am have beaux to burn. It's the limit.

Guess I don't care much though when Bob is around. He is coming home from Japan soon. Quality not quantity in men as I everything else. Aunt Julie says Bob is quality all right. I always did love Bob. Hope I can nab him.

Oboe Players in Demand
Maude Powell has expressed her surprise that there are not more people learning to play the instruments of reed and brass. Somewhere in this country she says there is a native born oboe player but I have never met him. And oboe players are always in demand. As a matter of fact Miss Powell is right. Oboe players trumpet players trombonists horn players and clarinetists are always in far greater demand than players of stringed instruments. Good performers on the former instruments draw salaries ranging from $35 to $75 a week and they can always find employment all through the year.

TWO BATTING KINGS OF MAJOR BALL LEAGUES

Tyrus Cobb Champion of American League

At the half way mark of the two major league seasons Cobb and Zimmerman are leading their respective leagues in the matter of batting prowess. In the American the lead for several weeks was held by Tris Speaker the sensational outfielder of the Boston Americans. Ty Cobb however in the last week or two has batted in remarkable form. In four successive games in Philadelphia he made 14 hits in 18 times at bat against the Athletic pitchers and these hits included two home runs three three-baggers and three two baggers. As the result he has advanced to the head of Ben Johnson's swatters with an average of over 400 in the National league. Heinie Zimmerman the hard hitting third baseman of the Chicago Cubs continues his work with the stick and has a comfortable lead over all his rivals with figures of about 400. Zimmerman is also doing some great long distance clouting.

That's What the Umpire's For!
Umpire George Hildebrand of the Pacific Coast baseball league cites the following plays as the hardest on the diamond to judge. Players running out of base lines. An interference play three men on the bases scored and two strikes and three balls on the batter runner missing bag with winning run going over the plate calling back on pitchers with single umpire to be in position to give a decision with a man on first and a man on third.

Fred Clarke Plays Golf
Fred Clarke the Pirate manager who is some golfer as a side line has driven a golf ball from near the pennant pole clear over the grand stand at Pittsburgh and now professionals are coming from near and far to duplicate the feat. None has succeeded.

Satisfied With Duffy
Mrs. Havenor owner of the Milwaukee team says she is well satisfied with Hughie Duffy as manager of the Brewers and that he will be there an other season.

'Cy' Young Is a Writer
Cy Young the veteran is writing telling his views of what a youngster should have in order to make good in the big leagues.

NOTES of the DIAMOND

Umpire Brick Owens wears steel shoes while on the job. He has corns.

Infielder Mattick of Kewanee is a brother of the Chicago White Sox outfielder.

And after all Rube Marquard was the first Giant pitcher to lose three straight.

New York writers say that the present St. Louis Browns club is the worst in the world.

Tesreau is the biggest man in the big leagues. He weighs 241 pounds. He is wild but not savage.

The way Dingdong Bell is going with Newark gives a hint that he may be back in the big show next year.

New York isn't going to pledge itself on the coming election until it hears how Rube Marquard is going to vote.

Eppa Rixey's family is much disturbed because he is determined to follow the career of a professional ball player.

Rube Oldring says Amos Strunk is the fastest man in baseball today and believes he is faster than Craig of Olympic fame.

Jack Leibel once a star on the Washington team probably will be signed by the Yanks along with Tommy McMillan.

Fred Clarke is to retire as manager of the Pirates next year and Billy Murray is to succeed him. Oh yes merely a rumor.

Silk O'Loughlin is getting to be a tremendous disciplinarian. The other day in a game at Philadelphia he even banished the bat boy.

Cy Young says that all the really great ball players come from the country. For instance Cub Heinie Zimmerman of the Bronx.

Cy Barger of the Dodgers is surely a tough luck pitcher. Cy has started nine games this season and was pounded off the slab eight times.

Talk about winning streaks! In 1875 Boston had a team that didn't lose a game on the home grounds all season and only twelve on the road.

The Pirates have dug up a fast out fielder in Eddie Mensor of the Portland club of the Northwestern league paying $3,000 in cash for the prize.

Marty O'Toole the high priced twirler of the Pirates has been having his share of hard luck. He has pitched several fine games only to lose them.

Jake Stahl is not overconfident that his bunch will be able to pull through. The Woodlawn banker is too good a business man to figure anything a sure thing.

Washington fans are going to present Clyde Milan with a gold crown at the end of the season—though what the dickens he'll do with it nobody knows.

St. Louis says that Arnold Hauser of the Cardinals has shoved Mike Doolan of the Phillies off the map as the best fielding shortstop in the game today.

McGraw says you can have your Cobbs your Lajoies your Chases your Bakers and all the rest but I'll take Hans Wagner for mine as the greatest ever.

George McConnell the elongated twirler of the Highlanders has been pitching good ball this season. Steady work has made McConnell a consistent performer.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat everything your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and nurse's patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolute confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me as I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Chambers' Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application. When purchasing Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefited the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. Write at once. All we ask is that you refer with us and we know that you will. Satisfactory and guaranteed by M. D. Howell.

The Man-Eaters of M'Wembi

By Captain Fritz Duquesne

PIET DU TOIT saw the ending of the Boer war with the peace of Vereeniging but there was no peace for him under English arms. His heart was burning like the live coal of a slow match while the Union Jack dangled over his head and he longed for a wilderness where he could live to his dying day without seeing so much as the print of an English foot.

He was a farmer of Lichtenburg, a grazing district lying in the west of the Transvaal and it was easy for him to muster a little company of kinsmen and friends of like temper to trek with him out of the Transvaal a few days after the close of the war. There were twenty-six whites in his party, men, women and children and about a hundred Kaffirs, most of whom had been attached by years of service and good treatment.

Du Toit had no definite choice of a spot to settle on. He planned in a general way to spy out the land amid and beyond the swamps of Mozambique and laid his course straight over the veld to Komatipoort at the railroad crossing between the Transvaal and the Portuguese territory. For some time his trek was heard from more or less frequently but after passing the Portuguese border the news began to shrink to bare reports that the Boers had been seen by natives from time to time still pressing on to the northeast through the wilderness to the vast swamps.

They were doggedly entering the most repellent region of the dark continent, a fearful expanse of fetid pools and loathsome mire under the glare of the torrid sun, the breeding ground of the crocodile and all manner of reptiles, insects and vermin, a perpetual fount of miasma and deadly fevers but jealously held against intrusion by the fiercest and most bloodthirsty natives of Africa. All cunning and hate are lodged in these people into whose native blood has come a touch of the Arab and of the trader of Madagascar. Their normal life is war, their chief amusement is murder, the savage with most blood on his hands is a hero and may become a god when he dies.

It was presumed that the Boer trek had passed into the swamps but no native had seen the entry and no news came out and back to Lichtenburg. After several months of vain waiting and growing anxiety a search for the trail was begun with the help of native scouts.

Every path leading into the marshes was traced for many miles by the searching parties but no marks of Du Toit's trek were detected and no tidings of the missing party could be gathered from the natives. Yet every Afrikaner persisted in the belief that the party was somewhere alive or that its fate could be learned. All African history has no record of a lost Boer but after hunting vainly for many weeks the Portuguese government was on the point of giving up the attempt and it was evident that the Boers must renew the search for their countrymen or it would be abandoned.

I had gone to Lorenzo Marques to select land for the same purpose as Du Toit in a territory beyond the stretch of British dominion. The mysterious disappearance of the Boer trekkers was table-talk in the little kiosks on the street-corners. Within an hour after my arrival a Portuguese colonel who was seated at one of the tables rose to meet me as I entered a kiosk and greeted me as an old acquaintance. I sat down to share a bottle of wine with him and after a few minutes of polite inquiries and flowery talk he urged me to enlist in the hunt for the missing party.

The governor general was persuaded to make one more trial and my friend Colonel Andreas was put in command of a troop of four hundred men with myself and a number of friendly natives as scouts.

On the second day the raw men showed signs of fatigue and before the end of the third day the horses were fagged and plodded along with drooping heads. As days went on the column thinned out more and more stretching out for over a mile. Millions of insects hovered over our marching troop drinking our sweat and settling in such swarms that every man's back looked as if it were coated with flies' wings. One by one the stragglers in the rear would cry for help and drop swooning from their saddles. The horses too were falling from exhaustion. At intervals from the surrounding bush we would hear the sharp crack of a rifle or an arrow buzzing like a frightened hummingbird would reach its mark in one of our troop. It was idle for us to attempt pursuit. Before we could spur our tired horses to the cover the lurking native would slip off into the thickets.

After a month of this traveling by forced marches stopping only a few times to rest at a pool or stream, our horses were too fatigued to go further. We knew that we were not far from the border of the swamps and the colonel determined to make the entry on foot.

In order to lighten the load of the marching men to the uttermost the lances were broken up and thrown away and the troopers carried nothing in their packs but stunted rations for a week. The horses were shot and our men tramped off to the marshes. We expected that the natives with us would be able to keep us supplied with game and all who were not needed to carry our tents and cooking outfit were sent out to hunt for meat but it seemed that they were unwilling to take the risks of a hostile country for the hunters almost always returned empty handed. We were forced to cut our rations to eight ounces a day and at length to a few morsels of food for we had misjudged the distance that lay between us and the swamps.

Finally after a wearisome tramp for two weeks our famishing troop came upon a long declivity stretching for miles before us. The horizon veiled in a blue haze was blotted by a black jungle the margin of the dreadful marshes of Mozambique.

After some search we found a newly made path and followed its narrow way into the swamps.

I was leading the troop when I saw ahead a company of armed natives blocking the way. The path was so narrow that our troop could not went out a little way from camp to a clear space where I could get our bearings. As I was finding my stars I saw a party of natives coming away from our tents bearing a soldier in a hammock. I supposed that they were taking the body away to bury it. The experience was too common for me to question what they were doing. Once more after a little time the mysterious roars arose and then they stopped and the night was still.

The next night I was aroused again by the strange roars. I took my arms and half unknowing what I was doing wandered off from the camp.

In a clump of bush not far away I heard a noise which grew more distinct as I approached. It was the peculiar weird chant of the natives I crept through the bush and reached an open space where the natives were clustered. There swung in a hammock tied hand and foot was one of our sick soldiers who I could see was still living and around him danced half a hundred negroes. When the dance was over the blacks took the hammock and went off into the forest. I tried to follow but my legs trembled and I fell to the ground.

Again the mysterious roars resounded through the darkness. In my

I walked and crawled through the dorn bushes but with daylight the fires vanished. There was nothing to do but rest for I was not sure of the direction of the movement of the campers.

A few hours later gray columns of smoke rose perhaps five miles to the south. Hungry and thirsting and bleeding from thorn scratches I set out toward the smoke as fast as I could in my fatigued condition. Two hours walk brought me in view of the unmistakable Boer laager, a square of white-topped wagons around which horses were hitched. Broad shouldered bearded men heavily armed and booted sat around the fires. I cried with joy and taking my hat in one hand and my rifle in the other I waved them and staggered on as the campers rushed forward to meet me. It was a party of Boers searching for the same lost voortrekkers.

I told them in a few broken sentences my incredible story. Jan Van Vigi, the leader, listened to me intently.

Word was given to Inspan and ten minutes later oxen were dragging the groaning wagons in a long line across the country. I was placed on a horse and led the way.

When we came in sight of the camp on the distant hillside the sun was setting. Vigi decided that he would go to the camp with me and lay out a plan of action before the natives learned of the arrival of the Boer commando. We reached the tent under cover of the night and Van Vigi for the first time heard the mysterious roaring that came out of the earth.

My God! he cried, that's the roar of lions but it is unearthly!

You are right, I muttered. It came from hell.

We left the tents and made our way through the bush to the opening in the rocks. When did you say they feed a man to these devils? Jan asked. I looked at the stars and saw it was about an hour from midnight.

In an hour or perhaps two I answered.

Without a word Van Vigi turned on his heel and walked away. I followed him down hill for some distance.

What shall we do?

We shall do what we always do—an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth! Return to the tent and when you hear an owl screech twice come back to the cave.

I returned to the camp armed myself and filled my bandoleer with all the cartridges it would hold. After an impatient wait I heard the signal and made my way to the mouth of the den. As I passed through the bush a black figure rose before me.

We are here, said Van Vigi. If they come tonight the lions will have more than their fill.

An hour passed when the brushing of men through the bush caught our ears. In the opening a troop of men was carrying a body bound tight in a hammock. They halted before the cave and a moment later the torches illuminated the night and they danced around their victim. Then when the slow whirl ceased two of them raised the body and carried it toward the mouth of the pit.

A roar of horrid welcome came from the depths of the den cut by the crack of a rifle driving a bullet into the heart of the black nearest the hole. With a groan he dropped the hammock and fell dead. The natives hurled their torches to the ground and tried to escape. The bushes were riven with flashes as a merciless hail of bullets poured from the guns of the Boers. On every side dry grass and brush set on fire by the torches blazed up showing the savages against the livid background.

Frantic with the pelt of the bullets and the raging flames that leaped from the grass around their bodies they rushed in their madness toward the only break in the ring of rifle men, unmindful that it was the mouth of the pit or seeking any cover from the fire. In a moment we saw them plunging headlong into the depths of the den and heard the roaring rise to the pitch of fury as the waiting lions bounded on their prey.

When the last man fell with a screech we rushed forward and dragged the unconscious soldier from the burning grass.

The next day we returned to the den and filled the mouth with lighted bundles of bushes and dry grass to scare back the lions. When the fire burned out we entered and found the brutes suffocated by the smoke in the farthest recesses of the caves. Scattered about on the stony floor were fragments of human skeletons and rags and patches of clothing and leather and we saw the tattered felt shoes of the Boers mingled with the uniform of the Portuguese soldiers. Rings and trinkets which Van Vigi's party recognized as belonging to the voortrekkers made the horrid identifications beyond question.

There could be no possible doubt that the adventurous party of Piet Du Toit had fallen sick like our own and had been hurled one by one into the den by the fiendish natives of M'Wembi. Thanks to the coming of Van Vigi and his rescuing party in the nick of time our colonel and the remnant of his troop were saved.

charge in force and the screams of the swamp made an attack from them on the flanks and rear hard to resist. Still it was impossible to retreat and a bold front was the only resource. I leveled my rifle at the chief who headed the natives. He opened his arms bearing his shield on the left and lifting his spear at full stretch in his right hand so that his brawny glistening body was fully exposed. His action meant I am a friend.

I lowered my rifle and our troop was soon in friendly touch with the natives. The chief asked what we were seeking in the swamps and we told him that we were looking for the missing Boer trekkers. He told me that he had heard of their settlement in the country to the northwest beyond the swamps and would put us on the way to them. After resting for a few hours the chief and his followers led us across the marshes by paths which we traveled for little more than a week until we came out into an open country where the kopjes were sticking up stiffly like the horns of a young koodoo.

We had hardly reached firm land when our soldiers fell sick. The only one of the company of unshaken spirit was the priest of the troop, a little gray-headed man who was constantly praying with undimmed faith in God's help while the men groaned and raved in the delirium of fever. We made hammocks of grass and bamboo poles and natives of the country agreed to carry our sick men for a few of our cartridges.

From the day that we left the swamps a string of graves stretched behind us. One after another of the little troopers fell out of the ranks. At length we passed the ridge which was pointed out to us as the last to be crossed before reaching the well-watered country called M'Wembi where the missing party was most likely to be found.

With every passing day our troop dwindled away. Colonel Andreas had been prostrated by fever in the course of our march and was carried in a hammock to our halting place where he lay for days too sick to take any charge of the camp.

As usual I left my tent about midnight to relieve the watch which the priest was keeping. He was praying beside the flickering campfire and I stood beside him for a moment silently. Suddenly a heart-shaking sound like the roar of lions but with strange muffled tones seemed to spring out of the earth beneath us. It rose and fell in swells now loud and hoarse now low and muttering.

I took a sextant from its box and weakness I lost consciousness and when I woke it was daybreak.

I dreaded the coming of night but it came and with it the frightful roars that were maddening me.

Except for this sound there was a silence as of death on the camp. I stepped out into the moonlight and stood in the shadow of a mimosa. A moving object caught my eye. A troop of natives in single file crept into camp with the sinuous stealth of a python in the grass. The leader opened the flap of a tent and entered with three followers. A moment later the four carried out a helpless sick man and the band slid away noiselessly with its captive.

I followed at a little distance raging at heart but knowing that an alarm would excite a raid that would kill us all hopelessly. As we advanced into the forest the roars grew fiercer and clearer. Soon the natives halted. Torches were lighted and the troop danced around their victim as before. Then taking up the body they carried it to a heap of boulders from whence came the mighty roar and hurled it into the midst of the rocks.

The roaring died away and the wild laughter of the blacks rang out shrilly. In a moment the band had thinned away toward our camp leaving their smoldering torches among the rocks. Mystified I crept to the place where I had seen the body thrown. A peculiar low growl greeted me as I reached the rocks. I seized one of the torches and shook it into the drawing my revolver for instant use.

A dark blot amid the boulders disclosed an opening to my straining eyes. Holding the torch at arms' length I fell on my knees and peered into the hole. Down among the jagged rocks of a vast den white with the bones of animals I saw the green phosphorescent eyes of a pack of lions.

It was a maddening sight and I could hardly suppress a scream of horror as I ran back into the dark woods and groped through the underbrush toward the camp. I felt that we were powerless to escape these fiends and their idols the man-eaters of M'Wembi.

That night far down to the south-west I saw half a dozen fires like the sparks of a glowworm in the dark. Had some heavenly hand held out hope it could not have given me more cheer for I knew that the fires were kindled by white men as the natives in the district made none after sunset. My mind was made up. Using the lights as guiding stars I set out to reach the distant camp. All night

"AFTER THE GAME" By Walt Mason

When I cash in and this poor race is run, my chores performed and all my errands done, I know that folks who mock my efforts here will weeping bend above my lowly bier and bring arroyo parlands' worth three buels a throw and paw the ground in ecstasy of woe. And friends will wear crepe bow knots on their ties while I look down (or up) a million miles and wonder why those people never knew I was smooth. I was until my spirit flew. When I cash in I will not care a yen for all the praise that a leaved upon me then serene and silent in my handsome box I sit all not heed the laudatory talks and all the pomp and all the vain display will just be pomp and feathers thrown away. So tell me now, while I am on earth, your estimate of my surprising worth. O tell me what a looloo bird I am and fill me full of taffy and of jam.

Brief Comment.

This week's issue of the Reporter again contains ten pages additional advertising making it necessary for us to increase the size of the paper. The Reporter offers advertisers the one means of reaching the buying public of the Tintic district.

Mammoth subscribers of the telephone company are complaining about the service which they are receiving. They have no fault to find with the office force here but the lines are in such shape that it is difficult to use them and then the limited number of wires giving practically all of them party line service is anything but satisfactory.

The Reporter sincerely hopes that the committee of city councilmen will report favorably upon the establishment of a public play ground for the children of this city. The members of the school board are interested in this matter and have suggested that the city join with them in putting in a play ground either upon the school property or at some other convenient place.

Isn't it about time that Tintic had a couple of commissioners? The east end of the county has been taking the big end for many many years but we have a hunch that the system is going to be reversed. Tintic's crop of office seekers is not a large one but there are some county offices which we should have at this end of the line among them are the sheriff, county attorney and two commissioners.

A number of weeks ago a well known eastern advertising agency sent out contracts to the Utah news papers asking them to run the advertising for one of the leading tobacco firms for about one fifth of what the service is really worth. It is needless to say that a large percentage of the newspapers fell all over themselves to accept these contracts. In the Reporter office we consigned this contract to the waste paper basket and the one which followed it up offering a better rate received a like reception. As a result of our correspondence with this agency we have received an order for this advertising at a figure that is somewhere near what the service is actually worth. In our paper Utah newspapers are altogether too anxious to accept advertising and instead of having a fixed rate and sticking to it they usually let the other fellow tell them what it is worth.

Death of Young Child

Fred Sundell has just written the Reporter a letter from Grants Pass, Oregon in which he gives the sad news of the death of his youngest daughter Ruth aged 4 years. The child died in the hospital at Grants Pass on August 15th following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Sundell and family will have the sympathy of a host of local people in their bereavement.

Convention Here Next Month

On the 9th and 10th of next month the annual convention of the Utah State Federation of Labor will be in session in Eureka. The officials of the Miners Union who were instrumental in securing the convention for this city are now at work preparing a program for the proper entertainment of the seventy five delegates who will visit Eureka. The program will probably not be announced until after the meeting of the Union next Saturday night but a dance and banquet will be arranged for the evening of the 10th.

Baseball Game Next Sunday

A baseball game will be played at the Salt Lake park next Sunday. The Eureka team will be pitted against the famous Ute Indian aggregation of ball tossers. The game is to be called at 2 p. m. and the admission to any part of the grounds or the grand stand will be but 25 cents. Members of the local team have been out for practice during the past few days and will doubt put up a good exhibition.

Office May Be Changed From Third to Second Class

One of the postoffice inspectors who was in Eureka a few days ago is of the opinion that the local office is now doing a sufficient amount of business to warrant a change from the third to second class. This matter will doubt be taken up by the postal authorities at Washington and the business of the office will be carefully checked.

Fire Destroys House and Furniture

The residence and practically all of the furniture belonging to the family of Stephen Miner at Silver City was destroyed by fire shortly after 10 o'clock on Monday evening. Articles of value were preserved but the family retired for the night and it is thought that this caused the blaze. Neighbors were the first to discover the fire and at the time the alarm was given the members of the Miner family were sound asleep. Within ten minutes after they were aroused the roof fell in and they no doubt considered their selves fortunate in escaping with so serious injury. Only a few articles of clothing and one or two pieces of furniture were saved. The loss will amount to $50 with $400 insurance. S. B. Freely of the Tintic Security & Agency Co. carried the insurance and on the following day made a trip to Silver City for the purpose of adjusting the loss.

H. D. Goldsborough of Nephi and a present deputy sheriff is being groomed by the Reputarians of that city for the office of sheriff.

County Clerk Vickers has served two terms and will probably give way to a new man as there seems to be some little opposition to third term candidates.

There has been a good deal of political talk in Tintic during the past few days and as the dates upon which the nominating conventions approach candidates are becoming more numerous. Tintic will have a number of candidates for county offices. Among the Republicans who are willing to get into the game are Lawrence Miner for representative, Joseph H. McKnight for county attorney and Preston Sullivan for sheriff. Mr. Sullivan will be a candidate only in the event of Gus J. Harwood refusing to make the race for reelection. Among the Democrats who have been mentioned for county offices are Joseph Phillips for representative, George M. Hayes for sheriff and George A. Udall for county attorney.

Judge Greenwood will not have any serious opposition as most of the Democrats of the Fifth Judicial District are willing to allow him to hang on to the judgeship for another term. Edward Pike and B. N. C. Stott both of this city have been mentioned as possible candidates for the office of district attorney upon the same ticket but it is questionable whether either of them will accept the nomination. When it comes to candidates for the office of district judge the Republicans have quite a bundle. They are George B. Greenwood of Milford, J. A. Melville of Fillmore, A. O. Murdoch of Beaver and E. H. Ryan the present district attorney.

It now looks as though John R. Edgehill of Nephi will have little or no trouble in connecting up with the nomination for the office of State Senator upon the Republican ticket. Mr. Edgehill is so far as known the only candidate for this office in Juu county. He will however have an opponent for the nomination in the person of Orville Thompson of Millard county. Thompson has been in the state legislature for the past four years and in the last session was a leader in the fight for prohibition measures. Edgehill has a large following in Tintic among the Republicans and is well known from one end of the state to the other. His business as a wool buyer taxing him into all

The Democrats declare that George M. Hayes is sure going to be the next sheriff of this county.

Mammoth Democrats will have a candidate for the legisture in the person of Dr. Steele Bailey Jr. Local followers of Democracy are said to favor the nomination of Joseph Phillips.

J. A. Edwards of Salt Lake who is a candidate for the office of secretary of state upon the Republican ticket was in town yesterday interviewing local members of that party. Mr. Edwards served as state auditor for a couple of years and is quite well known throughout the state.

Our Silver City correspondent is quite a humorist. He has sent in the following:

The Democrats will meet at the hospital Monday - Mammoth Recorder. We expect to hear of them at the undertaking establishment soon but interment will not take place until November when the Socialists will show their heads.

Political Dope.

At the Democratic primary which was held at the city hall in this city on Monday evening the following delegates were elected to attend both the state and judicial conventions: Edward Pike, B. N. C. Stott, L. O. Doty, P. J. Fennell, H. F. Gear, W. T. Evans, George Hayes and J. H. McCarver. The meeting was presided over by L. O. Doty and L. L. Sullivan acted as secretary. The members of the precinct committee also held a meeting and elected P. J. Fennell as treasurer.

The Democrats of Silver City held a meeting last Saturday night at which time they elected N. B. Dahle as a delegate to the state and judicial conventions. D. C. Wheeler was chosen as chairman of the precinct committee with C. G. Massion as secretary.

The Republicans of Eureka held a primary at the city hall on Tuesday evening at which time delegates were chosen to attend the state senatorial and judicial conventions all of which are to be held during the coming week. In the absence of the precinct chairman J. D. Stack the meeting was called to order by Herbert Hopes the county chairman and the call was read by D. A. Lindsay precinct secretary. The first set of delegates elected was for the senatorial convention. After their election a motion was carried requesting them to work for the nomination of John R. Edgehill of Nephi to the office of state senator. The delegates to the other conventions will go unstructured.

The delegates to the various conventions are as follows: Senatorial - Joseph McKnight, Herbert Hopes, Gus Harwood, C. F. Huihs, L. A. Miner and William Vincent. Judicial - James Morgan, John Allen, J. O. Sullivan, Perry Fuller, William Homer and Joseph McKnight. State - J. O. Sullivan, Joseph McKnight, Gus Harwood, Herbert Hopes, D. A. Lindsay and William Homer.

At Mammoth on Monday evening the Democrats held their primary and elected Dr. Steele Bailey Jr., Alfred Moyle, Thomas Tregoning and James Swenson as delegates to the state and judicial conventions. The alternates are J. C. Kirkendall, Patrick Henry, Dr. Harveille and John Condon.

Andrew Baxter will represent the Republicans of Silver City at the senatorial convention and John S. Smith is the delegate chosen to attend both the judicial and state conventions. These delegates were elected at a primary which was held on Wednesday evening.

Mammoth Republicans held a primary on Saturday evening for the election of delegates to the three conventions which are to be held next week. Grant Simons was chairman of the meeting and George Jones secretary. The delegates to the senatorial convention are L. E. D. L. and Harry Elmer were elected for both the state and judicial conventions.

Mill For Knight Mines of Tintic.

At last the Tintic district is to have a custom mill for the treatment of its ores. The Reporter having secured the information regarding this project, Jesse Knight who has already performed such splendid work in the development of this section is now working out the plans for the construction of a mill for the treatment of the low grade ores from the Knight mines and it is understood that he intends to eventually make a plant large enough so that it can be used in reduction of ore from various Tintic properties.

Early in July of the present year J. C. Christensen a well known metallurgist visited Tintic and sampled the Knight mines securing all the information possible regarding the types of low grade ore. Together with his associates he is interested in a new milling process which according to reports that have been made during the past two months can be used in the reduction of Tintic siliceous ores. Mr. Knight who has been watching the tests closely, is so thoroughly pleased with the new process of milling that he has consented to erect a plant with a daily capacity of about 100 tons. The cost of such a plant will be approximately $35,000 and it is proposed to gradually increase the size of the mill until it has a capacity of not less than 500 tons.

The new mill will no doubt be located at Silver City where the water supply which was secured for the Tintic smelter can be utilized.

Under this new process of milling carrying values of $6 or over to $10 can be mined and treated at a profit and there is scarcely a mine in Tintic that does not contain large quantities of low grade milling ore. The Beck Tunnel property has thousands of tons of milling ore there in the south end of the Colorado to say nothing of the Iron Blossom where milling ore is exposed upon almost every level. The dump at the Black Jack mine contains from 40,000 to 50,000 tons of ore which is worth from $8 to $10 per ton and there can be no question but what there is ample low grade ore in this section to keep several mills in continuous operation for years.

At the local office of the Knight companies the Reporter learns that Mr. Christensen is already at work upon the plans for the new mill and that the actual construction of the plant is to be taken up at an early date.

WHEREIN A DECISION IS REVERSED.

Heavy Output From Opohongo

The Opohongo mine closed the month of August with twenty four carloads to its credit notwithstanding the fact that there was a couple of days shut down during that period. Supt. Samuel Cox says that he will probably maintain the present output of six carloads of ore each week owing to the fact that copper is bringing a good figure. Upon the 600, 500 and 400 levels of the mine in fact almost anywhere above the 700 there is an abundance of ore and no difficulty is being experienced in sending out a car each day. Last month's output included a few cars of what is termed "second class" but the bulk of the output was practically the same grade of ore that has been finding its way from this mine for several months and which has resulted in the payment of some dividends. The first class ore carries from 7 to 12 per cent copper, 12 to 15 ounces in silver and about $2 in gold while the second class goes about the same in gold and silver with from 3 to 4 per cent copper.

Ore shipments, stock quotations and additional mining news on page 3.

Nearing Ore in Beck Tunnel Raise

For several months the Beck Tunnel people have been working to make a connection between the Humbug ore chute and the 175 foot level from the mine's main shaft and a report from the property this morning indicates that the ore will be opened within the next day or two. A drift was driven from the shaft to a point almost directly under the ore body and now work is being prosecuted in a raise which is fully 75 feet above the drift. The top of the raise being in the vein matter with everything to indicate that the shipping ore will be located at once. There is considerable significance attached to the work in this raise owing to the fact that it will tap the ore body some distance further to the south than the point at which the ore is now being mined. Eventually it is expected that the ore which is being mined from the Humbug ore chute and which is now taken out by way of an incline drift will be handled through this raise.

Lead Bringing Good Price

With lead selling at $18.50 per hundred the producers of the state of Utah on the production of last year will profit by $500,000 on the rise from $4.50. Utah in 1911 produced 136,496 750 pounds of lead valued at $6,142,324.

Will Use Electric Power at Victoria

Manager J. O. Sullivan has about decided upon the installation of electrical equipment for the operation of the hoisting machinery at the Victoria mining company's property and during the past few days he has been in Ironton and Salt Lake for the purpose of getting a line on the cost of such a change. The present equipment of the Victoria includes a splendid engine and a couple of boilers which will soon have to be replaced by new ones if the mine is to continue using steam power. It is up to the management to install new boilers or switch over to electricity as a motive power. A pretty thorough investigation which has already been made leads to the belief that electricity will best meet the mine's requirement.

Eagle Raise Connects With Ore

On Wednesday night the raise started some time ago from the 1300 level of the Eagle & Blue Bell mine connected up with the main ore workings 113 feet above. It required just 17 days to drive that distance and considering the size of the raise it was a record breaking piece of work. Within the next week or ten days practically all of the ore which is being mined upon the lower levels of the Eagle will be lowered by way of this raise to the 1300 level and then brought to the surface through the main working shaft. At the present time there is considerable lost motion in the handling of the output from the mine but the connection between the 1350 level and the main ore body will put the property in shape for rapid and economical mining. Supt. William Owens now has a bunch of men at work putting in the steel chutes, for ore and waste in this raise. Just at present an interesting piece of development work is under way upon the 1350 level of the Eagle and it will not be at all surprising if a new ore body is located.

Contractors are now framing the timbers for the large ore house which will undoubtedly be ready for use by the last of the present month.

Lessees at Work in Victor

At the Victor mine at Mammoth two blocks of ground are now being developed under the leasing system and some good copper ore is being mined. Smith and Ives just recently went to work on the 300 level and Alfred Moyle and Thomas Tregoning who have for some time been operating in the old Boss Tweed section of the Victor ground are about ready to send out a carload of nice copper ore. This ore will carry from 12 to 13 per cent copper with a small amount of silver and from present indications they will be able to ship quite regularly a very nice bunch of the ore being exposed.

Zinc Worth $7.20 Per 100 Pounds

There seems to be nothing new regarding the adjustment of the freight rate between the Tintic district and the zinc smelters which are located in the Kansas gas belt and the mines which have already signed up zinc contracts are still awaiting the order to resume the shipment of this character of ore. In the mean time the price of zinc is advancing the present price of $7.20 per 100 pounds being at least 30 cents better than the quotation of a few weeks ago when coal operators were successful in getting a reduction in the freight rate.

The May Day people have been mining large quantities of zinc for over a month and now have several carloads ready for the market. This ore is piled up in the bins and in the underground workings and a heavy output will be in order when once the freight rate is definitely settled.

At the Uncle Sam mine there is also a nice showing of zinc ore in the upper workings of the property which are reached from the main tunnel.

Following Cross Break to West

The north drift upon the 600 level of the Black Jack is now cutting through a section of country which is badly broken up and well mineralized and while the management is of the opinion that the big cross break has thrown the ore body farther to the west work will be continued in a northerly direction for the present. A drift has however been started toward the west its course being along the cross break. Considerable attention is now being paid to development work in the old Star section of the Black Jack with favorable indications for getting into some good ore.

Will Hold Low Grade For Mill.

Now that a mill is assured for the Knight mines much of the lower grade ore which in the past it has been customary to send to the smelters will be held in reserve. It is understood here that the output from the Iron Blossom mine will be immediately reduced possibly 40 per cent and that the same program will be carried out at some of the other Knight properties. In the shipment of the lower grade ore the railroad and smelter charges cut in pretty deep and leave only a moderate profit and Mr. Knight consequently feels that it will pay him to hold this ore until such a time as his new mill is completed which should be within six months.

The reduction in the tonnage from the Iron Blossom and other Knight mines will result in the laying off of some men but Frank Birch the assistant manager of these mines states that the extensive campaign of development work which is now being mapped out for these properties will make it possible for the mines to furnish employment for about the usual number.

At the Utah Cons.

At the Utah Cons property the raise from the main tunnel level has been discontinued but work is going along as usual in the winze which has now reached a depth of about 70 feet. If indications count for anything this winze will soon be into the ore the ground for almost the entire distance being well mineralized and showing iron, manganese, quartz and some copper.

Two Annual Meetings Held

Shareholders of the Plutus and Black Jack companies met at Provo in annual session on Tuesday electing officers and transacting some other routine business. The Plutus property is now idle the lessees who went to work there recently having forfeited their lease. At the Black Jack a very interesting campaign of development is under way and in addition to this there has been some leasing operations there during the past year. Then some development work is also being done through this mine in the half of the Dragon Cons.

The officers elected were as follows: Black Jack—Jesse Knight president, H. G. McMillan, vice president, J. William Knight, F. D. Kimball and W. Lester Mangum, additional directors. Mr. Mangum is also secretary and treasurer. Plutus—Jesse Knight, president, Jacob Evans, vice president, David Evans, director and general manager, W. Lester Mangum, secretary and treasurer, J. William Knight and George Havercamp, additional directors.

Extensive Prospecting on 2300

Extensive prospecting operations are still in progress on the 2300 level of the Grand Central at Mammoth and while samples taken from the various drifts show some good values ore of a shipping grade has not yet been encountered. The main drift on the 2300 level was driven about 15 or 20 degrees south of east and after cutting the ledge drifts were pushed out toward the north and south and only a few days ago cross cuts were also started both east and west. One of these drifts is now nearing the hanging wall at which point the largest ore body was located on the level above. Assistant Manager W. D. Loose feels sure that within a very short time the Grand Central will be shipping from its deepest level—the 2300. The present output from the Grand Central is about 14 carloads each week the ore bringing between $16 and $20 per ton.

Sinking at Wanless Property.

Frank Rozelle states that the shaft at the Wanless property in the North Tintic District is now down to a depth of about 140 feet and that the sinking will be continued until the 250 level is reached. Those who are familiar with this ground believe that a depth of 250 feet will put the workings in line for the ore although some drifting will have to be done in order to reach the objective point for the present campaign of development.

Will Use Big Steam Shovel

The steam shovel for use in filling in the big bridges on the limit branch of the Rio Grande Ry. arrived at Goshen during the week and will be on the job within the next couple of days. It is a 35 ton shovel and will be used in the filling in of the big bridges and getting even the ground lines for this big project. The present plans of the Rio Grande officials call for the filling in of all the big bridges not only the large ones but smaller ones of thirty or forty feet in length. It is understood that the top will be ripped out of one or two of the big bridges, then open cuts and ditches away with the timbers which are now in

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protégé, falls in love with her.

And by what right did you take that one? haughtily demanded the outraged young woman looking at him beneath level brows while the color slowly receded from her face. She had never been kissed by a man other than a blood relation in her life—remember suspicious reader that she was from Philadelphia—and she resented this sudden and unauthorised caress with every atom and instinct of her still somewhat conventional being.

But aren't you half way engaged to me? he pleaded in justification seeing the unwonted seriousness with which she had received his impudent advance. Didn't you agree to give me a chance?

I did say that I liked you very much, she admitted, no man better and that I thought that you might—

Well then— he began.

But she would not be interrupted.

I did not mean that you should enjoy all the privileges of a conquest before you had won me. I will thank you not to do that again, sir.

It seems to have had a very different effect upon you than it does upon me, replied the man coolly. I love you before but now since I have kissed you I worship you.

It hasn't affected me that way, she retorted. I am glad to see you still frowning and indignant. Not at all and—

Forgive me, Enid pleaded, the other. I just couldn't help it. You were so beautiful I had to take the chance. You are not accustomed to our ways.

Is this your habit in your love affairs? asked the girl swiftly and not without a spice of feminine malice.

I never had any love affair before, she replied with a ready masculine mendacity, at least none worth mentioning. But you see this is the way we have gained what we have by demanding every inch that nature offers and then claiming the all. That's the way we play the game out here and that's the way we win.

But I have not yet learned to play the game as you call it by any such rules, returned the young woman determinedly, and it is not the way to win me if I am the stake.

What is the way? asked the man anxiously. Show me and I'll take it no matter what its difficulty.

Ah for me to point out the way would be to play traitor to myself, she answered, relenting and relaxing a little before his devoted wooing. You must find it without assistance. I can only tell you one thing.

And what is that?

You do not advance toward the goal by such actions as those of a moment since.

Look here, said the other suddenly. I am not ashamed of what I did and I am not going to pretend that I am either.

You ought to be severely. Well, maybe so, but I'm not. I couldn't help it any more than I could help loving you the minute I saw you. Put yourself in my place.

But I am not in your place and I can't put myself there. I do not wish to. If it be true as you say that you have grown to care so much for me and so quickly—

If it be true? came the sharp interruption as the man bent toward her fairly devouring her with his bold ardent gaze.

Well, since it is true, she admitted under the compulsion of his protest. That fact is the only possible excuse for your action.

"You find some justification for me then?"

No, only a possibility, but whether it be true or not I do not feel that way—yet.

There was a saving grace in that last word which gave him a little heart. He would have spoken but she suffered no interruption saying—

I have been wooed before but—

True, unless the human race has become suddenly blind, he said softly under his breath.

But never in such ungente ways.

"I suppose you have never run up against a real red blooded man like me before."

If red blooded be evidenced mainly by lack of self control, perhaps I have not. Yet there are men that I have met that would not need to apologise for their qualities even to you, Mr. James Armstrong.

Don't say that. Evidently I make but poor progress in my wooing. Never have I met with a woman quite like you—and in that indeed lay some of her charm and she might have repelled in exactly the same language and with exactly the same meaning to him—I am no longer a boy. I must be fifteen years older than you are for I am thirty-five.

The difference between their years was not quite so great as he declared but womanlike the girl let the statement pass unchallenged.

And I wouldn't insult your intelligence by saying you are the only woman that I have ever made love to but there is a vast difference between making love to a woman and loving one. I have just found that out for the first time. I marvel at the past and I am ashamed of it but I thank God that I have been saved for this opportunity. I want to win you and I am going to do it too. In many things I don't match up with the people with whom you train. I was born out here and I've made myself there are things that have happened in the making that I am not especially proud of and I am not at all satisfied with the results, especially since I have met you. The better I know you the less pleased I am with Jim Armstrong, but there are possibilities in me. I rather believe and with your inspiration, God—the man hung out his hand with a fine gesture of determination. They say that the east and west don't naturally mingle but it's a lie, you and I can beat the world.

The woman thrilled to his gallant wooing. Any woman would have done so, some of them would have lost their heads but Enid Maitland was an exceedingly cool young person for she was not quite swept off her feet and did not quite lose her balance.

I like to hear you say things like that, she answered. Nobody quite like you has ever made love to me and certainly not in your way and that's the reason I have given you a half way promise to think about it. I was sorry that you could not be with us on this adventure but now I am rather glad especially if the even temper of my way is to be interrupted by anything like the outburst of a few minutes since.

I am glad too, admitted the man. For I declare I couldn't help it. If I have to be with you either you have got to be mine or else you would have to decide that it could never be and then I'd go off and fight it out.

Leave me to myself, said the girl earnestly for a little while. It's best so. I would not take the finest noblest man on earth—

And I am not that.

Unless I loved him. There is something very attractive about your personality. I don't know in my heart whether it is that or—

Good, said the man as she hesitated. That's enough. He gathered up the reins and whirled his horse suddenly in the road. I am going back. I'll wait for your return to Denver and then—

That's best, answered the girl. She stretched out her hand to him leaning backward. If he had been a different kind of a man he would have kissed it as it was he took it in his own hand and almost crushed it with a fierce grip.

Well, shake on that little girl, he said and then without a backward glance he put spurs to his horse and galloped furiously down the road.

No, she decided then and there she did not love him not yet. Whether she ever would she could not tell. And yet she was half bound to him. The recollection of his kiss was not altogether a pleasant memory. He had not done himself any good by that bold assault upon her modesty that reckless attempt to rifle the treasure of her lips. No man had ever really touched her heart although many had engaged her interest. Her experience therefore was not definitive or conclusive. If he had truly loved James Armstrong in spite of all that she might have said she would have thrilled to the remembrance of that wild caress. The chances therefore were somewhat heavily against him that morning as he rode down the trail alone.

His experiences in love affairs were much greater than hers. She was by no means the first woman he had kissed—remember suspicious reader that he was not from Philadelphia—hers were not the first ears into which he had poured passionate protestations. He was neither better nor worse than most men perhaps, he fairly enough represented the average but surely fate had something better in store for such a superb woman. A girl of such attainments and such infinite possibilities she must mate higher than with the average man. Perhaps there was a subconsciousness of this in her mind as she silently waited to be overtaken by the rest of the party.

There were curious glances and strange speculations in that little company as they saw her sitting her horse alone. A few moments before James Armstrong had passed them at a gallop, he had waved his hand as he dashed by and had smiled at them, hope giving him a certain assurance although his confidence was scarcely warranted by the facts.

His demeanor was not in consonance with Enid's somewhat grave and somewhat troubled present aspect. She threw off her preoccupation instantly and easily however and joined readily enough in the merry conversation of the way.

Mr. Robert Maitland as Armstrong has said had known him from a boy. There were things in his career of which Maitland did not and could not approve but they were of the past he reflected and Armstrong was after all a pretty good sort. Mr. Maitland's standards were not at all those of his Philadelphia brother but they were very high. His experiences of men had been different. He thought that Armstrong having certainly by this time reached years of discretion could be safely entrusted with the precious treasure of the young girl who had been committed to his care and for whom his affection grew as his knowledge of and acquaintance with her increased.

As for Mrs. Maitland and the two girls and the youngster they were Armstrong's devoted friends. They knew nothing about his past indeed there were things in it of which Maitland himself was ignorant and which had been known to him might have caused him to withhold even his tentative acquiescence in the possibilities.

Most of these things were known to old Kirkby who with mastery skill amusing nonchalance and amazing profanity albeit most of it under his breath lest he shock the ladies trooped along the four nervous excited bronchos that drew the big supply wagon. Kirkby was Maitland's oldest and most valued friend. He had been the latter's deputy sheriff. He had been a cowboy and a lumberman, a mighty hunter and a successful miner, and now although he had acquired a reasonable competence and had a nice little wife and a pleasant home in the mountain village at the entrance to the canon he drove stage for pleasure rather than for profit. He had given over his daily twenty-five mile jaunt from Morrison to Troutdale to other hands for a short space that he might spend a little time with his old friend and the family who were all so easily attached to him on this outing.

Enid Maitland a girl of a kind that Kirkby had never seen before had won the old man's heart during the weeks spent on the Maitland ranch. He had grown fond of her and he did not think that Mr. James Armstrong merited that which he evidently so overwhelmingly desired. Kirkby was well along in years but he was quite capable of playing a man's game for all that and he intended to play it in this instance.

Nobody scanned Enid Maitland's face more closely than he sitting humped up on the front seat of the wagon one foot on the high break his head sunk almost to the level of his knee his long whip in his hand his keen and somewhat fierce brown eyes taking in every detail of what was going on about him. Indeed there was but little that came before him that old Kirkby did not see.

CHAPTER III

The Story and the Letters

Imagine if you please the forest primeval, yes the murmuring pines and the hemlocks of the poem as well by the side of a rapidly rushing mountain torrent fed by the eternal snows of the lofty peaks of the great range. A level stretch of grassy land where a mountain brook joined the creek was dotted with clumps of pines and great boulders rolled down from the everlasting hills—half an acre of open clearing. On the opposite side of the brook the canon wall rose almost sheer for perhaps five hundred feet ending in jagged needle-edged pinnacles of rock sharp picturesque and beautiful. A thousand feet above ran the timber line and four thousand feet above that the crest of the great east peak in the main range.

The white tents of the little encampment which had gleamed so brightly in the clear air and radiant sunshine of Colorado now stood dim and ghost like in the red reflection of a huge campfire. It was the evening of the first day in the wilderness.

For two days since leaving the wagon the Maitland party with its long train of burros heavily packed its horsemen and the steady plodders on foot had advanced into unexplored and almost inaccessible retreats of the mountains—into the primitive in deed. In this delightful spot they had pitched their tents and the permanent camp had been made. Wood was abundant the water at hand was as cold as ice as clear as crystal and as soft as milk. There was pasture for the horses and burros on the other side of the mountain brook. The whole place was a little amphitheater which humanity occupied perhaps the first time since creation.

Unpacking the burros setting up the tents making the camp building the fire had used up the late remainder of the day which was theirs when they had arrived. Opportunity would come tomorrow to explore the country to climb the range to try the stream that tumbled down a succession of waterfalls to the right of the camp and roared and rushed merrily around its feet until swelled by the volume of the brook it lost itself in tree-clad depths far beneath. Tonight rest after labor tomorrow play after rest.

The evening meal was over. Enid could not help think with what corn and contempt her father would have regarded the menu how his gorge would have risen—hers too for that matter—had it been placed before him on the old colonial mahogany of the dining room in Philadelphia. But up there in the wilds she had eaten the coarse homely fare with the zest and relish of the most seasoned ranger of the hills. Anxious to be of service she had burned her hands and smoked her hair and scorched her face by usurping the functions of the young ranchman who had been brought along as cook and had actually fried the bacon herself! Imagine a goddess with a frying pan. The black thick coffee and the condensed milk drunk from the granite ware cup had a more delicious aroma and a more delightful taste than the finest Mocha and Java in the daintiest porcelain of France. Optimum condimentum. The girl was frankly ravenously hungry the air the altitude the exertion the excitement made her able to eat any thing and enjoy it.

She was gloriously beautiful too even her brief experience in the west had brought back the missing roses to her cheek and had banished the bistre circles from beneath her eyes. Robert Maitland lazily reclining propped up against a boulder his feet to the fire smoking an old pipe that would have given his brother the horrors looked with approving complacency upon her confident and satisfied that his prescription was working well. Nor was he the only one who looked at her that way. Marion and Emma his two daughters worshipped their handsome Philadelphia cousin and they sat one on either side of her on the great log lying between the tents and the fire. Even Bob Junior condescended to give her approving glances. The whole camp was at her feet. Mrs. Maitland had been greatly taken by her young niece. Kirkby made no secret of his devotion. Arthur Bradshaw and Henry Phillips each a tenderfoot of the extremist character friends of business connections in the east who were spending their vacation with Maitland shared in the general devotion to say nothing of George the cook and Pete the packer and horse wrangler.

Phillips who was an old acquaintance of Enid's had tried his luck with her back east and had sense enough to accept as final his failure. Bradshaw was a solemn young man with out that keen sense of humor which was characteristic of the west. The others were suitably dressed for adventure for Bradshaw's idea of an appropriate costume was distinguished chiefly by long green felt puttees which swathed his huge calves and excited curious inquiry and ribald comment from the surprised denizens of each mountain hamlet through which they had passed to all of which Bradshaw remained serenely oblivious. The young man who does enter espeyou shoved the hellum over to the left. Sta board an port was the terms as I recollects em. It's jest the same with burros you takes em by the tiller that's by the tall git a good tight twist on it an ef you want him to head to the right slew his stern sheets around to the left an you got to be keeful you don't git no kick back w ich ef it lands on you is worse in the ree-coil of a mule.

Arthur faithfully followed directions narrowly escaping the outraged brute's small but sharp pointed bees on occasion. His efforts not being productive of much success finally in his despair he resorted to brute strength. He would pick the little animal up bodily pack and all—he was a man of powerful physique—and swing him around until his head pointed in the right direction then with a prayer that the burro would keep it there for a few rods anyway he would set him down and start him all over again. The process oft repeated became monotonous after awhile. Arthur was a slow thinking man deliberate in action. He stood it as long as he possibly could. Kirkby who rode one horse and led two others and therefore was exempt from burro driving observed him with great interest. He and Bradshaw had strayed way behind the rest of the party.

At last Arthur's resistance patience and plety strained to the breaking point gave way suddenly. Primitive instincts rose to the surface and overwhelmed him like a flood. He deliberately sat down on a fallen tree by the side of a trail the burro bailing obediently turned and faced him with hanging head apparently conscious that he merited the disapprobation that was being heaped upon him for from the desperate tenderfoot there burst forth so amazing so fluent so comprehensive a torrent of assorted profanity that even the old past master in obprobrium was astonished and bewildered. Where did Bradshaw milder and inoffensive get it? His proficiency would have appalled his rector and amazed his fellow vestrymen. Not the Jackdaw of Rheims himself was so cursed as that little burro. Kirkby sat on his horse in fits of silent laughter until the tears ran down his cheek the only outward and visible expression of his mirth.

Arthur only stopped when he had thoroughly emptied himself possibly of an accumulation of years of repression.

Wall said Kirkby, you sure do overmatch any one I ever heard of. It comes to cursin' w y you could gimme cards an spades an beat me an I was thought to have some git that a way in the old days.

I didn't begin to exhaust myself, answered Bradshaw shortly and what I did say didn't equal the situation. I'm going home.

I wouldn't do that, urged the old man. Here you take the horses an I'll tackle the burro.

Gladly said Arthur. I would rather ride an elephant and drive a herd of them than waste another minute on this infernal little mule.

The story was too good to keep and around the camp fire that night Kirkby drew it forth. There was a freedom and easiness of intercourse in the camp which was natural enough. Cook teamster driver host guest, men women children and I had almost said burros stood on the same level. They all ate and lived together. The higher up the mountain range you go the deeper into the wilderness you plunge the further away from the conventional you draw the more homogeneous becomes society and the less obvious are the irrational and unscientific distinctions of the lowlands. The guinea stamp fades and the man and the woman are pure gold or base metal inherently and not by any artificial standard.

George the cattle man who cooked and Pete the horse wrangler who assisted Kirkby in looking after the stock enjoyed the episode uproariously and would fain have had the exact language repeated to them but here Robert Maitland demurred much to Arthur's relief for he was thoroughly humiliated by the whole performance. It was very pleasant lounging around the camp fire and one good story easily led to another.

It was in these very mountains said Robert Maitland at last when his turn came that there happened one of the strangest and most terrible adventures that I ever heard of. I have pretty much forgotten the lay of the land but I think it wasn't very far from here that there is one of the most stupendous canyons through the range nobody ever goes there. I don't suppose anybody has ever been there since. It must have been at least five years ago that it all happened.

There are people who do not know how to waste their time alone and hence become the scourge of busy people.—De Bonald

It Was In These Very Mountains, Said Robert Maitland

cially into this tale was a vestryman of the church in his home in the suburbs of Philadelphia. His piety had been put to a severe strain in the mountains.

That day everybody had to work on the trail—everybody wanted to for that matter. The hardest labor came in the driving of the burros. Unfortunately there was no good and trained leader among them through an unavoidable mistake and the campers had great difficulty in keeping the burros on the trail. To Arthur Bradshaw had been allotted the most obstinate cross grained and determined of the unruly band and old Kirkby and George paid particular attention to instructing him in the gentle art of manipulating him over the rocky mountain trail.

Wall said Kirkby with his somewhat languid drawing nasal voice that there burros like a ship wch I often seed em wen I was a kid down east afore I come out to God's country. Nature has pervided em with a hind of a hellum. I remember ef you wanted the boat to go to the right

Big Money Needed
Consumption might be wiped out if enough millions or billions are donated for the experts to use in accordance with their ideas. Perhaps some of the great cities of the world are rich enough to care for and try to cure the consumptives from every small city town or hamlet accessible by rail road or steamboat. What is most needed costs money and that what is plenty of good food and warm clothing and maybe it is worth while to see that the sufferers have what they need to help most to bring about cure

For Union Workers

Important Happenings in Industrial Circles in This Country and Europe

Conditions are not yet normal at Duluth Minn. owing to the fact that there were so many boats waiting to be unloaded when the strike breakers were imported that they have not been able to catch up with the work. It is said that the new men have refused to handle 8000 barrels of cement in the hold of the steamship Lakewood which has been in the harbor more than a week. The men also refuse to work at night. A carload of strike breakers about seventy in number were shipped out of Duluth their pass reading Destination. Thus each man was able to go as far as he wished so long as he went away from Duluth.

President Taft every United States senator and member of the house of representatives has received a letter from the Commercial Telegraphers International union notifying them of the possibility of trouble in the telegraph world. The object of the letter is to encourage the agitation of the government ownership of the telegraphs and telephones. Secretary Wesley Russell signed the letters. The telegraphers began agitating for government ownership of telegraphs as far back as 1865. Copies of the Telegrapher published that year contain the progress of the movement.

From a report just issued by Secretary Frank Morrison of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor it appears that during the first seven months of the current fiscal year members of the federal labor and trades unions which have no international organization but are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor have received in strike benefits on the basis of four dollars a week a man an aggregate of $50,050.

Three decisions have recently been made by the Illinois state supreme court which are important to the organized labor movement. The court sustained the constitutionality of the woman's ten hour employment act as revised by the legislature in 1911, also the constitutionality of the chauffeurs license automobile act and the right of labor unions to call strikes or use any lawful means in maintaining and furthering their organizations.

Non union miners are being sent into the Paint Creek and Cabin Creek district in West Virginia where the strike troubles of the past few weeks have kept the entire state militia on guard and further trouble is expected. Governor Glasscock tried to prevent the operators from this step but failed. Guards were sent along with the non union men.

Twelve members of the St. Paul bars union went to St. Joseph's orphan asylum on a recent Sunday and cut the hair of 88 orphan boys there free of charge making this sacrifice of their holiday for the good of the union and organized labor in general.

According to the latest returns received by the statistical bureau of the state department of labor at the end of March there were 2,454 labor organizations in New York state with a total membership of 497,665. This is a decrease of 6,649 or a little more than one per cent since September 30, 1911.

Because 40 men employed in the Oakhill colliery at Pottsville Pa. did not wear union made buttons on their overalls and jumpers 600 men and boys in the mine went on strike.

By the action of the senate in passing the Borah bill a comprehensive investigation of the relations of capital and labor will be undertaken by the federal government. The investigation was sought by employers associations labor unions and Rabbi Wise of New York Dr. Miss Jane Addams of Chicago Dr. Edward T. Devine of the Columbia university and Allen Burns of Pittsburg and other social settlement workers. The investigation is to be conducted by a commission of nine persons to be appointed by President Taft and with the advice and consent of the senate. The commission will comprise three representatives of capital three representatives of labor probably one settlement worker and a member of the senate and a member of the house. The commission is specifically ordered to investigate.

The general condition of labor in the principal industries including agriculture and especially in those carried on in corporate forms.

The existing relations between employers and employees.

The effect of industrial conditions on public welfare and the rights and powers of the community to deal therewith.

The conditions of sanitation and safety of employes and the provisions for protecting their lives limbs and health.

The methods tried in any state or foreign countries for maintaining mutually satisfactory relations between employers and employees.

The methods of avoiding or adjusting labor disputes through peaceful and conciliatory mediation and negotiation.

The scope methods and resources of existing bureaus of labor and possible ways of increasing their usefulness.

There has been so much misconception of the duties of trade union organizers that it has been suggested they be known as peacemakers or trouble adjusters. The rank and file of the unions believe that all an organizer does is to organize new unions. With this false idea they raise objections to the amounts paid the organizers especially for expenses. According to President James V. Lynch of the International Typographical union the smallest part of an organizer's duties is to organize. Many grievances arise in local unions that keep an international organizer continually on the move. When a disagreement occurs between a local union and an employer or association of employers the organizer is sent by the international president to the city affected with instructions to settle the trouble. Being an international official the organizer uses his influence with both the union and the employers to agree to a settlement. He is a sort of ambassador and his work requires the diplomacy of a highly experienced labor leader. Hundreds of strikes are averted by these organizers. It is asserted in every international union of any size in the country. Without the organizer these strikes would have occurred. The membership however looks at his expense account and at the number of unions he has organized and complains that he did not earn his salary. Therefore many international presidents besides President Lynch urge a change of the name to that of peacemaker.

Alarmed at the growth of labor unrest throughout Japan the mikado's advisers are urging the speedy passage by the diet of an amendment to the factory law designed as it is expressed in Japan to prevent future outbreaks of dangerous thought. By the amendment's provisions large manufacturers are required to set aside a percentage of their profits for their employees in addition to their regular wages. The employees will receive this money however only on completion of specified terms of service.

The state and federal laws requiring railroads to report accidents are not in conflict according to an opinion handed down by Associate Justice Kane of the Oklahoma supreme court at Guthrie. Neither is the state law requiring the railroads to report accidents to the state corporation commission a restriction on interstate commerce. The opinion was given in an appeal by the Santa Fe from an order of the state commission fining the corporation $500 for failure to report to the commission within a specified time on the derailment of a passenger train.

Fifteen thousand textile workers struck at Pueblo Mex. closing down 23 mills in this state most of them near this city. To maintain order and to guard the properties most of which belong to foreigners chiefly Spanish and French troops were ordered out and additional forces are expected from Mexico City. Managers endeavored to operate their plants but the workers were stoned by the strikers. Police and troops charged the mob and dispersed it. No one was injured.

The demand for labor in Wisconsin exceeds the available supply by 25 per cent according to the report of the state free employment agencies. Over 5,000 applications for laborers were received by the state industrial commission during the month of July. The chief demand for laborers comes from the railroads and lumber companies.

At the Retail Clerks International union convention held in Columbus O. it was decided to invade Canada and organize it from one end to the other. An army of men will start out at once with the intention of placing a local union in every town and city in the Dominion.

Steps were taken at a meeting of wireless operators in Hoboken to arrange for the organization of a world wide union of wireless telegraphers and a resolution was passed to put the question of forming such a union to a referendum vote of all the operators in the world.

Plumbers at Saskatoon Can. increased wages from 60 cents to 65 cents per hour without strike. The painters changed their wage rate from a 40 cent per hour maximum to a 40 cent per hour minimum. Carpenters increased minimum rate five cents per hour. No strikes.

Teamsters at La Crosse Wis. increased wages for drivers to $65 per month and helpers to $60. Cement workers made a new contract at 40 cents per hour for finishers and 25 cents an hour for helpers.

Notices have been sent to the various unions affiliated with the Federation of System Federations stating that the recent vote for a strike on western railroads had been defeated. Chairman O. A. Wharton of St. Louis states that the unions should assist the federation financially as it will have a great power for good in the future.

Carpenters and Painters at Quebec Can. increased wages five cents per hour without strike.

Employees of the government printing bureau at Ottawa have received an increase of $1.50 a week.

Frank Schulte of the Cubs has recovered his batting eye. Schulte was the batting sensation of last year when he made 21 home runs. Now Heinie Zimmerman is the candy kid with the stick. Schulte will undoubtedly be heard from this time forward.

Chance to Undergo Operation
Frank Chance will be operated on at the end of the present season. The doctors believe they can relieve his excessive nervousness with an operation and Chance has consented to the attempt.

Ancient Fans Amazed at Present Day Batting and Pitching—Sport Is In Its Infancy

Baseball today is a science and we ancient fans stand amazed at the present day pitching and batting work at the phenomenally clever base running and the hold the national game has gained on the public fancy. We are growing old with the game but the latter is always improving while we are getting near sighted and stiff in the joints says a writer in Leslie's. The glories of the past are being dimmed by the accomplishments of the present and these infant fans will live to see things done that we cannot even imagine. That's why I envy them. We used to think we had seen everything that was in the game. Now we realize that the sport is still in its childhood. The Cobbs the Marguads and the Johnsons are teaching us this and double clinching the fact.

Mammoth Fire Fighting Apparatus Prevents Serious Fire on Sunday

The Robinson business district which has suffered such heavy fire loss during the past year and a half had another narrow escape last Sunday. At a late hour that night a blaze was discovered in the saloon operated by Jacob Brock. The new fire fighting apparatus was used to good advantage by the volunteer firemen of that city and the flames checked before any serious damage resulted. The floor of the building was burned and the stock damaged slightly. The loss will probably not exceed $500. Brock's saloon is located at a point where its destruction would no doubt have resulted in other property loss and for a time the people of Robinson feared a repetition of the big fire of six weeks ago which took a couple of business buildings.

Sunday night's fire made the third blaze in Brock's place within a couple of weeks. The insurance which he carried has been cancelled and the officers are now conducting an investigation with a view to learning something of the origin of the fires.

Tintic Man In Bad Company.

Declaring that he was not guilty of being drunk as charged when arrested Friday night, H. Stevens, a miner of Tintic, yesterday morning told Judge J. M. Bowman of the criminal division of the city court a story of having been misjudged from being caught in bad company. Stevens was arrested together with Charles Raymond and Fred Talb and all of them booked on a charge of drunkenness. Stevens' story has a ring of truthfulness to it and he was discharged. —Tribune Monday.

May Open Season On Sept 15th

The state game warden is making an effort to have the duck shooting season opened on September 15th instead of October 15th. The object of this change is to keep the ducks on the move. This is preventing a repetition of the trouble of two years ago when the birds died by the thousands being afflicted by a new malady. The polluted water around Salt Lake City no doubt causes the disease and if the shooting season is opened at once the ducks will not remain long enough in the virulent districts to become affected. Joshua Jones who was here the other day from the club house of the Goose Duck Club says that the ducks are quite plentiful on Utah lake and that they are entirely free from disease. There is also a big bunch of geese feeding in the vicinity of the club house.

Almost a Miracle

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man according to W. B. Holclaw (Clarendon, Tex.) was effected years ago in his brother. He had a bad cold and cough, he writes that all our family thought he was going to die. As a matter of fact, he began to use Dr. K. K. New Discovery at 11 and was completely cured in ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for coughs and colds with excellent results. It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. National Irrigation Congress

One of the most important of the national conventions and one in which the people of the West are particularly interested is the National Irrigation Congress which will meet this year in Salt Lake City from September 30th to October 4th.

In the interest of the Congress the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad has prepared a handsomely illustrated folder giving a history of irrigation and a description of many of the irrigated sections of the Rocky Mountain Region which it is distributing to delegates to the Congress and others interested in the general subject of irrigation.

Registration Days

Three of the registration days have passed and we understand that but few people have visited the local offices. The remaining days for registration are October 8, 9, 15, 29 and 30. The registration lists for this year will be compiled from the list of two years ago. Those who voted two years ago and who have not changed residence since need not register but of course it is always well to visit the office in your precinct and see that your name is upon the book. You may have voted at the city election last fall and not at the county election two years ago and in that case you must again register. A number of people are of the opinion that new lists are made out for every presidential election but this is not the case.

Edison People Coming to Tintic

Motion Picture Films Will Advertise Mines of this District

J. S. Dawley, one of the general stage directors for the Edison people this week sent a message to Mayor Rhodes of the Crescent Theatre stating that he will bring his company of motion picture experts to this city some time next week. The Edison people have for some time been in Utah for the purpose of taking pictures of the many points of interest and have also staged a number of western dramas in this state.

Through the efforts of Eureka business men Mr. Dawley was persuaded to include Tintic in his itinerary and has promised to not only make views of the mines and mining camp scenery but also to stage a mining camp drama in this locality. The films showing the mines and telling something about the wonderful records which they have made will be shown all over the country and will undoubtedly be of great advantage in advertising the wonderful Tintic District.

In the neighborhood of twelve people many of them actors of great ability will accompany Mr. Dawley to this city. In the party will be Miss Laura Sawyer and Miss Jessie McAlister. Ben Wilson and Dick Sutton. The mining camp drama will be staged in and around Eureka.

In the absence of a commercial club or business men's organization it no doubt devolves upon Mayor Mitchell and the other city officers to assist in the proper entertainment of the visitors.

Nature's Way Is The Best.

Buried deep in our American forest we find bloodroot, queen's root, man-drake and stone root, golden seal, Oregon grape root and cherry bark. Of these Dr. R. V. Pierce made a pure glyceric extract which has been favorably known for over forty years. He called it "Golden Medical Discovery."

This "Discovery" purifies the blood and tones up the stomach and the entire system in Nature's own way. It is just the tissue builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold grip or pneumonia. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times, in consequence the blood is disordered for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body. The weak, nervous, run down, debilitated condition which so many people experience at this time of the year is usually the effect of poisons in the blood, it is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin—you feel "blue."

More than a week ago I was suffering with an awful cold in my head, throat, breast and body. writes Mr. JAMES G. KENT, of 710 L Street S. E. Washington D. C. Some called it La Grippe some pneumonia. I was advised by a friend to try a bottle of your "Golden Medical Discovery." I tried a bottle and it did me so much good that I felt safe in saying it is the greatest and best medicine that I ever took. My health is much better than it was before using your medicine. It does all you claim for it and is satisfactory.

HIS FIRST PATIENT NOT AN INVALID

Wonderful Revelations of the Stethoscope When Placed Over Girl's Heart.

BY BELLE KANARIS MANIATES

(Copyright 1912, by Associated Literary Press)

The doctor sat in his office at the sanitarium of the sulphur springs contemplating a telegram in a perplexity which lifted at the entrance of a young man with laughing brown eyes and a complexion of deep sea tan.

Well Fred for once you are on hand when wanted. What brought you here?

I was on my way north to spend my fortnight's vacation. Missing connections I ran up to see you. Just in time to make yourself useful. It is imperative that I run down to Brighton for the day. I want you to take my place here.

Great Scott Uncle Walter! I haven't practiced for two years—not since I went into the manufacturing business.

Well you haven't forgotten how to examine hearts have you? For the next two hours that is what you must do and fill out these slips for the attendants. I do not keep the office open in the afternoon and there are no patients here at present requiring much medical attention. I must leave at once.

He was gone before the young doctor could expostulate further.

His first caller was a young woman whose grace and beauty made him change his attitude of mind toward his uncle.

I wish to see the doctor, she said.

I am the doctor, he replied.

We just arrived, she explained.

and I came to see about arrangements for the baths.

He took one of the slips from the desk.

What is your name please?

My name is Elinor Grayson.

When he had filled out the slip with the exception of temperature for bath

'I Wish to See the Doctor'

he placed the stethoscope to her heart and began to listen to the fluttering beats of that organ.

Oh wait! Stop! she cried in laughing confusion as she arose from her chair. I am not ill—I—

But! he expostulated a puzzled pucker in his brows. didn't you come to take the baths?

No! she protested. I came with my aunt Miss Amantha Webb who has rheumatism.

His discomfiture was soon relieved by his boyish mischievous laugh which rang out heartily and wholesomely.

I beg your pardon! he apologized. You see I expected no one but in valids and—well I am glad that you are not one.

Your mistake was very natural she acknowledged.

He was about to explain that he was only a substitute doctor when the door opened and a patient entered.

Miss Grayson at once left the office. Bring your aunt down at any time this morning, he said holding the door for her to pass out.

For an hour and a half he mechanically listened to hearts and filled out slips while his own heart beat quickly at each opening of the door in expectation of seeing again his first caller.

At 11 o'clock he closed the office and hurried to the grounds confident that she would be out of doors. He finally found her sitting on the wooded bank of a little brook.

My aunt is asleep, she said looking up with a charming smile. She will come in the morning to see you.

He seated himself beside her and from disclosure of her aunt's rheumatic tendencies they drifted into matters of the day and presently she discovered with astonishment that it was the luncheon hour.

He walked up to the sanitarium with her and left her at the elevator. Having determined to offer his professional services to his uncle for a fortnight he did not inform her that he was not the regular physician.

When he went into the dining room, he saw Miss Grayson sitting at one of the tables chatting with a man whose face seemed familiar to him. As he passed he heard her explaining to her companion that he was the doctor. During the meal his memory succeeded in identifying the man as one with whom he had placed a large order for goods a couple of weeks before.

After dinner he was unfortunate in not being able to get a glimpse of her and he returned to the doctor's office from where he was summoned to the bedside of patients who were confined to their rooms with slight ailments. After this he strolled again through the grounds. When near a little vine-clad pergola he heard her voice. In answer thereto he heard another voice saying: No there is only one doctor in the institution. Doctor Morgan, a kindly elderly gentleman with white hair.

Morgan reflected in consternation, that the girl's companion at breakfast had doubtless informed her that he was manager of an automobile company and now this person was confirming her suspicions. At this moment a bellboy came to inform him he was wanted to prescribe for a new patient.

By the time he was at liberty it was the dinner hour. When Miss Grayson came into the dining room she gave him an odd look and a rather distant bow. Again she finished her meal before he had left the room. As he came out he gladly welcomed his uncle who had returned.

Well Fred how did you make it? Fine! I don't want you to remain a couple of weeks and help you out?

Indeed I do! I thought your love for the profession would return. But I must go in to dinner.

Come with me a moment first. His uncle followed his swiftly striding nephew to the veranda.

Uncle do you know that white-haired woman the one next to the beautiful girl?

Surely. She has been here all summer.

Then introduce me to her and explain that you left me in charge today.

Together they approached the two women.

Mrs. Benson said the elder physician let me present my nephew Dr. Frederick Morgan. I left him in charge today as I was called out of the city.

She in turn presented Miss Grayson and then announced her intention of dining. She was accompanied by the older doctor and Morgan slipped into the vacated chair.

The stethoscope is a wonderful instrument, he said gravely. In that half moment I listened to your heart. I learned that you jumped too readily to conclusions.

I didn't need a stethoscope, she smiled demurely, to tell me that you did the same. Think how you mistook me for a patient!

We are certainly quits, he laughed. Then as the notes of a waltz floated out from the wide hall he continued.

The stethoscope told me something more—that you were fond of dancing. And I am to be here two weeks and help my uncle. Tomorrow you may bring your aunt to the office. But come! Can you resist that music!

Do you think she asked sweetly as they went inside that tomorrow you will know all of Aunt Amantha's characteristics?

SPREAD TERROR IN ALASKA

Earthquake Shocks Though Little Damage Is Reported Were Cause of Intense Alarm

The most violent upheavals of the earth's surface since the terrible earthquake which destroyed San Francisco are those which took place in Alaska on July 6. The earth rocked continuously for 40 seconds and although the disturbance is not reported to have caused much loss of life it has filled the people with terror.

Following so quickly after the eruption of Mt. Katmai in the Katdiak island which covered the whole island with a foot of volcanic ash the earthquake is supposed to have been the result of damage and ruin of the most far-reaching nature are among the dread forebodings.

The bottom of the sea is also reported to have been considerably elevated seriously affecting the climate of the Alaskan coast through shifting the warm ocean currents and also creating new fishing banks which may become of inestimable value.

Some geological experts believe that the eventual closing of the Bering straits is among the possibilities. After this perhaps one may travel all rail from Halifax N. S. to Lisbon Portugal by way of Canada, Alaska, Siberia Germany Spain etc.

Japanese Using More Milk

The habit of using milk has greatly increased among the Japanese in recent years yet the average amount of milk consumed by each Japanese is still far below that of the European or American. The total amount of milk produced in Tokyo Prefecture during the year 1911 was 46,636 koku and the total amount of daily consumption was over 127 koku which means that each person consumed on an average only 0.1 go a day which will hardly bear comparison with the four or five go of the average daily consumption per person in Europe or America.

Much Money for Explosives

In mining and similar operations in the Transvaal of South Africa great quantities of high explosives are used. It is estimated that $7,000,000 are invested in such explosives every year.

COSMOPOLITAN SWITZERLAND

A SWISS VILLAGE

If variety is the spice of life then Switzerland indeed lives. Nowhere probably within the space of forty-five miles can one find greater variety than along the shores of Lake Lemano from cosmopolitan Geneva down to sleepy Villeneuve. Nowhere are the old and the new the native and the foreign thrown in more striking contrast. That small Paris Montreux schindl lates a stone's throw from Veveyaux which suns itself on the mountainside content with the simple life of three centuries ago. Its one narrow turning street twisting uphill is crowded with old stone houses. Over many doors are cut dates 1661 1720 1778 and the old regime continues untouched by the modernness of Montreux and Territet.

The people of this enterprising little country have cleverly met the demands of the fashionable crowd of tourists who invade them all the year round. They have built magnificent hotels and pensions smart shops and pretty tearooms they have made mountain climbing easy by the funiculars they have made boating on the lake delightful. The old barque with slant sails has given place to the swifter launch rowboats with striped awnings and cushions fly the flag of every nation. The bronzed boatmen sizes you up and pays you the compliment of putting your flag at the bow. In short the Swiss have made their beautiful country attractive to the most fastidious traveler but back of the alluring wares they offer in the way of most elaborate modern conveniences they have strictly kept their own simple mode of living and their ancient customs.

Harvesting Quaint

What is more quaint more picturesque than the harvesting in autumn? Often of an evening we walked on the country roads among the vineyards. The sunset light touched lake and mountain on every terraced slope the peasants were gathering and pressing the grapes their laughing and singing echoed clearly through the stillness and the red handkerchiefs knotted on the women's heads made a bit of color here and there. The men were bent double by the heavy hoes they carried on their backs. Every one was at work from the oldest to the youngest for it is considered an omen of good luck if the entire family from the grandfather down to the youngest babe participate in the gathering and pressing of the grapes.

After seeing the making of the wine you fancy you will never care to taste any again. The dirty hands that handle the grapes the discolored bottles they are pressed by a dirty man and drier lads are bad enough. But when you see the mass of pulp and juice left standing at the roadside for a week or more in big uncovered vats exposed to the dust and swarms of flies and dabbled in by all the ragged gamins who happen along it is disgusting. And you don't feel entirely reassured that it all comes out in the fermentation as the simple peasants hasten to tell you.

Switzerland is more beautiful than ever in the autumn. The wooded mountains rising abruptly from the lakeshore are strongly colored in bright reds and yellows and deep browns. The orchards are laden with apples chrysanthemums bloom in gorgeous profusion in every garden and the vine de Canada has turned crimson on the walls. And the sunsets! They are exquisite beyond description! Besides the marvelous beauty of it there is a something I can't tell what that gives one a feeling of perfect peace and rest in this country. A quieting hand seems to be over everything.

A Sunday in the middle of October is the day of national thanksgiving when the Swiss return thanks for the good harvest. The churches are decorated according to the season apples grapes and vegetables of all kinds being used in place of flowers to adorn the interiors. During the long prayers of gratitude the air is apt to resemble that of the market place. In the afternoon a brass band goes about playing in front of the different churches and all the world and his wife follow it until dark. So the day ends in cheerful goodfellowship.

All this rustic simplicity exists with in sight and hearing of Montreux Territet and Clarens where thousands of foreigners speaking every tongue vie with one another in dress and jewels and fashion where a famous casino amuses those who care for it and where there are many other kinds of diversion for those of more quiet tastes. The stone quay running for several miles along the lake is one of the gayest of promenades. Comfortable benches under the clipped plane trees which border it invite one to loiter and watch the throng of idlers to feed the swans clamoring at the low wall or to wait for the boat coming down from Geneva and stopping at Lausanne and the smaller towns. They are gay little affairs these lake steamers with their bright awnings and strung orchestra and on holidays and afternoons are crowded with school girls from many pensionnats. An ever changing throng the people meet mingle and separate Germans French men Italians Russians Americans and many Englishmen for the resident population is half British.

Vevey Most Ancient

Of all the towns along the lake Vevey linked by trolley to Montreux is undoubtedly the most old world in spite of the 6,000 English who live there the year round and the crowd of other nationalities who are transient. Vevey has kept her narrow crooked streets with flagged pavings and little byways her old place with its fountain her slow going bargues in a nook sheltered by a breakwater the peasant women beat and dip the family linen in the cold waters of the lake the fishermen draw in their seines and stretch them on racks to dry shabby little children play in the streets and on the quay.

In the center of town is a big square cleared and called La Place du Marche. Here on Tuesday mornings the country people for miles about flock and bring their wares. It is very picturesque crowded with stalls where one can find absolutely anything. Near the entrance are barked flowers of every kind—flaming chrysanthemums delicate roses modest cyclamen—everything rivaling the flower markets at Aix les Bains in variety. There is stand after stand heaped with every kind of fruit and vegetables and each husky peasant woman assures you that her wares are the best to be found in the Marche today. Next there is piled enough cheese butter and eggs for a regiment. Every housewife in town is here her market basket on her arm haggling over the price of a slice of cheese or a kilo of butter. Voices rise in a shrill jargon. Madame leaves the stall and the butcher with an offended air. The market woman repents of her former price and calls Madame back. As usual Madame gets the best end of the bargain.

In the midst of a veritable medley of eatables are tables displaying dry goods and ribbons. Old women will urge you to buy kitchen aprons and cotton dresses and falling that will of fer you ancient pewter ware candle sticks plates spoons vases anything you wish and tres bon marche. It is an interesting scene full of color and movement and usually results in your carrying back to your pension a lot of trash you bought for the fun of buying and then have no idea what to do with. However you have had a delightful morning a good object lesson in French and German and a splendid opportunity of seeing at close range the various types of every nationality that go to make up the cosmopolitan whole of Switzerland.

Birds Grasshoppers and Fish

A strong protest is being made in South Australia against the continual slaughter of such birds as the ibis the egret cranes and spoonbills to supply the demands of milliners. The slaughter is objectionable not only as destroying some of the most beautiful and interesting creatures of nature but according to the Journal of Agriculture also as rendering South Australia ever more prone to plagues of grasshoppers and is a prime cause of the decline of its fish resources. As the wading birds disappear the crustaceans that destroy fish spawn increase in multitude.

PRETTY SUMMER SILKS

About the most practical of summer gowns are those simple affairs made of light weight silks in colors neither very dark nor very light. Foulards messalines chiffons taffetas and the less expensive crepes are mainly chosen for these and their success (beside the beauty of the fabrics) lies in good color combinations and in design. The changeable taffetas of the present season have inspired designers to many pretty and very effective new ideas. These designs have had in mind all types of figures designing for the slim ones gowns calculated to make them look not too straight and for the plump ones lines tended to lengthen curves and lend grace. Either style or any style will look well on a figure possessed of the right proportions. That is one that is neither too thin or too fat.

Another advantage of these unpretentious silk gowns is that two silks are so often combined in making them that short lengths may be used. And for the clever and economical lady who would evolve a new gown out of two old ones any number of good designs are offered in combinations of two fabrics which she may model after.

Two examples are shown here of models that are easy to make and pleasing to look at. A changeable chiffon taffeta (as brown blue or green shot with black) has an applique of heavy ecru lace and pipings of black satin. Little buttons of black satin and a narrow girdle of the same add a telling finish. For the touches of black are most effective.

This model is designed for a slender figure and is made so that it may be worn with a chemisette and collar of lace. There is a small applique of silk passementerie of gold black and the color of the gown.

The second model which has been developed in bings blue and white or black and white. The little coat is of a plain foulard in the color of the body of the gown with cuffs to match. Little oblong covered buttons in the plain fabric and pipings of the figured material make a pretty finish. The tie is a vivid green but black might be used instead. Lace undersleeves and a chemisette are worn with this model and its straight lines and plain skirt recommend it to the stout figure.

SOME HOME-MADE PRESENTS

Pretty Gifts That Are Far Superior to Those That May Be Purchased Anywhere

Cretonne lamp shades with net laid over them.

Cake covers made of flit lace on a wire frame.

Some one of the numerous delectable little towels.

A collar and cuff set of fine linen well made and embroidered.

A pair of new gathered ribbon garters with a posy of satin roses.

A set of cretonne or linen cases and cloth to match for her traveling cases.

Lingerie pillows of handkerchief linen. Cluny lace and a touch of embroidery.

A table cover in Monks cloth with cross stitch design all around the square.

Tea cloths and tea napkins with embroidered monograms and any individual touch.

A set of sachets of different size not clumsy or overworked but dainty and well filled.

For the Pongee Costume

The natural-colored girl is again with us meaning the girl who goes in for a costume wholly in the shade of natural colored linen or pongee. With her tailored suit or frock of either heavy linen or wash she wears leather pumps and little holsters of a match for hue a linen petticoat bordered and band with coarse unbleached linen lace a suede belt with self colored buckle and an outing hat of raffa or Panama draped with a natural colored Shantung scarf. Finally in one hand she carries a sunshade of Shantung and natural wood and in the other a handbag of raffa. For country wear this sort of costume is excellently knowing looking and it is a decided relief in a neighborhood where all white or white and color get ups prevail.

Boudoir Fancies

Delightfully dainty and cool looking are the new tamboired Swiss shams and scarfs for the boudoir. The plaid Swiss is shown for pillow shams bureau dress and table scarfs all with heavy scalloped edge and with stitched braid design. These suggest simple curtains of plaid muslin or Swiss and cushion box and couch covers of gayly colored cretonne with perhaps a colonial rag rug or one of matting in summery lightness. The plaid Swiss for the shams and covers are decorated with scallops similar to the plaid effect but solid dots and figures are strewn over the surface of the braid work.

To Protect the Blouse

The hardest wear on a waist comes on the sides under the arms. Protect this part of the blouse with a strip of stiff silk and there will be less likelihood of the unsightly holes which often make an otherwise good waist unwearable. This is a trick of the trade practiced by the most fashionable of New York dressmakers.—Good Housekeeping Magazine

FROCKS FOR LITTLE GIRL

Simple Styles That Are Always in Favor and That Would Be Unwise to Change

In children's frocks nowadays style is quite as important as it is in regard to grown up garments. For a long time there has been comparatively little difference in the outline of clothes for young girls grown girls and their still girlish mothers but perhaps this is to no small extent due to the fact that grown up lines have been simple enough for children to adopt.

No doubt if our dressmakers succeed in forcing upon us panniers and draperies general good taste will prevent our defying little girls frocks to match and we shall leave them still straight slim and simple. Meantime the coat and skirt of simple make with a plain front panel large revers and collar and the inevitable sprinkling of buttons or a long Cossack frock or a pleated skirt and Magyar blouse are each regarded as in their proper place becoming to the school girl or even to the smaller child.

NEW STOCK COLLARS.

The new grandfather's stock is just another variation on the Robespierre neckwear which is now at the height of fashion. This collar of sheer hemstitched white linen turns over on a high stock of plaited black silk, and is trim and smart with tailored silk blouses for morning wear.

Renovate Crepe

Skimmed milk and water with a bit of glue in it made scalding hot is excellent to restore old rusty black crepe. If well squeezed and pulled dry like muslin it will look as well as or better than new.

My son my son now what have ye done that your optics are blackish brown? And why doth your ear today appear to be put on you upside down? Hast fallen beneath a trolley car or been in a falling lift? And why are your teeth all out beneath thus giving your jaw a shift?

My son my son d'at blow in a gun that shot off your fair eyebrows? What t'asted your spine so out of line that now you make sideways bows? And were ye a fool to tickle a mule and stand at its rearward heels? Else why wear these splints and black and blue tints and bruises and scratches and weals?

My son my son d'at thou think to have fun by dodging an automobile? Your head has been whacked and four ribs are cracked your cheek is beginning to peel. Did dynamite burst at its mightiest worst and shoot off the finger and thumb? Come tell me the truth my pitiful youth—have you been assailed with a bomb?

Aw cut it all out. What you talkin' about? the lad makes a mumbly reply. I haven't been hurt. I'll get well with a spurt—but maybe I'll need a glass eye. They're training us now and showing us how to grapple and tackle and maim. Our coach is as mild as an innocent child—just wait till we get in a game.

Man—Vain Man. He can explain the wireless telegraph system to his wife—and his letters come back to him for better directions.

He manifests scorn of royalty—and joins the crowd that follows a visiting nobleman.

He pays $5 to see two cheap prize-fighters maul each other—and whips his son for fighting with another boy at school.

He laughs at the green goods jokes in the papers—and forgets about the time he sent money to Five Hundred and Twenty Per Cent Miller.

He explains just how to settle the differences between two great nations—and goes to law with his neighbor over a line fence.

He derides woman for her frequent changes of fashion—and gives his overcoat away because it is not full enough in the back.

He sneers at faith cure—and tries all the hair tonics that are recommended to him.

Politics. Politics is made up of several kinds of men. There are the Leaders who shape the Principles and analyze the Public Mind thus arriving at the Choice of the People. The Choice of the People is called a candidate until after election. He is also called many other things during the Campaign by the Opposition.

The Opposition is made up of a lot of Benighted Men.

The Platform is composed of Planks. It is prepared by a Committee of Eminent Gentlemen who fondly imagine that they are adding something to History. A Platform is remembered about as long as a Vice President.

There are also Voters. They are essential to Politics for it is to them that the Spellbinders deliver their impassioned Appeals not to Drag Old Glory in the Dust nor to forget the Heavenly born Principles for which the Forefathers Battled.

Convincing Evidence. First Kentuckian—Do you think that mesmerist who is giving shows at Oah town hall is an impostor? Kunkel?

Youthful Deduction. The lens of the eye said the teacher of physiology is just like a little onion. And asked the inquiring scholar is it the onion in our eye that makes us weep?

HALF LOVE ONLY HINDER'S AMBITION

Does love help or hinder an ambitious man?

Jeanette asked me that question after telling me that Jimmie had come home in a rather depressed state of mind because Tom Jenkins had confided to him that since his marriage to Daisy he had been unable to pursue the ambition of his life—to become a successful stock broker.

It seems Daisy is jealous of Tom's business. She complains whenever business takes him away from her for an evening or keeps him downtown late and rather than have a scene when he reaches home Tom tells prospective customers that it is impossible for him to see them after 4 o'clock or to call upon them in the evening. So dear little Jeanette is worried for fear Jimmie will think his love for him a hindrance to his ambition.

Jeanette dear I said you have no cause to worry even if Jimmie is grumpy. It depends largely upon the love and the lover whether love will be a help or hindrance in life.

Just because some grouchy old codger has said that love slays ambition is no reason to believe it and close observation shows it to be a pretty poor ambition that ever suffers extinction.

But Cousin Daisy wants Tom to take a position in a bank where he will have regular hours and she can always look for him to be home shortly after 3 in the afternoon. Couldn't he be ambitious in a bank as well as selling stocks and bonds?

Surely he may my dear. I answered. Love may transform the goal aspired to. It may even change a man's aims but the man who is truly ambitious to make a name for himself like Jimmie will assuredly be more ambitious not less because his successes will bring happiness to you whom he loves as well as to him self.

Then why should Tom not be satisfied to do as Daisy wishes?

The fault my dear Jeanette lies with Daisy not with Tom's love or her love. It is always so when the so-called love hampers rather than helps a man to rise in the world. It is not love dear child but selfishness pure and simple. Selfishness and jealousy can wreck any man's ambitions if allowed to interfere with them.

Do you think Daisy is selfish and jealous of Tom's ambition? Isn't it because she loves him so dearly that makes her want him with her every minute he can be there?

Jeanette you love Jimmie do you not?

Why of course cousin I—That's what I thought. Well, would you put your own social pleasures before Jimmie's work?

No. Would you be angry if he were detained a little late at the office especially if you had planned an early dinner so you could go out in the evening?

No—no I should be sure Jimmie would get home as early as he possibly could under such circumstances.

Are you interested in your husband's business? Of course I am—you know that. He always talks things over with me when he has any interesting news or problems to decide.

Very well then. That is as it should be. You need have no fear and neither need Jimmie that your love will ever hinder him in his advancement. It is only the self-centered foolish selfish woman who will in any way interfere with her husband's ambition. Hers is not love but rather selfish greed for all her husband's time and all of his money too forgetting that to make the money necessary to satisfy her wants he must spend many hours outside those prescribed by banking houses as business hours.

Remember my dear child that if Daisy loved Tom more truly his desires and ambitions would become so wholly hers that she would naturally be a help to him.

It is only the half-lovers and the self-lovers that ever hinder a husband's ambitions. Now run along home and tell Jimmie what I have said to you and see if he doesn't agree with me.

Cotton Duck for Motor Tires

One million yards of high grade duck to be made from sea island and Egyptian cotton has recently been sold by a Georgia cotton mill to a manufacturer of automobile tires. The quality of this material is of the highest grade used only in the larger tires the lower grade of goods being available for the smaller tires. One million yards of cotton duck one yard wide is a pretty big order to go from one mill to one tire manufacturer.

It illustrates however the ever broadening market for cotton and the reason why a big cotton crop has been so promptly absorbed. Every year sees new uses for the south's cotton. Not only is it being used in the manufacture of tires it is likewise used in the manufacture of automobile tops and the wider the use of automobiles the greater will be the demand for cotton—Manufacturers Record.

Deaths Caused by Snakes

The danger from snake bites in tropical countries can hardly be exaggerated. In Brazil alone 20,000 persons are annually bitten by snakes and over one-fourth of the bites have so far proved fatal.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so-called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply cheap food which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Let everything you eat reach your stomach. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no other aid than them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and I can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Chambers' Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this salt upon application.

When purchasing Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefited the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand by the loss. All we ask is that you befit with us and we know that you will.

Motor Trucks Need No Rest

In a paper read before the Electric Vehicle Association of America a Mr. Hayden Eames called attention to the fact that horse drawn vehicles must remain idle for a certain portion of the day in order to rest the horses. A recent investigation showed that the teams of the different express companies in New York city were idle 40 per cent of the total working hours much of this idleness being due to the fact that the horses needed rest and that the periods of loading the wagons had to be suited to these rest hours. The motor vehicle on the other hand requires no rest and hence requires no adjustment of the loading hours

Editor of Yonkers Statesman Pays Deserving Tribute to Great American Institution

There is another Richmond in the pie field and the pie editor of the Ohio State Journal would do well to look to his hauberk and his laurels. The new knight is Edwin A. Oliver editor of the Yonkers Statesman father of the paragraphic joke and he prances into the arena armed cap-a-pie as it were and with his pie knife couched. Listen to his praise of the flaky crust with the pumpkin filler

When one takes a huge bit of it in his mouth and his happy thoughts unfold into a dream and he hears afar the breaking waves dash high and a stern and rockbound coast and the woods against a stormy sky their giant branches tossed one feels how happily related to a brave historic event is the modest pumpkin pie. It came when the conquerors came and they shook the depths of the desert gloom with their hymns of lofty cheer. This is cheer—the sunbeams imbued in pumpkin pie

GOODS EXEMPT FROM SEIZURE

Ordinary Householder Will Be Surprised to Learn How Much He May Legally Retain

To protect the honest debtor from oppression at the hands of remorseless creditors it has been the policy of the law to designate certain articles deemed necessary for human sustenance as being exempt from execution that is to say the sheriff may not seize them to satisfy a debt.

New York's law on the subject was passed in 1828 as part of the revised statutes and has been reenacted from time to time with but slight change although living conditions have of course altered considerably in the past ninety years.

As a result of this situation the New York flat dweller will find if he looks up the law providing for his exemptions from execution that however much the high cost of living may enslave him the sheriff will never be able to take from him any of the following articles which may be discovered in his flat.

All spinning wheels weaving looms and stoves put up or kept for use in a dwelling house and one sewing machine with its appurtenances.

Ten sheep with their fleeces and the yarn or cloth manufactured therefrom one cow two swine the necessary food for those animals all necessary meat fish flour groceries and vegetables actually provided for family use and necessary fuel oil and candles for the use of the family for sixty days.

All wearing apparel beds bedsteads and bedding necessary for the judgment debtor and the family all necessary cooking utensils one table six chairs six knives six forks six spoons six plates six tea cups six saucers, one sugar dish one milk pot one tea pot one crane and its appendages one pair of andirons one coal scuttle one shovel and one pair of tongs one lamp and one candle stick.—New York American

Had Confidence in Christians

Dr. Courtney H. Fenn of Eeking relates a significant incident of the recent disorders in China says the Far East. At Peking the local banks were so much frightened at the revolutionary outlook that they extended every sort of payment across their counters. Not even government officials nor teachers of government schools were able to get money for necessary expenses. But a missionary in the city found it important to obtain $200 for current outlay at the mission and he sent a messenger with an appeal for this sum. Greatly to his surprise the messenger returned with $500 in currency and an offer from the bankers of $500 more if the mission would be kind enough to take it. The bankers were in serious doubt whether the government was going to continue or not but they were entirely confident that Christian missions would persist and that money loaned to the missionaries was really safer than in their own coffers.

Real Greatness

A great man is always willing to be little. While he sits on the cushion of advantage he goes to sleep. When he is pushed or tormented or defeated he has a chance to learn something. He has been put on his wits on his manhood. He has gained facts. He learns his ignorance is cured of the insanity of conceit. He has got moderation and real skill. The wise man always throws himself on the side of his as fallants. It is more to his interests than it is to theirs to find his weak point. The wound cicatrizes and falls off from him like a dead skin and when they who would triumph lo! he has passed on invulnerable. As long as all that is said against me I feel a certain assurance of success but as soon as honeyed words of praise are spoken for me I feel as one that lies unprotected before his enemies.—Ralph Waldo Emerson

Fixed Date for Easter

At the fifty-second annual meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom held in London last March it was agreed unanimously that a fixed date for Easter ought to be adopted by international agreement. This is a rather startling illustration of the freedom of thought that characterizes the twentieth century. Throughout the middle ages Christendom was rent with continued discussions as to the correct method of adjusting the occurrence of Easter to the phases of the moon and the simple expedient of adopting a fixed date for the festival would have been regarded as an outrageous piece of impiety.—Scientific American

COULD NOT SAY NO TO ADELAIDE

Major Atkinson according to his wife's testimony doesn't know how to say no to Adelaide his niece. This assertion is borne out by the fact that when Adelaide asked him to appear in juvenile costume at what she called a kid party which she was to give at his summer home he consented with an outward smile and an inward groan.

I wish he said to his wife in private that Adelaide hadn't insisted upon my taking part in this ridiculous affair of hers. In fact I don't see why she wants to give such a nonsensical party.

Why do you aid and abet her? demanded his wife. When I suggested that she think of something newer and more dignified you immediately said: Let her have any kind of party she pleases.

Well one doesn't like to be always interfering with her pleasures. There's no particular harm in her having a child's party is there? But I know I shall feel like a perfect idiot dressed in the little girl's early Victorian costume that Adelaide has picked out for me. He glanced into the mirror and sighed as he stroked his graying Van dyke beard.

The afternoon of the party Adelaide after tying the strings of a quaint little sunbonnet under the major's beard drew away and surveyed him from the top of the sunbonnet to the tips of his white stockings and black slippered feet.

Uncle you're certainly the most excruciatingly funny sight I ever beheld she declared. I'm so glad I found those jantalettes in grandma's old trunk. They're perfectly killing. You'll make the hit of the evening.

I suppose I'm what you'd call a screaming success said the major somewhat wryly. You don't think I'm too complete do you?

No you're just—just lovely Adelaide squeezed the large sun bonneted hand of her uncle half of which was neatly incased in a white lace mitt. But with that cigar in your mouth you're a sight to behold.

Well I must have a little smoke before your guests come Adelaide. I'll just take my magazine and read and smoke on the lawn until the festivities begin.

A little later as Mrs. Atkinson and Adelaide were putting the finishing touches on their own costumes they saw a striking looking couple alight from a motor car and approach the major who rose with his accustomed outrightness and greeted them.

Good gracious Adelaide! Your uncle appears to be absolutely unconscious of his absurd attire exclaimed Mrs. Atkinson. He is taking those people around the garden as unconcerned as if he were dressed in a business suit. They must think he is crazy! Here I'll slip on a long coat over my short skirt and run out and explain.

The major welcomed his wife with a smile. I'm glad you joined us my dear for I wish you to meet Professor and Mrs. Lee of the university who have heard flattering reports of your garden and have come way out from the city to see our rare roses. We are honored I'm sure.

I think said Mrs. Atkinson to the visitors after acknowledging the introduction that you are seeing something else quite as rare as our roses. She laughed and looked at her husband.

By Jove I'd forgotten this fooling exclaimed the major with some temper. I wonder what you can have thought of me.

Well laughed Professor Lee the friends who told us about your roses said that some of your neighbors considered you rather eccentric to devote so much of your time to flowers. When we introduced ourselves I thought you were perhaps a trifle unusual in your dress.

Unusual! I should think so exclaimed the major. Then turning severely to his wife he said I can't see my dear why you ever permitted Adelaide to go up such an idiotic party. I fear you give that girl her head too much. He glanced down at his costume again. This is really preposterous is that you calling Adelaide? Yes well be there at once. You see Mrs. Lee the party is beginning and I've promised my niece to be in the grand march. You'll join us won't you?—Chicago Daily News

Pet Funny Stories

Authors are not above having a pet story to be told over and over again on occasion—and off too.

Emerson Hough who in his novels deals with extremely serious topics has a keen sense of humor and never tires of telling about a guide he once had on a fishing trip in the Adirondacks. This guide had also been employed by Grover Cleveland and Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton university. Shortly after the birth of President Cleveland's little daughter the chief executive went on a fishing trip and was delighted to learn that his guide had also become a father.

How much did your baby weigh at birth? asked Mr. Cleveland.

Twenty-two pounds sir answered the guide.

Twenty-two pounds! exclaimed the president in amazement why my baby weighed but seven.

"Rienzi to the Romans" By Walt Mason

He stood erect and having seen that artists for some magazine had sketched him in a proper pose he cleared his throat and blew his nose and said: "Hi Romans you are slaves! You've not the price to buy your slaves! The good old sun is still on the turn and I a last beam falls on a serf! Great Scott my friends is freedom dead? O whence and whither do we tread? I view the future with alarm! We tremble beneath the tyrant's arm and we may tremble sons of Rome until the muley cows come home but you will still be in the hole unless some fiery dauntless soul like me shall lead you from the wreck and soak the tyrant in the neck! And here I stand to cut the lead! I'm ready for the sacrifice! I'll save you if a Roman can! As candidate for consul I ask your votes and if I win I'll swat the tyrant on the chin! I'll represent the fourteenth ward and represent it good and hard and drive the grafters from their place and kick the tyrod in the face! Brief Comment.

Congressman Howell has the thanks of the Reporter for a copy of the new book covering the Park City Mining District which has just been printed under the direction of the U. S. Geological Survey.

With half a dozen different tickets in the field our ballot for the next election will resemble a circus poster and each voting booth should be provided with a step ladder in order that the ballot may be read with ease.

In the present campaign the columns of the Reporter will be open to all the political parties. The Republicans, Socialists, Democrats and Progressives will all be given equal consideration and anything which they desire published will be given attention.

In this issue of the Reporter will be found the eight proposed amendments to the constitution upon which a vote is to be taken at the coming election. These amendments will be published in our columns every week until election time giving voters an opportunity of becoming familiar with them in order that they may be in a position to vote intelligently. Read them over.

Circus Got "Small Play".

Circus lemonade does not go very well when the thermometer is hovering mightily close to the freezing point and when the first touch of fall weather starts one to wondering what has become of the summer's wages he is pretty apt to pass up the attraction in the big tent and also keep the dime which would admit him to the side show. Sanger's European shows appeared here on Wednesday, performances being given both in the afternoon and evening and while the attendance was fair the management did not carry any great amount of money out of town. The late arrival of the train and the inclement weather prevented the usual street parade much to the disappointment of the little folks—and some of the big ones as well. Those who went out expecting to see a big circus were of course displeased but there was some fairly good acrobatic work, tumbling, riding, juggling, etc. The work of the trained elephant "Ding" was perhaps the best feature of the show.

A banquet will be given at the hall on Monday evening in honor of the visiting delegates and all union men and their ladies are requested to attend. This banquet is for the members of all labor organizations and everyone having a union card is invited. On Tuesday evening a dance will be given at the Elks Pavilion and the proceeds will go to the striking shopmen upon the Harriman railroads.

The members of the Tintic District Miners' Union will hold a special meeting next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All members are requested to attend as there will be business of importance to every wage earner in the district. James Hanley, president; J. W. Morlon, secretary.

Teachers For Mammoth Schools

The Mammoth school will be opened on Monday of next week with the following corps of teachers: R. H. Towers, principal; H. S. Smith, 7th grade; Miss Kate Haizer, 6th grade; Miss Katherine Creighton, 5th grade; Miss Hattie Nesbit, 3rd grade; Miss Eliza Bonner, 2nd grade; Miss Fay Brenton, 1st grade; Miss Florence Johnson and Mrs. Rustine, beginners. The members of the school board are considering the advisability of combining the fourth grade with some of the other grades owing to the fact that the class is a small one. For the Fish Springs section which is now a part of the Mammoth school district Miss Pearl Westlake has been secured as teacher and the school will be located at Callao. The enrollment of the school at that place will be about 28 on the opening day.

Neils Lunst in of Levan may be nominated by the Socialists for county clerk. Mr. Lunst is well known in the east end of the county. O. E. Berry of this city will do nothing but the party's choice for county attorney. It is understood that the Socialists will not nominate a judicial ticket but that they will do everything possible to defeat Joshua Greenwood the present judge who is out for re-election. Practically every Socialist in the Tintic district will get out and work against Joshua Greenwood whom they declare is anything but a friend of the working class.

N. A. Robertson was in town from Salt Lake early in the week and spent the time in attending to legal business and in plugging for the new Progressive Party. Nick attended the national convention of this party and came home greatly enthused over Teddy's chances for being elected. He states that the new party will pull a big vote in Utah and that in every county where enough progressives can be found for the offices county tickets will be placed in the field. In Tintic there is already a pretty respectable following and the same can be said of Nephi. For that reason a complete ticket is promised for Juab county.

Mellville and Ryan

At their convention held on Wednesday afternoon the Republicans of the Fifth Judicial district nominated J. A. Mellville of Millard county for judge and E. H. Ryan for district attorney. The convention was held at the Cullen Hotel at Salt Lake. The first ballot in connection with the nomination of the candidate for judge being as follows: Mellville 38, Murdoch 8 and George B. Greenwood 3. There was no opposition to the nomination of F. H. Ryan who is the present district attorney.

Greenwood and Udall Nominated

At Salt Lake last Friday the Democrats of the Fifth Judicial district nominated candidates for judge and district attorney. Joshua Greenwood was nominated to succeed himself on the bench and G. A. Udall, a local attorney was selected to make the run for the office of district attorney. In each case nomination was made by acclamation. Other candidates for the offices having withdrawn.

The Republicans of Juab county will hold their nominating convention in this city during the present month the date to be announced later.

John R. Edgehill Nominated

At the Republican convention for the Fifth Senatorial District comprising Juab and Millard counties which was held at Nephi on Tuesday, John R. Edgehill was nominated for the office of state senator. Mr. Edgehill is a well known resident of Nephi. He was opposed for the nomination by Orville Thompson of Millard county but had the solid support of the Juab County delegates.

A number of local Democrats are anxious to have Jacob Christensen enter the race for the office of county commissioner. Mr. Christensen is an old timer in the ranks of Democracy and is well known throughout Tintic. He has not yet consented to go out after the nomination but like a number of others feels that the Tintic district is entitled to two commissioners.

The Republicans at their convention held yesterday nominated Joseph Howell and Judge Jacob Johnson of San Pete county to the offices of congressmen. There was an interesting fight for these nominations half a dozen prominent Republicans being in the field.

American Typograph For Reporter Office.

One of the latest model line casting machines manufactured by the American Typograph Co. of Detroit Michigan and the first machine of this kind to be installed between Denver and the coast has been ordered for use in the office of the Eureka Reporter. The Typograph is as rapid and does practically the same character of work as the great Linotype machine which revolutionized the newspaper business of the entire world. The Typograph differs from the Linotype in that it carries but one face of type but for the work in the ordinary office of the weekly or small daily newspaper it is equally as good and is far more simple machine to operate.

The Typograph does not set type as it does away with type and the slow hand composition and distribution. A keyboard like that of a typewriter controls the machine which produces not single type characters but lines of type or slugs which after being set are dropped back into the metal box and used over and over again. The Reporter will install this new machine at a very heavy expense and its addition to our present modern printing plant will put our office in a class by itself among Utah weekly newspapers. The splendid growth of our subscription list and the fact that we are publishing such a large amount of news matter each week necessitates the doing away with the old slow process of setting type by hand. With the Typograph a fair operator can set a column of type an hour and in the publication of a newspaper the machine does away with much of the worry and grief connected with putting the late news into type.

Will Resume The Shipment of Zinc

Yesterday Supt. C. C. Griggs of the May Day and Uncle Sam mines received a message from the Salt Lake office to the effect that the freight rate upon the zinc ore from the mines of this district has again been adjusted and that shipments can be resumed on Monday. About half a dozen Tintic mines will now be able to send out shipments of zinc among the n being the two mentioned above, the Yankee Lower Mammoth and East Tintic Development.

Up to the present time the May Day company has shipped a total of seven cars of zinc and while the cars were loaded quite light containing not to exceed 40 tons the ore netted a little better than $900 a car. Mr. Griggs aims to keep the zinc ore up to a point where it will net the company about $20 per ton and this means that it is possible to mix a considerable amount of the low grade ore carrying from 25 to 30 per cent in with the higher grade. In addition to the seven cars upon which settlement has already been made the May Day now has four cars of ore at the sampling mill at Silver City and at least five more cars in the bins at the mine. The large quantity of ore which is now exposed on various levels of the mine makes it safe to say that the May Day can be depended upon for a carload each day for an indefinite period.

The Uncle Sam mine also contains some nice deposits of zinc from which it should be an easy matter to take from two to three cars a month. This mine will be on the market with its second shipment of zinc early in the coming week.

Visited the Erickson District

Jackson McChrystal and Phil Clark were out from Salt Lake early in the week and on Wednesday morning left for Death Canyon where they are interested in a very promising mining proposition upon which B. F. Flemer has been working for a number of years. Mr. Flemer has already succeeded in opening a vein of splendid lead silver ore to a depth of better than 300 feet and the only thing that is now needed to place this property in the list of shippable is better facilities for getting the ore to the railroad.

Messrs. McChrystal and Clark have all kind of faith in the Erickson district in which the Death Canyon properties are located and are confident that those who have for years been pinning their faith to that section will soon be in a position to realize handsome returns.

WE'RE NEVER SATISFIED.

Lower Mammoth Now Loading Zinc Shipment.

A carload of very nice copper ore was loaded at the Lower Mammoth mine yesterday and Supt. Price says that he is now loading a car of zinc ore which will be started upon its way to the Kansas gas belt by Monday. The copper ore carrying 47 per cent copper, 5 ounces silver, $1 gold and 30 per cent iron was mined on the 1800 level and the low freight rate and favorable smelting contract makes it a very desirable product.

Old Time Bonanza Still Producing Big Tonnage.

For the past few weeks heavy shipments have been in order at the Mammoth mine, one of the old time bonanzas of the district and a property which is apparently good for many years of productiveness. This ore being taken in about equal proportion from the dump and the new stopes between the 600 and 800 levels. Supt. Samuel McIntyre says that the dump ore which is now being forwarded to the smelter is worth about $13 per ton while a higher grade ore worth in the neighborhood of $20 per ton is being mined from the new workings on the 600, 700 and 800 levels. The principal values being in copper. There is a very good showing of this grade of ore but occasionally the lime comes in such a manner that it is necessary to curtail shipments. The dump at the Mammoth no doubt contains a large amount of ore which can be shipped at a fair profit under existing conditions. One hundred and twenty-five men are now on the payroll at this mine and a few lessees are also operating in the old workings of the property.

B. Rich, administrator of the estate of the late Anna Marks, was out from the capital on Sunday and Monday and visited the White Cloud property in the southern end of the district. He was accompanied by a couple of mining men who are considering a proposition to either lease or purchase this ground.

Miners Request Raise in Wages

Over two hundred members of the Tintic District Miners Union attended the special meeting of that organization last Sunday afternoon and after a lengthy discussion of matters pertaining to the welfare of the men who are employed in and around the mines of this district elected a committee of five to present a request to the Mine Owners Association for a raise in wages. This committee which will probably meet with the mine owners at an early date includes the following well known union men: James Hanley, president of the local union; V. J. Tischner, Daniel Connelly, George Burt and George Hales, the latter being a resident of Mammoth. J. V. Morton, the secretary of the Tintic District Miners Union, has written to the Mine Owners Association requesting an interview and it is quite probable that arrangements will be made to have this matter taken up at the meeting of the operators in Salt Lake tomorrow (Saturday).

At the meeting on Sunday the members of the above committee were instructed to report to the union after their conference with the mine owners. For the present the matter is left entirely in the hands of this committee and it is not generally known just what increase will be asked for.

Miners and mine employees both made and out of the union feel that the request for a raise in wages is entirely within reason and that they are asking only for what is justly due them. The argument which they put up in support of such a contention is this: The present high cost of everything which they have to buy. It is stated that while the wages paid to the employees of the mine have remained at a certain point for a number of years the price of everything that the miner needs has been advancing. Then upon the other hand the miners point to the fact that the mining business is more profitable than it has been in many years owing to the splendid prices which the metals are now bringing.

At the present time muckers in the Tintic mines are receiving $2.75 per day, muckers on the main line and timbermen $3.25. In some instances where the mines work seven days a week muckers are paid $2.50 and timbermen $3.75.

East Tintic Dev. Will Ship

Samuel Buckley, who is leasing at the East Tintic Development property in the eastern end of the district expects to commence the shipment of zinc ore within the next week about 150 tons carrying about 40 per cent now being piled up on the dump. There is a very fair showing of zinc ore in this property and the lessee should be able to maintain a tonnage of a carload a week. Mr. Buckley has already secured a favorable smelting contract.

Install New Compressor

The new electrically driven compressor is now in operation at the Swansea Cons. property at Silver City and this change in the mine's equipment will mean a reduction in the operating expenses as it is now possible to dispense with one of the boilers. The usual heavy tonnage is being sent out from this mine but it is generally understood that the ore is of a lower grade than that which was placed upon the market some time ago and which resulted in the wiping out of the indebtedness to say nothing of the accumulation of a far surplus. From a very reliable source it is learned that on the first of the present month the treasury of the Swansea contained about $8,000, this amount having since been reduced about one half in the settlement of the monthly pay roll and other expenses. It is barely possible that the Swansea tonnage will be reduced for the mill which the Knight people are now preparing to erect.

Supt. John Hoffman states that the present tonnage of about eleven cars a week is being taken from the 940 and 850 levels where the showing is very encouraging. On the 800 Mr. Hoffman is drifting on another fissure which runs parallel with the one from which the ore is being mined and this drift is following a small stringer of very good lead ore.

At the Tintic Central,

Supt. Thomas McDaway states that conditions are quite favorable at the Tintic Central property where prospecting has been going on for some time at a depth of 950 feet. The drift on this level is being driven almost due east at present and its face is about 800 feet from the shaft. Blue siliceous lime heavily charged with pyrites is now being cut as this drift is driven forward and Mr. Holdaway considers this a very good indication of ore.

Yankee Shipping Zinc.

According to Supt. Lou Merriman the Yankee Cons. mine will be able to send out four carloads of fine zinc ore next Monday, two teams being busy in the loading of this ore at the present time. The output of zinc from the Yankee has been contracted for by the Kansas Zinc Co. of Altoona, Kansas, and the check which was received in settlement for the four carloads which were sent out from the mine during the month of August amounted to $1,356.67 or nearly $1,100 per carload. The showing of zinc in the old workings of the Yankee indicates that the mine will be good for an output of about two carloads each week.

The low grade dump at the Yankee from which the company has been shipping quite heavily for the past few months has now been pretty well cleaned up and there will be no further shipments of this character of ore.

Something like 350 feet to the east of the shaft the drift on the 2,000 level has just encountered a large break which is well filled with manganese and other material which indicates that ore may be located in the near future. These mineral stains upon fissures and the presence of large bodies of manganese make about the best showing that has yet been found at that depth. The drift on the 1800 level has now reached a point beneath the old workings of the mine and while nothing of importance has yet been located the piece of ground which is being prospected is a most promising one.

At the Chief Cons. Mine.

Manager Walter Fitch of the Chief Cons. mines states that while there are no new developments underground the ore bodies are opening up in the usual fine manner and that the miners are having no difficulty in keeping the output up to its present high standard. Two weeks ago the mine was on the market with 26 carloads of ore last week 27 carloads were sent out and for the present week the output was 23 cars.

Lehi-Tintic Never Looked Better

Manager George Nichols of the Lehi-Tintic has in town from the North Tintic district early in the week and told of very encouraging conditions at this property. The main tunnel nel is now following a big fissure which contains almost everything but the pay ore. Mr. Nichols says that this tunnel is now in a distance of about 1475 feet and that he feels confident that the next cross fissure that is encountered will carry the ore. The cross cut started some time ago from the main tunnel has been driven for a distance of about 60 feet and is now in black quartz which is also well mineralized.

Dividend From Gold Chain.

The directors of the Gold Chain company held a meeting at Provo on Wednesday and posted the mine's second quarterly dividend of 2-cents per share or $20,000. This money will be sent out to the shareholders on the 20th of the present month. Underground conditions are highly satisfactory at the Gold Chain shipments have for some time been very heavy and the ore is of a splendid grade.

Colorado Passes Dividend.

When the directors of the Colorado company met at Provo on Wednesday it was decided to pass the regular quarterly dividend. It is stated that the treasury of the mine contains in the neighborhood of $70,000 but that the earnings for the past few months have been somewhat smaller than usual. In view of the fact that the big ore body from which dividends of $2,570,000 have been paid has been pretty well worked out it was thought advisable to maintain a good surplus in the treasury as some extensive development work will undoubtedly be necessary.

There is a large quantity of the lower grade ore exposed in the old workings of the Colorado and with the completion of the new mill the property will no doubt be in line for further earnings.

Big Sum in Iron Blossom Treasury.

Iron Blossom stock slumped off a few points with the announcement that the lower grade ores were to be held until the completion of the concentrating plant which the Knight people propose to erect at Silver City but there appears to be absolutely no reason for this reduction in the selling price of the company's shares. A statement from the mine office indicates that the treasury now contains better than $275,000 and notwithstanding the fact that the lower grade ore is being held back for the new mill the mine is sending out a very respectable tonnage and the best part of it is that the grade of ore now being mined runs into money pretty rapidly.

Washington—By the action of the senate in passing the Borah bill a comprehensive investigation of the relations of capital and labor will be undertaken by the federal government. The investigation is the direct outgrowth of the McNamara dynamite outrages at Los Angeles Cal and the revolutionary strike at Lawrence Mass. It was sought by employers associations labor unions and Rabbi Wise of New York James Addams of Chicago Dr. Edward T. Devine of the Columbia University and Allen Burns of Pittsburgh and other social settlement workers. The result it is hoped will aid in solving the tremendous problems confronting the state and nation and to facilitate the adoption of policies which will prevent strikes and lockouts or enable their prompt settlement and place capital and labor in more satisfactory touch with each other. The investigation is to be conducted by a commission of nine persons to be appointed by President Taft and with the advice and consent of the senate. If the appointments be of high class men and women the investigation will produce profitable results. If they should not be then it will be a failure.

Cheyenne Wyo.—The coal mine owners and national representatives of the United Mine Workers of America have reached an agreement on Aug. 3 after a ten day conference here in which the interest of 10,000 miners in the Wyoming coal field was involved and a strike averted. The new agreement will run until Sept. 1, 1914. It provides for a substantial wage increase and a very material improvement in the working conditions of the coal mines of that field. The United Mine Workers organization is in good shape and the membership steadily increasing.

Buffalo N. Y.—William J. Connors made an unsuccessful attempt to settle the strike of 1,500 lake freight handlers who went out for an increase in wages and betterment of working conditions. Mr. Connors was ready to concede every point demanded except the advance in wages from 33 to 35 cents an hour his contracts with the railroads and the lake lines making that impossible he declared. The meeting ended in a noisy demonstration during which Mr. Connors left the hall.

Cincinnati—The lowest wages paid to plasterers in this city the rate here being $3.06 for a nine-hour day and at Reading Pa. the rate is $3.20 for an eight-hour day. The highest rates are in California and the interior mountain states where the minimum wage is seven dollars per day with the eight-hour day and a week of 44 hours with Saturday half holiday the year round. The number of members in good standing at last report of the Operative Plasterers International association was 15,314.

Holyoke Mass.—The paper makers organizations have obtained an eight hour day and what is known in the trade as the three hour system in seventeen mills in and around this city. None of the men now enjoying the eight hour day have received any reduction in wages. Some received an increase. The rates run from $3.75 a day to machine tenders and heater engineers to $1.75 a day to fourth hands.

Adams Mass.—There seems little prospect of an immediate settlement of the weavers strike which has closed the four mills of the Berkshire Cotton Manufacturing company here and made about 2,500 operatives idle. The strike was called on August 5 after the company had refused to discharge four operatives who did not belong to the weavers union.

Ottawa Canada—During July 3,414 British immigrants were distributed among the farmers of Ontario. This is about double the number for last year. It is estimated that 25,000 British immigrants have been distributed in the province of Ontario for the last year.

Des Moines Iowa—The Iowa commission appointed at demand of organized labor to investigate prison contract labor in that state has filed a report in which all objections against the system made by organized labor are fully sustained and the system is unqualifiedly condemned.

San Francisco—There are some 25,000 wage earning women employed in about 4,000 establishments in San Francisco.

Cleveland Ohio—Several hundred women are doing the work of men and alongside the men in Cleveland foundries.

Pittsburgh Pa.—By an almost unanimous vote of the entire membership on referendum declared in favor of postponing the opening of the international convention of the molders union to be held in Milwaukee from the early part of September to the 23d because the annual state fair for Wisconsin will open early in September.

New York—Telegraphers of the West Jersey and Seashore railroad and the Trenton division of the Pennsylvania have joined the other telegraphers east of Pittsburgh and Erie who are demanding better conditions.

Melbourne Australia—The increase in the number of strikes all through Australia has set all the justice making machines in motion to devise ways of suppressing the labor movement. The first country to propose legislation which would practically suppress strikes is Queensland. A new measure providing that labor organizations must take a secret ballot of their entire membership on any strike proposition and must give the employers two weeks notice previous to the stoppage of work has been introduced by the government of Queensland. Should it be passed it will give the employers a chance to procure strikebreakers during the two weeks notice given by the employees and will make it impossible for the workers to win strikes. There is great opposition to the measure.

Chicago—Kalmann Friedman, a leading member of the United Brotherhood of Tailors said that the work of organizing the clothing workers in this city in preparation for concerted action was now fairly started and that by November 125,000 workers would be completely organized. Efforts will be made to avert a general strike. Mr. Friedman said but in case the demands are refused a general strike will ensue in all branches of the clothing industry. The demands of the workers will be for a nine-hour day the union wage scale and abolition of the sweating system. About 6,000 pants vest buttonhole knee pants and children's jacket makers are now organized.

Providence R. I.—Mr. McMahon of the Providence Folders Association reports that in every important bleachery print house and dye house a minimum wage of $15 per week of 56 hours is being paid to union men. Previous to organization the highest wages paid was $2 a day for a 60-hour week. Mr. McDonnell president of the Philadelphia local reports that the wages of union dyers have advanced from 10 to 40 per cent that 35 shops in that city are now paying a minimum of 25 cents per hour. Previous to organization the minimum wage paid to dyers in Philadelphia was $12 for a week of 60 hours.

Augusta Me.—The first meeting of the Farmers Union as a corporation organized by farmers from all over Maine for the more systematic grading and marketing of farm products particularly potatoes and apples was held recently at Bangor. It was voted to adopt a sealed package of select stock apples and potatoes to be sold under the trade mark of the union and peck half bushel and bushel cartons. Plans are practically complete for handling the fall crop of the growers in the union.

London England—Under the Minimum Wage act recently become effective in England the wages of coal mine workers in South Wales have been fixed by the commission created by the act and the award is only slightly lower than the wages demanded in the schedule submitted last January by the Miners Federation of Great Britain for these collieries.

New York—England is very busy said Frank A. Vanderlip president of a New York bank. They have never been so busy before in her history. She has had her troubles with labor, wages, politics, Lloyd George but their business is better than it ever was before. They are active in all branches. England is building more ships than all the rest of the world.

Los Angeles Cal.—I consider it neither illegal nor unethical to buy information from a detective says Clarence Darrow. My experience of 15 or 20 years has taught me the detective agencies have detectives in every labor organization in the country—often the president or secretary—and that they know more about the business of the unions than the unions know.

New York—For the month of May the journeymen tailors paid to its members $3,242.50 as strike benefits $1,746 as sick benefits and $1,155 as death benefits. The balance in the general fund of the organization was $74,275.60.

Liverpool England—A renewal of labor troubles here is threatened owing to the refusal of the dock board to bring the wages of firemen and crane men up to the local standard. Four hundred men struck at the new Gladstone docks.

Shenandoah Pa.—Anthracite miners of this vicinity accorded John P. White of the United Mine Workers of America a welcome vociferous in its cordiality when he came into that region on tour a few days ago.

Boston—The cases of the pit men who struck with the carmen at the Fields Corner division barns June 7 was decided last week and was to the effect that they too must be restored to their old places. They were immediately. The work or organizing the old men who remained on their cars during the strike has been practically completed the union officers state as on some divisions but one or two of them are still outside the union. The shop mechanical and pit men are also being organized and 326 of these men have joined that branch of the union.

TYRANNY OF HER DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

'If you'll promise not to tell a soul Charlotte said Mrs. Darlington to her hostess. I'll admit that I'm suffering from an overdose of daughter-in-law. A certain amount is a mental stimulus—too much simply stifles.

Frances my son Arthur's wife came to visit me just at the time all well regulate housekeepers think they have to go through the deadening process known as housecleaning. She went on. Now don't breathe it to a soul but I never clean house. I certainly try to keep things nice and comfortable but my natural instinct is to avoid dirt. My attitude is that if it will leave me alone I will leave it alone.

Who minds a little dust under the beds and in the closets? I will answer my own conundrum by telling you that Frances does. She is perfectly intolerant about it. She is constantly talking about germs and microbes. Since I am confessing all my shortcomings I will admit that I don't believe in microbes anyway. They're far too small. Frances does though. Oh dear yes she does.

She simply can't sit down and read happily unless the house has been thoroughly swept and garnished. I can do it without a tremor. I can leave dishes unwashed until every dish in the house has been used and not feel a qualm. Frances has the dishes round up and washed so quickly after they have been used that she leaves you with a defrauded feeling as though you had been done out of part of your meal.

The morning after she came I saw her eyeing the living room curtains which I must confess were not immaculate.

Don't look at those curtains Frances' I said in my merry light hearted way. I know they're not very clean but I'm going to have the laundress wash and iron them. Monday.

Frances half opened her mouth then shut it again. I wondered at the time why she didn't say whatever it was she had on her mind but later in the day I found out.

Mother she said tactfully—Frances is very tactful—that afternoon when we were sitting in the living room having what I considered a cozy little chat. I've been wondering if it wouldn't be nicer if we should get some curtain stretchers and stretch the curtains on them instead of having the laundress wash and iron them.

To make a long story short she dragged me downtown that very afternoon and we bought curtain stretchers. The next morning with her own hands she washed those curtains. Oh there is no doubt that she is wonderful. I stand in the greatest awe of any one who can wash things clean. I never could. They're always much worse when I finish with them than when I began.

After the curtains were arranged to suit her I happened to mention that I had some material which I intended to make into comforters when the spirit moved me. Again speaking metaphorically she fell upon that material tooth and nail. Then for days she and I struggled and perspired amid billows of cotton.

When one morning she accidentally opened the door of the chamber of horrors I thought she was going to faint. The chamber of horrors by the way is the room into which it is the time honored custom of the family to pitch everything that the family wishes to rid itself of. Personally I get along very nicely by simply shutting my eyes opening the door slightly and shying in the article. Then after the door is shut I have no further qualms. But Frances got quite white when she looked in. She made me feel—she did it tactfully—that no decent self-respecting woman could exist in a house with a chamber of horrors. So together we pulled and hauled and worked and suffered and threw things away and had a perfectly horrible time generally but we finally emerged in that pathetic and despicable condition called as neat as a pin.

It took us days to do it and we were both nearly dead when we got through. But the very next morning after we finished if you can believe me I found her with her head out of the window and the air of a hound that is just getting the scent. She was listening to a vacuum cleaner that was chugging across the street!

Oh mother she said I'm going out to see if those men can't come to morrow.

Frances' I said you will do nothing of the kind. I positively refuse to be any cleaner than I am. From now to the end of your visit I intend to have my kind of a good time even if there isn't a floor swept or a dish washed.

I did it said Mrs. Darlington gloatingly. I kept Frances whirling in a perfect vortex of matinees and luncheons and afternoon teas and I had a beautiful time. But I relented the day before she went away and let her clean up the house for me. Frances is a dear girl. Mrs. Darlington declared finally but she certainly has a weird idea of having a good time! —Chicago Daily News

Poultry Diseases

More diseases are contracted by poultry between June and September than during any other part of the year. In summer one is apt to become more or less careless in their attention to the flock and thus lose heavily. Guard against this condition by giving them a little extra care.

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphian is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland. James Armstrong Maitland's protégé falls in love with her. His persistent wooing irritates the girl but she is restless and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer.

It was four years and nine months exactly Bob dravled old Kirkby who well knew what was coming. Yes I dare say you are right. I was up at Evergreen at the time looking after timber interests when a mule came wandering into the camp saddle and pack still on his back. I knowed that there mule said Kirkby. I'd sold it to a fellow named Newbold that had come out yere an married Louise Rosser. I'd seen her daughter an him dead an a fine young man from the east not a bit of a tenderfoot nuther a minin engin' meer he called himself.

Well I happened to be there too you remember continued Maitland. And they made up a party to go and hunt up the man thinking something might have happened. You see explained Kirkby we was all mighty fond of Louise Rosser the bull camp was actin like a father to her at the time so long as she hadn't nobody else. We was all at the wedding too some six months afore the gal married him on her own hook of course nobody makin her but somehow she didn't seem none too happy although Newbold who was a perfect gent treated her white as far as we knowed.

The old man stopped again and resumed his pipe. Kirkby you tell the story said Maitland.

Not me said Kirkby I have seen men shot afore for takin words out n other men's mouths an I ain't never done that yit. You always were one of the most silent men I ever saw laughed George. Why that day Pete yere got shot accidental an had his whole breast tore out wen we was lumbering over on Black mountain all you said was Wash him off put some aile grease on him an tie him up. That's so answered Pete an there must have been somethin powerful soothin in that aile grease for here I am safe an sound to this day. It takes an old man assented Kirkby to know when to keep his mouth shut. I learned it at the muzzle of a gun.

I never knew before laughed Maitland how still a man you can be. Well to resume the story having nothing to do I went out with the posse the sheriff gathered up.

Him not thinkin there had been any foul play ejaculated the old man. No certainly not.

Well what happened Uncle Bob?

Inquired Enid. Just you wait said young Bob who had heard the story. This is an awful good story Cousin Enid.

I can't wait much longer returned the girl. Please go on.

Two days after we left the camp we came across an awful figure ragged blood stained wasted to a skeleton starved.

I have seed men in extreme cases afore inteposed Kirkby but never none like him.

Nor I continued Maitland. Was it Newbold? asked Enid.

Yes.

And what had happened to him?

He and his wife had been prospecting in these very mountains she had fallen over a cliff and broken her neck so terribly that Newbold had to shoot her.

What exclaimed Bradshaw. You don't mean that he actually killed her?

That's what he done answered old Kirkby.

Poor man murmured Enid.

But why? asked Phillips.

They were five days away from a settlement there wasn't a human being within a hundred and fifty miles of them not even an Indian continued Maitland. She was so frightfully broken and mangled that he couldn't carry her away.

But why couldn't he leave her and go for help? asked Bradshaw.

The wolves the bears or the vultures would have got her. These woods and mountains were full of them then and there are some of them left now I guess.

The two little girls crept closer to their big cousin each casting anxious glances beyond the fire light.

Oh you're all right little gals said Kirkby reassuringly they wouldn't come nigh us while this fire is burnin an they've been pretty well hunted out I guess; sides there's men yere who'd like nothin better'n draw a bead on a big bar.

And so continued Maitland when she begged him to shoot her to put her out of her misery he did so and then he started back to the settlement.

to tell his story and stumbled on us looking after him.

What happened then?

I went back to the camp said Maitland. We loaded Newbold on a mule and took him with us. He was so crazy he didn't know what was happening he went over the shooting again and again in his delirium. It was awful.

Did he die?

I don't think so was the answer but really I know nothing further about him. There were some good women in that camp we put him in their hands and I left shortly afterwards.

I kin tell the rest said old Kirkby. Knowin more about the mountains than most people hereabouts I led the men that didn't go back with Bob an Newbold to the place where he said his woman fell an there we found her her body leastways.

But the wolves? queried the girl.

He'd drug her into a kind of a holler and piled rocks over her. He'd gone down into the canon wich was something frightful an then climbed up to were shed lodged. We had plenty of rope havin brought it along a purpose an we let ourselves down to the shelf where she was a lyn. We wrapped her body up in blankets an roped it an finally drug her up on the old Injun trail leastways I suppose it was made afore there was any Injuns an brought her back to Evergreen camp wich the only thing about it that was green was the swing doors on the saloon. We got a parson out from Denver an give her a Christian burial.

Is that all? asked Enid as the old man paused again.

Nope.

Oh the man? exclaimed the woman with quick intuition.

He recovered his senses so they to d us an ween we got back had gone.

Where? was the instant question. Old Kirkby stretched out his hands. Don't ax me he said he'd jest gone. I ain't never seed or heard of him sence. Poor little Louise Rosser she did have a hard time.

Yes said Enid but I think the man had a harder time than she. He loved her?

It looked like it answered Kirkby. If you had seen him his remorse his anguish his horror said Maitland you wouldn't have had any doubt about it. But it is getting late in the mountains everybody gets up at daybreak. Your sleeping bags are in the tents ladies time to go to bed.

As the party broke up old Kirkby rose slowly to his feet he looked meaningly toward the young woman upon whom the spell of the tragedy still lingered he nodded toward the young brook and then repeated his speaking glance at her. His meaning was patent although no one else had seen the covert invitation.

Come Kirkby said the girl in quick response you shall be my escort. I want a drink before I turn in. No never mind she said as Bradshaw and Phillips both volunteered not this time.

The old frontiersman and the young girl strolled off together. They stopped by the brink of the rushing torrent a few yards away. The noise that it made drowned the low tones of their voices and kept the others busy preparing to retire from hearing what they said.

That ain't quite all the story Miss Enid said the old trapper meaningly. There was another man.

What exclaimed the girl.

Oh there wasn't nothin wrong with Louise Rosser wich she was Louise Newbold but there was an other man I suspected it afore that's why she was sad. Wen we found her body I knowed it.

I don't understand.

These'll explain said Kirkby. He drew out from his rough hunting coat a package of soiled letters they were carefully enclosed in an oil skin and tied with a faded ribbon. You see he continued holding them in his hand yet carefully concealing them from the people at the fire. Wen she fell off the cliff—somehow the mule lost his footing nobody never knowed how leastways the mule was dead an couldn't tell—she struck on a spur or shelf about a hundred feet below the brink evidently she was carryin the letters in her dress. Her bosom was frightfully tore open an the letters was lyn there. Newbold didn't see em because he went down into the canon an came up to the shelf or butte head where the body was lyn but we dropped down I was the first man down an I got em. Nobody else seen em an there ain't no human eyes not even my wife's that's ever looled on them letters except mine and now yours.

You are going to give them to me?

I am said Kirkby.

But why?

I want you to know the full story.

But why again?

I rather guess them letters'll tell answered the old man evasively. An I like you and I don't want to see you throwed away.

What do you mean? asked the girl curiously thrilling to the solemnity of the moment the seriousness the kind affection of the old frontiersman the weird scene the fire light the tents gleaming ghostlike the black wall of the canon and the tops of the mountain range broadening out beneath the stars in the clear sky where they twinkled above her head the strange and terrible story and now the letters in her hand which somehow seemed to be imbued with human feeling. Kirkby patted her on the shoulder. Read the letters he said they'll tell the story. Good night.

CHAPTER IV

The Pool and the Water Sprite

Long after the others in the camp had sunk into the profound slumber of weary bodies and good consciences a solitary candle in the small tent occupied by Enid Maitland alone gave evidence that she was busy over the letters which Kirkby had handed to her.

It was a very thoughtful girl in deed who confronted the old frontiersman the next morning. At the first convenient opportunity when they were alone together she handed him the packet of letters.

Have you read em? he asked.

Yes.

Well you keep em said the old man gravely. Maybe you'll want to read em agin.

But I don't understand why you want me to have the.

Well I'm not quite sure myself why but leastways I do an—

I shall be very glad to keep them said the girl still more gravely slip ping them into one of the pockets of her hunting shirt as she spoke.

The packet was not bulky the letters were not many nor were they of any great length. She could easily carry them on her person and in some strange and unexplainable way she was rather glad to have them. She could not as she had said see any personal application to herself in them and yet in some way she did feel that the solution of the mystery would be hers some day. Especially did she think this on account of the strange but quiet open emphasis of the old hunter.

There was much to do about the camp in the morning. Horses and burros to be looked after fire wood to be cut plans for the day arranged excursions laid out mountain climbs projected. Later on unwonted claims must be taught to cast the fly for the mountain trout which filled the brook and pool and all the varied duties details and fascinating possibilities of camp life must be explained to the newcomers.

The first few days were days of learning and preparation days of mishap and misadventure of joyous laughter over blunders in getting set up or learning the mysteries of rod and line or becoming hardened and acclimated. The weather proved perfect. It was late October and the nights were very cold but there was no rain and the bright sunny days were invigorating and exhilarating to the last degree. They had huge fires and plenty of blankets and the colder it was in the night the better they slept.

It was an intensely new experience for the girl from Philadelphia but she showed a marked interest and adaptability and entered with the keenest zest into all the opportunities of the charming days. She was a good sports woman and she soon learned to throw a fly with the best of them. Old Kirkby took her under his especial protection and as he was one of the best rods in the mountains she had every advantage.

She had always lived in the midst of life. Except in the privacy of her own chamber she had rarely ever been alone before—not twenty feet from a man she thought whimsically but here the charm of solitude attracted her she liked to take her rod and wander off alone. She actually enjoyed it.

The canon stream that flowed down the main stem fed by many affluents from the mountain sides and in each of those voracious trout appeared. She explored them as she had opportunity sometimes with the others but more often by herself. She discovered charming and exquisite nooks. Little stretches of grass the size perhaps of a small room flower decked fern bordered overshadowed by tall giant pine trees the sunlight filtering through their thin foliage checkering the verdant carpet beneath. Huge moss covered boulders wet with the everdashing spray of the roaring brooks lay in midstream and with other natural stepping stones hardly invited her to cross to either shore. Waterfalls laughed musically in her ears deep still pools tempted her skill and address.

Sometimes leaving rod and basket by the waterside she climbed some particularly steep acclivity of the canon wall and stood poised upon a nymph of the woods upon some pinnacle of rock rising needle like at the canon's edge above the sea of verdure which the wind waved to and fro beneath her feet. There in the bright light with the breeze blowing her golden hair she looked like some Norse goddess blue eyed exultant triumphant.

She was a perfectly formed woman on the ancient noble lines of Milo rather than the degenerate softness of Medici. She grew stronger of limb and fuller of breath quicker and steadier of eye and hand cooler of nerve in these demanding compelling adventures among the rocks in this mountain air. She was not a tall woman indeed slightly under rather than over the medium size but she was so perfectly proportioned she carried herself with the fearlessness of a young chamolts that she looked taller than she was. There was not an ounce of superfluous flesh upon her yet she had the grace of Hebe the strength of Pallas Athene and the swiftness of motion of Atalanta. Had she but carried bow and spear had she worn tunic and sandals she might have stood for Diana and she would have had no cause to blush by comparison with the finest model of Fraxiteles chisel or the most splendid and glowing example of Apelles brush.

Uncle Robert was delighted with her his contribution to her western outfit was a small Winchester. She displayed astonishing aptitude under his instructions and soon became wonderfully proficient with that deadly weapon and with a revolver also. There was little danger to be apprehended in the daytime among the mountains the more experienced men thought still it was wise for the girl always to have a weapon in readiness so in her journeyings either the Winchester was slung from her shoulder or carried in her hand or else the Colt dangled at her hip. At first she took both but finally it was with reluctance that she could be persuaded to take either. Nothing had ever happened. Save for a few birds now and then she had seemed the only tenant of the wilderness of her choice.

One night after a camping experience of nearly two weeks in the mountains and just before the time for breaking up and going back to civilization she announced that early the next morning she was going down the canon for a day's fishing excursion.

None of the party had ever followed the little river very far but it was known that some ten miles below the stream merged in a lovely gem like lake in a sort of crater in the mountains. From thence by a series of water falls it descended through the foothills to the distant plains beyond. The others had arranged to climb one especially dangerous and ambitious provoking peak which towered above them and which had never before been surmounted so far as they knew. Enid enjoyed mountain climbing. She liked the uplift in feeling that came from going higher and higher till some crest was gained but on this occasion they urged her to accompany them in vain.

When the fixity of her decision was established she had a number of offers to accompany her but declined them all bidding the others go their way. Mrs. Maitland who was not feeling very well old Kirkby who had climbed too many mountains to feel much interest in that game and Pete the horse wrangler who had to look after the stock remained in camp. The others with the exception of Enid started at daybreak for their long ascent. She waited until the sun was about an hour high and then bade good bye to the three and began the descent of the canon. Traveling light for she was going far—farther indeed than she knew—she left her Winchester at home but carried the revolver with the fishing tackle and substantial luncheon.

Now the river—a river by courtesy only—and the canon turned sharply back on themselves just beyond the little meadow where the camp was pitched. Past the tents that had been their home for this joyous period the river ran due east for a few hundred feet after which it curved sharply doubled back and flowed westward for several miles before it gradually swung around to the east on its proper course again.

It had been Enid's purpose to cut across the hills and strike the river where it turned eastward once more avoiding the long detour back. In fact she had declared her intention of doing that to Kirkby and he had given her careful directions so that she should not get lost in the mountains.

But she had plenty of time and no excuse or reason for saying it. She never tired of the charm of the canon therefore instead of plunging directly over the spur of the range she followed the familiar trail and after she had passed westward far beyond the limits of the camp to the turning she decided in accordance with that utterly irresponsible thing a woman's will that she would not go down the canon that day after all but that she would cross back over the range and strike the river a few miles above the camp and go up the canon.

She had been up in that direction a few times but only for a short distance as the ascent above the camp was very sharp in fact for a little more than a mile the brook was only a succession of water falls the best fishing was below the camp and the finest woods were deeper in the canon. She suddenly concluded that she would like to see what was up in that unexplored scenery of the country and so with scarcely a momentary hesitation she abandoned her former plan and began the ascent of the range.

Upon decisions so lightly taken what momentous consequences depend? Whether she should go up the stream or down the stream whether she should follow the rivulet to its source or descend it to its mouth was apparently a matter of little moment yet her whole life turned absolutely upon that decision. The idle and unconsidered choice of the hour was fraught with gravest possibilities. Had that election been made with any suspicion with any foreknowledge had it come as the result of careful reasoning or farseeing of probabilities it might have been understandable but an impulse a whim the vagrant idea of an idle hour the careless chance of a moment and behold! a life is changed. On one side were youth and innocence freedom and happiness a happy gay a good rest by the cheerful fire at night on the other peril of life struggle love jealous self sacrifice devotion suffering knowledge—scarcely Eve herself when she stood apple in hand with ignorance and pleasure around her and enlightenment and sorrow before her had greater choice? o make.

How fortunate we are that the future is veiled that the palmists' prayer that he might know his end and be certified how long he had to live is one that will not and cannot be granted that it has been given to but One to foresee his own future.

The Girl Stood as It Were on the Roof of the World for no power apparently could enable us to stand up against what might be because we are only human beings not sufficiently alight with the spark divine. We wait for the end because we must but thank God we know it not until it comes.

Nothing of this appeared to the girl that bright sunny morning. Fate hid in those mountains under the guise of fancy. Lighthouse oared carefree fitted with buoyant joy over every fact of life she left the flowing water in the wilderness she was to find after all the world.

The ascent was longer and more difficult and dangerous than she had imagined when she first confronted it. Perhaps it was typical and foretold her progress. More than once she had to stop and carefully examine the face of the canon wall for a practicable trail more than once she had to exclaim extreme care in her climb but she was a bold and fearless mountaineer by this time and at last surmounting every difficulty she stood panting slightly a little tired but triumphant upon the summit.

The ground was rocky and broken the timber line was close above her and she judged that she must be several miles from the camp. The canon was very crooked she could see only a few hundred yards of it in any direction. She scanned her circumscribed limited horizon eagerly for the smoke from the great fire that they always kept burning in the camp but not a sign of it was visible. She was evidently a thousand feet above the river whence she had come. Her standing ground was a rocky ridge which fell away more gently on the other side for perhaps two hundred feet toward the same brook. She could see through vistas in the trees the upturned peaks of the main range bare chaotic snow crowned lonely majestic terrible.

The awe of the everlasting hills is greater than that of leaving seas. Save in the infrequent periods of calm the latter always moves the mountains are the same for all time. The ocean is quick restless living the mountains are calm still—dead.

The girl stood as it were on the roof of the world a solitary human being so far as she knew in the eye of God above her. Ah but the eyes divine look long and see far things beyond the human ken are all revealed. None of the party had ever come this far from the camp in this direction she knew. And she was glad to be the first as she felt obliged to observe that fact. I tude.

The two foremen and six shift bosses at the Centennial Eureka mine secured a couple of rigs last Sunday and made the trip to Santaquin for the purpose of paying a visit to Louis Peterson who was formerly employed as a boss at this mine but who could not resist the back to the soil call and who is now following the less strenuous if not more profitable occupation of farming. They planned to surprise Louis but when they landed at his home they found that he was out of town and of course there was nothing else to do but surprise Mrs. Peterson. The lady after taking the precaution to lock up the silverware made her unbidden guests as welcome as possible and while the bunch had brought along everything needed to eat and probably more than was needed to drink she insisted upon cooking up a big chicken dinner which faded away before the eight husky bosses like a snow ball in that region where asbestos suits are more to be desired than winter overcoats. Those who were in the party report a rattling good time and they certainly looked like they were telling the truth. A wire less from Santaquin and cables that they made the whole town just up and take notice of their presence. In the bunch were John Allen, John Enlund, S. M. Simpson, John Smith, Ed McLean, Edward Soderman, Frank Sneddon and Charles Lindstrom.

Prof Hickman Coming

The opportunity of hearing the well known lecturer Professor J. E. Hickman will be afforded the parents of Eureka next Sunday evening at the L. D. S. church. Professor Hickman has been lecturing in different parts of the state and comes to Eureka highly recommended. He will lecture on the Psychology of the Child and his discourse will be divided into four subjects viz the brain, the mind of children, their proper government and the influence of heredity on the citizens that are to come and adolescence. The professor who spent five years in Columbia College, New York in a careful study of this and kindred subjects has a thorough command of his theme and will give those who will be fortunate enough to hear him an exceedingly instructive discourse. We heartily endorse him in his work and urge the parents not to lose this golden opportunity. We take great pleasure in publishing a few of the many excellent testimonials he has received from the well known people of this state. The lecture on Sunday evening at the L. D. S. church will be free.

Springville Utah Sept 11 1912. We have attended Prof. Hickman's lectures and consider them very good. We recommend them to all parents to protect and promote the best interests of children and youths.

Motion Picture Experts Here

J. S. Dawley, one of the stage directors for the Edison motion picture house, accompanied by his company of moving picture experts, about ten in number, arrived in Eureka yesterday morning and in the afternoon took a trip around the famous Snake River and visited many points of interest in the Tintic District. Through the efforts of local business men they were induced to come here for the purpose of taking pictures of the mines and Mr. Dawley had also planned to stage a western drama in this section. The manager and the members of his party were more than pleased with the rugged western scenery surrounding Eureka, declaring it to be ideal for the dramas which they are now preparing, but the stormy weather of Thursday afternoon made it absolutely impossible for them to get any good pictures. They did try to make a few pictures but fear that there was not sufficient light to make them successful. The moving picture people have engagements on the coast which they could not possibly postpone and consequently cut short their visit in Eureka, leaving here on this morning's train with a promise to again visit this city upon their return from California.

At the Crescent Theatre on Thursday evening Manager Rhodes put on a special All-Edison program in honor of the visitors and Mr. Dawley, the manager and Mr. Sutton, Mr. Roth, Mr. Wilson, Miss Sawyer, a well known character in the Edison films, appeared on the stage, making brief talks in which they told of their experience in the motion picture business. The only regrettable thing in connection with the affair was the fact that the theatre was altogether too small to accommodate all who desired to see and hear these notable people.

Pretty Home Wedding on Tuesday.

A very beautiful and impressive wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fitch at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning when their eldest daughter, Miss Lillian Fitch, and Frederick Johnson, were joined in the holy bonds of wedlock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Maimon of the St. Patrick's Church in this city and was witnessed by members of the family and a few intimate friends. The young people, Miss Vaude Fitch, attended the bride while Howard Fitch acted as groomsmen. Notwithstanding the fact that preparations for the wedding were carried out in an unostentatious manner the various rooms in the spacious and attractive home of the Fitch family were artistically decorated with roses, lilies, etc., being used in carrying out the color scheme. Immediately after the ceremony an elegantly appointed wedding breakfast was served members of the wedding party the following out of town guests being present: Mrs. Cosgriff, Mrs. Louis McCormick and Mrs. Arthur B. Rd. of Salt Lake, Mrs. Thomas Cunningham and Miss Connick of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson left Eureka upon the afternoon train and after a brief stay with Salt Lake friends they left for San Francisco from which point they will sail for Honolulu to pass their honeymoon returning to Eureka about the middle of October.

Many friends will join with the Reporter in extending warmest congratulations.

SCOUTS SECURE STAR PITCHERS FOR GIANTS

Al Demaree Leading Twirler of Southern League

Combining the underbrush of the minor leagues are several scouts who are on the trail of young pitchers for the New York Nationals. No league is too small to be explored no tip so humble as to be ignored and no price too big if the goods are delivered. The Ivory hunters have been fanning the jungles for many weeks and now with drafting days are here they are springing their traps.

Manager McGraw recently announced the purchase of Pitcher Al Demaree from the Mobile club of the Southern League and of pitcher Bader from the Dallas club of the Texas League. Larne Kirby the Michigan bearcat is already on the job. Demaree and Bader and some others may show in the fall. But the whole mob will be in Marlin next spring.

Demaree is the leading pitcher of the Southern League. He is no raw youngster but this is the best season he has ever had. He has been roaming around in the minors about five years and once had a brief trial with the Yankees. No Southern League pitcher has held the enemy to as few runs and hits as Demaree. He has eight or ten shutouts to his credit and it is largely through his efforts that Mobile is in second place.

Demaree was one of the pitchers who shut out the Giants for thirteen innings in Mobile last spring when the champions played a scoreless tie with the Sea Gulls. He is a right hander with ability to mix em up and knows how to work batsmen. His speed is not remarkable and he is not a big chap.

Good With Stick

Lacking in years but already ranked as one of the excellent players of the day is Richard Carmona Hoblitzel the heavy port side hitter and able first baseman of the Reds. Hobby is only 22 years old but if a man was asked to pick a better first sacker counting in hitting ability winning spirit and general disposition he would be hard put to find a name to place ahead of that youngster from West Virginia.

Two brief years ago Hobby was an unknown quantity. When he reported to the Reds at Atlanta in the spring of 1909 it looked for a time as if he would be beaten for the first base job by Chick Autrey a left hander and a player of much more experience than Richard but by dint of sticking to his work with tenacity Hobby won out in the fight for the position and now there is not a club in the league which would not be proud to number him among its regular players.

AROUND THE BASES

Tim Jordan is wanted by the Pittsburg club. It is said that Joe Jackson Cleveland's great performer draws only $3 000.

Polly Parritt the best pitcher of the Fort Worth team has been sold to Los Angeles.

Thirty five extra training games have been played in the National league this season 26 in the American.

Charles Murphy is credited with saying "The more I hear from my scouts the better I like my present club."

Pitcher Keefe of the Reds should help Rochester immensely in its race for the flag in the International league.

Claude Rossman and Charlie Carr a couple of veterans are fighting for batting supremacy in the American association.

Kid Elberfeld who was in a bad way last spring is playing the game of his life for Montgomery in the Southern league.

Rafael Almeida is acting as scout for the Cincinnati team in the Southern league. Among others he has recommended himself.

"THE SCHOOLMARM" By Walt Mason

The teacher in the country school expounding lesson sum and rule and teaching children how to use to eight is where lasting honor lies. No better work than hers is done beneath the good old smiling sun. She bids the future of the state she guides the youths who will be great. She gives the child spirit wings and puts the way to noble things. And we who do all things so well and of our institutions veil reward the teacher with a roll that brings a shudder to her soul. We have our coin done up in crates and gladly hand it to the skates who fuss around in politics and fool us with their time worn tricks. In Congress one cheap common jack will loaf a week and draw more pay than some tired teacher toiling near will ever see in half a year. If I was running this old land I'd have a lot of workmen canned and congressmen and folks like those would have to work for board and clothes. I'd put the lid on scores of snags and pour into the teachers' laps wet wealth that now away is sinned for words and wiggles and wind.

Sewer Extensions Completed

The extension of the main street sewer, and the new sewer connecting main street with the public school buildings, have been completed. The city advertised for bids for this work and when the contractors of the state failed to submit figures the work was handed under the direction of A. A. Miller city engineer. In doing this work local labor was employed and it is generally understood that the city has saved some money on the job. The sewers having been installed for less than they could have been contracted for. The cost of the main street extension was $107 per linear foot and the cost of the sewer to the school buildings much of the excavation, for which was in solid rock, will be $160 per foot.

High School Will Open on Monday

The Tintic High School is scheduled to open in this city next Monday morning under the supervision of Prof. A. R. W. Hintze and until the completion of the new high school building the classes will be conducted in the same rooms which the Eureka high school occupied last season. The high school in this city is for the entire Tintic district and under the new law, which brought about the consolidation of the high schools of the state the pupils are conveyed to the high schools free of charge. This expense being borne by the high school district in which they reside. About twenty pupils from Mammoth and perhaps eight or ten from Silver City will attend the Tintic High School in this city and J. H. Veatch of Mammoth has been awarded the contract for hauling them to and from the school. Two vehicles will be required for this work.

The teachers in the high school here will be as follows:

Prof. Hintze principal. R. V. Smith formerly of Park City, for the mining science course with Miss Finlay. Miss Lasley and Miss Stoddard in charge of the various other classes.

The local high school course in mining takes the place of the usual agricultural course which is taught in the various high schools of the state.

Brief Comment.

Advertising publicity is what a newspaper has to sell. It is as much a commodity marked with a price as the wares in a dry goods store. Yet thousands of citizens who would not think of asking a merchant to give them so much as a necktie have no compunction in asking that an advertisement be given them by a newspaper. The thought does not even enter their heads that every inch of space so given in addition to providing them with the most valuable kind of service actually costs the newspaper in editorial labor in composition in metal in ink in stereotyping in printing etc. a very definite sum of money.

Almost every paper is liberal in giving of its space to further the cause of philanthropic public and other institutions enterprises and causes where the object is non commercial and conducive to the public welfare.

In return it expects only appreciation—appreciation of the fact that the press is giving its most costly commodity a service so valuable that the beneficiaries could not afford to buy it and without which their institution enterprise or cause could not exist a service which is always made at a sacrifice to the news columns and at an actual expense.

Some wise man has said think twice before you speak and then talk to yourself.

Circus men throughout the country have decided to dispense with bill board advertising and in the future the largest shows will depend upon the newspapers in telling the people of the coming of the circus.

Some people suspend their advertising during the dull season. That's what makes the dull season.

Be at war with your vices at peace with your neighbors and let every new year find you a better man—Ben Franklin.

Political Dope.

Friday the thirteenth and the Bull Moose convention in session at Ogden. Evidently the followers of the strenuous gentleman are not superstitious.

Mammoth delegates to the Bull Moose convention at Ogden passed through Eureka on Thursday morning the party including W. D. Loose, Grant Simons and John P. Anderson. They made the trip in the auto owned by Mr. Loose and the red bandanna. Today's battle flag was very much in evidence.

Members of the Progressive Party held their primaries in the three cities of the Tintic district last Saturday night at which time delegates were elected to attend the state convention which takes place at Ogden today.

Capt. Hugo Deprezn presided at the primary in this city and Charles Kryger acted as secretary. The six delegates chosen for the Ogden convention were Hugo Deprezn, Charles Kryger, Dr. Heuser, Jesse Mathews, D. D. Hanks and Martin Gimberford. The campaign committee will also include the same names with Captain Deprezn as chairman and Charles Kryger as secretary.

The primary at Mammoth on the same evening resulted in the election of W. D. Loose and John P. Anderson as delegates to the Ogden convention.

Frank Barrett formerly city marshal of this city has a large number of friends who would be pleased to have him make the race for the office of sheriff on the Republican ticket. Frank is simply laying back awaiting developments but if conditions are favorable he will get his headgear into the ring. With Mr. Hendrick the present sheriff out of the race the nomination will go either to Mr. Barrett or Preston Stilman.

Democratic County Convention

The Democratic county and senatorial conventions will be held in this city on Wednesday, Sept. 18th, at which time candidates for all the county offices and a candidate for the office of state senator for the Eighth Senatorial District will be nominated. L. C. Doty the local precinct chairman for the party has issued a call for a mass primary which will be held at the city hall on Monday evening at which time delegates will be elected for these two conventions. Eureka being entitled to eight delegates at each.

Now Using City Well

The city well is now furnishing a large portion of the water which is necessary to supply the patrons of the local water system. According to Watermaster Allan Craig about 1,500 gallons of water can be pumped from the well every twenty-four hours and the use of this water will mean a substantial reduction in the city's water bill. Previous to connecting the well with the city water system all of the water was purchased from the Eureka Hill Company. During the summer months the city water system had to supply about 5,500 cubic feet or about 200 gallons of water each day.

Death of Gustaf Carlson.

Gustaf Carlson aged 50 years died at his home in this city on Tuesday as the result of a paralytic stroke. The deceased came to Eureka two years ago from Colorado and recently was employed at the Uncle Sam mine. He suffered some from lead poisoning and has not been in very good health since his arrival here.

He leaves a wife and three children. The funeral services were conducted at the M. E. Church in this city this afternoon interment taking place in the city cemetery under the direction of Undertaker Wallace.

Prominent Utah Man Dies

Nicol Hood one of the best known Scots in Utah and a brother of Mrs. D. J. Russell of this city died at Salt Lake on Friday last week the burial taking place on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Russell of this city attended the funeral which was one of the most impressive ever held in the Sugar House Ward Chapel. Among the speakers was Governor William S. Fry who was a personal friend of the deceased. Mr. Hood was 56 years of age at the time of his death which resulted from Bright's disease.

Convention of Utah Federation of Labor.

Endorse Socialist Party and Denounce Samuel Gompers Who Tries to Deliver Labor Vote to Democrats.

The annual convention of the Utah State Federation of Labor convened in Eureka on Monday morning the sessions lasting until the following evening at 1 during those two days the delegates from the various unions of the state met to discuss a large amount of important business. There were present about sixty delegates representing forty trades unions. When the session was opened on Tuesday morning C. I. Berry city attorney made an address of welcome in which W. M. Kerr responded. President D. W. DeLoe then presided at the meeting and delivered an interesting address in which he laid out the work of a unionist during the past year and made timely suggestions regarding the lines before the convention. M. K. Russell the secretary of the Federation also presented his annual report. Most of the business was taken up on Monday with a routine not including the introduction of resolutions presented in amendment to the bylaws etc. while on Tuesday the delegates elected new officers. Selected Salt Lake as the place for the next convention and voted upon the adoption of the resolution which had been introduced previously to that time.

About fifteen resolutions were adopted the most important ones being briefly as follows:

An endorsement of the Socialist party as a resolution warning the members of the Federation against the two other parties and especially against the Democratic national platform and the insincerity of the presidential candidate on that ticket.

The action of Samuel Gompers in attempting to deliver over the labor vote to one of the old parties was vigorously denounced.

Members of organized labor urged to support the blue-label of the cigar makers union.

A protest against the present manner of conducting employment bureaus and a recommendation that a state bureau be established.

A protest against the many violations of the law relating to the employment of women and girls in factories stores etc. recommending the appointment of an inspector whose duty it will be to enforce the laws also favoring the adoption of a minimum wage scale of $8 per week for women so employed.

Urging all unions to assist the members of the Salt Lake Federation of Labor in purchasing its new labor temple $200 worth of stock purchased by the state Federation.

Commercial clubs business houses and other associations censured for sending away for printing matter such as should be handled within the state. All business men urged to support Utah printing establishments.

The Inter-Mountain Worker of Salt Lake was endorsed as the official organ of organized labor in Utah.

Union men urged to patronize union barbershops.

A disapproval and protest against the wearing of special dress or uniforms in high schools of the state and urge the abolition of all uniforms in state institutions of learning.

Request organized labor to support the union garment workers in every way possible.

That the officers of the American Federation of Labor be elected by referendum vote.

Secretary instructed to write protesting against any effort of the American Federation of Labor seeking in public in favor of prohibition.

That the members of the Utah Federation of Labor extend a vote of thanks to the W. F. M. Ladies Auxiliary Mayor and all other city officers and others for the royal manner in which delegates to the convention were treated.

The new officers of the organization are as follows:

President A. H. Kempton Salt Lake Street Car Workers.
1st vice president Robert Adamson Miners Union Eureka.
2nd vice president Miss Maude West Garment Workers Ogden.
3rd vice president F. B. Utter Electrical Workers Salt Lake.
4th vice president George Thibne Brewery Workers Ogden.
5th vice president J. P. Leahy Miners Union Park City.
Secretary and treasurer M. C. Howard Molders Union Salt Lake.

An organizer was appointed for each city Robert Adamson being selected for Eureka.

One of the pleasing features in connection with the convention which was held in this city was the banquet given on Monday evening. About three hundred people attended and thoroughly enjoyed the splendid menu which was served by the members of the Eureka Auxiliary to the Tintic District Miners Union. President James Hanley of the local union made an appropriate address in which he welcomed the visiting delegates and introduced President Knerr of the Salt Lake Laundry Workers Union as toastmaster for the evening. The local people who were speakers at the banquet table were Mayor A. L. Mitchell, C. E. Berry and Jacob Hatt. Brief addresses were also made by a number of visitors. Musical numbers were rendered by an orchestra composed of Prof. Temple Joseph Darton, Edw. Bonner, Frank Morley, William McLeod and William Mitchell. There was also a solo by Frank Morley and a diet by Messrs. Morley and Bonner. The visitors were highly pleased with the reception tendered them and were liberal in their praise of the ladies who were in charge of the banquet.

Saloon Man On The Carpet

The city council at Mammoth held special meeting on Tuesday of this week at which time Jacob Brock a saloon man of that city was summoned to appear and show cause why his license to do business should not be revoked. The city officers of Mammoth had secured sufficient evidence to convict Brock of keeping his place open after the regular hour for closing contrary to the state law and the city ordinance of Mammoth in fact he admitted this and said that if given a chance to continue in business he would be more careful in the future. The council took the matter under advisement and the following day decided to give the saloon man another opportunity to live up to the law. If there are further complaints against him his license will be promptly revoked.

Table Queen Bread

"The Modern Staff of Life"

Home Baking is Crude and Out of Date

The housewife had a notion that it was one of her duties to bake the family loaf. It is one of those myths that come down from the days of our forefathers. In many instances the bread making receipt is one that has been handed down from generation to generation and is used today without a single improvement.

Progress Versus Rust

While the housewife has been content with the loaf she baked the Royal Baking Company has improved tested and experimented and now they produce Table Queen bread—bread that is far better than the finest loaf ever baked at home.

Effect of Organization

The housewife cannot compete with an organization like the Royal Baking Company because each little part here is done by a specialist who is an expert.

New Ore Body In Iron Blossom

Notwithstanding the fact that all of the low grade ore is being held back until the completion of the new concentrating plant which the Knight people intend to erect at Silver City the Iron Blossom mine is now shipping in the neighborhood of 150 tons of ore daily. The ore which is now being sent to the smelter is worth anywhere from $30 to $40 per ton. The management aims to hold back all of the ore in which the silver and gold values predominate even though this is a high grade product and any thing carrying less than 5 per cent lead or 10 per cent copper is also left in the mine pending the construction of the new mill. Of course it is some times necessary to mine some of the milling ore which occasionally comes in such shape that it cannot be held back to good advantage and when ever such is the case the ore will be sent on through to the smelter.

The work which has for some time been going on to the south of the shaft on the 500 level of the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom has just resulted in the opening of what appears to be an exceptionally large deposit of lead silver ore. While this ore occurs on the main break which has been found to contain ore for almost the entire length of the Iron Blossom holdings the new find is important owing to the fact that it is fully 100 feet farther to the south than any thing which has previously been located in that part of the mine. The raise first passed through about 17 feet of the silicious ore and is now in a lead carbonate product which is worth from $40 to $50 per ton. Supt. Charles Zabriske regards this as one of the most important discoveries in many months.

The stopping of ore in that part of the Dragon Cons property which is reached through the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom mine has been discontinued the Dragon ore being considered ideal for milling. The main drift is still being pushed out toward the south on the 600 level of the Dragon.

At Eureka Swansea Extension.

Two shifts are now pushing work in the Eureka Swansea Extension property and the east drift on the 400 level is now in a distance of about 200 feet. Within the next 100 feet this drift should cut a strong iron lead which shows on the surface and which is expected to carry on at depth. If the work on the 400 level develops nothing of interest the shaft may possibly be sunk to a greater depth.

New Machinery For The Victoria

Manager J. O. Sullivan states that an order has been placed for all the material and machinery which will be needed to switch over from steam to electric power at the Victoria mine and that this change will be made just as soon as possible after the arrival of the new equipment. Electricity will be used not only in driving the big hoisting engine but in the operation of the air compressor. At the present time two small compressors are in use at the Victoria and Mr. Sullivan has placed an order for a large, modern compressor, which will replace the smaller machines giving the mine everything that will be needed in the way of machinery for many years to come.

Swansea Will Continue Shipping

Reports to the effect that the Swansea mine will reduce its shipments have been in circulation on here during the past few days but as near as we are able to learn at this time the management does not intend making any immediate change at this property. While the ore which is now being shipped is of a low grade the smelter returns are entirely satisfactory and it is quite probable that the present tonnage of ten or eleven car loads each week will be maintained for an indefinite time. Supt. John Hoffman has discontinued some of the development work, but this is no doubt only temporary, as preparations are under way for the resumption of work in the old winze which extends to a depth of about 65 feet below the 940 level. This winze is between the two ore bodies from which the Swansea has been shipping for some time and the fact that these deposits of ore are undoubtedly making to greater depth indicates that there is a possibility of getting into some good ore by taking up work in this winze. Mr. Hoffman is quite anxious to take up this piece of development work and believes that from the bottom of this winze he can drive a drift and pick up the lead ore which was located a short time ago on the level above.

The Swansea will have a big tonnage of low grade material for the new mill which is to be built in this district.

Ore shipments stock quotations and additional mining news on page 3.

Select Site For Knight's Mill.

The Knight people have selected a site for their new concentrating plant and, according to information which was given out this week the construction of the new mill will be taken up just as soon as it is possible to get the material on the ground. The new mill will be located on the hill to the north west of the Swansea mine and the water which is being pumped from this property will no doubt be utilized in the new milling process. A survey is now being made and as soon as this is completed teams and men will start excavating for the mill. An effort will be made to have this plant in operation within six months.

Lessees Have Nice Showing

Thomas Tregoning and Alfred Moyle still have a very nice showing of copper ore in their lease in the old workings of the Victor mine at Mammoth. The point where they are working is quite near the surface and the ore is being hoisted with an arm strong hoist. Last week they sent out a car load of this ore which will average up better than 15 per cent copper with some silver and gold values and picked samples taken from the bunch of ore upon which they are now working shows as high as 35 per cent in the red metal. The lessees expect to get out another shipment within the next few weeks.

Zinc From East Tintic

Sam Buckley and Cam Scott who are operating a lease at the property of the East Tintic Development company in the eastern end of the district sent out their first carload of zinc ore today. This ore is loaded at Iron Spur a short distance to the west of Elberta and will consequently be sent to Murray for sampling. The lessees at this mine are of the opinion that they can ship fully fifty tons of zinc ore each week.

Soon Make Connection

A connection between the main working shaft of the Beck Tunnel and the Humbug ore chute from which this mine has been shipping quite heavily for the past year or more will soon be made according to Supt. Perry Fuller who states that less than thirty feet of drifting will be needed to connect up the two points. The ore which is now being taken from the Humbug chute is hoisted to the main tunnel level and reaches the surface by a circuitous route but in the near future a good portion of this tonnage will find its way to the surface through the connection which will be made within the next few days.

The Beck Tunnel is now mining and sending out about 20 tons of ore each day and mine assays show this ore to be worth a little better than $20 per ton.

Yankee Has Good Zinc Showing

Supt. Lou Merriman states that four cars of zinc ore were loaded at the Yankee Cons mine during the week and the development work of the past few days leads him to believe that he is going to have some very good stopes of this particular kind of ore in the old workings of this property. The zinc which is now being mined is coming from the 100 and 200 levels but there is also a very nice showing of one of a shipping grade above the main tunnel level. If the Yankee is able to maintain a good tonnage of zinc the further assessment of the stock will be unnecessary.

Will Increase the Weekly Output

The ore and waste chutes have now been installed in the raise which connects the 1350 level with the big ore stopes in the Eagle & Blue Bell mine and an increased tonnage from this property will now be in order. For some time the Eagle has been shipping in the neighborhood of seven carloads of ore each week and commencing next week Supt. William Owens expects to increase this tonnage to fully twelve cars.

The general condition of the mine is good and some splendid ore is now being mined from the 700 level.

M. F. Sammon the well known Tintic mining man has severed his connection with the Silver King mine at Park City where he has been employed as foreman for a couple of years.

James Creighton was over from Stockton during the early part of the week for a visit with his family.

Mine Owners To Meet Employees

J. W. Moreton the secretary of the Tintic District Miners Union has received a communication from the secretary of the Tintic Mine Owners Association stating that owing to the illness of the president C. E. Allen and the absence of the vice president John Dern it would be impossible to hold a meeting at this time in order to take up the request for a raise in wages from the miners of the Tintic District. This letter further states that just as soon as it is possible for the mine owners to get together the committee which has been selected to represent the miners will be given a hearing.

The officials of the Tintic District Miners Union state that in the past the mine owners have always shown a disposition to treat them with proper consideration and have been willing to meet with them for the discussion of subjects involving the welfare of the men employed in and around the mines of this district. For this reason they feel that their request for a raise in wages will be speedily settled in a manner which will be satisfactory to all concerned.

The miners here declare that they are in no way interested in the trouble at Bingham except that they are at all times anxious to see fellow workers treated with proper consideration and given a just compensation for their labor.

It is hardly likely that the strike at Bingham will affect the mines in the Tintic District unless it results in the closing of the smelters and in that event there would probably be no place to ship the bulk of the Tintic ore.

Eureka Comstock Will Sink

James Larson was in town the other day from the Eureka Comstock property in North Tintic and states that within a short time work is to be resumed on this ground. Mr. Larson intends to sink the shaft which is now down to a depth of about fifty feet. The ground in the bottom of the shaft is so loose that sinking can not be taken up again until a supply of timber is delivered at the property.

May Lease Sunbeam Property

Silver City mining men are making an effort to secure a lease upon the old Sunbeam mine in the south end of the district and it is understood that if they are successful in closing the deal they will be able to ship a large quantity of low grade ore. The Sunbeam was on the market with considerable ore about twelve years ago and since that time the mine has been in the inactive list. Low grade ore is exposed in some of the old workings and some of the dump ore can also be handled as the metals are bringing much better prices than they were when this property was being developed years ago.

Report From Black Jack Co

During the past week the shareholders of the Black Jack mining company received from the general office of the company an interesting report covering the development work of the past twelve months. This report shows that during the past year the work has been confined principally to the old Star section of the company's ground, the total footage for the year being 1218. The ore which has been shipped during the year netted the company a total of $1954.28. The statement from the assistant manager, Frank Birch indicates that the mine can be placed upon a paying basis just as soon as the new mill is ready to take care of the low grade ores of which there is a large quantity in the Black Jack mine and also on the dump. On the 1st of September of this year the company had an indebtedness of $2407.69.

The Emerald people are still operating through the Opex shaft and at the present time are driving a drift to the south at a depth of 2000 feet. A cross cut is also being pushed out toward the east and while conditions are regarded as most favorable for encountering an ore body there has been little or no change during the past few weeks. The drifts are however cutting through a highly mineralized formation and the management feels that there will be something good to report from the Emerald within a very short time.

FAMOUS "DONEHEAD" PLAYS
ON MAJOR LEAGUE DIAMONDS

Explained by Leading
Baseball Players to
HUGH S. FULLERTON

By C. CRAVATH

Outfielder Phillies, Whose Work This Season Has Stamped Him as One of the Best Recruits of the Year

I pulled one that I am almost ashamed to tell about. It was a peach a dream and the saddest part of it was that until the minute I showed myself up everyone was giving me credit for being a wise fellow who had pulled off a play and showed up the opposing team.

It was in a game when I was with Minneapolis. It was a close game with a lot of hitting and wild playing but towards the end both teams had settled down and we were battling for a run to win. The Kansas City team had scored the one and we needed one to tie and two to win in the first of the ninth when we got a runner to third and I was on first with one man out and three balls called on the next batter. I had the situation very clear ly in my head up to that minute. As the next ball was pitched I started for second thinking it was the fourth ball and to my astonishment the catcher threw to second. I guess that is what upset me. I saw the throw stopped turned back and began chasing up and down the line. They drove me up and down and finally the runner on third made a dash for the plate and scored without a throw being made to stop him. Then I was touched.

The crowd was yelling and I turned and started for the bench thinking that I had made a bad break but

C. Cravath

ticked to death because the runner had scored from third which gave me a sort of an alibi for leaving first at that stage of the game.

The crowd let out a whoop as I started for the bench and I looked up at first base and saw the batter standing there. I was so slow at waking up that the umpire had to tell me to go on to second base. Then I realized what I had done. I had pulled off a play that made the opposing catcher look like a sucker had made the play perfectly and then just as the crowd was giving me credit for pulling off a smart trick I had to show them that I was just as slow at thinking as the catcher had been and that it had been an accident on my part. I could have kicked myself all the way to second base for giving myself away in that fashion. In a way it was a good lesson to me as it taught me not to take anything for granted. The fact is I called it a ball myself without waiting for the umpire to call it—and that is dangerous. Thereafter I always waited to hear the ump's decision no matter how certain I have felt that there was only one way to decide.

Urges New Rule
Business Manager Bancroft of Cincinnati is quoted as saying. Grand fix were in for shortstops. Esmond can field and can't hit. McDonald can hit and can't field—and there you are.
Wish the rules could be arranged so Esmond could do all the fielding and McDonald all the batting then we'd be able to defy the world. As it is now we don't seem to quite make the proper combination.

Slightly Obstinate
When the umpire declared Beals
Becker out at second in a recent Giant Red game he was so peeved that he refused to move off the bag. The teams changed sides but still he clung. A Red batter came up. Still he lingered.
Finally Doyle walked up and said:
Breeze old pal I play here. Then Becker moved.

Price on Ty Cobb
Harry Wolverton says Ty Cobb is worth $100,000 to any major league club. Put $100,000 on one side Ty Cobb on the other and I'd take Cobb says Wolverton. Hes worth more than several major league teams that I might mention—but won't.

Unusual Incident
Chief Wilson and John Titus the veteran outfielders of the Pirates and Beaneaters came near getting mixed up in a verbal combat at Pittsburgh the other day. This is remarkable as neither of them have ever been known to utter a sound in a ball game before in their lives.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods.
When you begin taking Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat everything your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets.

Tintic High School Now Open.

The Tintic High School opened on Monday, with an enrollment of 115 students and since then the number has been materially increased. The High School is under the supervision of Principal A. R. W. Hintze who was educated in the Granite High School and received his A. B. degree after four years work in the University of Utah. Mr. Hintze also did one year post graduate work in the University. He was also an instructor in the University of Utah and in the L. D. S. College for three years prior to coming to Eureka.

The chemistry and mining department is under the charge of R. V. Smith who spent his academic education in preparation for civil engineering and entered the University of Utah graduating from the school of mines with a B. S. degree in 1895. Since then he has been city superintendent in Bingham Canyon, instructor in the branch Normal School at the University and for four years professor of mining and metallurgical engineering at the New Mexico School of Mines. For the past year he was instructor in chemistry and sciences in the Park City High School.

The remaining sciences taught are under the charge of Miss Virginia Lasley who was educated in the Park Academy doing four years of high school work. Miss Lasley also did work in the State Normal School of Missouri and graduated from the four year college course at Park College receiving her L. B. degree from the latter institution. She had a number of years experience teaching before coming to Eureka and has been connected with the local schools for the past five years.

The Latin History and Domestic Science is under the charge of Miss Lucy Finley who graduated from the High School at Oneida, Illinois, and who also graduated from a four year college course with her A. B. degree from Knox College at Galesburg, Ill. Later she attended the University of Colorado for one year doing post graduate work. Miss Finley has taught in Eureka for six years.

The English and Domestic Art Departments are under Miss Iola Virginia Stoddard who completed a four year high school course at Colorado Springs and received her A. B. degree from the four year college course in the Colorado College. She has had five years experience as an instructor in high school work.

The Eureka High School increased its enrollment for the year ending 1911 very materially and had an average attendance of 47. For the year ending 1912 the enrollment reached about 72 with an average daily attendance of 67 and this year the school opened with an enrollment of 115 of this number about six are from Silver City and about 19 from Mammoth.

The school board has made provision for the transportation of the pupils from Mammoth and Silver City. The buses leaving those points about 7:30 and arriving in Eureka in time for the opening of school at 8:30 which is the hour for opening of the high school necessitated by reason of the large number of students and classes.

The high schools now occupy the upper floor of the west building of the public schools and are crowded to the limit for room. It is expected and hoped that the new building with its splendid facilities will be ready in about 30 days when the students will have all the room necessary with the latest equipped laboratories and appliances all of which have been selected and purchased by the best experts that the school board has been able to get for this work. Each article of furniture and apparatus has been selected under that class of supervision by some one who thoroughly understood the work.

Will Institute New Chapter.

A number of Tintic people who are interested in the organization of a new chapter of the Order of Eastern Star held a meeting at the I. O. O. F. hall in this city on Monday evening. After the discussion of matters pertaining to the new lodge the following officers were elected: Mrs. John Morley grand matron, Miss Hazel Irvine assistant grand matron and H. A. Irvine grand patron. Fully twenty five people have signified their intention of becoming charter members of the new chapter.

Caught and Forced to Settle

The man who jumps out and beats some one out of a board bill is usually a cruder in which the coyote blood predominates and whenever such a scamp digs out and leaves some poor wretch in the lurch he is deserving of punishment such as was dealt out to those thieves in the early days of the west. The officers state that recently they have had a number of complaints from parties who have been robbed in this manner.

Only a few days ago Charles Rosh will made an effort to get out of town without settling a board bill which was due Harry Coleman but fortunately he was caught at Tintic Junction by Marshal Church and forced to settle the account. Roshvill had been working on the high school building here and when landed at Tintic Junction he had just purchased a ticket to California.

Lights For County Road

Sheriff Hendrick this week made arrangements to have a few electric lights placed along the wagon road between Eureka and Knightville. There is a deep gulch at one side of the road and the lights are really needed in order to make the road safe at night. The county will pay for these lights.

Performance By Home Talent

The members of the Eureka Home Dramatic club are now at work preparing for their new production "Crisford's Claim" which they intend putting on about the 10th of next month. This is an intensely interesting western drama and some of the best talent of the city will be utilized. The proceeds of the show will go to the public library.

Commissioners in Session at Nephi.

At the last meeting of the board of county commissioners the petition of Edward Stone and C. G. Massion of Silver City for a reduction in the amount charged for a pool room license was denied.

W. A. Chatwin resigned as registration agent at Mammoth and Mrs. Chatwin was appointed to fill the vacancy.

Harry Bigler of Nephi was appointed as county fruit tree inspector. The application from the Millard County telephone company for a franchise was tabled until the next meeting of the board.

Claims to the amount of $617.50 were ordered paid.

Postmaster Redmond is having a busy time of it explaining the new postal regulation regarding the payment of rent or postage boxes to his patrons. Orders from the postmaster general makes it imperative for the postmaster to collect the tax rents either on or before the beginning of the quarter and where payment is not made it is up to him either to close the boxes or dig up the money. Mr. Redmond having but a very limited supply of wealth that he can call his own will undoubtedly have to follow the former course. The postmaster has absolutely nothing to do with the box rent money any more than he has with the money from stamps and money orders and he has no more business to trust a man for a postage box than he has for a bunch of stamps or a money order. Patrons of the postoffice should remember this and get in with their box rent money by the first of the new quarter.

For singles—trap or field—just toss in a shell, press the button and—PULL. The side bolt makes it easy. You don't have to tug at the barrel or watch an on and off device. The action stays open after each single shot is fired—it always stays open when the magazine is empty. Five shots—three to get the target—each under absolute control of the trigger finger. The recoil reloads for you—locks another shell in, takes the strain off the gun—the drive behind the shot. Simple take down—a few turns of the ready handled magazine screw cap makes cleaning carrying and interchange of barrels quick and easy.

HOW BLOOD IS MADE.

The liquids and the digested foods in the alimentary canal pass through the wall of the canal into the blood. This process is called absorption and takes place chiefly from the small intestine. After absorption the blood carries the food through the body and each cell takes from the blood the food it needs. A pure glyceric extract made from bloodroot mandrake stone queen's root and golden seal root and sold by druggists for the past forty years under the name of gives uniformly excellent results as a tonic to help in the assimilation of the food and in the absorption of the blood of the food it requires. Eradicate the poisons from the blood with this alternative extract which does not shrink the white blood corpuscles because containing no alcohol or other injurious ingredients. Thus the body can be built up—strong to resist disease. This is a tonic taken from Nature's garden that builds up those weakened by disease. Sold by druggists everywhere. "TIRED MAN'S SLEEP" By Walt Mason

Now the long long day is fading and the hush of dusk is here and the stars begin parading each one in its distant sphere and the city's strident voices dwindle to a gentle hum and the heart of man rejoices that the hour of rest has come. Thrown away is labor's fetter when the day has reached its close nothing in the world is better than a weary man's repose. Nothing in the world is sweeter than the sleep the toiler finds while the ravening mosquitoes fumes at the window blinds. Nothing beneath the moon can wake him short of cannon cracker's roar if you drowse him you must shake him till you dump him on the floor. Idle people seek their couches seek their beds to toss and weep for a demon on them crouches driving from their eyes the sleep. And the weary hours they number and they cry in tones distraught. For a little while of slumber I would give a house and lot! When the long long day is dying and you watch the twinkling stars knowing that you'll soon be lying sleeping like a train of cars be then thankful without measure be as thankful as you can you have nailed as great a treasure as the gods have given man!

Brief Comment.

You owe it to yourself to BUY WISELY. If there is a chance to make one dollar serve you as well as two dollars ordinarily, do you owe it to yourself to find that chance?

If there are chances to save five dollars on a suit of clothes or on a dress a piece of furniture a jewelry purchase a trunk on the monthly grocery bills the month's expenditures for shoes hats lab rashes you owe it to yourself—surely—to find these chances! Some of your friends are finding these chances ALL THE TIME! They are advertisement readers of course.

So if you would pay one of the most important and urgent of the debts that you owe to yourself be come an advertisement reader—a buyer of advertised things!

Eureka has been signally honored this season by two of the political parties Capt Hugo Deprezin and A. L. Mitchell having been selected as presidential electors on two of the tickets the Progressive and Socialist respectively.

People often speak of mining stock investment as being a gamble and while this is to a certain extent very true it is a form of gambling which obtains moral sanction from the fact that its ultimate object is the production of new wealth and the success of the stock gambler if we are to call the investor a gambler is no man's loss. Every man who contemplates investment in mining stock should know something about the property in which he intends to become interested. Too many people buy mining stocks simply because some broker recommends the purchase while others sell when the broker tells them the time is ripe entirely overlooking the fact that many of these men who deal in stocks are greatly concerned in the commission which comes into their pockets as a result of every order to either buy or sell. Do not place too much reliance in the opinion of any one man. He may be a sincere and yet wrong. In buying and selling mining stocks get all the information possible from every source and then use your own judgement.

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. That such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. H. W. Hendrickson Ohio Falls Ind. writes 'Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best for coughs colds and croup and is my best seller. For sale by all dealers.'

Political Dope.

A call has just been issued for the Republican county convention which is to be held in this city on the 20th of the present month—next Thursday. A complete county ticket will be placed in nomination at this convention.

John Harris the present constable has been renominated by the Democrats and will no doubt be endorsed by the Republicans.

Gus J. Henrich present sheriff of Juab county is not a candidate for re-election but some members of his party are urging him to become a candidate for the office of county commissioner.

The members of the Wilson Club are requested to attend the next meeting which will be held at the club room in the Eureka Hotel next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. In the future meetings will be held every Wednesday evening and also at 4 o'clock on each Sunday afternoon.

At the convention of the Progressive Party held at Ogden on Friday of last week Capt. Hugo Deprezin of this city was chosen as one of the four presidential electors. George N. Lawrence associated with N. A. Robertson in the practice of law was nominated to the office of attorney general and Walter Adams of Provo, but who is a former resident of this city, was named for the office of state auditor.

The Republicans of this city will hold their primary on Saturday night at which time delegates will be elected for the county convention. A precinct ticket justice of the peace and constable will also be placed in nomination on that date.

The members of the Socialist party have not yet decided upon the date for their county convention. In the past it has been their custom to hold a mass convention allowing all who desire to meet and take part in the naming of the ticket. This year the convention for the county will be held in this city.

The Democrats at their county convention on Wednesday discussed the proposition of having the election of the county superintendent of schools conducted along non-partisan lines and in order to bring this about they left this office vacant in making up their ticket. Their committee was instructed to meet with committees from the Republican and Socialist parties for the further discussion of this matter. At the various state conventions A. C. Nelson was endorsed for the office of state superintendent of schools and throughout the state efforts are being made to keep the schools out of politics.

At their mass primary which was held on Monday evening the Democrats of Eureka elected delegates for the county and senatorial conventions which were held here on Wednesday and also nominated a precinct ticket. Before adjournment was taken a new precinct committee was also elected. The same delegates attended both of the conventions these delegates being as follows: A. D. Moore W. E. Evans William Owens Del. Roberts B. N. C. Stott Levan Bacon Mel Haymond and Dan Fields. The precinct committee includes three from each voting district as follows: Edward Bonner B. N. C. Stott William Owens T. L. Sullivan George Hayes A. C. Martin A. D. Moore Del. Roberts Joseph Phillips W. E. Evans H. F. Gear and Levan Bacon.

For the offices of justice of the peace and constable the Democrats nominated J. O. Freckleton and John Harris respectively. Mr. Harris is the present constable.

The Mammoth Democrats who attended the senatorial and county conventions in this city on Wednesday of this week were: County—Steele Bailey Jr. Peter Gillespie Sr. Al. Moyle and Thomas Tiegoning. Senatorial—J. O. Kirkendall James Swenson Wm. Nisonger and Patrick Henry.

Democratic Nominees.

The Democrats of Juab county held their convention in this city on Wednesday at which time the candidates for the county offices were placed in nomination. Dr. C. P. Harvillie the county chairman presided at the convention and W. O. Andrews of Nephi acted as secretary. After the appointment of committees upon credentials platform and permanent organization and order of business the delegates proceeded with the nomination of their ticket. In most instances there were no contests but when it came to the nomination of a representative to the state legislature there were three candidates Joseph Phillips of this city N. E. Dable of Silver City and Enoch Burton of Nephi the latter receiving enough votes to bring about his nomination. There was another contest when it came to the selection of a candidate for the office of short term commissioner. There seemed to be a general understanding that this office should go to the east side of the county after this side had secured the long term commissioner and consequently the delegates from Tintic allowed the Nephi Monna and Levan delegations to name the short term commissioner.

The ticket as finally selected by the convention was as follows: Enoch Burton Nephi Representative

George M. Hayes Eureka Sheriff Edward P. Ke Eureka Attorney V. W. Foote Nephi Clerk John C. Hall Nephi Recorder John Lattimer Nephi Treasurer James W. Vickers Nephi Assessor W. F. Evans Knightville 4 year term Commissioner Joseph Newton Monna 2 year term Commissioner

The Platform

The platform as adopted ratified the national and state platforms of the Democratic party condemned the county officers for not enforcing the law in the unincorporated precincts of the county, pledged the party nominees to the enforcement of the law without fear or favor favored an increase in wages owing to the high cost of living and the present high price of metals and also pledged the legislative candidate to work for the passage of laws which will mean the adoption of safety appliances and the proper ventilation of the mines and otherwise improve the conditions of the men employed underground.

Dr. Bailey For State Senator.

At the Democratic convention for the Eighth Senatorial District held in this city on Wednesday Dr. Steele Bailey Jr. of Robinson was placed in nomination for the office of state senator. The delegates to this convention from Millard county made an effort to secure the nomination of Milton Moody of Hinkley but the Juab county delegates out numbered them and were successful in naming a Tintic man for the office.

Dr. Bailey was a candidate for the legislature two years ago and is one of the prominent Democrats of the Tintic District.

Socialist Orator Coming

Benjamin Wilson Socialist orator from Girard Kansas will deliver a lecture in this city next Sunday. He is a member of the Appeal to Reason staff and is considered one of the best speakers in the ranks of the Socialist party. A small admission fee will be charged for his address in this city and already the local members of the party have disposed of a large number of tickets thus insuring an exceptionally large attendance.

J. A. Mellville Republican candidate for district judge was in Tintic during the week for the purpose of calling upon some of his friends.

Mr. Mellville still retains his home and interests at Fillmore but for the past few years he has been spending a large part of his time at Delta where he and his father are heavily interested in a new irrigation project. He expects to visit Tintic some time next month and may speak here upon the occasion of his next visit.

Now at Work on Tintic Branch

The work of filling in the large bridges on the El Grande Tintic branch has already started but owing to the difficulty in securing laborers the contractor is not making very good time with the job. The present plans of the railway officials call for some very important changes on the line which extend into this district and in addition to filling in the bridges and cutting the tops of the tunnels wherever it is possible to do so heavy steel will be laid and some of the sharp curves which have been giving trouble will also be proved. A large steam shovel is now being erected in filling in the largest of the bridges and it is estimated that it will take about seventy days to finish this one fill the bridge been over five hundred feet in length and about eighty feet high.

Brock Makes a Get Away

Jacob Brock the Robinson saloon man dug out early in the week an old string of unpaid bills and since his departure the place which he occupied has been attached by Sheriff Henry D. In an effort to clean up some of the indebtedness Brock succeeded in obtaining a subterfuge letter from the short business court at Elkins. He was up in the court before the Mammoth city council last week to answer to a charge of conducting a disorderly house and there are a great many people in Tintic who believe that there was some thing very mysterious about the three fires which were discovered at his saloon within a period of a few weeks. All of these fires were extinguished without serious damage. It is difficult to learn just what an amount of money Brock is owing in Tintic but it is quite evident that most of his creditors will receive nothing as his saloon property is of little value.

READY-TO-USE GRAINING PROCESS

We have passed the age of paint for interior decorations, and have learned to appreciate the beauties of natural wood.

To many owners of homes in which the doors, casings and other woodwork are either painted or poorly varnished, and in which the floors are soft wood designed to be covered with carpets, the Ready-to-use Graining Process makes possible the up to date hard wood effect at a total cost of 2c per square ft. of surface.

The use of this graining process is by no means limited to large panels like floors doors etc. It is equally practical for furniture tables book cases chairs (etc).

Lessees at Work In Eureka Hill.

Phil Clark and William Christopherson this week commenced work on the lease which covers the entire hill end of the Eureka Hill company's ground and while they have a good deal of dead work ahead of them they expect to begin shipping ore from this property within a few months. The strip of ground in which they will operate is about 1000 feet in width and takes in that part of the Eureka Hill holdings which is adjoining the Centennial Eureka. This ground has never been developed to any extent from the Eureka Hill side although lessees operating through the Centennial Eureka, succeeded in digging out ore which is generally estimated to have been worth nearly a hundred thousand dollars. Where no work was done there is still a splendid showing of shipping ore which indicates that Messrs Clark and Christopherson will have a very profitable lease just as soon as they can do the necessary dead work to enable them to get into the section of the ore in which the ore occurs. Their first work will be the driving of 350 feet of drift and it is their intention to bring the ore to the surface through the old tunnel which taps the mountain just back of the Eureka Hill testing plant.

The lessees have also secured a lease upon the surface workings of the Eureka Hill company and are now emptying some of the old dumps and there is a possibility of a large amount of dump ore being placed on the market.

Beck Tunnel Makes Connection

The Humboldt ore chute has at last been connected up with the 175 level of the Beck tunnel shaft and within the next day or two much of the ore which is now being mined from that section of the property will be sent to the surface through this new connection. Supt. Perry Fuller writes that at a point near where this connection was made he now has a splendid face of lead silver ore and that the general condition of the mine is good. Two or three feet of ore on which the miners are now at work carries from 30 to 40 ounces in silver and about 25 per cent lead. The drift on the 175 foot level will be pushed on toward the south and after driving 100 feet or more another raise will be started with a view to developing the Humboldt ore chute at a point still farther to the south.

PLEASANT FOR HUBBY

Splendid Tonnage From Chief Cons.

During the month of August the Chief Consolidated company shipped better than 4000 tons of ore and for the present month the mine's record will undoubtedly be as good or better. While the mine has been up on the market with some exceptionally rich ore during the past few months it must not be understood that all of the ore shipped is of a high grade because such is not the case. The average returns are however quite satisfactory to the management and the Reporter learns from a reliable source that the ore which is now being mined shows higher values than that which was sent to the smelter during the month of August.

It is a little early to state just when this mine will be in a position to pay its initial dividend but the time when the shareholders will be able to draw down a little bread money is undoubtedly drawing near because the treasury now contains something over $900,000 and the management has decided upon a dividend when this sum is swelled to $2,000,000. Soon after the payment of the initial dividend Mr. Fitch plans to make some shaft improvements which will perhaps necessitate the suspension of shipments for a month or two. That portion of the mine's shaft above the 1000 level is but a single compartment while the lower part which was sunk since the property passed into the hands of the Chief Consolidated company is double compartment. The hoisting of the present heavy tonnage of ore and the waste which is also being taken out as a result of the very extensive campaign of development work is taxing the shaft to its capacity and the sooner it is enlarged above the 1000 level the better it will be in many ways.

During the past few days another boiler of 150 h. p. capacity has been installed at the Chief Consolidated property three modern boilers with a combined capacity of 450 horse power. The foundations for this third boiler were laid at the time the new machinery was installed some time ago.

F. J. Raddatz was out from the capital last Saturday and Sunday and visited the Tintic Standard property in the eastern end of the district. The development of this ground is still going on under the direction of John Westerdahl.

Dragon Con. Will Ship Fluxing Ore

The people of the Tintic District and especially the residents of Silver City are feeling good over the announcement that the Dragon Consolidated company will soon resume the shipment of iron ore. One of the largest deposits of iron ore in the state is located on the property of this company and at various times during the past fifteen years the mine has had contracts which called for the shipment of vast quantities of this particular character of ore. Something over a year ago at the expiration of a contract which called for several carloads of ore a day work was suspended in that part of the Dragon ground and since that time no iron ore has been placed on the market by this company. It is understood here that the management has now succeeded in making a contract with the United States Smelting company and that the iron will be sent out at the rate of about four carloads a day until a total of 20,000 tons at all have been shipped. The iron is mined through the main shaft at the Dragon and with equipment that is entirely modern the mining cost is held down to the minimum.

Notwithstanding the fact that the iron ore which is found in the Tintic District is of the very best grade for fluxing it is not an easy matter to secure a smelter contract so many of the larger smelting companies having their own deposits of fluxing ore. The resumption of iron shipments will provide the Dragon Co. with ample money for the continuance of the development work which has been under way for some months and with this money coming into the treasury the management will no doubt hold together ores now exposed in that part of the mine which is reached from the Iron Blossom shaft until the completion of the new mill.

Separate Company for Knight Mill

It is understood here that the Knight Consolidated company will organize a new company to take the efficient operation of the new concentrating plant and that none of the mining companies will be financially interested in this new plant. When the proposition of erecting a mill was first up for the consideration Mr. Knight thought of clearing the cost up to one of the mining companies presumably the Iron Blossom as this property was best able to spare the amount needed for the new mill but he has now reached the conclusion that the milling company should be entirely separate from the mines. In other words it will be a custom mill at which the ore from the Knight mines will be given first consideration.

Mr. Knight has already let a contract for the construction of the mill and a short piece of railroad which will connect the plant with the Knight road at Silver City, and the contractor will be on the ground and ready for business within a very short time. The railroad spur leading to the mill site has already been surveyed and will be built while the necessary grading for the concentrator is under way making it possible to land everything used in the erection of the mill at the place where it is needed without a wagon haul. This railroad spur will be built to accommodate both broad and narrow gauge rolling stock.

Heavy Tonnage From Eagle

The Eagle & Blue Bell mine is rapidly coming to the front in the matter of ore production and the splendid tonnage which is now leaving this property will undoubtedly spell dividends for the fortunate shareholders in the near future. For the week which has just closed the mine shipped a total of twelve carloads of ore and while figures showing the value of this ore are not available there is no question but what it contained exceptionally good values there being enough of the high grade from the stopes on the 700 level to make a splendid average. Future shipment from the Eagle will without doubt amount to fully two carloads a day. The mine's best ore showing being on the 700, 1000 and 1200 levels. The new ore house with a capacity of about 300 tons will be completed by the end of next week.

Ore shipments, stock quotations and additional mining news on page 3.

The Utah Cons. property was closed down again this week and those who have been in the company's employ here know nothing of the future plans. It is understood however that the shut down is a temporary one.

Consolidation Of Power Companies

It is generally understood that within a very short time the details in connection with the proposed consolidation of the Telluride and Knight power companies will have been worked out and that the one concern will then practically control the power business in this state. The Telluride company's affairs have already been transferred and the same parties have also purchased the controlling interest in the Knight Power Company. Both the Telluride and the Knight companies are doing business in Tintic and while the plans of the new consolidated company are not known it is hardly probable that there will be any radical change here. In fact there is a feeling that the change will mean cheaper electricity and in view of this fact some of the larger mines of the district which at this time are using steam power are said to be figuring on switching over to electricity.

Value of Swansea Ore

Notwithstanding the fact that the ore which is now being sent out from the Swansea mine is bringing less than $3 per ton the very favorable contract which the mine has with the smelter admits of a fair profit and now that some of the development work has been stopped the treasury is again being built up. The Swansea still maintains an output of about 100 tons daily and the smelter returns show this ore to carry about 8 ounces in silver 50 cents in gold and about $4 in iron which up to 20 per cent brings 10 cents a unit and above that point 15 cents a unit. During the past few days there has been a marked improvement in the stopes on both the 840 and 80 levels. Not only is there more ore in sight but the values appear to be increasing.

Eureka Men May Sell Claims

Joseph Novack and John W. Hurd have just received a very interesting report regarding their group of mining claims located in California. The ground is known as the Golden Horse shoe group and only a few months ago the owners gave G. S. Hayes and J. B. Dument a lease and bond upon the property. The lessees have already erected buildings installed new machinery and are now at work sinking the shaft. A body of ore which carries from 8 to 15 per cent copper and from $4 to $6 in gold has already been crossed it for a distance of 15 feet and at a depth of 100 feet it is thought that this ore will contain even better values. The property is located about 13 miles from the railroad but by the use of a large traction engine the ore can be landed on the cars at a very moderate expense. If the option on the ground is exercised it will mean the payment to the present owners of a very substantial sum of money.

Yankee Mine Is Improving

While the Yankee Cons. company has not yet received a check in settlement for the zinc ore which was sent out early last week the sampler returns indicate that this ore will carry about 40 per cent. Supt. Lou Merrill states that he will be on the market early next week with another consignment of zinc and that conditions at the Yankee are improving all the time. The first lot of zinc which was sent out from this mine brought nearly $100 per car.

Will Soon Make Another Shipment.

Sam Buckley and Cam Scott expect to be able to ship another carload of zinc from their lease at the East Tintic Development property within the next few days. They have already placed a couple of cars of this ore on the market and are waiting for smelter returns on these cars before commencing work underground. All the ore handled up to the present time having been taken from the dump.

James Crooks, George W. Owens and James Sneddon of this city and Henry Spriggs of Park City were in Bingham the early part of the week for the purpose of sampling the Oxford group of claims. There is some zinc ore in sight on the ground and they are trying to determine whether it is of sufficient value to make its shipment possible at this time.

Mineral Exhibit at State Fair

An effort is now being made to make this year's mineral exhibit at the state fair a much greater success than the one of a year ago, which was in a comparatively small exhibit. The fair is being held at the Bingham fair grounds and the exhibit is being held in the Bingham fair grounds. The exhibit is being held in the Bingham fair grounds.

Will Lease Sunbeam Property.

William Werrett Jr. C. G. Mason and N. E. Dahle all of Silver City have taken a lease on the old Sunbeam property in the south end of the district and expect to commence work about the first of next month. On the dump there is ore of shipping grade and they will probably find ore of commercial value in the old workings of the mine.

Rome Wheeler was in town from Salt Lake today.

W. H. Moeller is in North Tintic for the purpose of doing assessment work upon the Butterfly group of claims owned by James Knowles and Grove Chesbro.

Surveyor Brooks was out from the capital on Saturday and Sunday for the purpose of doing some underground surveying at the Grand Central mine at Mammoth.

John Dullam left on Tuesday afternoon for Stockton where he has accepted a position at the Galena King mine upon which a number of Tintic people are operating a lease.

James Dick, acting manager of the Dorn mines in Tintic, was here on Thursday visiting the Uncle Sam, May Day and Lower Mammoth properties.

William B. Myers was arrested in this city early in the week at the request of the Nevada officers. It seems that some months ago Myers was arrested at Fairview, Nevada, upon a burglary charge and that after being placed under bonds in the sum of $500 he jumped his bond and returned to his home in this city. He will not fight extradition and consequently requisition papers will not be necessary in taking him back to Nevada for trial.

Regular Meeting of City Council.

Roll call at the regular meeting of the city council held on Friday evening of last week found all members present with Mayor Mitchell presiding and before adjournment was taken consideration of business of a routine nature had been transacted.

L. C. Doty and a number of other property owners residing in the vicinity of the Park mine petitioned the council for an extension of the water system in order that they might make connection. This matter was referred to the proper committee with power to act.

Recorder Bacon read a bunch of bills amounting in all to $430.31 and after they had been audited warrants were ordered drawn for the payment.

H. M. Penmore, a special representative of the Mountain States Telephone company, appeared before the council and discussed the proposed changes in the company's lines in this city. It has been many months since the officials of the telephone company promised to make some improvements here removing all unnecessary poles from the streets and a few weeks ago when it was quite evident that they were not going to get busy City Attorney Berry sent them a communication which was undoubtedly responsible for Mr. Penmore's visit. This matter will be taken up at once by the council a committee upon streets and alleys and the telephone company has promised to send an engineer here to arrange for such changes as the city officers feel must be made at this time.

Miss Anabel Mooney submitted a report showing the condition of the city treasury on the first of the present month. On August 1st the city had a cash balance of $3094.75, the receipts for the month were $1139.47 and the disbursements $2260.37 leaving $1973.85 in the treasury on the first of September.

A. A. Miller who was in charge of the sewer improvements which have just been completed submitted a complete report which was referred to the committee upon streets. The main street sewer has been extended to a point opposite the new high school building and a branch sewer now connects the main street line with the public school buildings.

The council's next meeting will be on October 4th.

Police Court News

William Parker kicked up a disturbance at the home of his divorced wife on Monday evening and was arrested and lodged in jail until the following morning when he appeared in Judge Dewar's court to answer to a complaint which was sworn to by Mrs. Parker. It seems that Parker met with an accident some years ago and since that time he has had numerous spells during which he seems unable to control himself and this caused his wife to secure a divorce. When he appeared in court on Tuesday he said that he had no recollection of the trouble which he had stirred up on the previous evening when he threatened members of his family. The court fined him $50 or ninety days in jail but later sentence was suspended upon Parker's promise to leave town.

SYNOPSIS

Told Maitland a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland James Armstrong Maitland a protegee falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Laid hears the story of a mining engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirby the old guide who tells the story gives Laid a package of letters which he says were to go to the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Laid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror.

Suddenly the rolling thunder peals concentrated balls of fire leaped out of the heavens and struck the mountains where she could actually see them. There were not words to describe the tremendous crashings which seemed to splinter the hills to be succeeded by brief periods of silence to be followed by louder and more terrific detonations.

In one of those appalling alternations from sound to silence she heard a human cry—an answering cry to her own? It came from the hills behind her. It must proceed she thought from the man. She could not meet that man although she craved human companionship as never before she did not want his. She could not bear it. Better the wrath of God the fury of the tempest.

heedless of the sharp note of warning of appeal in the voice ere it was drowned by another roll of thunder she plunged on in the darkness. The canon narrowed here she made her way down the ledges leaping recklessly from rock to rock slipping falling grazing now one side now the other hurling herself forward with white face and bruised body and torn hands and throbbing heart that would faint burst its bonds. There was once an ancient legend a human creature menaced by all the furies pitilessly pursued by every malefic spirit of earth and air like him this sweet young girl innocent lovely erstwhile happy fled before the storm.

Then the heavens burst and the fountains of the great deeps were broken open and with absolute lateralness the floods descended. The bursting clouds torn asunder by the wild winds driven by the pent up lightning within their black and turgid breasts disburdened themselves. The water came down as it did of old when God washed the face of the world in a flood. The narrow of the canon was filled ten twenty thirty feet in a moment by the cloud burst. The black water rolled and foamed surging like the rapids at Niagara.

The body of the girl utterly unprepared was caught up in a moment and flung like a bolt from a catapult down the seething sea filled with the trunks of the trees and the debris of the mountains tossing about humanly in the wild confusion. She struck out strongly swimming more because of the instinct of life than for any other reason. A helpless atom in the boiling flood growing every minute greater and greater as the angry skies disgorged themselves of their pent up torrents upon her devoted head.

CHAPTER VI

Death, Life and the Resurrection.

The man was coming back from one of his rare visits to the settlements. Ahead of him he drove a train of burros who well broken to their work followed with docility the wise old leader in the advance. The burros were laden with his supplies for the approaching winter. The season was late the mountains would soon be impassable on account of the snows in feed he chose the late season always for his buying in order that he might not be followed and it was his habit to buy in different places at different years that his repeated and expected presence at one spot might not arouse suspicion.

Intercourse with his fellow men was confined to this yearly visit to a settlement and even that was of the briefest nature confined always to the business in hand. Even when busy in the town he pitched a small tent in the open on the outskirts and dwelt apart. No men there in those days pried into the business of other men too closely. Curiosity was neither safe nor necessary. If he aroused transient interest or speculation it soon died away. He vanished into the mountains and as he came no more to that place he was soon forgotten.

Withdrawing from his fellow men and avoiding their society this man was never so satisfied as when alone in the silent hills. His heart and spirit rose with every step he made away from the main traveled roads or the more difficult mountain trails.

For several days he journeyed through the mountains choosing the wildest and most inaccessible parts for his going. Amid the canons and peaks he threaded his way with unerring accuracy ascending higher and higher until at last he reached the mountain aerie the lonely hermitage where he made his home. There he reveled in his isolation. What had been punishment expiation had at last become pleasure.

Civilization was bursting through the hills in every direction railways were being pushed hither and thither the precious metals were being discovered at various places and after them came hordes of men and with them—God save the mark—women but his section of the country had hitherto been unvisited even by hunters explorers miners or pleasure seekers. He was glad as he had grown to love the spot where he had made his home and he had no wish to be forced like little Joe to move on.

Once a man who loved the strife noble or ignoble of the maddening crowd he had grown accustomed to silence habituated to solitude. Winter and summer alike he roamed the mountains delving into every forest exploring every hidden canyon surmounting every inaccessible peak no storm no snow no condition of wind or weather daunted him or stopped him. He had no human companionship by which to try his mettle but nevertheless over the world of the material which lay about him he was a master as he was a man.

He found some occupation too in the following of old Adam's inheritance during the pleasant months of summer he made such garden as he could. His profession of mining engineer gave him other employment. Round about him lay treasures inestimable precious metals abounded in the hills. He had located them tested analyzed estimated the wealth that was his for the taking—it was as valuable to him as the doubloons and golden guineas were to Selkirk on his island. Yet the knowledge that it was there gave him an energizing sense of potential power unconsciously enormously flattering to his self esteem.

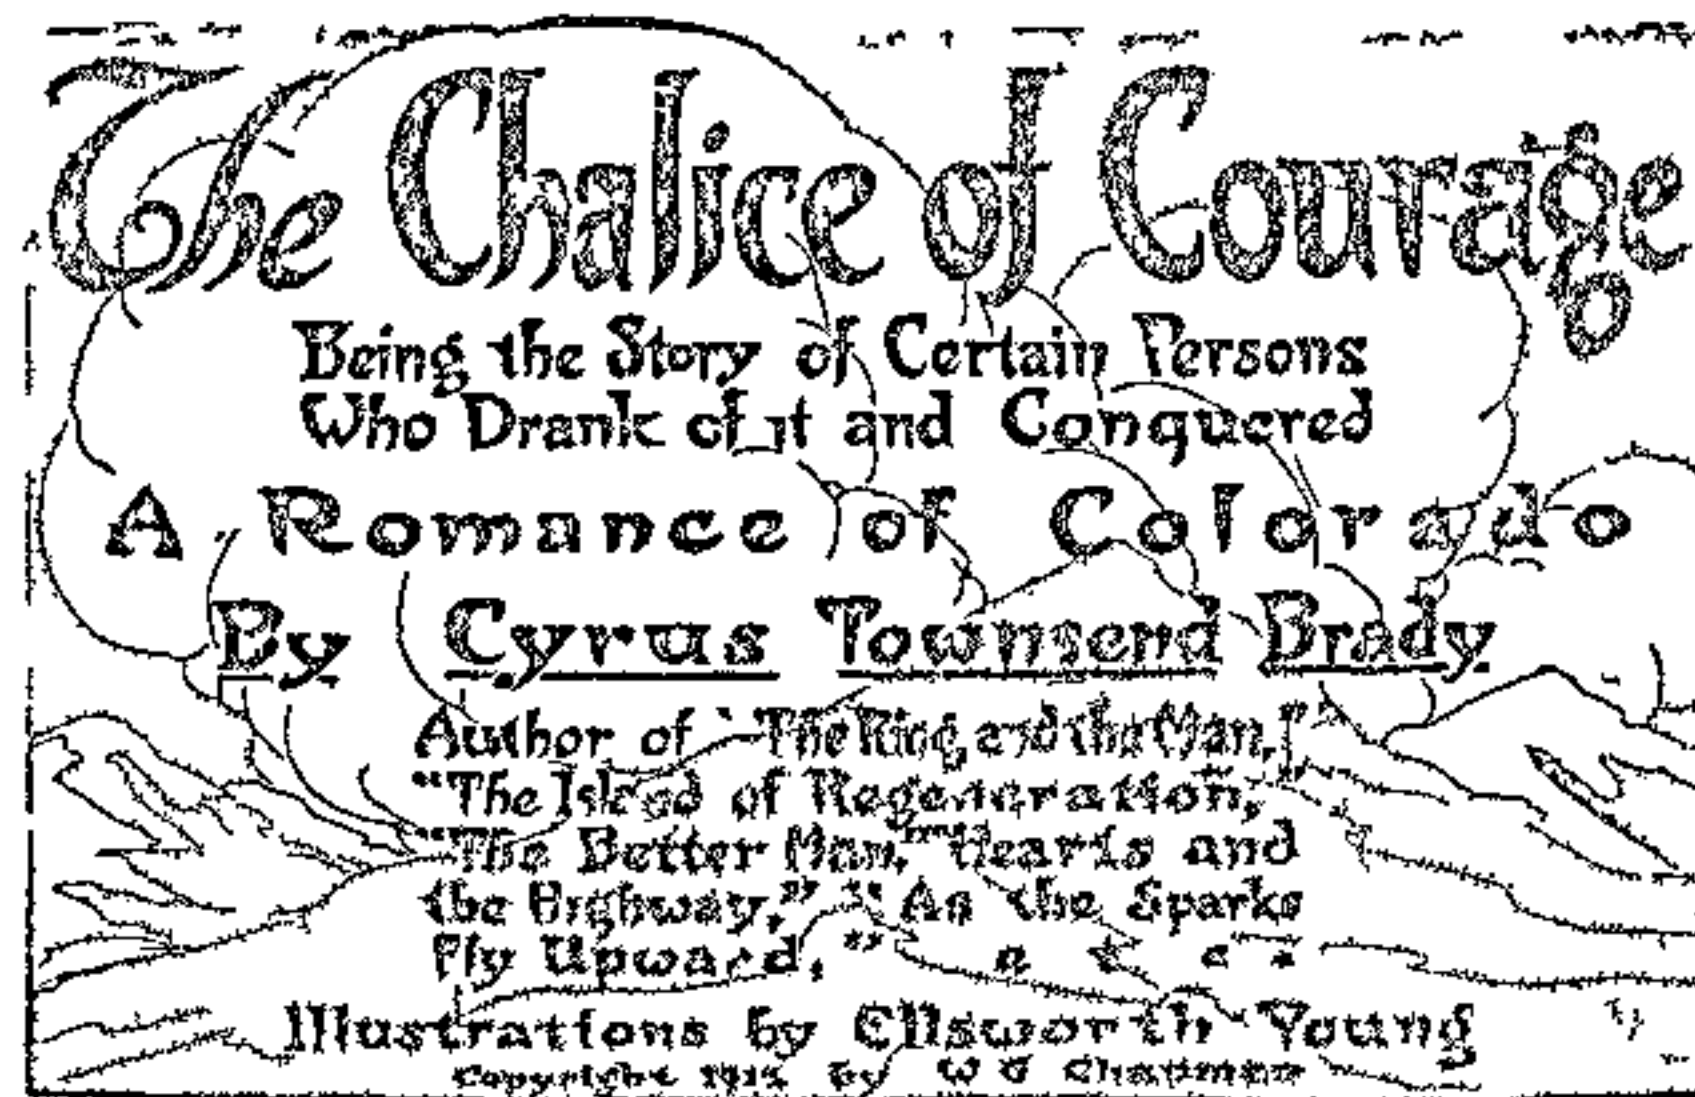

Sometimes he wandered to the extreme verge of the range and on clear days saw far beneath him the smoke of great cities of the plains. He could be master among men as he was a master among mountains. If he chose on such occasions he laughed cynically scornfully yet rarely did he ever give way to such emotions.

A great and terrible sorrow was upon him. cherishing a great passion he had withdrawn himself from the common lot to dwell upon it. From a perverted sense of expiation in a madness of grief horror and despair he had made himself a prisoner to his ideas in the desert of the mountains. Back to his cabin he would hasten and there surrounded by his living memories—deathless yet of the dead—he would recreate the past until dejection drove him abroad on the hills to meet God if not man—or woman. Night day sunshine shadow heat cold storm calm these were his life.

Having disburdened his faithful animals of their packs and having seen them safely bestowed for the winter in the corral he had built near the base of the cliff upon which his rude home was situated he took his rifle one morning for one of those lonely walks across the mountains from which he drew such comfort because he anced the absence of man conducted to the nearness of God. It was a delusion as old nearly as the Christian religion. Many had made themselves hermits in the past in remorse for sin and for love toward God. This man had buried himself in the wilderness in part for the first of these causes in other part for the love of woman. In the days of swift and sudden change he had been constant to a remembrance and abiding in his determination for five swift moving years. The world for him had stopped its progress in one brief moment five years back—the rest was silence. What had happened since then out yonder where people were mated he did not know and he did not greatly care.

In his visits to the settlements he asked no questions he bought no papers he manifested no interest in the world some things in him had died in one fell moment and there had been as yet no resurrection. Yet life hope and ambition do not die they are indeed eternal. Resurgam. Life with its tremendous activities its awful anxieties its wearing strains its rare triumphs its opportunities for achievement for service hope with its illuminations its encouragements its expectations ambition with its stimulus its force its power and greatest of all love itself alone—all three were latent in him. In touch with a woman these had gone. Some thing as powerful and as human must bring them back.

It was against nature that a man dwelled as he should so live to him self alone. Some voice should cry in his soul in its cerements of futile remorse vain expiations and benumbing recollection some day he should burst these grave clothes self wound about him and be once more a man and a master among men rather than the hermit and the recluse of the solitudes.

He did not allow these thoughts to come into his life. Indeed it is quite likely that he scarcely realized them at all yet such possibilities did not present themselves to him. Perhaps the man was a little mad that morning maybe he trembled on the verge of a break-upward downward. I know not so it be away—unconsciously as he strode along the range that morning.

He had been walking for some hours and as he grew thirsty it occurred to him to descend to the level of the brook which he heard below him and of which he sometimes caught a flashing glimpse through the trees. He scrambled down the rocks and found himself in a thick grove of pine. Making his way slowly and with great difficulty through the tangle of fallen timber which lay in every direction the sound of a human voice the last thing on earth to be expected in that wilderness smote upon the fearful hollow of his ear.

Any voice or any word then and there would have surprised him but there was a note of awful terror in this voice a sound of frightened appeal. The desperation in the cry left him no moment for thought the demand was for action. The cry was not addressed to him apparently but to God yet it was he who answered—sent doubtless by that Overlooking Power who works in such mysterious ways. His wonder to perform.

He leaped over the intervening trees to the edge of the forest where the rapid waters ran. To the right of him rose a huge rock or cliff in shivering in the water whose sensation so far as a mere man could be thoroughly understood and appreciated and whose modesty he vainly would spare having not forgotten to be a gentleman in five years of his own society—high test of quality that.

He climbed out upon the bank uprooted a small tree rolled the bear clear of the heap of woman's clothing and marched straight ahead of him up the canon and around the bend.

Thereafter being a man he did not faint or fall but completely unnerved he leaned against the canon wall dropped his gun at his feet and stood there trembling mightily sweat dawning his forehead and the sweat had not come from his exertions. In one moment the whole even tenor of his life was changed. The one glimpse he had got of those white slippers that pallid face that golden head raised from the water had swept him back five years. He had seen once more in the solitude a woman.

Other women he had seen at a distance and avoided in his yearly visits to the settlements. Of course these had passed him by remotely but here he was brought in touch intimately with humanity. He who had taken life had saved it. A woman had sent him forth was a woman to call him back?

He cursed himself for his weak ness. He shut his eyes and summoned other memories. How long he stood there he could not have told. He was fighting a battle and it seemed to him at last that he triumphed. Presently the consciousness came to him that perhaps he had no right to stand there idle. It may be that the woman needed him perhaps she had fainted in the water perhaps—He turned to-front of him the canon bent sharply to the north and beneath him a few rods away a speck of white gleamed above the water of a deep and still pool that he knew.

There was a woman there! He had time for but the swiftest glance he had surmised that the voice was not that of a man's voice instantly he heard it and now he was sure. She stood white breast deep in the water staring ahead of her. The next second he saw what had alarmed her—a Grizzly Bear the largest fiercest most forbidding specimen he had ever seen. There were a few of those monsters still left in the range he himself had killed several.

The woman had not seen him. He was a silent man by long habit accustomed to saying nothing he said nothing now. But instantly aiming from the hip with a wondrous skill and a perfect mastery of the weapon and indeed it was a short range for so huge a target he pumped bullet after bullet from his Winchester into the evil monarch of the mountains. The first shot did for him but making assurance double and treble sure he fired again and again. Satisfied at last that the bear was dead and observing that he had fallen upon the clothes of the bather he turned descended the stream for a few yards until he came to a place where it was easily fordable stepped through it without a glance toward the woman ward the bend which concealed him from her and then he stopped. Had he any right to intrude upon her privacy? He must of necessity be an unwelcome visitor to her he had surprised her at a frightful disadvantage he knew instinctively although the fault was none of his although he had saved her life thereby that she would hold him and him alone responsible for the outrage to her modesty and although he had seen little at first glance and had resolutely kept his eyes away the mere consciousness of her absolute helplessness appealed to him—to what was best and noblest in him too. He must go to her yet stay she might not yet be clothed in which event—But no she must be dressed or dead by this time and in either case he would have a duty to discharge.

It devolved upon him to make sure of her safety he was in a certain sense responsible for it until she got back to her friends wherever they might be but he persuaded himself that otherwise he did not want to see her again that he did not wish to know anything about her future that he did not care whether it was well or ill with her and it was only stern obligation which drove him toward her—oh fond and foolish man!

He compromised with himself at last by climbing the ridge that had shut off a view of the pool and looking down at the place so memorable to him. He was prepared to with draw instantly should circumstances warrant and he was careful so to conceal himself as to give no possible opportunity for her to discover his scrutiny.

With a beating heart and eager eyes he searched the spot. There lay the bear and a little distance away prone on the grass clothed but whether in her right mind or not he could not tell lay the woman. For a moment as he bent a concentrated eager gaze upon her he thought she might have fainted or that she might have died. In any event he reflected that she had strength and nerve and will to have dressed herself before either of these things happened. She lay motionless under his gaze for so long that he finally made up his mind that common humanity required him to go to her assistance.

He rose to his feet on the instant and saw the woman also lift herself from the grass as if moved by a similar impulse. In his intense preoccupation he had forgot to observe the signs of the times. A sense of the overcast sky came to him suddenly as it did to her but with a difference. He knew what was about to happen his experience told him much more as to the awful potentialities of the tempest than she could possibly imagine. She must be warned at once she must leave the canon and get up on the higher ground without delay. His duty was plain and yet he did it not. He could not. The pressure upon him was not yet strong enough.

A half dozen times as he watched her deliberately sitting there eating he opened his mouth to cry to her yet he could not bring himself to it. A strange timidity oppressed him. He hated him held him back. A man cannot stay away five years from men and women and be himself with them in the twinkling of an eye. And when to that instinctive and acquired reluctance against which he struggled in vain he added the assurance that whatever his message he would be unwelcome on account of what had gone before he could not force himself to go to her or even to call to her not yet. He would keep her under surveillance however and if the worst came he could intervene in time to rescue her. He counted without his cost his usual judgment bewildered. So he followed her through the trees and down the bank.

Now he was so engrossed in her and so agitated that his caution slept his experience was forgotten. The storm in his own breast was so great that it overshadowed the storm brewing above. Her way was easier than his and he had fallen some distance behind when suddenly there rushed upon him the fact that a frightful and unlooked for cloudburst was about to occur above their heads. A lightning flash and a thunder clap at last arrested his attention. Then but not until then he flung everything to the winds and amid the sullen and almost continuous peals of thunder he sent cry after cry toward her which were lost in the tremendous diapason of sound that echoed and reechoed through the rifts of the mountains.

Wait he cried again and again. Come up higher. Get out of the canon. You'll be drowned.

But he had waited too long. The storm had developed too rapidly she was too far ahead of and beneath him. She heard nothing but the sound of a voice shrill menacing fraught with terror for her not a word distinguishable scarcely to her disturbed soul even a human voice it seemed like the weird cry of some wild spirit of the storm. It sounded to her over wrought nerves so utterly inhuman that she only ran the faster.

The canon swerved and then doubled back but he knew its direction. Losing sight of her for the moment he plunged straight ahead through the trees cutting off the bend leaping with superhuman agility and strength over rocks and logs until he reached a point where the rift narrowed between two walls and ran deeply. There and then the heavens opened and the floods came and beat into the open maw of that vast crevice and filled it in an instant.

As the deluge came roaring down bearing onward the sweepings and scourings of the mountains he caught a glimpse of her white desperate face rising falling now disappearing now coming into view again in the foamy midst of the torrent. He ran to the cliff bank and throwing aside his gun he scrambled down the wall to a certain shelf of the rock over which the rising water broke thinly. Ordinarily it was twenty feet above the creek bed. Bracing himself against a jagged projection he waited praying. The canon was here so narrow that he could have leaped to the other side and yet it was too narrow for him to reach her if the water did not sweep her toward his feet. It was all done in a second. Fortunately a projection on the other side threw the force of the torrent toward him and with it came the woman.

She was almost spent. She had been struck by a log upheaved by some mighty wave her hands were moving feebly her eyes were closed she was drowning dying but indomitably battling on. He stooped down and as a surge lifted her he threw his arm around her waist and then he braced himself against the rock to sustain the full thrust of the mighty flood. As he seized her she gave way suddenly as if after having done all that she could there was now nothing left but to trust herself to his hand and God's. She hung a dead weight on his arm in the ravelling water which dragged and tore at her madly.

He was a man of giant strength but the struggle bade fair to be too much even for him. It seemed as if the mountain behind him was giving way. He set his teeth he tried desperately to hold on he thrust out his right hand holding her with the other one and clawed at the dripping rock in vain. In a moment the torrent mastered him and when it did so it seized him with fury and threw him like a stone from a sling into the seething vortex of the midstream. But in all this he did not or would not release her.

Such was the swiftness of the motion with which they were swept downward that he had little need to swim his only effort was to keep his head above water and to keep from being dashed against the logs that tumbled end over end or whirled sideways or were jammed into clusters only to burst out on every hand. He struggled furiously to keep himself from being overwhelmed in the seething madness and what was harder to keep the lifeless woman in his arms from being stricken or wrenched away. He knew that below the narrows where the canon widened the water would subside the awful fury of the rain would presently cease. If he could steer clear of the rocks in the broad he might win to land with her.

The chances against him were thousands to nothing. But what are chances in the eyes of God? The man in his solitude had not forgotten to pray his habits stood him in good stead now. He petitioned shortly brokenly in brief unspoken words as he battled through the long dragging seconds. Fighting clinging struggling praying he was swept on. Heavier and heavier the woman dragged in an unconscious heap. It would have been easier for him if he had let her go she would never know and he could then escape. The idea never once occurred to him. He had indeed with drawn from his kind but when one depended upon him all the old appeal of weak humanity awoke quick response in the bosom of the strong. He would die with the stranger rather than yield her to the torrent or admit himself beaten and give up the fight. So the conscious and the unconscious struggled through the narrow of the canon.

Presently with the rush and hurl of a bullet from the mouth of a gun, they found themselves in a shallow lake through which the waters still rushed mightily, breaking over rocks digging away shallow rooted trees leaping biting snarling tearing at the big walls spread away on either side. He had husbanded some of his strength for this final effort this last chance of escape. Below them at the other end of this open the walls came together again. There the descent was sharper than before and the water ran to the opening with racing speed. Once again in the torrent and they would be swept to death in spite of all.

Shifting his grasp to the woman's hair now unbound he held her with one hand and swam hard with the other. The current still ran swiftly but with no gigantic upheaving waves as before. It was more easy to avoid floating timber and debris and on one side where the ground sloped somewhat gently the quick water flowed more slowly. He struck out desperately for it forcing himself away from the main stream into the shallows and ever dragging the woman. Was it hours or minutes or seconds after that he gained the battle and neared the shore at the lowest edge?

Dictograph

The dictograph consists of a series of sensitive metal plates set in a hard rubber cylinder. In its elements it is a telephone transmitter magnified. Used in a business way it enables a man to sit at his desk in his private office alone and talk off his correspondence without the stenographer being present. The stenographer may be in the next room or on the other side of the building but she hears the words as distinctly as though she were at his elbow and sets them down. The dictograph promises to be of great service in detective work, and is already being used in that line.

PLAYERS FROM MINOR LEAGUES PLAY WELL

Second Baseman Morgan of Washington

That winning ball teams are made up to a large extent from material secured direct from minor leagues and not from players who have had experience in fast company is proved in numerous instances among which are the Nationals.

Griffith's entire outfield came here direct from the minors. This is also true of the infield when Morgan is playing second and is a fact so far as a majority of the pitchers and catchers on the team are concerned. All of which should go to show that the club which intends to strengthen its fences must draw from the small leagues. Success however is not assured in a short period. It may take time and lots of it before the purpose is accomplished but it is the only system after all and should be practiced.

Washington's first successful grab from the minor league grab bag was Clyde Milan who was secured from Wichita in the summer of 1907. That fall Walter Johnson also came into the fold and it was soon generally conceded that Washington had two good ball players. The following spring came McBride and Street and this quartet formed the nucleus for several years to come—in fact until this spring when a great haul from the minors was made.

Under former regimes it was figured that this nucleus surrounded by some castoffs would bring about desired results. The failure of these plans need not be recalled but it was up to Clark Griffith to realize when he took charge that if a ball team was to be built up it must be done along the same lines that the nucleus for a team had been secured. He started out along these lines and he made a success of it. Not that he was responsible for the securing of the players who have made this a winner but he burned all bridges behind him when he let out the old players and made it possible for the youngsters to get a chance to play.

Had he retained the veterans the chances are that if the youngsters had started poorly the old fellows would have been back in harness and the result would have been another losing team.

M'INTYRE GETS HIS RELEASE

Former Detroit Player Is Sent to Minors by Manager Callahan of White Sox

Another veteran has passed along the pathway leading to the minors. This time the yellow slip has fallen to the lot of Matty McIntyre who was recently released to the Milwaukee club. McIntyre's transfer to the Brewers is another cog in the deal that brought Ray Schalk into the Comiskey camp. Thus Comiskey has provided the Milwaukee party with a backstop in Jimmy Block, a shortstop in Lena Blackburne and an outfielder in the raven-haired Matty. As a side issue the Old Roman also turned over considerable coin.

More than twelve years Matty constituted a wing of the peerless Buffalo outfield one of the fastest trio of fly chasers in the Eastern league. Later he went to Detroit and for several seasons stood side by side with Ty Cobb and Wahoo Sam Crawford.

What Butler Cost Pittsburgh. Early last season Manager Tenney of Boston released Artie Butler to St. Paul along with Josh Clarke for Harry Steinfield. Now Butler is back in the National League and it cost Barney Dreyfuss five real ball players to get him. The list includes McEachnie, Capron Rehg and a catcher and outfielder to be selected.

"The Universal Help" By Walt Mason

My cow's gone dry, my hens won't lay, my horse has got the croup, the hot wind's up, the budding hay and I am in the soup. And while my life is sad and sore, and earthly joys are few, I'll write a note to Theodore, he'll tell me what to do. I wasn't home when Fortune called, my feet had strayed afar. I fear that I am going bald, and I have got catarrh. The wolf is howling at my door, I've naught to smoke or chew, but I shall write to Theodore, he'll tell me what to do. My Sunday suit is old and sore, I'm wearing last year's kids, my aunt is coming for a year to visit with her kids. They will not trust me at the store, and I am feeling blue, so I shall write to Theodore, he'll tell me what to do. When we are weary and distressed, from worldly strife and care, and we need the balm we sought, and give black despair, ah, then my friends, there is one chore devolves on me and you, we'll simply write to Theodore, he'll tell us what to do.

"THE BEST BREAD BAKED"

Bread baking is a science. It takes a specialist to produce a bread like Table Queen bread. He must devote his entire time and thought to bread baking. He must have an organization and equipment. In this way, and this way only, can a loaf, the quality of TABLE QUEEN BREAD, be produced. We employ one of the best bread specialists in America.

It will only be a short time until everyone will eat only Table Queen Bread.

Brief Comment.

Harry S. Joseph is still peeved over his failure to connect up with the nomination for the office of congressman on the Republican ticket and is now demanding an investigation of the methods used in the nomination of Judge Jacob Johnson. In trying to stir up this trouble Mr. Joseph wishes it distinctly understood that he is a Republican first last and all the time. It is to laugh.

For the purpose of removing any cause for embarrassment by reason of lack of fashionable attire, high school teachers in various parts of the state are considering the advisability of recommending that girl pupils adopt a uniform dress. In addition to the ethical feature of the reform, with reference to dress vanity it is believed that the departure will prove beneficial to the quality of the school work done, as it is thought that there will be less time and attention given to the thought of excelling in finery and more to efforts for superiority in study.

When you go into a local store and buy goods from a local merchant, you do not only get the goods. You get the thrifty town, the paved streets, the schools which your children attend, the churches which preserve the moral atmosphere of the community, the things you enjoy and use, which you and the merchant and the manufacturer pay for in common. You can send the money to some other town and get the goods, but you can not get these other things and even if you think the price is smaller, it is larger in the long run, since you get less in return for your money.—Ex.

Mary had a little lamb, its fleece was white as snow. It strayed away one summer day, where lambs should never go. Then Mary sat down and tears streamed from her pretty eyes, she never found her lamb because she did not advertise. And Mary had a brother John who kept the village store, he sat down and smoked his pipe and watched the open door. As people passed along but did not stop to buy, John still sat down and smoked his pipe and blinked his sleepy eye. And so the sheriff closed him out, but still he lingered near and Mary came and dropped with him a sympathetic ear. How is it sister that all the other merchants here sell all the goods and pay their bills and thrive from year to year? Remembering now her own bad luck, the little maid replied, "The other fellows got there John because they advertise."

The property owners of Eureka have received their tax notices during the past few days and the Reporter is pleased to note that notwithstanding the many improvements at the schools and the installation of new sewers the levy is practically the same as for last season and is much lower than in many of the towns of the state where conditions are similar. At the public schools here a new boiler room, sanitary toilets, etc. have been installed and all of these improvements will be entirely paid for out of this year's taxes while in connection with the Tintic High School it has been necessary to make three interest payments on bonds instead of two as will be in order in the future. The total tax on local property is 43.5 mills, the total including city, county and school levies. In checking over the taxes levied in various parts of the state we find that this is by no means high. At Provo the total levy is 45 mills, at Spanish Fork 41, Payson 47, Santaquin 58, Lehi 59, American Fork 44, Pleasant Grove 47 and Nephi 39.5.

The call was read by Acting Secretary Dennis Wood of Nephi and after the appointment of one delegate from each of the seven precincts represented to act on the committee on Platform and Resolutions, Credentials and Permanent Organization and Order of Business an adjournment was taken until 1 o'clock.

The committees appointed were as follows:

When the delegates met at 1 o'clock, Herbert Hopes was named as permanent chairman and Joseph McKnight as permanent secretary after which an adjournment was taken to allow the delegates to meet in caucus. Later the ticket as published in the newspaper was read and the delegates in the floor of the convention it was quite evident that nothing has been accomplished by the caucus. Those who were nominated with it open strategy were George Jones for representative, Lorenzo Mangelsen for first term commissioner and J. H. Carter for surveyor. For long term commissioner, Gus J. Hendrickson of Eureka and J. S. Neilson of Silver City were named the vote standing 19 to 12 in the former's favor. Frank Barrett for sheriff, 33 out of the 36 votes his opponent for the nomination, J. E. Weston, still in the lead. Vickers and William Tigam were named for the office of clerk and the vote stood 20 to 16 in favor of Mr. Vickers. John F. Lunt beat William Burton in the race for the office of recorder, the vote being 23 to 14. All candidates for the offices of clerk and recorder were from Nephi. Levan had two candidates for assessor, L. H. Mortenson and Earl Jackson, the present incumbent. Jackson won 25 to 10. George A. Sperry Jr. of Nephi and James Stark of Silver City were named for a superintendent of schools. The vote stood 21 for Stark to 15.

The Platform.

The platform which was adopted by the convention reaffirms allegiance to the Republican party of the state and its platform and demands the high moral and statesmanlike administration of President Taft, especially in using the veto which he has taken with reference to the protection of western industries. Attention was called to the record of the state administration with reference to good roads, a fact that Juab county is well aware of, the best roads in Utah. Any legislation looking to the help of the country high schools was endorsed and the legislative candidate pledged to work for the proper improvement of the road leading into the Tintic district from Juab county and to also use his influence in securing an amendment to the constitution in relation to the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. An increase in the salary of the Juvenile Probation officer was also recommended. The plank regarding the development of the county resources was as follows:

Recognizing that the development of our district is yet in its infancy and that to realize to a greater extent the benefits that would result from a more thorough development of our state and particularly Juab county by encouraging the investment of capital, we here by instruct our representative in the state legislature to use all honorable means for the passage of all legislation that will encourage the development of these resources along educational, mining and all lines that will be for the betterment and upbuilding of Juab county and our state and to oppose the passage of any legislation that would discourage such development.

$12,000 From Eighty Tons.

Eighty tons of silver ore valued at $12,000 left the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom mine a few days being the richest lot of ore that has been shipped from this property since time. Mine assays show the ore to carry about 230 ounces silver the ton and while the management is anxious to hold as much of this material of ore as possible for the mill Supt. Charles Zabruskie could resist the temptation to put a couple of cars of it on the market at a time when silver is bringing the price in years. There is no question but what this ore can be handled by the new milling process but a couple of few cents in the price of silver during the time that the mill is erected would more than offset saving in treatment charges. This is by no means the first lot of silver ore to be taken from the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom.

Record Week At Chief Cons.

This week, the Chief Consolidated mine broke all previous records in the matter of ore production sending out a total of 32 carloads.

Break records seems to be a weekly pastime with the Chief and after sending out about four cars a day for several weeks the mine got busy last week and shipped a total of thirty cars which up to that time was the best week in the history of the property. Manager Fitch states that underground conditions are good and it is only reasonable to suppose that there is a large amount of ore available when the mine can be depended upon for such a record breaking tonnage.

Samuel McIntyre, Jr., manager of the Mammoth mine was in Salt Lake on business this week.

Zinc Bringing $1000 a Car

Zinc shipments are going forward from the May Day mine at the rate of a carload a day and according to Supt. C. C. Griggs the ore which has already been placed upon the market has brought the company an average of about $1000 per carload. Checks have just been received in settlement for some of the ore which went out last week and it is said that the poor lot of ore brought $916 while the best car fell little short of $1100. At the May Day an effort is being made to keep the value of the zinc ore at or near the $20 mark and this means that it is possible to send out large quantities of the 20 to 35 per cent ore along with the higher grade product.

It is stated on very good authority that the indebtedness of the May Day company has not only been wiped out but that the treasury now contains the nucleus of a fund which will soon be swelled to such an extent that a dividend will be possible early in the new year. Conservative estimates place the amount of zinc ore blocked out at the May Day at from 10,000 to 15,000 tons.

The zinc showing is also very encouraging in the Uncle Sam property which is under the same management. During September the Uncle Sam mine sent out two cars of this ore and a large amount will be mined for the present month. Development work is still under way in that portion of the Uncle Sam ground which was recently acquired from the Richmond & Anaconda.

A small cave containing some nice ore was encountered on the 1000 level of the Eagle & Blue Bell mine during the week. The cave was about twenty feet wide and is located on the side of one of the stopes from which ore is now being shipped.

Raise In Wages For Tintic Miners

The agitation which was started some time ago by the members of the Tintic Miners Union has resulted in a raise in wages at various properties of the Tintic District notices having been posted at several of the mines within the past few days announcing a raise of 25 cents per day for all underground workers. While all of the mines have not yet notified employees of this change in the wage scale it is generally understood here that the raise will be effective throughout the district. The Centennial Eureka Bullion Beck and Chief Cons. mines were the first to announce the increase and the properties which are under the management of John Dern were next in line. The raise is to date from last Tuesday which was the first of the month. Under the new scale of wages the miners at the mines which are being operated six days a week will receive $3 miners $3.25 and machine and timbermen $3.50.

Notice of an increase had not been posted at the Knight mines this morning. The Reporter got into telephone communication with Jesse Knight and after informing him of the increase in wages at other Tintic mines asked if the new scale is to go into effect at his properties. Mr. Knight stated that he had received no notice of a meeting of the mine owners and that the announcement of an increase was something of a surprise to him. He could not say what action his companies would take until the matter can be placed before the directors. Mr. Knight states that his companies were the first to raise wages after the outbreak several years ago. It is generally understood here that some of the officials of the Knight companies have advocated the closing of the mines pending the completion of the new mill but that Uncle Jesse with his characteristic generosity gave orders to continue operations furnishing employment for as many of the old employees as possible by taking up new development work.

C. E. Loose the well known Tintic Reporter was interviewed by phone this morning. He informed the Reporter that he is ready and willing to pay whatever scales prevail at the other Tintic mines. He said that the mine owners have had no meeting for the discussion of the wage question or any other matter but that most of the operators feel that wages should be put back to the point where they were before the cut in 1907. The mines which are shipping ore and making money can do this owing to the present prices of the metals. Mr. Loose could not say what action would be taken at properties which are being operated at a loss and where assessments are necessary in order to keep things moving. The Tintic mines under the management of Mr. Loose are the Grand Central and Gold Chain. When asked for a statement regarding the increase in wages here the officials of the Tintic District Miners Union said that they had absolutely nothing to give out at this time other than to call attention to the fact that they have appointed a committee to meet with the mine owners that a hearing has been pronounced them and that they are awaiting the outcome of this conference with their employers.

Will Sink on Tintic-Humboldt

John Taylor was in Provo this week for the purpose of consulting with the officers of the Tintic Humboldt property regarding the resumption of operations on this ground. A force of men will be sent out at once and preparations made for sinking the shaft which at this time is down something over 400 feet. This work will be needed to cover the assessment for the present year but the officers of the company will make an effort to keep things moving. The ground is located in the North Tintic district.

Crown Point Now Sinking

After prospecting the 500 level pretty thoroughly the management of the Crown Point has again commenced work in the shaft and at this time the work is going along in nice shape at a depth of about 535 feet. The sinking will continue until the 600 level is reached and if the showing is favorable at that depth the country will be crossed in the hope of getting into the ore. The work on the 500 level gave the officials a very good insight into the formation in the Crown Point and convinced them that greater depth was needed before any important change can be expected.

Bullion Beck Shipping Dump Ore

Some time ago arrangements were made for shipment of one of the low grade dumps at the Bullion Beck mine and already about 2,000 tons of this ore has been forwarded to the smelter. The dump now contains approximately 18,000 tons and shipments will continue as long as favorable weather will permit. The ore is netting the company from $1.50 to $2 per ton and while this is small in the aggregate it will mean a very respectable sum of money.

Good Ore in West Tintic Mines

William Bates one of Tintic's old time prospectors arrived in town on Thursday after spending several months in the West Tintic section. While doing the assessment work on some very promising claims which he owns in that district Mr. Bates succeeded in opening a six inch vein of high grade ore and assays which have been made since his return show this ore to contain better than 800 ounces silver about 64 per cent lead and 3 per cent copper. He has developed the ground to depth of but seventy feet and is consequently quite confident that this ore will make into something larger and better at greater depth. After spending a few weeks in Eureka Mr. Bates will return to his property and if possible will make arrangements to sink on this bunch of ore.

Mr. Bates says that two men have been at work on the old Scotia property for the past few months and that a large amount of shipping ore is now available. Some of this ore will perhaps be placed on the market within the next few months being hauled to the railroad at Tintic Junction a distance of about twenty miles. The Scotia ore goes well in lead and silver and also carries gold values. The mine has been developed through an incline shaft to a depth of about 400 feet and in addition to the best ore which is now awaiting shipment there are thousands of tons of low grade ore which could undoubtedly be handled at a nice profit were it not for the fact that the mine is isolated from the railroad. W. F. James who years ago operated in the Alta and Cottonwood districts is the principal owner of the Scotia.

Ore House Nearly Finished

The new ore house at the Eagle & Blue Bell mine is now nearing completion and within the next day or two it will be used in the loading of the large tonnage of ore which is now being sent out from this property. The new building has a capacity of 300 tons and will greatly facilitate the handling of ore at the Eagle

Dragon Now Shipping Iron

After several days spent in a general clean up of the mine the shipment of iron ore was resumed at the Dragon Cons. property yesterday. Assistant Manager Frank Birch of the Knight mines states that at the present time the smelters are in a position to handle but 100 tons or about two carloads of this ore per day and for that reason the Dragon will operate with but one shift. Later it is thought that orders will be sent in for a heavier tonnage and this will of course necessitate the employment of a larger force at the mine.

At the Centennial Eureka

The pumps at the Centennial Eureka mine are still being operated almost to their capacity and continuous pumping during the past few months has failed to clear the 2200 level of the water which accumulated after the bulk head door was closed at the time operations were suspended at that depth. Additional pumping equipment has been ordered for this mine but in view of the fact that it is to be secured from Switzerland it is not expected for some little time yet.

Supt. R. A. Brown says that he has absolutely no fault to find with the manner in which the ore bodies are responding to development work and that it is an easy matter to keep the tonnage up to its present high standard.

Tintic Well Represented

Visitors to the state fair declare that the mineral exhibit is by far the best in the history of the state fair association. Tintic mines being the best represented of any in the state.

Practically every mine in this district is represented in the exhibit which completely fills one of the smaller buildings at the fair.

Prof. Lehman manager of the Yankee Cons. mine was out from the capital during the early part of the week. He found everything moving along in nice shape at the Yankee and was especially pleased with the showing of zinc ore from which regular shipments are being made at this time.

For the first time in five years the Lower Mammoth mine is paying its way. This statement was given out by James Dick the assistant manager after his recent visit to the property. The shipments of zinc ore are bringing considerable money into the Lower Mammoth treasury and the present showing indicates that the mine will soon be doing even better than making a stand off.

My Worst Blunder

FAMOUS "BONEHEAD" PLAYS ON MAJOR LEAGUE DIAMONDS

Explained by Leading Baseball Players to

HUGH S. FULLERTON

By BEALS BECKER

Outfielder New York Giants Whose Work Has Contributed Largely to the Success of McGraw's Team This Season

You're certainly touching upon a tender subject. You know I have the faculty of making my worst blunders at the worst times. It is a lot like the luck of the game. Some teams can make ten errors and not one will count in the run column and some teams make one and away goes the game. I've always placed mine where they counted most. It is pretty hard to pick out the worst blunder I ever made but I can assure you I've made some that I'm proud of. I've furnished young ball players with a great many object lessons in what not to do. But there is one of which I am very proud. It was several seasons ago before I had made all the blunders possible. That is my system. I never make the same blunder twice and the reason I'm beginning to think I'm going to be a good player in a year or two is that I've made most all of them already. This was a new one. We had a game won by three runs in the ninth inning when they got two runners on the bases and the next batter slammed a hard hit between me and the left fielder up the wall against the fence. I certainly gave that ball a chase and I hurried the throw back to the infield fast and hard to keep him from making a home run. I saw him stop at third and felt pretty well pleased. Then I took my mind out of the game for a second to let it tell me what a good player I was getting to be.

Beals Becker

The next batter hit a low line fly out toward me. It looked as if I could reach the ball and I made a hard try. It hit the dirt a foot ahead of my hands and bounded up into them. They I thought rapidly and played without looking. I figured the runner would hold third to see if I made the catch so I cut loose as hard as I could throw to the plate. It was a grand throw. It went straight into the catcher's hands on the first bound. I looked to see a cloud of dust as the runner slid to the plate but there wasn't any dust. The catcher grabbed the ball and shot down to second too late to catch the batter who had taken an extra base on my throw. I looked over at third and no runner was there. I was puzzled. I found out after coming in when a base hit had sent the runner home from second and beaten us out of the game. The runner had stopped at third all right but the umpire had let him go home because of interference and I had thrown to the plate to catch a runner who had been on the bench three minutes.

Genuine cheaper than counterfeits!

In this store where fair dealing rules, all goods are relatively low in price. The report of a competent authority, who made a thorough test of New York stores recently, proved that the so-called cheap stores sell dearest because largely they sell counterfeits.

Competition, run mad, has brought out a "cheap" imitation for almost everything worth copying, which gives "cheap" stores the opportunity to shriek prices without directing attention to the fraud, and selling at a bigger profit to those who can least afford to pay it. The point we want to emphasize is this

This store sells many grades of goods.
All grades of honest values, but no counterfeits.

Irrespective of what you want, you can depend absolutely upon getting the best at the price, no matter what the price, whenever you come here. Our responsibility for your satisfaction does not end when the sale is made. We don't expect things to go wrong, but they do sometimes. You may think you're getting just what you want, we think it's good or we wouldn't sell it. If the test of service shows either of us mistaken bring it back, we can much better return your money than keep it.

How do you like this style?

Isn't it a clever suit? "Palmer Garment," of course. We always insist on the best.

If you like some other style better, it's here. We can most certainly satisfy you, as we have an immense variety from which to select.

Mammoth Pays $60,000 Dividend

The Mammoth mine is back in the dividend column again after an absence of about four years. The directors at their meeting held last Saturday having decided upon the payment of 15 cents per share or $60,000. This dividend will be sent out to the shareholders on the 10th of the present month and will bring the total from this well known bonanza up to $2,289,000. The last dividend from the Mammoth company was early in the year 1905 and while the mine has made considerable money since that time there were several reasons why a dividend was not thought advisable until recently. The litigation between this company and the Grand Central took a vast amount of cash and in the final settlement of the case after it had been in the courts for many years took from the Mammoth treasury the large sum of $125,000. Shortly afterwards the hoisting equipment of the mine was greatly damaged when the engine ran away and allowed the cage to drop into the shaft. The new ore body which has been opened from the 600, 700 and 800 levels seems to have made a new mine out of this old time producer and consequently more dividend money can be expected in the future.

Show For Benefit of Library

The members of the Eureka Home Dramatic company are now at work putting the finishing touches on their new production "Crawford's Claim," which will be presented at the opera house on the evening of October 8th—next Tuesday. This is one of the most interesting of all western dramas and the performance promises to be quite a treat to local theatre goers. The cast will include twelve people practically all of whom have had considerable experience in this line of work. The proceeds from the show will be turned over to the Eureka Public Library and in view of the fact that the members of the company are devoting a large amount of time to this worthy cause the performance should be given liberal patronage. The admission will be 50 and 25 cents. Those who will appear in the cast for the performance are as follows: Misses Amanda Durfee, Irene Hughes, Miss Whitehead, Messrs Ezra Bradley, Kenneth Pearson, Archie Sorenson, William Clatterton, Jack Downey, Fred Lamb, Milo McDonald, Jerry Sullivan and Edward Shaw.

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland James Armstrong's protegee falls in love with her. It is a story of love and adventure, of a girl who is a business woman and a girl who is a girl. Enid hears the story of a young engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously slain. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms Enid into a raging torrent which sweeps Enid into a gorge where she is rescued by a mountaineer from a thrilling experience.

He caught with his forearm as the torrent swerved him around a stout young pine so deeply rooted as yet to have withstood the flood. Summoning the last reserve of strength that is bestowed upon us in our hour of need and comes unless from God we know not whence he drew himself in front of the pine got his back against it and although the water thundered against him still—only by comparison could it be called quiet—and his foothold was most precarious he reached down carefully and grasped the woman under the shoulders. His position was a cramped one but by the power of his arms alone he lifted her up until he got his left arm about her waist again. It was a mighty feat of strength indeed.

The pine stood in the midst of the water for even on the farther side the earth was overflowed but the water was still. He did not know what might be there but he had to chance it. Lifting her up he stepped out fortunately meeting firm ground. A few paces and he reached solid rock above the flood. He raised her above his head and laid her upon the shore then with the very last atom of all his force physical mental and spiritual he drew himself up and fell panting and utterly exhausted but triumphant by her side.

The cloudburst was over but the rain still beat down upon them the thunder still roared above them the lightning still flashed about them but they were safe alive if the woman had not died in his arms. He had done a thing superhuman. No man knowing conditions would have believed it. He himself would have declared a thousand times its patent impossibility.

For a few seconds he strove to recover himself then he thought of the flask he always carried in his pocket. It was gone. His clothes were ragged and torn they had been ruined by his battle with the waves. The girl lay where he had placed her on her back in the pocket of her hunting shirt he noticed a little protuberance. The pocket was provided with a flap and tightly buttoned. Without hesitation he unbuttoned it. There was a flask there a little silver mounted affair by some miracle it had not been broken. It was half full. With nervous hands he opened it and poured some of it down her throat then he bent over her his soul in his glance scarcely knowing what to do next. Presently she opened her eyes.

And there in the rain by that raging torrent whence he had drawn her as it were from the jaws of death by the power of his arm in the presence of the God above them this man and this woman looked at each other and life for both of them was no longer the same.

CHAPTER VII

A Wild Dash for the Hills

Old Kirkby who had been lazily mending a saddle the greater part of the morning had eaten his dinner smoked his pipe and was now stretched out on the grass in the warm sun taking a nap. Mrs. Maitland was drawing over a book in the shadow of one of the big pines when Pete the horse wrangler who had been wandering rather far down the canon rounding up the ever straying stock suddenly came bursting into the camp.

"Great God Almighty!" he cried actually kicking the prostrate mountaineer as he almost stumbled over him. "Wake up old man!"

What the— began Kirkby fiercely thus rudely aroused from slumber and resentful of the daring and most unusual affront to his dignity and station since all men and especially the younger ones held him in great honor.

Look here yelled Peter in growing excitement and entirely oblivious to his less majestic pointing at a black cloud rolling over the top of the range. "It'll be a cloudburst sure. We'll have to get out of here in a hurry too. Oh Mrs. Maitland!"

By this time Kirkby was on his feet the storm had stolen upon him sleeping and unaware. The configuration of the canon had completely hid its approach. At best the three in the camp could not have discovered it until it was high in the heavens. Now the clouds were already approaching the noonday sun. Kirkby was alive to the situation at once. He had the rare ability of men of action of awakening with all his faculties at instant command. He did not have to rub his eyes and wonder where he was and speculate as to what was to be done. The moment that his eyes following Pete's outstretched arm discovered the black mass of clouds he ran toward Mrs. Maitland and standing on no ceremony he shook her vigorously by the shoulder.

"Well have to run for our lives," he said briefly. "Pete drive the stock up on the hills for as you kin the horses better they'll be more to us than them burros must take care of themselves."

Pete needed no urging. He was off like a shot in the direction of the improvised corral. He loosed the horses from their pickets and started them up the steep trail that led down from the hogback to the camp by the water's edge. He also tried to start the burros he had just rounded up in the same direction. Some of them would go and some of them would not. He had his hands full in an instant. Meanwhile Kirkby did not linger by the side of Mrs. Maitland. With incredible agility for so old a man he ran over to the tent where the stores were kept and began picking out such articles of provision as he could easiest carry.

Come over here Mrs. Maitland he cried. "Well have to carry up on the hill something to keep us from starvin' till we get back to town. We hadn't order camped in this yere pocket noways but who'd ever expected anything like this now?"

What do you fear? asked the woman joining him as she spoke and waiting for his directions.

Looks to me like a cloudburst was the answer. "Creeks pretty full now an' if she does break everything below yere I'll go to hell on a run."

It was evidence of his perturbation and anxiety that he used such language which however in the emergency did not seem unwarranted even to the refined ear of Mrs. Maitland.

Is it possible? she exclaimed. "Taint only possible it's sartain. Now ma'am he hastily bundled up a lot of miscellaneous provisions in a small piece of canvas tied it up and handed it to her. "That'll be for you."

Presently She Opened Her Eyes

Presently She Opened Her Eyes

Immediately after he made up a much larger bundle in another tent fly adding. "An this is mine."

Oh let us hurry cried Mrs. Maitland as a peal of thunder low muttered menacing burst forth from the flying clouds now obscuring the sun and rolled over the camp.

We've got time enough yet answered Kirkby coolly calculating their chances. "Best git yer slicker on you'll need it in a few minutes."

Mrs. Maitland ran to her own tent and soon came out with sou'wester and yellow oliskins completely covering her. Kirkby meantime had donned his own old battered soiled rain clothes and had grabbed up Pete's. I brought the children's coats along said Mrs. Maitland extending three others.

Good said Kirkby. Now well take our packs an—

Do you think there is any danger to Robert?

"Hell git nothin' worse'n a wet tin returned the old man confidently. If we pitched the tents up on the hog back that's all wed a been in for."

I have to leave the tents and all the things said Mrs. Maitland. You can stay with them answered Kirkby dryly but if what I think's goin' to happen comes off you won't have no need of nothin' no more—Great God here she comes.

As he spoke there was a sudden swift downpour of rain not in drops but in a torrent. Catching up his own pack and motioning the woman to do likewise with her load Kirkby caught her by the hand and half led half dragged her up the steep trail from the brook to the ridge which bordered the side of the canon. The canon was much wider here than further up and there was much more room and much more space for the water to spread. Yet they had to hurry for their lives as it was. They had gone up scarcely a hundred feet when the disgorge ment of the heavens took place. The water fell with such force directness and continuousness that it almost beat them down. It ran over the trail down the side of the mountain in sheets like water falls. It required all the old man's skill and address to keep himself and companion from losing their footing and falling down into the seething tumult below.

The tents went down in an instant. Where there had been a pleasant bit of meadow land was now a muddy tossing lake of black water. Some of the horses and most of the burros which Pete had been unable to do anything with were engulfed in a moment. The two of the mountain side could see them swimming for dear life as they swept down the canon. Pete himself with a few of the animals was already scrambling up to safety.

Speech was impossible between the noise of the falling rain and the incessant peals of thunder but by persistent gesture old Kirkby urged the terrified trembling woman up the trail until they finally reached the top of the hog back where under the poor shelter of the stunted pines they thought came suddenly to Mrs. Maitland. She leaned over and caught the frontiersman by his wet sleeve. Seeing that she wished to speak to him he bent his head toward her lips.

Enid she cried pointing down the canon. She had not thought before of the position of the girl.

Kirkby who had not forgotten her but who had instantly realized that he could do nothing for her shook his head. Lifting his eyes and solemnly pointed his finger up to the gray skies. He had said nothing to Mrs. Maitland before. What was the use of troubling her?

God only kin help her he cried. She's beyond the help of man."

Ah indeed old trapper whence came the confident assurance of that dogmatic statement? For as it chanced at that very moment the woman for whose peril your heart was wrung was being lifted out of the torrent by meadow land trunks of trees torn up by the roots had lodged against them. It was a scene of desolate and miserable confusion and disaster.

Oh Robert don't you think she may be safe? asked Mrs. Maitland. There's just a chance I think that she may have suspicioned the storm an' got out of the canon suggested the old frontiersman.

A slim chance answered Maitland gloomily. God I wouldn't have had this happen for anything on earth.

For me I'd a heap rather it had got me than her said Kirkby simply.

I didn't see it coming continued Maitland nodding as if Kirkby's statement were to be accepted as a matter of course as indeed it was. We were on the other slope of the mountain until it was almost over head.

Nuther did I To tell the truth I

Great God! He Cried Where is Enid?

a man's hand. And yet who shall say that the old hunter was not right and that the man himself as men of old have been sent from God?

It can't be began Mrs. Maitland in great anguish for the girl she had grown to love.

If she seed the storm an realized what it was an had sense enough to climb up the canon wall answered the other she won't be no worse off'n we are ef not—

Mrs. Maitland had only to look down into the seething cauldron to understand the possibility of that. If Oh she cried let us pray for her that she sought the hills.

I've been a don it said the old man gruffly.

He had a deep vein of piety in him but like other rich ores it had to be mined for in the depths before it was apparent.

By slow degrees the water subsided and after a long while the rain ceased a heavy mist lay on the mountains and the night approached with out any further appearance of the veiled sun. Toward evening Robert Maitland with the three men and the three children joined the wretched trio above the camp. Maitland wild with excitement and apprehension had pressed on ahead of the rest. It was a glad faced man indeed who ran the last few steps of the rough way and clasped his wife in his arms but as he did so he noticed that one was missing.

Great God he cried releasing his wife where is Enid?

She went down the canon early this mornin' intendin' to stay all day slowly and reluctantly answered old Kirkby an—

He paused there. It wasn't necessary for him to say anything more. Maitland walked to the edge of the trail and looked down into the valley. It had been swept clean of the camp. Rocks had been rolled over upon the was lying down napping when Pete yere, who'd been down the canon rounding up some of the critters came bustin' in on us."

I ain't saved but four hosses said Pete mournfully and there's only one burro on the hog back.

We came back as fast as we could said Maitland. I pushed on ahead George Bradshaw and Phillips are bringing Bob and the girls. We must search the canon.

It can't be done tonight old man said Kirkby. I tell you we can't wait Jack!

We've got to be as willin' to lay down my life for that young gal as anybody on earth but in this yere mist an' as black a night as it's goin' to be we couldn't go ten rods without killin' ourselves an' we couldn't see nothin' noways.

But she may be in the canon.

If she's in the canon t'wont make no difference to her wether we finds her tomorrow or next day or next year Bob.

Maitland groaned in anguish. I can't stay here inactive he persisted stubbornly.

It's a hard thing but we got to wait till mornin' Ef she got out of the canon and climbed up on the hog back she'll be all right she'll soon find out she can't make no progress in this mist and darkness. No old friend we're up agin it hard. We jest got to stay the night wether we are an' as long as we got to wait we might as well make ourselves as comfortable as possible. For the wimmen an' children anyway I fetched up some ham and some canned goods and other eatin's in these yere canvas sacks. We might kindle a fire—

It's hardly possible said Maitland. We shall have to eat it cold.

Oh Robert pleaded his wife isn't it possible that she may have escaped?

Possible yes but—

We went give up hope ma'am said Kirkby until tomorrow we've had a look at the canon.

By this time the others joined the party. Phillips and Bradshaw showed the stuff that was in them. They immediately volunteered to go down the canon at once knowing little or nothing of its dangers and indifferent to what they did know but as Kirkby had pointed out the attempt was clearly impossible. Maitland bitterly reproached himself for having allowed the girl to go alone and in those self-reproaches old Kirkby joined.

They were too wet and cold to sleep. There was no shelter and it was not until early in the morning they succeeded in kindling a fire. Meanwhile the men talked the situation over very carefully. They were two days' journey from the wagons. It was necessary that the women and children should be taken back at once. Kirkby hadn't been able to save much more than enough to eat to get them back to a ranch or settlement and on very short rations at best. It was finally decided that George and Pete and Mrs. Maitland the two girls and the youngster should go back to the wagon drive to the nearest settlement leave the women and then return on horseback with all speed to meet Maitland and Kirkby who would meanwhile search the canon.

The two men from the east had to go back with the others although they pleaded gallantly to be allowed man to man and then Robert Maitland standing in the midst of the group bowed his head in the sunny morning for the sky again was clear and poured out a brief prayer that God would prosper them that they would find the child and that they would all be together again in health and happiness. And without another word he and Kirkby plunged down to the side of the canon the others taking up their weary march homeward with sad hearts and in great dismay.

CHAPTER VIII

A Telegram and a Call.

You say asked Maitland as they surveyed the canon that she went down the stream?

She said she was going down. I showed her how to cut across the mountains an' avoid the big bend. I've got no reason to suspicion that she didn't go where she said.

Nevertheless said Maitland. It is barely possible that she may have changed her mind and gone up the canon.

Yep the female mind does often change unexpected like returned the other but wether she went up or down the only place for us to look I take it is down for if she's alive if she got out of the canon and is above us nacherly shed follow it down yere an' wed a seed her by this time. If she didn't git out of the canon why to remain with the two who were to take up the hunt for Enid Maitland might have kept them with him but that meant retaining a larger portion of the scanty supplies that had been saved and he was compelled against his will to refuse their requests. Leaving barely enough to subsist Maitland and Kirkby for three or four days or until the return of the relief party the groups separated at daybreak.

Oh Robert pleaded his wife as he kissed her good bye take care of yourself but find Enid.

Yes answered her husband. I shall never fear but I must find the dear girl or discover what has become of her.

There was not time for further leave taking. A few handclaps from all that's left of her is bound to be down stream.

Maitland nodded. He understood. Wed better go down then continued Kirkby whose reasoning was flawless except that he made no allowance for the human divine interposition that had been Enid Maitland's salvation an' if we don't find no trace of her down stream we kin come back here an' go up.

It was a hard desperate journey the two men took. One of them followed the stream at its level the other tramped along in the mountains high above the high water mark of the day before. If they had needed any evidence of the power of that cloudburst and storm they found it in the canon. In some places where it was narrow and rocky the pass had been fairly scoured at other places the whole aspect of it was changed. The place was a welter of uprooted trees logs jammed together in fantastic shapes. It was as if some vast ton besom of destruction had swept the narrow rift.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat every thing your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to the Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Chambers Medicine Co. will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application. When purchasing Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefitted the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand the loss. All we ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will. Sold exclusively and guaranteed by M. D. Howlett.

Drummers Record Showing How He Was Always the Loser in the Proceedings

Arrived at Mansion house 6 45 o'clock House full Drew back room over kitchen. Only one chair and one window Bum bed Bellhop moved chair twice opened then closed window as hint for tip. Next asked if I wanted anything else. Felt like kicking him out of the window but gave him a dime. He didn't even say thank you runs comment in the Commercial Travelers Magazine.

Washed and went down to office. Another bellhop jumped for me with whisk broom. Chased me clear across office. Gave up a nickel. Hiked for hotel cafe. Supper slip 95 cents. Got two halves and nickel back from $2 bill. Left half and cursed myself for it. Hat rack boy outside brushed hat. Got nickel.

Got shaved next. Barber glared at me. Tipped him a dime. Brush boy grabbed my hat. Brushed it some more. Nickel again. Wrote orders and wife. Got chased with whisk broom. Hornet again. Stung for another nick. Played pool two hours. Pool keeper kept glaring till I tipped him. No other sting. Back to the office. Fresh whisk broom. Hornet got after me. Gave up another nick.

Went to bed. Got woke up 5 00 a.m. by rattle of garbage cans. Rang for hot water boy who brought it. Asked twice if that was all. I wanted. Got mad and told him no. I wanted to see him get kicked down seven flights of stairs. Then up again to cure his tipworker. Breakfast bill just 75 cents. Got quarter back only from dollar. Left tip for tip. Paid bill $2.50.

When back for depot came three bellhops grabbed my things. One got grip one sample case and third my coat. No other chased me out with whisk broom. Was so mad by now didn't tip any of em. Heard em mutter tightwad and darn skin when I shut back the door myself. Footed up amount of tips for that one inning on way to depot. Just $1.60. Darn this tip game anyhow!

UNSTUDIED EFFORTS OF ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA

Ananias and Sapphira clumped up the back steps of the neighbors house whooping joyously as they clumped. Outside the screen door they paused for a friendly scuffle. The neighbor pushed the door open and they catapulted through the opening.

Well said the neighbor what do you want?

We want a drink. Give us a drink they chorused.

You do do you? Inquired the neighbor. What do you say when you want people to do things for you?

The well mannered Sapphira looked up at her with big pleading eyes. I say please she cooed.

So do I. So do I shrieked Ananias. Please give us a drink.

The neighbor doled out the water with a sparing hand.

What do you have the water in a bottle for? Inquired Sapphira. Why don't you give us the water that runs out of the spout?

It might make you ill returned the neighbor. It has microbes in it.

Has it? Ananias asked eagerly. Give me some. I just love em. My mother gives me lots of them. And once she gave me some water out of the spout and it had snakes in it and I drank them.

The neighbor hastily retired into the pantry.

My mother gave me some out of the spout said Sapphira ruminatingly when the neighbor had returned, and it had a—it had a—potato in it. Give me some more please she added. I want it full up.

Oh you don't want any more? the neighbor assured her. You've had all you need. You couldn't drink any more.

Once said Sapphira fixing her eyes dreamily on nothing. I drank a whole bottle full without stopping a minute with my eyes shut.

I drank a whole pond full once boasted Ananias with—with—my mouth shut.

After this crowning effort he went and sat down upon the fireless cooker.

Is this a fireless cooker? he asked.

Yes said the neighbor.

We've got one at home just like it only forty times as big. It's big enough to hold a pig. Once we cooked a cow in it.

We cooked a nelephant in ours said Sapphira chimed in. A great big pink nelephant.

How remarkable said the neighbor impressed. I don't see how you got him in.

We just shoosed him in said Sapphira airily. And he was a great big nelephant.

We've got a great big tremendous tiger Ananias said briskly and we keep him in the dishpan and he has a green tail and a blue head and purple feet.

Our tiger said Sapphira casually is a lion and we keep him in the flour bin and he wears yellow trousers. Can I have a planna?

A planna? repeated the neighbor looking puzzled. I haven't one to give you.

Yes you have insisted Sapphira. Those yellow ones on the table.

The neighbor took up one of the bananas and looked at it. I think it's too green for you to eat she said.

I love them when they're green responded Sapphira. Why mother gives me six plannies every day and they're just as green as that grass out there.

My father said Ananias reflectively makes my mother eat four six eleven eight plannies every day green ones with red and white and blue spots on and they make her awfully sick but he makes her eat them.

The neighbor opened the screen door. Shoo! she said inhospitably. Run along home. You're making me lose all my moral sense.

Ananias and Sapphira tumbled out of the door as cheerfully as they had tumbled in.

Well come again tomorrow and get another drink they assured the neighbor kindly as she sped the parting guests—Chicago Daily News.

At a London Wedding

Passing through the east end of London a tourist observed a great crowd of costers watching a young couple entering a church obviously with the intention of committing matrimony.

Feeling inquisitive and wondering who the couple were to command the presence of so many of their clan the countryman turned to an urchin nearby.

Sonny said he 'who is it being married?

The small boy solemnly scratched his head for a full minute as though contemplating his reply.

Well Governor he remarked at length I ain't puffedly sure but I find it's the bloke and the gal wot's dressed up like am bones—London Opinion.

His Wife Too Pretty

A man who applied for a divorce in California told the judge that his wife was too pretty for a poor man. She knew that she was pretty and did her best to make her clothes worthy of her beauty which was more than her husband could afford. He modestly declared that he was earning too small a salary to satisfy her extravagances. The judge declared that he could do nothing to modify a vain woman's vanity and allowed the decree.

Eureka To Be "Bohunk" Town?

It is within the power of the mining operators of Eureka to say what kind of cities we will have in this district. They also can to a certain extent control the population of these cities. Mining operators can say whether Eureka is to be a prosperous mining camp containing good streets, business houses and comfort, or whether all of these things will give way to the disgraceful factors that exist in scores of other mining towns in which the poorer class of labor is employed. Eureka has always been a white man's camp. It is at we mean that practically the entire population is made up of good, steady and stoutheaded American citizens. It does not mean to infer that all of them have been American born—they are among our best citizens, many of whom are Americans by choice, not accident. The man who immigrates to this country to improve his condition finds the new country better than the one he left. He decides to remain and make for himself a home. He disclaims allegiance to the land of his birth and takes the steps necessary to acquire citizenship. It is just as good an American as though he had been born in this country. We know however that among the people who swarm to this land of resources and political liberty there are some who fail to come up to this standard. Their presence in a mining town is a smelter town or any other town for that matter adds nothing to its dignity, its wealth or its importance. For the first time in the history of Eureka the "bohunks" have got a foothold here over one hundred of them being at work at the present time. What does it mean? Where are they going to end?

Tintic Looking Better.

Manager George Nichols was in Eureka yesterday from the Lehi Tintic property in North Tintic and states that the showing in the face of the tunnel is gradually getting better. For the past few days his force miners has been cutting through the spar and the prospects for finding a body could hardly be better. This iron came in on the east side of the tunnel and the deposit appears to be making out beneath the old Gold Blossom workings of the Lehi Tintic. Conditions have changed a little during the past few weeks, the crosscut from the main tunnel has shipments stock quotation and additional mining news on page 3.

GREAT PITCHING!

Zinc Ore Brings $22.00 Per Ton.

According to Superintendent C. C. Griggs the May Day mine never looked better than at the present time and it is safe to say that the present showing of zinc ore will make an output of thirty tons a day possible for several months. The mine contains not one or two but several layers of zinc ore and the ore which is now being sent out is netting $22 per ton or $100 per carload. The management aims to get out a carload of this ore each day but recent storms have put the wagon road in bad condition and made ore hauling a difficult task. An average of $22 per ton for the zinc ore which is now being shipped from the May Day means a revenue of about $15,000 per month and after deducting some thing like $3,500 for operating expenses there is still a very handsome sum left.

Lessees Have Good Showing

Tintic people who are interested in the lease of the Galena King property at Stockton are quite pleased with the present showing and the returns from recent shipments. The work is being handled under the direction of James Oresight and while the lease has as yet made no money for the owners at the present time ore shipments are more than paying for all operating expenses. In the Galena King the ore makes in the points where the north and south and east and west breaks intersect and in most cases the deposits are quite small. Some large stopes of ore were found in the property during the time that it was being worked by the company and the lessees feel confident that they will be able to get into larger bunches of ore in the near future. The ore which is now being shipped carries good lead, silver and gold values and one car which was sent out last month brought a check for $1,877.

Dick Visits Three Tintic Mines

James Dick was out from Salt Lake last Saturday and paid the Uncle Sam May Day and Lower Mammoth mines a visit. He was enthusiastic regarding the future of all three of these mines and states that the new contracts permitting the shipment of zinc ore should place the May Day in the dividend paying column before many months. The zinc which was sent out from this mine during the month of September brought the company a splendid sum of money which not only wiped out the indebtedness but placed some cash in the treasury. The October output should net the company nearly $15,000 according to Mr. Dick and if conditions remain as favorable as they are at present there is no reason why the May Day should not soon be in the dividend class.

Knight Companies Will Raise Wages

At the meetings held yesterday the directors of several of the Knight mining companies discussed the question of a raise in wage for the men employed in these mines and decided to grant an increase of 25 cents per day all along the line. This word was brought back by Assistant Manager Frank Birch who attended these meetings and the announcement is made that the increase is to date from October 1st. The raise in wages has now been put into effect at practically all of the Knight mines and where the properties are operated six days a week the scale is $3 for muckers, $3.25 for miners, $3.50 for machine and timbermen.

Full Face Of Ore in Dragon

There is considerable activity in the old Star section of the Black Jack property and in addition to the work which is being done for this company it is also being driven for the development of the Iron Blossom and Dragon ground. For the Black Jack company a drift is being driven in a north westerly direction on the 300 level the objective point of this drift being the large iron croppings in the central part of the property. The drift for the Iron Blossom is being handled under contract by C. H. Drew and Joseph Birch. Fred G. who is now in charge of this work states that a full face of copper ore has just been encountered in the drift which has been driven over 100 feet to the Dragon ground from the 300 level of the Black Jack. There is no mixed with the ore today but from all indications other round of holes will place the entire face of the drift in the shipping grade of ore. This ore can be handled to very good advantage through the Black Jack and shipments will no doubt be in order in the near future.

Work in Progress, Colorado

It is a most important piece of development work at the Colorado property is the tunnel which is now cutting the western end of the company's old workings. This tunnel is now in some little distance and it has already run through some very favorable looking lime. This piece of work may result in opening the southern extension of the Humburg ore chute from which the Beck Tunnel is now shipping and if continued a sufficient distance will also cut the big fissure which the Utah Cons people have been developing and which gives splendid promise of containing ore. A force of about thirty men is at work in the old workings of the Colorado most of them being kept busy in taking out the mine's present tonnage.

Beck Tunnel Using Connection

Much of the ore which is now being mined from the Humburg ore chute of the Beck Tunnel is now finding its way to the surface through the new connection which taps the shaft at a depth of 175 feet. Supt. Perry Fuller states that a drift is being driven to the south on this body of ore and that a crosscut is also headed out in a westerly direction. Some very good ore is being mined from this part of the Beck Tunnel ground and at one place there is a face of ore which carries from 20 to 40 ounces silver and about 20 per cent lead. The present daily output of this mine is thirty tons which is good for any where from $18 to $20 per ton.

Good Tonnage From Mammoth

Manager Samuel McIntyre is doing good work over at the Mammoth mine where heavy shipments have been in order for several weeks. The new body of copper ore which has been opened from the 600, 700 and 800 levels is largely responsible for the rejuvenation of this old time producer which has but recently been reinstated in the dividend paying class after an absence of several years. The ore body has been followed to a point some distance above the 600 and the work which has already been done above this level indicates that the deposit will make out through to the upper levels of the mine. For this reason Mr. McIntyre is pushing work in a drift on the 400 by which he hopes to tap the same ore within the next two months something like 300 feet

Let's look this clothes- buying proposition squarely in the face

YOU want a suit, You want it now. The quicker you get it, the more good you get out of it this season. Of course, you will want to wear it next season, too, but the greater proportion of service you can get out of a suit with this season's style, this season's freshness, the more value and enjoyment you get out of the money you spend.

A Clothcraft ready-for-service suit will save you both money and time. Guaranteed to be all wool to hold shape and give satisfactory wear and service. Clothcraft Clothes cost you only $10 to $25. Really no use is there to pay more and risk dissatisfaction and delay.

W. F. Shriver
The Clothcraft Store

Mining Notes.

A petition for dissolution has been filed by the Richmond & Anaconda company. The property which was formerly owned by this company is now a part of the Uncle Sam.

Phil Clark and William Christopherson who are operating a lease in the Eureka Hill mine have let a contract for 300 feet of drifting to John E. Holmes. The object in driving this drift is to reach ore which has already been opened from the Centennial Eureka workings.

This month the Lower Mammoth company will have a surplus in the treasury according to a report which was given out a few days ago. This is the first time in five years that the mine has been out of debt. The recent shipments of zinc ore are directly responsible for this healthy condition of the treasury.

A nice tonnage of iron ore is now being sent out from the Dragon Cons mine in the south end of the district. The contract which was recently made with the United States Smelting company will admit of the shipment of 100 tons a day and within a very short time the mine will undoubtedly be shipping that amount. One shift is now in use and the management hopes to be able to increase the force in the near future.

Of drifting being necessary to reach the ore bearing country. About five thousand tons of dump ore has been shipped from the Mammoth mine during the past few months and from present indications this is but a very small part of the low grade ore which is available at this property. The dump ore carries values of about $13 per ton.

$25,500 From Grand Central

At Provo yesterday the Grand Central directors declared the fifty third dividend the amount being 5 cents per share or $25,500. The money will be distributed on October 25th and will bring the total from this property up to $1,632,000.

The interior department of the government has refused to grant a rehearing in the East Tintic Consolidated case. No case in recent years has caused so much comment as this one in which the patent was refused because the work on the ground had not opened ore of a commercial grade.

Opohongo Will Pay $30,000.

The Opohongo is now in the quantity of ore and the underground showing is quite satisfactory according to Supt. Samuel Cox. The mine's output amounts to about four carloads each week the ore running from 7 to 10 per cent copper 8 to 10 ounces silver and about $2 in gold. Some of the ore goes as high as $7 to the ton in gold but taking the average the yellow metal does not exceed $2 to the ton. About the most interesting and promising piece of development work at the Opohongo is the drift which is being sent out toward the southeast on the 300. This drift is following a splendid fissure and ore can be expected almost any time. There is a very nice bunch of ore in the rate from the 600 and the ore bodies on the upper levels of the mine are all holding out in good shape.

The directors of the Opohongo mine are scheduled to meet for dividend action on the 15th—next Tuesday—and the amount to be ordered paid will no doubt be 3 cents per share or $30,000.

Will Lease Utah Cons

Arrangements have been made whereby certain portions of the Utah Cons property in this district will be thrown open to lessees. There are a number of places in both the old and new workings of the mine where ore is exposed in small quantities and it is thought that the leasing system will prove entirely satisfactory to all concerned.

Iron Blossom Pays Big Dividend

The usual big quarterly dividend of 10 cents per share or $100,000 was declared by the Iron Blossom company when the directors met at Provo yesterday. The money to be sent out to the shareholders on the 25th of this month. This brings the total from this mine up to $1,370,000 and there will probably be better than a quarter of a million in the company's treasury after the payment of this dividend.

Sues For Heavy Damages.

Through his attorneys, Messrs. and Marionaux, August Freeman has brought suit against the Victoria Mining company. He asks for damages for personal injuries in the sum of $30,000. While at work in the defendant company's mine at this place on the 15th of last July Freeman drove a shovel into a giant cap and the explosion which followed caused him to lose the sight of both eyes.

EUREKA, UTAH

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland. James Armstrong Maitland's protégé falls in love with her. His persistent wooing irritates the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves. He went for help. Kirkby the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent which sweeps Enid into gorge where she is rescued by a mountaineer. After a thrilling experience campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl.

Ever as they went they called and called. The broken obstructions of the way made their progress slow. What they would have passed over ordinarily in half a day they had not traversed by nightfall and they had seen nothing. They camped that night far down the canon and in the morning with hearts growing heavier every hour they resumed their search. About noon of the second day they came to an immense log jam where the stream now broadened and made a sudden turn before it plunged over a fall of perhaps two hundred feet into the lake. It was the end of their quest. If they did not find her there they would never do so. With still ears and bated breath they climbed out over the log jam and scrutinized it. A brownish gray patch concealed beneath the great pines caught their eyes. They made her way to it.

It's a bar a big Grizzly exclaimed Kirkby. The huge brute was battered a of all semblance of life but clearly evident a Grizzly Bear was caught sight. Suddenly of a dash of blue Kirkby stepped over to it. He lifted it in his hand and silently extended it to Maitland. It was a sweater a woman's sweater. They recognized it at once. The old man shook his head. Maitland groaned aloud.

See yere said Kirkby pointing to the ragged and torn garment where

We must come back with dynamite to break up this jam and—

Yep nodded the old man well do all that of course but now after we search this jam o logs I guess there's nothin to do but go back. In the quicker we get back to the settle ment the quicker we can get back here. I think we can strike across the mountains an save a day an a half there's no need of us goin back up the canon now I take it.

No answered the other the quicker the better as you say and we can head off George and the others that way.

They searched the pile eagerly prying under it peering into it upsetting it so far as they could with their naked hands but with little result for they found nothing else. They had to camp another day and next morning they hurried straight over the mountains reaching the settlement almost as soon as the others. Maitland with furious energy at once organized a relief party. They hurried back to the logs tore the jam to pieces searched it carefully and found nothing. To drag the lake was impossible. It was hundreds of feet deep and while they worked it froze. The weather had changed some days before heavy snows had already fallen. They had to get out of the mountains without further delay or else be frozen up to die. Then and not till then did Maitland give up hope. He had refrained from writing to Philadelphia but when he reached a telegraph line some ten days after the cloudburst he sent a long message east breaking to his brother the awful tidings.

And in all that they did he and Kirkby two of the shrewdest and most experienced men showed with singular exactitude how easy it is for the wisest and most capable men to make mistakes to leave the plain trail to fall to deduce the truth from the facts presented. Yet it is difficult to point to a fault in their reasoning or to find anything left undone in the search.

Enid had started down the canon near the end of it they had discovered one of her garments which they could not conceive any reason for her taking off. It was near the battered body of one of the biggest Grizzlies that either man had ever seen it had evidence of blood stains upon it still breakfast when the card of Mr James Armstrong of Colorado was handed to him.

This I suppose he thought testily is one of the results of Enid's wanderings into that God forsaken land. Did you ask the man his business James? he said aloud to the footman.

Yes sir. He said he wanted to see you on important business and when I made bold to ask him what business he said it was none of mine and for me to take the message to you sir.

Impudent growled Mr Maitland. Yes sir but he is the kind of a gentleman you don't talk back to sir.

Well you go back and tell him that you have given me his card and I should like to know what he wishes to see me about that I am very busy this morning and unless it is a matter of importance—you understand?

Yes sir. I suppose now I shall have the whole west unloaded upon me every vagabond friend of Roberts and people who meet Enid. He thought but his reveries were shortly interrupted by the return of the man.

If you please sir began James hesitatingly as he reentered the room. He says his business is about the young lady sir.

Confound his impudence exclaimed Mr Maitland more and more annoyed at what he was pleased to characterize mentally as western assurance. Where is he?

In the hall sir. Show him into the library and say I shall be down in a moment.

Very good sir. It was a decidedly wrathful individual who confronted Stephen Maitland a few moments afterward in the library for Armstrong was not accustomed to such cavalier treatment and had Maitland been other than Enid's father he would have given more outward expression to his indignation over the discourtesy in his reception.

Mr James Armstrong I believe began Mr Maitland looking at the card in his hand.

Yes sir.

Er—from Colorado?

And proud of it.

Ah I dare say I believe you wish to see me about—

Your daughter sir.

And in what way are you concerned about her sir?

I wish to make her my wife.

Great God exclaimed the older man in a voice equally divided between horror and astonishment. How dare you sir? You amaze me beyond measure with your infernal impudence.

Use me Mr Maitland interposed Armstrong quickly and with great spirit and determination but where I come from we don't allow anybody to talk to us in this way. You are Enid's father and a much older man than I but I can't permit you to—

Sir said astounded Maitland drawing himself up to his full height. You may be a very worthy young man I have no doubt of it but it is out of the question. My daughter—

Again a less excited bearer might have noticed the emphasis in the proposition—

Why she is half way engaged to me now interrupted the younger man with a certain contemptuous amusement in his voice. Look here Mr Maitland I've knocked around this world a good deal. I know what's what. I know all about you eastern people and I don't fancy you any more than you fancy us. Miss Enid is quite unspoiled yet and that is why I want her. I'm well able to take care of her too. I don't know what you've got or how you got it but I can come near laying down dollar for dollar with you and mine's all clean money—mine's cattle lumber—and it's all good money. I made it myself. I left her two weeks ago with her promise that she would think very seriously of my suit. After I came back to Denver—I was called east—I made up my mind that I'd come here where I'd finished my business and have it out with you. Now you can treat me like a dog if you want to but if you expect to keep peace in the family you'd better not for I tell you plainly whether you give your consent or not I mean to win her. All I want is her consent and I've pretty nearly got that.

Mr Stephen Maitland was black with anger at this clear unequivocal determined statement of the case from Armstrong's point of view.

I would rather see her dead he exclaimed with angry stubbornness than married to a man like you. How dare you force yourself into my house and insult me in this way? Were I not an old man I would show you I would give you a taste of your own manner.

The old man's white mustache fairly quivered with what he believed to be righteous indignation. He stepped over to the other and looked hard at him, his eyes blazing his ruddy cheeks redder than ever. The two men confronted each other unflinchingly for a moment then Mr Maitland touched a bell button in the wall by his side. Instantly the footman made his appearance.

James said the old man his voice shaking and his knees trembling with passion which he did not quite succeed in controlling despite a desperate effort. Show this—er—gentleman the door. Good morning sir our first and last interview is over.

He bowed with ceremonious politeness as he spoke becoming more and more composed as he felt himself mastering the situation. And Armstrong to do him justice knew a gentleman when he saw him and secretly admired the older man and began to feel a touch of shame at his own rude way of putting things.

Beg pardon sir said the footman breaking the awkward silence but here is a telegram that has just come sir.

There was nothing for Armstrong to do or say. Indeed having expressed himself so unrestrainedly to his rapidly increasing regret as the old man took the telegram he turned away in considerable discomfiture. James bowed before him at the door opening into the hall and following him as he slowly passed out. Mr Stephen Maitland mechanically and with great deliberation and with no premonition of evil tidings tore open the yellow envelope and glanced at the dispatch. Neither the visitor nor the footman had got out of sight or hearing when they heard the old man groan and fall back helplessly into a chair. Both men turned and ran back to the door for there was that in the exclamation which gave rise to instant apprehension. Stephen Maitland now as white as death sat collapsed in the chair gasping for breath his hand on his heart. The telegram lay open on the floor. Armstrong recognized the seriousness of the situation and in three steps was by the other's side.

What is it? he asked eagerly his hatred and resentment vanishing at the sight of the old man's ghastly stricken countenance.

Enid gasped her father. I said I would rather see her—dead—but—it is not true—I—

James Armstrong was a man of prompt decision without a moment's hesitation he picked up the telegram it was full of explicitness thus it read.

We were camped last week in the mountains. Enid went down the canon for a day's fishing alone. A sudden cloudburst filled the canon washed away the camp. Enid undoubtedly got caught in the torrent and was drowned. We have found some of her clothing but not her body. Have searched every foot of the canon. Her body has got into the lake now frozen snow falling mountains impassable will search for her in the spring when the winter breaks. I am following this telegram in person by the first train. Would rather have died a thousand deaths than had this happen. God help us.

ROBERT MAITLAND

Armstrong read it stared at it a moment frowning heavily passed it over to the footman and turned to the stricken father.

Old man I loved her he said simply. I love her still. I believe that she loves me. They haven't found her body clothes mean nothing. I'll find her. I'll search the mountains until I do. Don't give way. Something tells me that she's alive and I'll find her.

If you do said the broken old man crushed by the swift and awful response to his thoughtless exclamation and she loves you you shall have her for your wife.

It doesn't need that to make me find her answered Armstrong grimly. She is a woman lost in the mountains in the winter alone. They shouldn't have given up the search. I'll find her as there is a God above me whether she's for me or not.

A good deal of a man this James Armstrong of Colorado in spite of many things in his past of which he thought so little that he lacked the grace to be ashamed of them. Stephen Maitland looked at him with a certain respect and a growing hope as he stood there in the library stern resolute strong.

Perhaps—

CHAPTER IX

Over the Hills and Far Away. Recognition—or some other more potent instantaneous force—brought the woman to a sitting position. The man drew back to give her freedom of action as she lifted herself on her hands. It was moments before complete consciousness of her situation came to her. The surprise was yet too great she saw things dimly through a whirl of driving rain of a rushing mighty wind of a seething sea of water but presently it was all plain to her again. She had caught no fair view of the man who had shot the bear as he splashed through the creek and tramped across the rocks and trees down the canon at least she had not seen him full face but she recognized him immediately. The thought tinged with color for a moment her pallid cheek.

I fell into the torrent she said feebly putting her hand to her head and striving by speech to put aside that awful remembrance.

You didn't fall in was the answer. It was a cloudburst, you were caught in it.

I didn't know. Of course not how should you? And how came I here?

Do you know where your camp is? he asked at last.

He did not wish to take her to her own camp he had a strange instinct of possession in her. In some way he felt he had obtained a right to deal with her as he would he had saved her life twice once by chance the other as the result of deliberate and heroic endeavor and yet his honor and his manhood obliged him to offer to take her to her own people if he could. Hence the question the answer to which he waited so eagerly.

It's down the canon. I am one of Mr Robert Maitland's party.

The man nodded he didn't know Robert Maitland from Adam and he cared nothing about him.

How far down? he asked. I don't know how far is it from here to where you—where—where—

About a mile he replied quickly fully understanding her reason for faltering.

Then I think I must have come at least five miles from the camp this morning.

It will be four miles away then said the man.

The girl nodded. I couldn't carry you that far he murmured half to himself. I question if there is any camp left there any way. Where was it down by the water's edge?

Yes. Every vestige will have been swept away by that look at it he pointed over to the lake.

What must we do? she asked in stantly depending upon his greater strength his larger experience his masculine force.

I shall have to take you to my camp. Is it far?

About a mile or a mile and a half from here.

I can't walk that far. No I suppose not. You wouldn't be willing to stay here while I went down and hunted for your camp?

The girl clutched at him. I couldn't be left here for a moment alone she said in sudden fever of alarm. I never was afraid before but now—

All right he said gently patting her as he would a child. Well go up to my camp and then I will try to find your people and—

But I tell you I can't walk. You don't have to walk said the man.

What is it? He asked eagerly.

I was lucky enough to pull you out. Did you jump into the flood for me?

The man nodded. That's twice you have saved my life this day said the girl forcing herself womanlike to the topic that she hated.

It's nothing deprecated the other.

It may be nothing to you but it is a great deal to me was the answer. And now what is to be done?

We must get out of here at once said the man. You need shelter food a fire. Can you walk?

I don't know. Let me help you. He rose to his feet reached down to her took her hands in the strong grasp of his own and raised her lightly to her feet in an effortless way which showed his great strength. She did not more than put the weight of her body slightly on her left foot when a spasm of pain shot through her she swayed and would have fallen had he not caught her. He sat her gently on the rock.

My foot she said piteously. I don't know what's the matter with it.

Her high boots were tightly laced of course but he could see that her left foot had been badly mauled or sprained already the slender ankle was swelling visibly. He examined it swiftly a moment. It might be a sprain it might be the result of some violent thrust against the rocks some whirling tree trunks might have caught and crushed her foot but there was no good in speculating as to causes the present patent fact was that she could not walk all the rest was at that moment unimportant. This unfortunate accident made him the more anxious to get her to a place of shelter without delay. It would be necessary to take off her boot and give the wounded member proper treatment. For the present the tight shoe acted as a bandage which was well.

When the man had withdrawn himself from the world he had inwardly resolved that no human being should ever invade his domain or share his solitude and during his long sojourn in the wilderness his determination had not weakened. Now his coming desire was to get this woman whom fortune—good or ill—had thrown upon his hands to his house without delay. There was nothing he could do for her out there in the rain. Every drop of whiskey was gone they were just two half-drowned sodden bits of humanity cast up on that rocky shore and one was a helpless woman.

Do you know where your camp is? he asked at last.

He did not wish to take her to her own camp he had a strange instinct of possession in her. In some way he felt he had obtained a right to deal with her as he would he had saved her life twice once by chance the other as the result of deliberate and heroic endeavor and yet his honor and his manhood obliged him to offer to take her to her own people if he could. Hence the question the answer to which he waited so eagerly.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat every thing your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and number us patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Chambers Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

When purchasing Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefited the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand the loss. All we ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will.

THE GIRL WHO WON A MATRIMONIAL PRIZE

You can never tell" said the old lady who was visiting from the small town. About girls that is. Take Rosina Murr for example. For one thing she was prettier than that Miss McElroy you were all raving about last night so madly.

Impossible! said the chorus. There couldn't be any one prettier than Kate McElroy! Why she's a perfect natural blonde!

Well Rosina was ten times more natural! declared the old lady firmly. She was the kind that looks as though she had been made out of roses and cream and peaches. And she had heaps of hair that was so canary yellow that all her life her little brother had to lick all the boys in town who said that their sisters said she touched it up and blondined it. It really was unfortunate hair because it looked so gloriously impossible. She had the figure of an advertisement lady and a cheerful disposition and a father with money. In short Rosina was calculated to drive every other woman to hopeless voiceless rage because it just wasn't possible to equal her at all.

It seemed that she had every thing—every advantage as to material things as well as to looks. No other girl had a bit of chance when Rosina Murr was around—but as she was a generous good natured girl she worked hard trying to distribute her adorers among the wall flowers. The caty ones said that she did it only because she didn't want them herself but I think Rosina ought to have the credit for going to all the trouble any how. There wasn't a man in town she couldn't have married if she had wanted to so naturally she stayed single.

Nearly all the other girls of her age got married eventually to the man who tired of waiting for Rosina to change her mind. She outgrew the fluffy stage where all a girl demands of a man is that he be good looking and happen along at the time. She was witty too and it took a smart man to keep up with her. We decided it would not be any ordinary man that Rosina Murr would make up her mind to marry.

The summer that Judge Wagner's brother came to recover from typhoid we thought she had met her fate. Mr. Wagner was tall and distinguished looking and a lawyer and had traveled abroad and just to look at him you knew he would be perfectly at home if the toastmaster called on him unexpectedly for a speech.

Judge Wagner's brother took to Rosina immediately and seemed to think that she was the right medicine for a typhoid patient. Anyway you rarely saw her when he wasn't along. And she seemed to enjoy it too. I never saw her look prettier or laugh more or put herself out more to be charming than she did when with him.

We had the wedding all planned and the girls who knew they'd surely be asked to act as bridesmaids had decided on the color of their gowns—and then Mr. Wagner went away rather abruptly and Rosina smiled on one of the girls asked her if she didn't like him and Rosina said he was perfectly fine and she had so enjoyed her summer. She didn't seem to realize how mad and disappointed we all were with her.

It was just the same when James Miller came to visit his sister for a week and stayed a month. He was something in stocks in Chicago and one of those dark clever men who scare you but he didn't scare Rosina. She sparkled at him and he became instantly a groveling worm. He was her slave and not only did he not care who knew it but he wanted to shake in the public face the chains that bound him.

He had heaps of money and we thought how fine it would be for Rosina to be able to go in the best city society and have a limousine. She always did have beautiful clothes but now no doubt she'd have whole ermine wraps and never wear the same dress twice. But Mr. Miller also departed abruptly—and Rosina smiled on.

People scolded awfully about it. She was getting older each year and even her beauty would not last forever—and what on earth did the girl want? She had had chances that most girls never come within reaching distance of and each one she tossed overboard. We said she would end by picking out some one who was no account and that it would serve her right. There's the old proverb about going through the woods and picking up a crooked stick at last and we harped on it strong. No doubt she would end her days over the washtub supporting a worthless husband and regretting that she hadn't acted sensibly when she had the chance. It always turns out that way.

Well what did she do finally? asked one of the girls. Marry the town drunkard or elope with a carpet beater agent who deserted her at the next town?

The old lady smiled. No she said. When she was 29 Rosina went away on a visit and met the man she married the next summer. He was just as good looking in his way as she was in hers had a fortune of several millions and I forget which foreign country he is minister to now. So you see as I said you never can tell. The general rule falls sometimes!

Well we are perfectly disappointed and chorused her listeners. She didn't deserve it!

IN THE LIMELIGHT

SENATOR STEPHENSON, WHO DEFIES AGE

Senator Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin the oldest member of either branch of congress is standing the scorching hot weather of the national capital better than any of his colleagues. In Wisconsin Mr. Stephenson is known as Uncle Ike, but among his senate associates he is familiarly hailed as Dr. Ike.

Although Mr. Stephenson makes no pretensions to a knowledge of medicine as laid down in the books and frequently admits that he is not abreast of the modern medical science he has had a practical experience which he thinks fits him to give advice to the ailing. As far back as the early fifties Mr. Stephenson was healing the sick. He was then in charge of various lumber camps in the Lake Superior region of northern Wisconsin.

For fifteen years said Mr. Stephenson we were without a doctor lawyer or preacher. We did not need a doctor for I looked after the sick and as for a lawyer we got along pretty well because we fought out with our fists the troubles that arose among us. We had some pretty rough and hard men in the camps and maybe we did suffer for want of a preacher. In the logging season we had hundreds of men and my principal job was to keep our crews in good shape. The saw and the axe make trouble in the woods not only for trees but for men and I have been called on to bind and sew hundreds of wounds.

Mr. Stephenson says that a long life and a simple life go hand in hand. 'As a young man I traveled across the snow twenty odd miles a day he said. I swung a five-pound axe from dawn till dark. I slept in a blanket in the snow ate crackers and pork and drank snow water and was as healthy as a bear.

CASTRO MAY DESCEND UPON VENEZUELA

Information received in this country by adherents of Cipriano Castro deposed president of Venezuela not only indicate that he is in the Canary Islands but that he is completing arrangements for another descent upon Venezuela. That this project may prove successful this time because of the open hostility to President Gomez now dangerously approaching revolution is considered to be almost certain by Venezuelans who have made New York city their headquarters for several months.

It was not generally known that Castro had left Germany where five weeks ago he submitted to an operation. He spent several days in Berlin while recuperating and then disappeared.

Deepening the efforts of agents of President Gomez to locate the irrepressible agitator his whereabouts were not discovered until a few days ago when his supporters in New York all of whom have been exiled by President Gomez received letters from the erstwhile president revealing his purpose to return to South America incognito at the earliest opportunity.

According to Antonio Jose Sanchez for many years the private secretary of Castro and who lives in New York Gen. A. Pimentel who was minister of finance under President Gomez is en route to that city to join the Venezuelan junta now operating there not so much in the interest of Castro but to overthrow President Gomez who it is now declared has developed into a far more dangerous dictator than Castro was accused of being.

POPE PIUS X NINE YEARS A RULER

Shattering the widely accepted belief in which he himself shared that he would not live to celebrate nine anniversaries of his elevation to the Vatican throne Pope Pius X completed the other day the ninth year of his pontificate.

The odd superstition that he would die before was based on the manner in which his holiness entire life has been divided into nine year periods. As plain Giuseppe Sarto he was ordained a priest in 1873 and served as a curate for nine years. Then followed his promotion to the post of parish priest at Salzano where he remained for nine years more. Next came nine years as chancellor of his diocese nine as Bishop of Mantua and nine as cardinal and patriarch of Venice.

So firmly was he convinced that this division of his life would continue to the end that he frequently expressed to friends the certainty he felt that a termination possible only with his death.

The pope was deluged with telegrams congratulating him on having survived the supposedly fatal period. In honor of his anniversary he also received a large number of cardinals. Vatican officials and personal friends.

YOSHIHITO, NEW JAPANESE EMPEROR

The new emperor of Japan the Mikado Yoshihito faces a gigantic task as he steps into the place made vacant by his remarkable father the Emperor Mutsuhito who died recently after a prolonged illness.

Yoshihito is the third son of the deceased ruler and was proclaimed crown prince in 1883. He is a man of strong character and enviable attainments in war and statecraft. He is an officer in the army and in the navy and has seen severe service in both branches. He was married in 1900 and has three children. With all the advantages of a modern education and in full accord with the advanced ideas of the late emperor he should prove a worthy successor to his father who though an oriental was one of the truly great men of the age. He is the one hundred and twenty-second ruler of Japan in his line which according to Japanese legend is descended from the gods.

The belief in the divine right of kings which so long was used as an excuse for the tyranny of the rulers of Europe is still prevalent in Japan. There the person of the mikado is held sacred.

Mining Diamonds at Kimberly

WORKING ROUGH DIAMONDS

A Kimberley Cape Colony is probably the biggest hole in the world—the old Central mine—with a space measurement at the surface of 14 acres and a depth of some 400 feet. There are in addition to several smaller ones four other enormous excavations all witnessing to the tireless energy of men in a hurry to be rich. The diamonds are found in a grey rock called blue ground which fills a pipe or natural shaft of unknown depth widening towards the surface into funnel shape. Below the few feet of red sand on the surface comes the yellow ground—lime—for fifty or sixty feet.

Underneath that is the blue ground which although the yellow ground is not without diamonds, is the true diamond bearing rock. Scientists believe that these pipes are the craters of extinct volcanoes and that at some time when the surrounding country was under water this diamondiferous rock was forced up in the form of volcanic mud. How and when and where the diamonds were formed remains a mystery but they are undoubtedly of earlier date than the rock which encloses them.

Early Diamond Digging. The first mining operations were restricted to digging and scooping out the earth. But by degrees as the hole got wider and deeper troubles came in the shape of accumulation of water and falls of reef. In gold mining the reef is the gold bearing rock but the reef of the diamond mines is the surface shale and basalt surrounding the pipe.

This was the cause of great tribulation to the early miners as it caved in again and again and overwhelmed those working below. After various expedients had been tried without permanent success it became impossible to work the mine any longer in the old way and many thought the industry was absolutely ruined.

Here was the opening for the capitalist who soon superseded the digger.

The larger claim holders banded together and sank shafts outside the area already operated upon with galleries running towards the center until the blue was tapped. In 1838 Messrs Rhodes Barnato and Beit having bought out the smaller holders formed the De Beers Consolidated Mines Limited that great corporation which has ever since controlled the diamond mining industry.

The main shaft at the Central connects with the pipe of blue ground by means of several galleries the distance from shaft to pipe being 1134 feet. At the time of the writer's descent the lowest gallery was 1200 feet from the surface.

Armed with the necessary permit we stripped and re-clothed ourselves in a sort of dressing room.

The outfit includes flannel shirt and coat and trousers of duck or some such material the articles being decidedly the worse for wear. Instead of braces or belt a looped leather thong does duty. An ancient sou wester with earflaps and tied under the chin a pair of socks that have seen service and rubber Wellington boots complete the costume.

Accompanied by the manager we get into the cage at the top of the shaft and after a few seconds of swift motion step out at the 1000 foot level. Each supplied with a composite candle—but no candlestick—we proceed to explore the workings on that level. We pass stalwart natives at work with here and there a white overseer. Some drill holes in the rock ready for blasting others gather up the fragments into small steel trucks which are pushed along on rails to the shoot which conveys the blue down to the 1200 foot level.

These boys handle many a lump with a fortune hidden in it. Some times their quick eyes detect the stone and not being without the desire for self they covet like Achan and like Achan take—if they can do so unnoticed. They will make an incision in their flesh as secure hiding place for their find and even swallow stones. To encourage the boys to give up what they find they are allowed a percentage on the value of the diamonds.

Descend by Ladders. We descend the remaining 200 feet in stages of 20 feet by means of perpendicular ladders. The utter blackness into which one steps is friendly to the nervous man who shudders whenever he looks at masons and carpenters at work on scaffolding.

Nevertheless the ladders have to be negotiated with care for the rungs are slimy and the candle has to be carried while the approach of your friend above you is heralded by lumps of mud dropping from his feet on to your sou wester. Water also occasionally falls from the roof. But we emerge safely at the 1200 foot level into comparative light greater dampness a cooler atmosphere and deafening din.

The noise is caused by the constant running of two sets of steel trucks—the one carrying the ground from the bottom of the shoot to the foot of the shaft the other returning empty—and the mechanical emptying of the full trucks into the skip for conveyance to the surface.

We essay a conversation with the checker stationed near the tip which is only managed by dint of each in turn shouting Mr—who in his washen hours is well known on the Diamond Fields as an eloquent advocate of temperature principles. He tells us among other things that accidents are of almost daily occurrence chiefly through falls of ground and that the sight of a native maimed and bleeding being carried to the shaft is on to which he is well accustomed.

The native however takes it all as part of his day's work and bears his pains with Spartan hardihood. He seems to have greater power of endurance than the white man or else having a less delicate and sensitive organization the pain is not so acute. Willingly enough after an hour and a half underground we re-enter the cage and speedily measure the 1200 feet to the surface. Resisting with out a sigh our be-sludged disguise we enjoy the thoughtfully provided bath and return to life in the sun shine.

A syndicate now buys the whole weekly find and the Tuesday morning Cape train conveys the precious burden to Cape Town for shipment. The writer has seen on a Monday afternoon $400,000 worth of diamonds assorted in heaps on a counter in De Beers offices.

The annual output is from $20,000,000 worth and up to the present something like $700,000,000 worth weighing about 20 tons has been taken from the Kimberly mines.

Protect Little Feet

Now that summer is here we again see the children going about in ankleties sandals and bare feet. Certainly the little boys and girls look very charming as to feet under these circumstances. But those of us who are thinking about what is really most healthful for them cannot take pleasure in the pretty sight of a small girl in socks and ankleties a little boy in socks and sandals and the youngest toddlers with their pink feet bare.

It is so important that the arch of a child's foot should be supported properly. Realizing this let us get for the children neither sandals nor ankleties but low shoes. Equally important is it that the small and tender feet be protected from the rusty halla bits of glass and other small sharp things to be found on the ground even in the best neighborhood. Remembering this let us never allow the children to go barefooted—Home Progress.

Drawbacks

Did your brother enjoy his hunting in the Maine woods? "Not so much as he found it very expensive. In what way? Paying damages to the families of the guides he shot."

MRS. L. F. M'BRIDE OF LITTLE POWDER

Being the Story of the Powers and Properties of a Plate of Salad.

BY OLIVE ROBERS BARTON

Craig Gillette read the telegram hastily gave the Indian boy a coin and said tersely No wait. The boy galloped away on his little pony.

He stood looking after the Indian the telegram flipping in the wind. He received few messages from the east. Indians miners and cow punchers had been his companions for twelve years in fact ever since the family fortune had gone to smash and he had left New York forever.

He had said forever because Lois Fleming the girl he loved broke her engagement to him when the money was gone. Disgusted with life he left New York vowing never to return and refusing to see Lois although she had asked for a last interview.

The Indian boy disappeared in the distance and Craig read the message. It was from Kirkland. Expect crowd of us on ninth Berger Watson little Gravson and some others. Girls too. Going with Dad on inspection tour over his road. Mother to chap-eron. Do not wire. We leave to-night. Truly Kirkland.

The names were familiar. All had been intimates of his but in twelve years were almost forgotten. Craig wondered who the girls would be—neither the younger nor the youngest set when he left home. Twelve years! They would be decidedly new to him. They had been the infant set then. He ran his fingers through his thick hair. He knew there was gray in it.

He walked slowly back to the house hardly knowing whether to be glad or sorry at the prospective interruption to his rough way of living. But the hard life he had led prospecting and mining had been like medicine to his sick soul. The sting had changed to a dull ache and the ache was almost gone now.

He had become rich very rich. The mine the camp the ground were all his and the mine yielded a fortune in silver every day.

As he stepped on to the rough covered platform of his house which answered for a porch he stopped and looked the place over. Then he went inside wandering through the four bare unattractive rooms and into the kitchen where Pete the half breed held sway as cook. Craig looked him over too—the soiled blue shirt and trousers braided black hair and dirty face and hands. His feet showed bare above low moccasins.

For the first time in twelve years Craig felt a misfit in his surroundings. Why had he not noticed before how was furnished? There was one bunk in the bedroom a small deal table and a few chairs in the dining room the same in the living room and the kitchen a heterogeneous collection of junk.

He sat down to think. It was already the sixth. Three days yet! Jennings the mine foreman could take the big wagon to Little Powder and bring home cots tents tables chairs beds and bedding. He could make two or three trips for travel was slow and difficult over the rough road covered with thick white alkali dust.

Then too he could get a half dozen extra men to scrub and clean a bit. Craig frowned. The trouble was with the cook. Pete the slovenly Indian could never cook for a day probably two or three for a set of New York's fastidious diners.

Pete had never heard of caviar nor truffles lobster a la a hundred things nor spring duckling in February—not that it was winter now. Spring had advanced almost into summer. The days were hot—the sun scorching. Furthermore Pete knew nothing of glaces and ices cool salads nor frozen punch. The height of his culinary achievement was a huge hunk of roasted beef or pork perhaps with potatoes. Setting the table for a meal usually took him one minute throwing on a red cover a plate cup saucer bone handled knife and fork and a few spoons. No Pete would not do.

Jennings brought a wagon load of things that day. Also the Little Powder Gazette. In a corner of the second page of the paper Craig's eye fell upon a tiny advertisement.

Mrs. L. F. McBride. CATERING. Weddings Dinners and Banquets. Drop a Card or Phone. 25 Saunter St. Little Powder.

The very thing. He would put the whole thing into the hands of a white woman who could serve decent clean meals and serve them correctly.

The next day Jennings on his second trip for things carried to Little Powder a letter addressed to Mrs. McBride. It requested her to supervise in person the cooking at Diana mine for three days and enclosed a generous check for supplies. Craig added an explanation of the circumstances with a request to go ahead and do it right.

By the ninth everything at the house was ready. Early in the morning a motor truck with two neat negro boys arrived at the big house at Diana mine. They carried baskets hampers boxes and kettles.

Craig was beginning to enjoy his own house party. After all it was not good for a man to live like a hermit. He could scarcely wait until the guests arrived. He was a little doubtful about the girls. Would a rough almost middle aged fellow like himself pass muster under the keen critical eyes of the girls? He laughed a little bitterly. Perhaps his money would make up a little for what he had lost in looks. One of the colored boys came up. Well what is it? asked Craig. Please Mistah Craig I have a message. Will you please not to come into the kitchen at all or let anyone else in. It bothers the missus. She will be here in a little while and doesn't want to see nobody. She says it bothers her sur.

Very well laughed Craig. It sounds familiar. I have heard cooks talk that way before. I will remember.

The boy grinned. Thank you, sur.

The party soon arrived. All were in excellent spirits though hot and dusty. Just behind their machines came a little car which in the confusion slipped back to the kitchen unnoticed and a woman got out.

Craig needed to have no doubt about his friends. The men nearly twisted his hand off. The girls flattered about him saying all the nice things they could think of. Oh it was good to be among his own kind once more. Kirkland's father and mother greeted him like a son.

The trip through the mine was arranged for afternoon. The morning was spent inspecting the little settlement. Craig's all of it was picturesque situated in the quaint jagged foothills of Stoney Ridge. Hungry as hunters they returned for luncheon.

The dining room was exquisite. The bare board walls were covered with boughs. Great brass bowls of long stemmed cut flowers stood around the rooms. The table was beautiful in heavy satin damask crystal silver and flowers.

Craig was astonished. He had not expected this. The delicious luncheon was a revelation to his starved lips. The boys were trained servants in deed serving the entire party noiselessly and well.

But the dinner several hours later was wonderful. The dining room was again exquisite being lighted only by numerous tall uncapped candles in crystal sticks. Everybody was merry. Craig however was a trifle quiet. He was thinking of Lois tonight more than he had allowed himself to do for years. Kirkland had told him that she was somewhere in the west trying to get strong. I don't think she is very well off he had said.

It was time for the salad. Craig glanced at his plate and half started from his chair. The only person in the world who could make a salad look like that was Lois Fleming. She used to make it for him with her own hands.

Lois was a splendid cook. Often after the theater instead of going for supper she would whisper that she had made him some salad and they would have a cozy hour by themselves in the den with a dainty little supper she had arranged herself.

Craig drew his breath sharply. He must be dreaming. He stared at it a moment then slowly lifted his fork and cut into it and tasted. Surely Lois had made it.

The dessert and coffee were endless. He left the dessert untasted but drank the black coffee. At last dinner was over.

On some pretense he made for the kitchen. The others strolled outside. A boy tried to stop him but he got past in time to see someone in white dart out of the kitchen door. He gave chase.

He caught up to her as she reached a clump of greasewood. Lois he said softly. Lois. He took her hand.

She turned her head away but her breast was heaving and he knew she was crying. He reached for her other hand and drew her into his arms.

Lois you are mine by right. I have tried to forget and can't. I can't I love you better than all the world. Look at me dear one. I don't know why you are here and I don't care. I only know I love you and I will never never let you go. You love me? Tell me dear.

I love you Craig said the softly. (Copyright 1912 by Associated Literary Press)

WANTED; YELLOW SWEET PEA

Experts Have for Many Years Failed in Efforts to Grow Greatly Desired Variety

Sweet pea growers have been at tempting for years past without success to evolve a yellow sweet pea.

There are ivory whites and prim roses and sulphur colored sweet peas both pure and slightly tinged with pink or some other delicate hue but a good clear yellow such as are to be found in the rose carnation or the chrysanthemum has yet to be evolved. An enterprising English grower not long ago offered the huge sum of $5,000 to any sweet pea raiser who should produce such a flower as is now wanted to complete the wonderful array of colors that during the last few years have been introduced into the sweet pea and it is quite possible that an even larger sum would be forthcoming could a satisfactory variety that was absolutely fixed—i. e. which would come true from seed every time—be discovered. But at present the yellow sweet pea has succeeded in evading capture.

It is an interesting matter for speculation as to which of the two varieties of flower now most coveted will arrive first—the blue rose or the yellow sweet pea. But the thing that seems so strange about the obstinacy or shyness of the yellow sweet pea is that in nature this is one of the most frequent colors.

BILLY ADMITS THERE IS AN ELEMENT OF LUCK

By LESLIE W. QUIRY

Billy Winslow did not believe in luck.

Now as any gray-haired philosopher who lives and loves by rule of thumb will admit there really is no such thing as luck. Perhaps there isn't. But Billy Winslow was not old enough to be gray-haired and he did not live nor love by rule of thumb. Hence his constant observations on the subject were threefold.

Today his dissertation on luck had been particularly positive and prolonged. So long had he denied the possibility of chance indeed that not once in the whole afternoon had he found time to propose to Helen Thurlow. The oversight carried its sting. Any girl finds pleasure in listening to a proposal even when as in this case the man proposes some two or three times a day on an average only to be politely but dimplingly rejected. Down in her heart Helen Thurlow loved Billy Winslow, and meant in the fullness of time to say yes.

But don't you think Billy she asked finally that sometimes luck or chance or fate—

Ah fate interrupted Billy. Is quite another thing. If it is ordained that a thing is to be some power works for that end. But the act while it may seem the veriest dip of luck is really nothing of the kind. Now if we go back into the history of the ancients—

Please pointed two pretty lips please let's keep to the present. Now Billy what were you about to say?

And Billy being neither gray-haired nor guided by rule of thumb in his loving forgetful antics and luck and proposed again.

I—I don't know what to answer said Helen looking a little startled as if this were the first time. I am not sure I love you enough to marry you. But Billy—and her face lighted roguishly—if you are certain that we are merely the playthings of fate I am willing to leave my answer to—to luck.

This was striking in a wholly unfair and poignant manner. Please explain.

Well said Helen tonight I shall go to my desk and write you two notes. One will be an acceptance of your proposal and one a rejection. I shall inclose both in similar envelopes with nothing to indicate which is which. Then I shall shuffle them fairly—oh quite fairly Billy that no telepathy of mine shall interfere with that which is to be—and one I shall stamp and mail to you and one I shall toss into the fireplace without opening to know which has gone to you and—

Helen! You're insane! You'll do nothing of the kind! Love is too sacred to trifle with in this fashion. I won't allow it.

But Billy some power will work for the proper end that has been ordained. You have just said so your self. You know Billy there is no such thing as luck. Now not a word. Here's your hat. Tomorrow morning when your mail comes you will find my note. Goodbye and—she could not resist the final boon of the last taunt—good luck!

For a man who had not been accepted yet—the hour of Billy's call the next morning was little short of scandalous. But early as he was Helen was waiting for him. She met him at the door and after he had swung it to that the curious world outside might not share in his happiness he took her in his arms without a word. For a long minute neither of them spoke. Then Billy lifted the girl's face to his.

It's yes he declared not as a question but as the repeating of a set form.

It's fate Billy whispered the girl. Her whole face was wreathed in a smile of contentment.

After they had talked of many other things the girl said abruptly.

I think Billy I must have been mad yesterday to leave the decision to luck—that is fate. After you had gone and I had written the notes I began to grow afraid. But I was stubborn enough not to give up the silly plan and I burned one and mailed the other. Then Billy I began to wonder what you would think of me and whether you mightn't stop loving me altogether and I lay on the bed and cried myself to sleep. I—you'll forgive me won't you Billy?

Forgive you! It was my fault Helen. I suspect I've been a babbling fool with my theories. I am the one who was to blame because I goaded you into making the test to open my eyes. I—well girls after this I am going to admit there is an element of luck in what we do. Shall we forget the whole wretched business?

But she seemed not to have heard him.

I was jesting Billy you know that. After I had mailed the note to you I thought of the horrible possibility of your taking it seriously of your considering it as my final answer.

You mean you were afraid you had sent the wrong note?

I was jesting I tell you. But Billy I was afraid you mightn't understand I was mocking you for your belief in fate. I—Billy I hardly dare confess it now for fear you won't want me. But I wrote both of the notes exactly alike.

I think said Billy Winslow soothingly holding her close that I am the luckiest man on earth.

Gustaldi Murder Trial at Nephi

When Judge Greenwood opened court at Nephi yesterday the first case to be taken up was that of the State vs. H. Gustaldi who is charged with the murder in the first degree. Gustaldi shot and killed W. E. Palmer in the city and for nearly two years the attorneys have been playing football with the case in the district court and in the supreme court. It is now off again and on again about every thirty days. It would take something over a page of space to attempt to tell just what has been done and what those handling the affair are trying to do. At 1 for that reason we will not go into details suffice to say that the defense is now trying to raise the point that Gustaldi was once in jeopardy and there fore can only be brought to trial at this time. After getting all the dope possible from the county seat and putting it through our operator we have come to the conclusion that Judge Greenwood will overrule the defense on the question of jeopardy and force the case to trial.

Agent Duffey Now An Elk

At the meeting of the local lodge of Elks last evening Agent Duffey of the R. O. Grand Lodge at Silver City was initiated. The usual lunch and social session followed the degree work.

Fatal Accident at Chief Cons

Steve Vasvas a car runner was killed in the shaft of the Chief Cons mine at about one o'clock last Saturday morning being struck by the cage. It appears that Vasvas was at work on the 1400 level and made an effort to signal to the cage rider by rapping the air pipe allowing his body to project into the shaft while doing so. After being struck by the cage the body fell into the shaft and lodged on top of the cage being taken off when the cage stopped at the 600 level.

The Chief Cons is equipped with a telephone system for communication between the various levels and Peno Ferra the cage rider says that he has repeatedly warned the men against reaching into the shaft and rapping their signals on the air pipe. Many of them and especially the foreigners preferred to use the air pipe to the telephone but even at that there was no necessity for Vasvas subjecting himself to danger as the cage could have been reached from the other compartment of the shaft.

Coroner D. A. Lindsay who was called decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Vasvas was 27 years of age and married. Two brothers came here the following day and arranged to have the remains shipped to Salt Lake for burial. The deceased was a Greek.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

That is the nature of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—the one remedy for women which contains no alcohol and no habit forming drugs. Made from native medicinal forest roots. Dr. Pierce tells its every ingredient on the bottle wrapper. Prominent physicians and some of the best medical authorities endorse these ingredients as being the very best known remedies for ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women.

This is what Mrs. GEORGETTE E. COFFEY of Longstreet Ky. says: "I feel it my duty to write and tell you what your medicines have done for me. I was a great sufferer for six years from a trouble peculiar to women but I am thankful to say after taking four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' I am not bothered with that dreadful disease any more. I feel like a new woman. When I first wrote you for advice I only weighed 110 pounds—now I weigh 135." "I thank you very much for your kindness. You have been as a father to me in advising me what to do so may God bless you in every effort you put forth for good." "I hope this testimonial will be the means of some poor suffering woman seeing health."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, newly revised up to date edition answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman single or married ought to know.

"FOOTBALL" By Walt Mason

The game was ended and the noise at last had died away and now they gathered up the boys where they lay in pieces. And one was hunched in the ground by many a jolt and jar some fragments never have been found. They flew away so far. They found a stack of ten or four teen cubits high. It was the half back lying there where he had craved to die. They placed the pieces on a door and from the crimson field that hero then they gently bore like soldier on his shield. The surgeon toiled the liveliest night above the gory wreck. He got the ribs adjusted right the wishbone and the neck. He worked on the ears and toes and got the spine in place and fixed a guttapercha nose upon the mangled face. And then he washed his hands and said: "I'm glad that task is done! The half back raised his fractured head and cried: 'I call this fun!'"

Juab County Carries Off Prizes

George A. Udall returned home on Monday evening after spending a few days at Salt Lake and Provo where he had legal business. While at the capital he attended the state fair and was greatly pleased with Juab county exhibit which had been prepared under the direction of T. H. Burton of Nephi. The display was one of the best at the fair and in the awarding of the prizes this county carried away a larger number than any other county in the state.

Councilmen Hold Busy Session

The city council met in regular session last Friday evening with Mayor Mitchell and Councilmen Knowles, Griggs, Church and Bauer present. A large amount of routine business being transacted.

Residents of the east end of the city among them being William Clark, Thomas Mansfield, John Starr and James Strang asked that another street light be placed in their neighborhood. The matter was referred to the street committee with power to act.

Sam Hanson of the Bank Saloon and Charles Harro who has just opened the Finn Saloon applied for retail liquor licenses. The necessary bonds accompanied their applications which received favorable action.

The city officers salaries and a number of other claims against the city were ordered paid. The total disbursements of the evening amounting to $1,713.08.

Arthur A. Miller under whose direction the new sewers were installed presented a written report which covered the work in detail. The same being accepted and filed. The cost of the main street sewer according to this report was $1,06 per foot for $314.75. The sewer to the public schools buildings a portion of which was through solid rock cost $1.64 per foot or $1,801.78.

The committee on streets started a discussion of the telephone question by reporting that the officials of that corporation had failed to send an engineer here for the purpose of taking up the proposed improvements which have been hanging fire for over a year. It is quite evident to the council men that the telephone company's officials will do nothing until forced to it by the city.

Councilman Church brought up the matter of erecting a public amusement hall this being something that has been under consideration ever since the present officers took up the reins of the city government. After a thorough discussion of the matter it was deemed advisable to submit it to the people of the city for their approval or rejection.

City Recorder Bacon presented his report for the month of September which was as follows: Collections for the month $764.55 disbursements $3,404.28. Other city officials submitted their monthly reports as follows: Sexton Houghton reported two burials at the city cemetery for the past month.

Miss Anabel Mooney the city treasurer presented a report which showed that on September 1st the city had a cash balance of $1,973.85. The monthly receipts were $1,019 and the disbursements $3,404.28 leaving an overdraft of $1,411.41 on October 1st. The installation of the new sewers had much to do with wiping out the city's cash balance. In a very short time the tax money will have a flattering effect on the city treasury.

Marshal Church reported the collection of $108 on poll tax and the expenditure of $171 for street work. Justice Dewar reported five cases in the local police court for the month with the same number of convictions. Fines amounting to $125 were levied. $25 being collected and turned into the city treasury.

Pay rolls books and blanks suit able for mining companies can be secured at the Reporter office.

Ten Pages This Week

This week's issue of the Reporter contains ten pages, two additional pages being necessary on account of an increase of our advertising patronage. Advertisers are fast learning that this paper is the one means of reaching the people of Tintic in their homes. Our subscription list is growing all the time and with our present large circulation there is no question but what splendid returns are received from all advertisers placed in these columns.

They Say—

That when the bobunks come in the white men go out.

That it is time for the mining operators to decide what kind of a camp we are to have here.

That Eureka and other camps of Tintic exist for forty years with out bobunk labor. Why aren't the white men good enough now?

That the old fashioned year with a summer in it is a thing of the past.

That some men are born foolish while others wear their pants turned up at the bottom.

That the best way to make men better is to set them a good example.

That the hands that help are better far than the lips that pray.

That a teacher is one who makes two ideas grow where only one grew before.

That the telephone company's officials are long on promises but short on fulfilling them.

That it is time they were brought to a show down with reference to the changes and improvements here.

That the Salt Lake Route's Train spends about four hours in making the trip between Tintic and Salt Lake.

That Harry S. Joseph is living up to his past reputation—that of being a hard loser.

That his efforts to stir up trouble for the man who beat him to the nomination for congressman are not bearing fruit.

That Harry has killed himself politically in Utah.

That but few people visited the registration offices on Tuesday and Wednesday. The next day for registering is October 15th.

That geese are supposed to be foolish but who ever heard of an old gander boarding up a million kernels of corn and then trying to tie up with a giddy young gosling?

That the law maker who rides on a pass is not liable to stir up trouble for the railroads by the passage of bills which the railroads don't want.

That the man who owns and operates his own auto is not a desirable risk for the accident insurance companies.

That he is an extra hazardous risk.

That the man who is afraid of doing more than his wages call for never has very large wages to call for.

That if you do your work with a whole heart you will succeed—there is so little competition.

That the closing of the saloons at Bingham because of the strike ought to be as good as the Keely or Neil cures for some of the old time booze fighters.

That Tintic people should not be backward about sending in their news items.

That the best newspaper man out of jail cannot get all the news without the help of friends.

Amusements

Those who missed seeing the performance which was given here on Tuesday evening by the members of the Eureka Home Dramatic club certainly missed a very good show. Crawford's Claim is an interesting western drama with comedy enough to make it take well. The various members of the cast handled their parts in an excellently clever manner and it is not exaggerating matters to say that all were good. The show was under the management of H. B. Bailey and the proceeds will be turned over to the Public Library. Those in the cast were Miss Irene Hughes, Miss Amanda Durfee, Mrs. J. A. Whitehead, Fred Lamb, Milo McDonald, Ed Shaw, Jerry Sullivan, F. K. Brady, Jack Dooney, A. R. S. Rens, Kenneth Pearson and Will Clatterton.

A baby contest will be put on at the opera house next week some splendid prizes to be awarded to the prettiest babies. Those who attend the show will vote for their favorite babies after the pictures of the children have been shown on the screen.

Manager Rhoad of the Crescent has a great feature picture for next Saturday Sunday and Monday entitled "A Nation's Peril." The management has adopted the system of getting something a little better than the ordinary in the way of feature pictures even though it does cost more money, and the patronage given this house shows that this is appreciated by the public.

J. A. Melville for Judge

At the Republican Judicial Convention held a few weeks ago at Salt Lake City J. A. Melville's well known lawyer whose home is at Billings was named for the high office of district judge. The Fifth Judicial District of which Juab county is a part is one of the largest in the state in area containing thousands of square miles of territory, and notwithstanding the fact that delegates from several counties at the convention received the support of 48 out of the 59 delegates. In a measure it shows his strength and popularity. We believe that he will also prove equally popular with the voters of Juab county and especially with those who belong to a large circle of friends.

Mr. Melville was born and raised at Fillmore City in Millard county. In his early life he worked on the farm and taught school. He later attended the law school at the University of Michigan where he graduated in 1898. Upon his return to the state he was elected county attorney which position he held for several years. He was then elected to the legislature and served two terms. He has since been a practicing lawyer in the state capital and has been a member of the bar since 1901. He is a native born citizen and has a large number of non-resident clients in the state who have invested their money in Millard county. He has a private life which is exemplary. He is a good husband and a good father. He has a large family and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is a man of high character and is well known to all who know him. He is a man of high character and is well known to all who know him.

The nomination of Mr. Melville undoubtedly added strength to the Republican ticket especially here in Juab county where he is so well known. He has been a hard worker all his life and is familiar with every industry of the agricultural section of the Fifth Judicial District and has always been a staunch supporter of the rights of the laboring man. He is a firm believer in the organization of the workers in order to bring about more favorable conditions. He is a man of high character and is well known to all who know him.

He is a man of high character and is well known to all who know him. He is a man of high character and is well known to all who know him.

Will Give Dance Tonight.

Members of the Socialist party will conduct a dance at the pavilion this evening. The money realized will go toward the fund which is being raised to defray the expenses in connection with the coming campaign. The admission will be one dollar and all are invited to attend.

The Reporter was misinformed regarding the action of the Millard county Progressives with reference to the nomination of Henry Adams for state senator. Mr. Adams' name will not be taken from the ticket as stated in these columns last week. It seems that while a few of the Progressives of that county have pledged themselves to support Mr. Edgehill, the Republican candidate, the bulk of the third party men will support Mr. Adams. Millard county Progressives have also nominated a county ticket.

Ben F. Wilson the Socialist orator spoke at well attended meetings in Eureka and Mammoth last Sunday. The meeting in this city was held in the afternoon and the Mammoth meeting took place in the evening.

The Democrats of Juab county have filled the vacancy on their ticket selecting Miss Clara Stott for the office of superintendent of schools. Miss Stott is just recovering from an illness which has kept her away from Eureka for the past few years. She is now living at Salt Lake.

Centennial Eureka Removing Pumps

Labor Troubles May Close Mine

The work of removing the electrical pumping equipment located on the 600 level of the Centennial Eureka mine commenced early in the present week and with in a few days the water will undoubtedly commence filling that portion of the property. Coming immediately on the heels of the announcement that the management had decided to increase the capacity of the pumping plant and go after the ore which is no doubt to be found below the water level in a more determined manner than ever makes it difficult for local people to understand this latest move. There are many people who feel that the pulling out of the pumps has a direct bearing upon the unsettled condition of the labor situation throughout this state and that the United States people who own the Centennial Eureka mine are simply putting their properties in readiness for a shut down in case such action is deemed advisable. At this end of the line nothing can be learned from the men who are in charge of the mine not being in a position to give out anything for publication. For this reason the best anyone can do is to make a guess as to the motive behind the removal of these pumps.

Have Leased Copper Property

J H McChrystal H F Gear and Morris Kelly have just secured a two year lease on some very promising claims which are located in the West Tintic mining district being owned by O P Rockwell. This ground is located something like thirty miles from the railroad and in its development a shaft has been sunk on an incline to a depth of about 330 feet. In the shaft there is a very nice showing of copper ore carrying from 8 to 20 per cent in the red metal and this together with the silver and iron will make the ore worth about $30 to the ton. The vein of copper is a large one and the smaller streak which contains the shipping values is about two feet in width. The lessees expect to do some work on the ground in the near future and perhaps it will be possible for them to at once send out some of this ore. The cost of the wagon haul to the railroad will be about $8 per ton.

There appears to be considerable activity in the West Tintic section and a large number of new properties will undoubtedly be worked during the coming summer.

THE EFFECT OF TOO MUCH MIXING OF POLITICAL DRINKS

Select New Site For Knight Mill.

Construction Work To Start Soon

After his visit to Tintic this week Jesse Knight decided upon a new site for the new concentrating plant which will be erected for the treatment of low grade ores from the Knight properties. The first site selected was near the Swansea Cons mine at Silver City and the new site is on the property of the Boston & Tintic company in what is known as Star Hollow. The mill will be just below the line of the Knight railroad and the material needed in its construction can be landed on the ground at once whereas the erection of the mill near the Swansea mine would have necessitated the building of a short piece of railroad. The new site is said to be much better in many respects than the one first decided upon, chief of which are the railroad advantages and the fact that but very little grading will be needed to put it in readiness for the installation of the machinery. The material needed in the construction of the mill and the machinery for its equipment have been ordered and will no doubt be delivered in Tintic within the next few weeks.

Assistant Manager Frank Birch of the Knight properties in Tintic states that the process to be employed at this mill includes the roasting of the ore and the chlorination of the metals. This is not a new process but the Knight mill will it is said embody new features which will greatly reduce the cost of this method of separation. The old system of handling ore by roasting and chlorination was expensive owing to the fact that large quantities of fuel were needed. With the opening of the Knight coal mines near Helper Mr. Knight will be in position to supply the mill with cheap fuel and everything indicates that the new concentrator will be in successful operation before many months have passed.

Wanless Shows Big Improvement

The shaft at the Wanless property in the North Tintic district has now reached a depth of about 150 feet and during the past couple of weeks the miners have been cutting through a loose formation which undoubtedly indicates the near proximity of the ore. Just as soon as the ground hardens up again a drift will be driven out to the west for the purpose of cutting the contact and the local mining men who are interested out there believe that when the contact is reached there will be a good chance of getting into some ore.

Iron Blossom Has A New Ore Body

Runs Well In Both Lead and Silver

One of the nicest bodies of lead carbonate ore that has been opened in the Iron Blossom mine during the past year or more has just made its appearance about 150 feet above the 500 level in the No. 1 workings. On the 500 a nice body of silicious ore was encountered and after this ore had been followed over a hundred feet above this point ore of a lower grade came in and this has since given way to the high grade silver lead product. Supt. Charles Zabinski states that he expects to get two raises into the ore and that the deposit seems to be fully ten or fifteen feet in width. Not only this but it is widening out as the work progresses. It is fully fifty feet between the two points at which work is now being prosecuted. Assays which have just been made show that this ore will carry from 40 to 70 ounces in silver 25 to 35 per cent lead and some gold.

In the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom mine some copper ore has just been located on the 600 level and while there is but a small deposit at this time there seems to be a splendid chance of it making into something better with greater depth. For this reason a winze is now following the ore some little distance below the 600 level. This is the first copper that has been found in the No. 3 workings or north end of the Iron Blossom.

Ore House Ready For Use

Supt. William Owens of the Eagle & Blue Bell mine states that the new ore house is practically completed and will be in use within the next day or two. The building has a capacity of about 300 tons and will be a great advantage to this mine making the more rapid handling of ore possible.

Yankee Has Fine Showing

Recent visitors to the underground workings of the Yankee declare that the present showing of ore is even better than it was years ago at the time rich shipments of lead were being sent out causing the stock to advance above the five dollar mark. The zinc ore which is now exposed in the old workings of the property is worth much more than the lead product was years ago. Supt. Lou Merriam has during the past few weeks succeeded in opening up a large quantity of zinc ore which is bringing the company about $1100 per carload and it is going to be an easy matter to keep the mine's output up to about two carloads a week. A sufficient quantity of ore to load four or five cars is now piled up at the mine and most of it will be sent out within the next few days.

In the new workings of the Yankee the usual amount of prospecting is being carried on under very favorable conditions. Careful attention is now being paid to the west drift on the 1800 level for the reason that the point where this work is being prosecuted is almost directly under the old workings from which the zinc ore is being mined.

W. D. Myers president of the McKinley Mining company has just received from Washington D. C. patents on the following three claims: Logan West Emma and Leadville.

Swansea Working In Winze

The old winze which extends to a depth of 65 feet below the 940 level of the Swansea Cons mine at Silver City has been cleaned out and as soon as a donkey engine can be installed Supt. John Hoffman expects to take up work in that part of the property. This old winze is located between the two ore bodies from which the Swansea has been shipping during the past few months and in view of the fact that this ore appears to be going to a greater depth Mr. Hoffman is very anxious to get busy from the bottom of the winze. The result of this new work is not altogether problematical because there is a very nice showing of ore in the drift which years ago was driven from the bottom of this winze. Assays made during the past few days show this ore to carry about 52 ounces in silver with some gold and the same quantity of iron which characterizes the other Swansea ore and makes it a very desirable smelting product.

The showing of ore in the stopes from which the present output of this mine is being taken is entirely satisfactory and the miners are having no difficulty in keeping the tonnage up to about 100 tons each day.

Lower Mammoth Doing Well

The shortage of railroad cars which has existed in Tintic for the past week or ten days has delayed the shipment of zinc ore at the Lower Mammoth mine and Supt. Price says that enough ore to load a couple of cars is now piled up in the bins. Returns from the four cars already shipped have been quite satisfactory. The last car load netting the mine $730. For the month of October the mine will more than break even on the expense account and considering the fact that two kinds of the force is being kept busy on prospecting this is a record of which the management can justly feel proud. Mr. Price believes that next month he will be able to do even better as the bodies of zinc ore while somewhat bunched are holding out well. The zinc which has already been mined came from the 1500 and 1800 levels but some new work which is now in progress will undoubtedly result in the opening of the same ore on the 1400 level. Some ore which is being hoisted at the Lower Mammoth mine today will carry 44 per cent zinc.

Joseph Viehlich has transferred to the Tintic Standard company his interest in the Great Carbonate Queen mining claim. The B & S Promotion company has also transferred to the same company an interest in the Contact Union No. 2 claim. The mining company is preparing to patent these and other claims.

Grand Central and Gold Chain

Assistant Manager W. D. Loose of the Gold Chain and Grand Central mines was in town yesterday and reports both properties in first class condition. The Gold Chain has experienced difficulty in getting cars for the shipment of ore and consequently the bins are now filled to overflowing. Unless there is immediate relief it may be necessary to close the mine. The Grand Central can ship over either railroad and for that reason is less liable to have trouble of this nature.

The development work which has been in progress on the 2300 level of the Grand Central is now nearing a most interesting stage and Mr. Loose is confident that he will soon be in a shipping grade of ore at that depth. Some ore has already been found on the 2300 level and small bunches have also made their appearance in the raise which is now about twelve feet above this level but the quantity is lacking. Two fissures have already been cut on the 2300 and the south east drift is now nearing the third fissure which by all the rules of the game should be found to carry the same ore body that has been mined on the 200 level. The raise from the lower level is located almost directly below a winze which from the level above was sunk in ore for a distance of about forty feet and for that reason a strike is also expected there at any time.

Considerable prospecting is being done at the Gold Chain in addition to the mining of a large tonnage of ore and just at this time the management is paying considerable attention to the drift which has been driven over into this property from the Lower Mammoth. This drift is cutting the western section of the Gold Chain ground at a point fully 700 feet lower than the 1000 level.

Opohongo Pays Large Dividend

At the meeting of the Opohongo mining company's directors held at Provo on Tuesday of this week a dividend of 2 cents per share or a little less than $20 000 was declared. It was generally understood here that the dividend for this quarter would be larger than the last when a 2 cent distribution was made but the management decided that it would be best to keep a good surplus in the treasury. The dividend will be sent out on the 30th of this month.

In many respects the Opohongo has been a wonderful little bonanza. Manager William Hatfield succeeded in making it pay right from the start and never found it necessary to levy an assessment. The dividend just declared will bring the total from the property up to nearly $80 000.

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland. James Armstrong Maitland's protégé falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirby the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms Enid into raging torrent which sweeps Enid into gorge where she is rescued by a mountaineer hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks Maitland and Old Kirby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her uncle is a spy and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp.

He did not make any apology for his next action. He just stooped down and disregarding her faint protests and objections picked her up in his arms. She was by no means a light burden and he did not run away with her as the heroes of romances do. But he was a man far beyond the average in strength and with a stout heart and a resolute courage that had always carried him successfully through whatever he attempted and he had need of all his qualities physical and mental before he finished that awful journey.

The woman struggled a little at first then finally resigned herself to that day the sweat stood out on his forehead his legs trembled under him. How he made the last five hundred feet up the steep wall to a certain broad shelf perhaps an acre in extent where he had built his hut among the mountains he never knew but the last remnant of his force was spent when he finally opened the unlatched door with his foot carried her in the log hut and laid her upon the bed or bunk built against one wall of the cabin.

Yet the way he put her down was characteristic of the man. That last vestige of strength had served him well. He did not drop her as a less thoughtful and less determined man might have done. He laid her there as gently and as tenderly as if she weighed nothing and as if he had carried her nowhere. So quiet and easy was his handling of her that she did not wake up at once.

So soon as she was out of his arms he stood up and stared at her in great alarm which soon gave way to reassurance. She had not fainted there was a little tinge of color in her cheek that had rubbed up against his rough hunting coat she was asleep her regular breathing told him that. Sleep was of course the very best of medicines for her and yet she should not be allowed to sleep until she had got rid of her wet clothing and until something had been done for her wounded foot. It was indeed an embarrassing situation.

He surveyed her for a few moments wondering how best to begin. Then realizing the necessity for immediate action he bent over her and woke her gaze with his own. I am a woman absolutely alone entirely at your mercy. You are stronger than I. I have no choice but to do what you bid me. And in addition to the natural weakness of my sex I am the more helpless from this foot. What do you intend to do with me? How do you mean to treat me?

It was a bold a splendid question and it evoked the answer it merited. As God is my judge said the man quietly just as you ought to be treated as I would want another to treat my mother or my sister or my wife—she noticed how curiously his lips suddenly tightened at that word—if I had one. I never harmed a woman in my life. He continued more earnestly only one that is he corrected himself and once again she marked that peculiar contraction of the lips. And I could not help that he added.

I trust you said the girl at last after gazing at him long and hard as if to search out the secrets of his very soul. You have saved my life and things dearer will be safe with you. I have to trust you.

I hope came the quick comment that it is not only for that. I don't want to be trusted upon compulsion. You must have fought terribly for my life in the flood. Was the answer. I can remember what it was now and you carried me over the rocks and the mountains without faltering. Only a man could do what you have done. I trust you anyway.

Thank you said the man briefly as he bent over the injured foot again. The foot faced up the front the short skirt left all plainly visible. With deft fingers he undid the sodden knot and unlaced it then stood hesitatingly for a moment.

I don't like to cut your only pair of shoes he said as he made a slight motion to draw it off and then observing the spasm of pain stopped. Needs must be continued taking out his knife and sitting the leather.

He did it very carefully so as not to ruin the boot beyond repair and finally succeeded in getting it off without giving her too much pain. And she was not so tired or so miserable as to be unaware of his gentleness. His manner matter of fact business like if he had been a doctor one would have called it professional distinctly pleased her in this trying and unusual position. Her stocking was stained with blood. The man rose to his feet took from a rude home made chair a light Mexican blanket and laid it considerably across the girl.

Now if you can manage to get off your stocking yourself I will see what can be done he said turning away.

It was the work of a few seconds for her to comply with his request. Hanging the wet stocking carefully over a chair back he drew back the blanket a little and carefully inspected the poor little foot. He saw at once that it was not an ordinary sprained ankle but it seemed to him that her foot had been caught between two tossing logs and had been badly bruised. It was very painful but would not take so long to heal as a sprain. The little foot normally so white was now black and blue and the skin had been roughly torn and broken. He brought a basin of cold water and a towel and washed off the blood the girl fighting down the pain and successfully stifling any outcry.

Now he said you must put on this gown and get into bed. By the time you are ready for it I will have some broth for you and then we will bandage that foot. I shall not come in here for some time you will be quite alone and safe.

He turned and left the room shutting the door after him as he went out. For a second time that day Enid Maitland undressed herself and this time nervously and in great haste. She was almost too excited and apprehensive to recall the painful circumstances attendant upon her first disrobing. She said she trusted the man absolutely yet she would not have been human if she had not looked most anxiously toward that closed door. He made plenty of noise in the other room bustling about as if to reassure her.

She could not rest the weight of her body on her left foot and getting rid of her wet clothes was a somewhat slow process in spite of her hurry made more so by her extreme nervousness. The gown he gave her was far too big for her but soft and warm and exquisitely clean. It draped her sodden garments where they had fallen for she was not equal to anything else she wrapped herself in the folds of the big gown and managed to get into bed. For all its rude appearance it was a very comfortable sleeping place there were springs and a good mattress. The unbleached sheets were clean although they had been rough dried there was a delicious sense of comfort and rest in her position. She had scarcely composed herself when he knocked loud upon her door.

May I come in? he asked. When she bade him enter she saw he had in his hand a saucer full of some steaming broth. She wondered how he had made it in such a hurry but after he poured it into a granite-ware cup and offered it to her she took it without question. It was thick warming and nourishing. He stood by her and insisted that she take more and more. Finally she rebelled.

Well perhaps that will do for to night he said now let's have a look at your foot.

She observed that he had laid on the table a long roll of white cloth she could not know that he had torn up one of his sheets to make bandages but so it was. He took the little foot tenderly in his hands.

I am going to hurt you he said. I am going to find out if there is anything more than a bruise any bones broken.

There was no denying that he did pain her exquisitely.

I can't help it he said as she cried aloud. I have got to see what the matter I am almost through now.

Go on I can bear it she said faintly. I feel so much better any way now that I am dry and warm.

So far as I can determine said the man at last it is only a bad ugly bruise the skin is torn it has been battered but it is neither sprained nor broken and I don't think it is going to be very serious. Now I am going to bathe it in the hottest water you can bear and then I will bandage it and let you go to sleep.

He went out and came back with a kettle of boiling water with which he laved again and again the poor torn battered little member. Never in her life had anything been so grateful as these repeated applications of hot water. After a while he applied a healing lotion of some kind then he took his long roll of bandage and wound it dexterously around her foot no drawing it too close to prevent circulation but just tight enough for support then as he finished she drew it back beneath the cover.

Now said he there is nothing more I can do for you tonight, is there?

Nothing. I want you to go to sleep now you will be perfectly safe here. I am going down the canon to search—

No said the girl apprehensively. I dare not be left alone here beside I know how dangerous it would be for you to try to descend the canon in this rain. You have risked enough for me you must wait until the morning. I shall feel better then.

But think of the anxiety of your friends.

I can't help it was the nervous reply. I am afraid to be left alone here at night.

Her voice trembled he was fearful she would have a nervous breakdown. Very well he said soothingly. I will not leave you till the morning. Where will you stay?

I'll make a shakedown for myself in the store room he answered. I shall be right within call at any time. It had grown dark outside by this time and the two in the log hut could barely see each other.

I think I shall light the fire continued the man. It will be sort of company for you and it gets cold up here nights at this season. I shouldn't wonder if this rain turned into snow. Besides it will dry your clothes for you.

Then he went over to the fireplace struck a match touched it to the kindling under the huge logs already prepared and in a moment a cheer al blaze was roaring up through the chimney. Then he picked up from the floor where she had cast them in a heap her bedraggled garments. He straightened them out as best he could hung them over the backs of chairs and the table which he drew as near to the fire as was safe. Having completed this unwanted task he turned to the woman who had watched him curiously and nervously the while.

Is there anything more that I can do for you?

Nothing. You have been as kind and as gentle as you were strong and brave.

He threw his hand out with a deprecating gesture.

Are you quite comfortable?

Yes.

And your foot?

Seems very much better.

Good night then. I will call you in the morning.

Good night said the girl gratefully and God bless you for a true and noble man.

CHAPTER X

On the Two Sides of the Door.

The cabin contained a large and a small room in the wall between them there was a doorway closed by an ordinary batten door with a wooden latch and no lock. Closed it served to hide the occupant of one room from the view of the other otherwise it was but a feeble protection. Even had it possessed a lock a vigorous man could have burst it through in a moment.

These thoughts did not come very clearly to Enid Maitland. Few thoughts of any kind came to her. Where she lay she could see plainly the dancing light of the glorious fire. She was warm the deftly wrapped bandage the healing lotion upon her foot had greatly relieved the pain in that wounded member. The bed was hard but comfortable much more so than the sleeping bags to which of late she had been accustomed.

Few women had gone through such experiences mental and physical as had befallen her within the last few hours and lived to tell the story. Had it not been for the exhaustive strains of body and spirit to which she had been subjected her mental faculties would have been on the alert and the strangeness of her unique position would have made her so nervous that she could not have slept.

For the time being however the physical demands upon her entity were paramount. She was dry she was warm she was fed she was free from anxiety and she was absolutely unutterably weary. Her thoughts were vague inchoate unconcentrated. The fire wavered before her eyes she closed them in a few moments and did not open them.

Without a thought without a care she fell asleep. Her repose was complete not a dream even disturbed the profound slumber into which she Albeit the room was smaller than the other it was still of a good size. He walked nervously up and down from one end to the other as ceaselessly as a wild animal impatient of captivity stalks the narrow limits of his contracted cage. The even tenor of his life had suddenly been diverted. The ordinary sequence of his days had been abruptly changed. The privacy of five years which he had hoped and dreamed might exist as long as he had been rudely broken in upon. Humanity which he had avoided from which he had fled which he had cast away forever had found him. Albeit excesses evasit erupt! And lo his departures were all in vain! The world with all its grandeur and its significance with all its powers and its weaknesses with all its opportunities and its obligations with all its joys and its sorrows had knocked at his door and that the knocking hand was that of a woman but added to his perplexity and to his dismay.

He had cherished a dream that he could live to himself alone with but a memory to bear him company and from that dream he had been thus dourly awakened. Everything was changed. What had once been easy had now become impossible. He might send her away but though he swore her to secrecy she would have to tell her story and something of his the world would learn some of it and seek him out with insatiable curiosity to know the rest.

Eyes as keen as his would presently search and scrutinize the mountain where he had roamed alone. They would see what he had seen, find what he had found. Mankind,

He Walked Nervously Up and Down sank. Pretty picture she made her head thrown backward her golden hair roughly dried and quickly plaited in long braids one of which fell along the pillow while the other curled lovingly around her neck. Her face in the natural light would have looked pallid from what she had gone through but the fire cast red glows upon it the fitful light flickered across her countenance and some times deep shadows unrelieved accentuated the paleness born of her sufferings.

There is no light that plays so many tricks with the imagination or that so stimulates the fancy as the light of an open fire. In its sudden outbursts it sometimes seems to add life touches to the sleeping and the dead. Had there been any eye to see this girl she would have made a delightful picture in the warm glow from the stone hearth. There were no eyes to look however save those which belonged to the man on the other side of the door.

On the hither side of that door in the room where the fire burned on the hearth there was rest in the heart of the occupant on the farther side where the fire only burned in the heart there was tumult. Not outward and visible but inward and spiritual and yet there was no lack of apparent manifestation of the turmoil in the man's soul.

gold lusting would swarm and hive upon the hills and fight and love and breed and die. Great God! He could of course move on but where? And went he whither? He might he would now of necessity carry with him another memory which would not dwell within his mind in harmony with the memory which until that day had been paramount there alone.

Slowly laboriously painfully he had built his house upon the sand and the winds had blown and the floods had come not only in a literal but in spiritual significance and in one day that house had fallen. He stood amid the wrecked remains of it trying to recreate it to endow once more with the fitted precision of the past the shapeless broken units of the fabric of his fond imagination.

While he resented the fierce savage passionate intensity the interruption of this woman into his life. While he throbbed with equal intensity and almost as much passion at the thought of her.

She did. Do you my sisters demanded the exhorter draw the line between the clean and the soiled in life?

the situation. Indeed she thought swiftly there was nothing else to do she had no choice she could not have been left alone there in the rocks in that rain she could not walk. He was doing the only thing possible. The compulsion of the inevitable was upon them both.

They went slowly the man often stopped for rest at which times he would seat her tenderly upon some prostrate tree or some rounded boulder until he was ready to resume his task. He did not bother her with explanation discussion or other conversation for which she was most thankful. Once or twice during the slow progress she tried to walk but the slightest pressure on her wounded foot nearly caused her to faint. He made no complaint about his burden and she found it after all pleasant to be upheld by such powerful arms. She was so sick so tired so worn out and there was such assurance of strength and safety in his firm hold of her.

By and by in the last stage of their journey her head dropped on his shoulder and she actually fell into an uneasy troubled sleep. He did not know whether she slumbered or whether she had fainted again. He did not dare to stop to find out his strength was almost spent in this last effort the strain upon his muscles was almost as great as it had been in the whirlpool. For the second time up. Again she stared at him in bewilderment until he spoke.

This is my house he said. We are home.

Home sobbed the girl. Under shelter then said the man. You are very tired and very sleepy but there is something to be done. You must take off those wet clothes at once you must have something to eat and I must have a look at that foot and then you can have your sleep out.

The girl stared at him his program if a radical one under the circumstances was nevertheless a rational one indeed the only one. How was it to be carried out? The man easily divined her thoughts.

There is another room in this house a store room I cook in there he said. I am going in there now to get you something to eat meanwhile you must undress yourself and go to bed.

He went to a rude set of boxlike shelves draped with a curtain apparently his own handiwork against the wall and brought from it a long and somewhat shapeless woollen gown.

You can wear this to sleep in he continued. First of all though I am going to have a look at that foot. He bent down to where her wounded foot lay extended on the bed.

Wait said the girl lifting herself on her arm and as she did so he lifted his head and answered her direct-

PECULIAR CONDUCT OF POLLY'S QUEER VISITOR

By CLAUDINE SISSON

All night long Polly Witham had shivered under the sheets and at 4 o'clock when the eastern sky was a faint yellow and the birds were singing in the tall locusts she turned her face to the wall and slept for ten delicious minutes.

The screeching of the pump chain at the back door brought her trembling to the floor and she tiptoed to the window and looked out her eyes heavy with weariness.

Before the pump stood a tall young man clad in spotless white yachting clothes. His fair hair was guileless of covering. He was drinking water from a bright tin dipper.

Polly watched him with bated breath—as one watches an apparition expecting it to vanish in thin air. But he did not vanish.

Polly raised the window a few cautious inches and spoke gruffly.

"Do you want anything?" she inquired inhosptably.

The stranger turned a pair of very blue eyes toward her. It was evident that he could not see her, but he stared at the shutter.

Yes, he replied deliberately, you may bring me half a cup of tea, half a cup of coffee and a few waffles.

Is that all? murmured Polly meekly.

And make haste please, he added waving a sun burned hand toward her.

Polly locked the window and hastened to the kitchen which was a dark and deserted as any kitchen would be at 4:30 on a June morning with mistress and maids away from home.

Polly made a hot fire of pine kindlings set on the waffle iron to heat filled the tea kettle and ran upstairs to dress. Her only thought was to feed and get rid of the queerly behaved stranger on the front porch.

Presently she groped her way through the smoke filled kitchen with a tray containing crisp waffles and butter a cup of tea and a cup of coffee with the necessary sugar and cream. Cautiously she opened the back door and placed the tray on the bench outside. Then she relocked the door and hastened to the front window.

Your breakfast is ready on the back porch, announced Polly through a crack of the window.

Thank you, he said alertly, and hurried down the steps.

He stopped short at sight of the breakfast tray and shook his head. Then he grasped the coffee cup and poured half its contents upon the ground. He repeated the operation with the tea cup. Then he sat down on the steps and proceeded to consume the waffles drinking first a swallow of tea and then a swallow of coffee. Suddenly he leaped to his feet, swept his cap off and addressed the kitchen door.

Farewell fair waffer! he ejaculated and stalked away.

Polly Witham watched until his tall form had disappeared down a wooded road that led to the village. Then she sat down on the floor and alternately laughed and cried.

Later in the morning she drove her little car down to the postoffice. As she passed the livery stable she noticed that the newly washed carriages were ranged along the curbstone.

On the front seat of a horseless surrey sat her visitor of the morning a rose in his lapel. A laprobe was carefully spread over his knees and he was sitting very straight and staring right over the heads of the indignant liveryman and the village constable.

The constable rubbed his ear with a polished stick of authority. Come down outer there young feller, he rasped.

The stranger smiled patronizingly. My good man, be good enough to bring me half a cup of tea and half a cup of coffee, he said.

As the words died on his lips the stranger's face grew pale and gaunt. His head drooped and he crumpled down on the seat.

Ah! cried impulsive Polly as the little crowd of onlookers held back from assisting the stricken man. Can't you see that he is ill? Help him into my car, constable—here's a friend of ours, she lied.

In a few moments Polly was racing toward home with the constable supporting the unconscious man in the seat beside her.

Late that afternoon a little party of yachtsmen called at the Witham home and inquired for Polly's invalid who had regained consciousness only to sink into a deep slumber. They explained to Polly that the stranger was Paul Amory, owner of the yacht Sea Drift anchored in the bay below. Mr. Amory had been suffering from sun stroke and had eluded his watchers and left the vessel in the night.

Two weeks later long after Mr. and Mrs. Witham had returned home, Paul Amory quite recovered from his illness took his departure.

Miss Polly said Amory since I've been convalescent I've been remembering some funny things that happened—before you befriended me that morning.

Yes? asked Polly blushing a little.

You are the fair waffer? he smiled down at her.

I am the waffer? admitted Polly solemnly.

And the half cups—were you not frightened?

I was—and yet it was funny too. Well—I wonder if you'll forgive me for all the trouble I've caused you and if you will let me return some day for the other half cups? His hand closed over her small one.

I—hope you will, faltered Polly.

Serious Explosion In Eureka on Wednesday

At about 3:40 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon the people of Eureka were startled by a terrific explosion which took place on the dump at the Chief Consolidated mine and which in addition to damaging the surface workings of this property wrecked a number of houses which are located in close proximity to the point at which the explosion occurred and also shattered windows in almost all parts of the camp. About ten boxes of powder a day supply for the mine were in a small building on the mine dump where a steam thawing apparatus was being used to heat the powder and in some unknown manner possibly from overheating or the electric wiring the place caught fire. Supt. Cecil Fitch was on the ground at the time and realizing that any effort at extinguishing the flames would mean subjecting someone to grave danger he gave orders for the men to desert the surface works and as quickly as possible a picket line was established around the mine to prevent others from coming within the danger zone. Prompt action on the part of the management undoubtedly prevented loss of life and it is a remarkable thing that while the explosion following the explosion did damage fully a mile away no one sustained injury. The powder burned for a few minutes before exploding and it is made it possible for the men to reach places of safety before the shock of the explosion was felt.

Working As Usual At Mine
The accident did not interfere with operations at the Chief Consolidated mine and the usual pace of the mine went on Wednesday evening. The large shaft house was not damaged to any extent although the windows were completely blown out and the frame around shaft timbers went through the explosion without injury. The upper portion of the large ore house was wrecked but Manager Fitch lost

I commenced to doctor with all the doctors at home as well as with other special diets on stomach and digestive organs. None seemed to do any good—in fact, most of the medicine did me harm. Finally I wrote to Dr. Pierce Buffalo, N. Y. who replied stating that I had a liver complaint with indigestion and constipation and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets. The Discovery and Pellets have put me on my feet again—seemed to be just what I needed. I could not have recovered without them.

CATCHES GAME FOR QUARTER

Bradley Kocher of Detroit Tigers is Called From Grandstand to Earn Muncificent Sum

Had the manager of the Easton team of the now defunct Atlantic league refused to give Jack Kocher now second catcher of the Detroit team the 25 cents that he paid to witness a game at Easton in 1909 the Tigers would probably be without one of the best young backstops in the game. That was the only condition on which he would catch for Easton when he was picked out of the stand after the only catcher that team had was crippled by a foul.

It is the merest bit of luck that gave Kocher his start in baseball. It happened this way. Kocher lived at White Haven near Philadelphia and a short distance from Easton. A big husky farmer's boy drifted into Easton to visit his cousin said boy being Kocher on a day when the Easton team was playing a double-header against Sunbury another Atlantic league team.

The cousin suggested that they spend the afternoon at the ball game and Kocher who was something of a catcher in White Haven agreed to go along. In the seventh inning of the first game Catcher Barret was put out by a bungled finger and the game was about to be called off when the cousin tipped the manager off to the fact that Kocher could catch.

Kocher didn't want to catch a game that he had paid to see and so informed the manager making the proposition that he would catch if he received his quarter back. An agreement reached he put on Barret's uniform and caught eleven innings of star baseball. The following day Lave Cross the old Athletic and Washington third baseman came to Easton with his Mount Carmel team. Kocher threw to all the bases with such speed and ease that Cross told Connie Mack and Kocher had had a job ever since.

PITCHER LOSES LITTLE TIME

Brooklyn Twirler Accomplishes Notable Feat in Recent Game With Cincinnati Reds

Pitcher Ragon of the Brooklyn Dodgers is one of the fastest working twirlers in the National League. In a recent game with the Cincinnati Reds but one hour and ten minutes were needed to enable Ragon to defeat the westerners. Ragon omits all unnecessary flourishes and keeps right at work all the time he is in the box never taking a breathing spell nor allowing his catcher any rest.

Pitcher Ragon

Triple Play Unassisted
First Baseman William Rapps of the Portland Baseball club of the Pacific Coast league made a triple play unassisted in a recent game between Portland and Oakland. Oakland runners were on first and second bases. The batsman hit a low liner toward first and the base runners thinking the ball could not be fielded sprinted ahead. Rapps scooped up the ball with one hand before it touched the ground. He touched first base before the runner could get back and then raced to second in time to get the third man.

Good to Tesreau
They had to strain a point to make a no-hit game for Jeff Tesreau at Philadelphia on September 6 but not because the Big Bear did not do his part. The disputed hit was a short fly hit by Paskert. Both Merkle and Wilson went after it and let it drop between them. It was first scored as a hit but Merkle afterwards declared without batting an eye that he touched the ball and took an error so that Tesreau's hit column might be a blank.

Arties in Mix Up
Artie Hofman and Artie Butler did the Alphonse and Gaston act on a fly recently and were roasted for being boneheads but Manager Clarke came to their rescue with the explanation that it was due to both having the same names. Wagner shouted "Artie" for Butler and Carey shouted "Artie" for Hofman. The result was that both Arties ran after the ball and stopped to avoid a collision.

Great Work by Richie
Lou Richie of the Chicago Cubs has done great work in the box for the team this year. He is only a pick up pitcher but his splendid twirling has helped mightily in putting the Cubs in the pennant race.

Gaston Suspended
Dave Gaston was suspended for the season in the South Atlantic league because he was drawing more than the salary limit of the league.

Inc Ore From The New Bullion

H McChrystal and others who have recently secured a lease on the New Bullion property in the North Tintic district expect to put a carload of zinc on the market within the next few days. A couple of teams now being engaged in hauling this ore to the shipping station on the San Pedro River. Various times during the past ten years the New Bullion (formerly known as the Balhinch) has been a producer of lead ore. The ground is situated a few miles to the south of Scranton and it was only after the property had been leased by Mr. McChrystal and his associates that it was mined for zinc. In the Tintic district the deposits of zinc come along with the lead and at the New Bullion there is a very respectable showing of zinc throughout the old workings which are reached from the main tunnel. Zinc is also exposed for about a hundred feet below the tunnel and most all of the workings between the tunnel and the surface contain all bunches of this same character ore. The present high price of zinc would enable the lessees to operate profitably in this ground.

About one hundred tons of ore was shipped up on the dump at the time the second consignment will be put out in the near future.

Gemini Lessees Doing Well

The leasing system is still bringing good results at the Gemini mine where 100 men are operating. In most cases the lessees are taking out regular shipments which make their work only profitable for themselves but for the Gemini company. Occasional bunches of high grade result in the distribution of some pretty large checks every month. According to J. H. McChrystal the mine's output for October will be fully 1500 tons.

Dragon's Output of Iron

The present output from the Dragon mine at Silver City amounts to fully 100 tons or about two carloads per day this ore being sent to the United States Smelter. E. R. Higginson who is superintending the work at this property states that this ore is being taken from the 300 level. A little later the mine may be able to ship more heavily and then the other levels will be called upon for a portion of the output. The iron ore having been developed to a depth of 600 feet, the shaft at the Dragon is a little better than 1075 feet in depth and on present indications the iron ore will be located without difficulty on the lower levels of the property.

WHAT A BIG DIFFERENCE A LITTLE TIME MAKES!

New Machinery For The Victoria

At the Victoria mine preparations are now being made for the installation of the new compressor which is expected to arrive early next month. This compressor will take the place of two small ones which are now in use at this mine and the management is also getting things in readiness for a switch over from steam to electric power. Electricity will not only be used in the operation of the compressor but also in the operation of the engine as well. Manager J. C. Sullivan states that the foundations will be in place by the time the new equipment reaches the mine and that no time will be lost in putting the new plant in running order.

Fourth Car From East Tintic Dev

Cam Scott and Sam Buckley are now loading another carload of zinc ore this being the fourth car to be sent out from their lease at the East Tintic Development mine. All of this ore has been taken from the dump and the lessees state that the ore which has been placed on the market has brought them from $870 to $900 per carload. Some little time has been spent by the lessees in investigating conditions underground at this property and they feel confident that as soon as they can get the hot in working order some splendid zinc can be mined from the old workings. Water is needed for the operation of the belt and Messis Scott and Buckley are trying to secure a supply from the Bestmeyer property in the same locality.

Electrical Equipment For Scranton

Manager N. A. Danyon of the Scranton mine in the North Tintic district is now rounding out plans for a new electrical plant. The plant will be used to operate the hoist and make a much larger tonnage possible. The Scranton is the pioneer zinc mine of the Tintic district the property having been a regular shipper of zinc for over ten years. The present high price of this metal is probably responsible for the improvements which are now under way at this mine. Owing to the fact that at the Scranton mine it has been difficult to obtain water a gasoline engine has been in use for a number of years but Mr. Danyon now proposes to use electricity for the operation of a large compressor which will furnish power for the machine drills and hoist. A contract has been made with the Telluride company and a force of men is now busy putting in the line which will connect the mine with the main lines of the power company in Cedar Valley something like six miles distant.

Grand Central In Ore On The 2300

During the week the east drift on the 2300 level of the Grand Central mine encountered the big body of quartz which on the level above carries the high grade copper ore. Assistant Manager W. D. Loose is quite confident that a small amount of work will now be sufficient to get into the ore. The drift is a very rich one and the ore is a very fine grade of copper. Assays taken at any point along the body of quartz show values of about $8 per ton. On the 2300 level the ore pitched to the south and on the 2300 level the ore is in the opposite direction which accounts for the delay in connecting up with the ore. The ore showing in the raise which a short time ago was started from the 2300 level is also improving and the management is highly pleased with the results which have so far attended the work on the deepest level of the mine.

It is understood here that the power company will be ready to turn on the juice within a month's time and immediately thereafter the Scranton people will commence work in earnest, putting on a much larger force and making other preparations for a heavier output.

Chief Tonnage Reduced

The inability of the International Smelter to handle the mine's output has resulted in the curtailment of shipments from the Chief Consolidated mine at this place and this reduction in the tonnage necessitated the laying off of about one half of the force early in the present week. The Chief Cons has a contract with the United States Smelter where the present output of ore is being sent but the contract is by no means as favorable as the one with the International people and for that reason the management has decided to mine only such ore as must be employed in the process of developing the mine.

The Chief Cons management expects to be able to ship to the International Smelter in the near future and that being the case the regular force of about 150 men will soon be employed again. The development work which has been under way at the mine for the past week or two has resulted in the location of new ore deposits and the mine's past record for heavy shipments will no doubt be broken when conditions again become normal.

The repairs on the ore house which was damaged by the explosion of last week have about been completed and the carpenters will soon commence the work of erecting a new blacksmith shop. New equipment for the blacksmith shop including a new power drill sharpener arrived during the week.

The new ore house which has just been erected at the Eagle & Blue Bell mine was used for the first time on Wednesday. The new building has a capacity of three hundred tons and will be quite an advantage in handling the Eagle's output which has now reached splendid proportions.

Look at last winter's or winter-before-last's overcoat; see if it will stand you through this whole long winter. Is not your coat shiny? Are not your trousers baggy at the knee? Then come to us; let us fix you up for Fall and Winter. We sell "up-grade," ALL-WOOL clothing and up-grade furnishings and hat(s).

Crown Point Claim Leased

Work was started this week on the Crown Point claim which adjoins the Gemini ground on the west and which has just been leased to J. H. McChrystal the superintendent of the Gemini mine. This claim which is owned by J. C. Sullivan, Thomas Kearns and others is surrounded by such well known properties as the Gemini, Bullion, Beck, Ridge & Valley and Raymond and a number of years ago when it was being worked from one of the lower levels of the Bullion Beck mine some very rich ore was taken out. Since that time the ground has been idle. The territory is small and about the only chance for work is through one of the neighboring mines. Mr. McChrystal first became interested in the ground several months ago when he discovered that some of the Gemini ore appeared to be making over into that direction. Being successful in his efforts to secure a lease on the claim he commenced work a short time ago and has already got a nice body of lead silver ore which is well within the boundaries of the Crown Point claim. Mr. McChrystal is operating from the 1600 level of the Gemini and hopes to be on the market with the first carload of ore about the first of next month.

Shaft Nearing 800 Level

At the property of the Tintic Mining & Development Co. the shaft has now reached a depth of about 760 feet. Sinking will be continued until the 800 level is reached when drifting will be taken up. This property adjoins the Gold Chain and Opohongo and an effort will be made to locate the same ore bodies which have placed both of these mines in the dividend paying column.

Ready to Ship at Sunbeam

C. G. Massion and N. E. Dahle who have a force of four men at work sorting the dump at the old Sunbeam mine in the south end of the district expect to send out their first lot of ore to market. Another shipment will also be ready within the next week or two. Just as soon as the machinery at the mine can be placed in running order the lessees intend to commence work underground and from all indications they will be able to take up the mining of ore on the 300 level. The Sunbeam is one of the old time producers of the Silver City end of the district and years ago some good ore was mined from the grass roots down to a depth of about 400 feet. Thomas Kearns still controls the property.

Ore shipments, stock quotation and additional mining news on page 3.

Hoist Will Be Ready Jan. 1st

As near as can be determined at this time it will be pretty close to the first of the year before the new machinery at the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom mine is ready to go into commission. The firm which has contracted to supply and install the new steel gallow's frame claims that it will be absolutely impossible to complete the job before the middle of December. The other equipment will undoubtedly be ready before that time and it may be that the management will decide to use the old gallow's frame for a few weeks or a month and in that event the new hoisting engine could be placed in running order at an earlier date.

The winze which is following a small bunch of copper ore from the 600 level of the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom is now down about 30 feet and the ore has not widened out to any extent although the prospects for getting into something good could hardly be better. In the No. 1 workings stoping is under way, on the big body of lead carbonate ore which was found at a point about 150 feet above the 500 level. This promises to become one of the best stopes in the mine.

Car Shortage Reduces Output

Several of the mines of Tintic have been unable to ship their usual tonnage of ore during the past few weeks on account of the inability of the two railroads to supply empty cars. Outcrops at many of the mines are now overflowing but according to the best information obtainable the worst of the trouble is over and the shipments from the district will no doubt be normal again next week.

Sinking Winze At Tintic Standard

The winze which was started some time ago for the purpose of following the contact from the 1000 level of the Tintic Standard property in the eastern end of the district is a little down about 30 feet. The management considers this winze a very likely place of prospecting but not in the immediate future. Development work is being done at the 1000 level but is a little more encouraging than it has been for some time.

The Tintic Standard people are surely placing a good example before some of the other east Tintic property owners. They have an excellent property and are willing to back up their judgement with the hard cash even in the face of adverse conditions.

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland James Armstrong Maitland's protegee falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being seen by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which she says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent which sweeps Enid into gorge where she is rescued by a mountaineer. Enid is taken to a small cabin where she is met by a stranger. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk.

Have you ever climbed a mountain early in the morning while it was yet dark and having gained some dominant crest stood staring at the far horizon the empurpled east while the "dawn came up like thunder." Or better still have you ever stood with in the cold dark recesses of some deep valley of river or pass and watched the clear light spread its bars athwart the heavens like nebulous mighty pinions along the light touched crest of a towering range until all of a sudden with a leap almost of joy the great sun blazed in the high horizon?

You might be born a child of the dark and light might sear and burn your eye balls accustomed to cooler deeper shades, yet you could no more turn away from this glory than if it might hate it then by mere effort of will you could cease to breathe the air. The shock that you might feel the sudden surprise is only faintly suggestive of the emotions in the breast of this man.

Once long ago the gentlest and tenderest of voices called from the dark to the light the blind. And it is given to modern science and to modern skill sometimes to emulate that godlike achievement. Perhaps the surprise the amazement the bewilderment of him who having been blind doth now see if we can imagine it not having been in the case ourselves will be a better guide to the understanding of this man's emotion when this woman came suddenly into his lonely orbit. His eyes were opened although he would not know it. He fought down his new consciousness and would have none of it. Yet it was there. He loved her!

With what joy did Selkirk welcome the savage sharer of his solitude! Suppose she had been a woman of his own race, had she been old withered hideous he must have loved her on the instant, much more if she were young and beautiful. The thing was inevitable. Such passions are born. God forbid that we should deny it. In the busy haunts of men where women are as plenty as blackberries to use Phil Stuffs' simile and where a man may sometimes choose between a hundred or a thousand such loves are born for ever.

A voice in the night a face in the street, a whispered word the touch of a hand the answering throb of an other heart—and behold! two walk together where before each walked alone. Sometimes the man or the woman who is born again of love knows it not, refuses to admit it refuses to recognize it. Some birth pain must awaken the consciousness of the new life.

If those things are true and possible under every day conditions and to ordinary men and women how much more to this solitary. He had seen this woman white breasted like the foam rising as the ancient god Iress from the Paphian sea. Over that recollection as he was a gentleman and a Christian he would fain draw a curtain before it erect a wall. He must not dwell upon that fact he would not linger over that moment. Yet he could not forget it.

Then he had seen her lying prone yet unconsciously graceful in her abandonment on the sward he had caught a glimpse of her white face desperately upturned by the rolling water he had looked into the unfathomable depth of her eyes at that moment when she had awakened in his arms after such a struggle as had taxed his manhood and almost broken his heart. He had carried her unconsciously, ghostly white with her pain drawn face, stumbling desperately over the rocks in the beating rain to this home. There he had held that poor bruised slender little foot in his hand gently, skilfully treating it when he sought to press his lips passionately upon it. Last of all he had looked into her face warmed with the red light of the fire searched her weary eyes almost like blue pools in whose depths there yet lurked fire and light, smiled her golden hair tinged crimson by the blaze lay on the white pillow—and he loved her. God pity him fighting against fact and admission of it yet how could he help it?

He had loved once before in his life with the fire of youth and spring but it was not like this. He did not recognize this new passion in any light from the past therefore he would not admit it. Hence he did not understand it. But he saw and admitted and understood enough to know that the past was no longer the supreme subject in his life that the present rose higher bulked larger and hid more and more of his far off horizon.

He felt like a knave and a traitor as if he had been base disloyal false to his ideal recreant to his remembrance. Was he indeed a true man? Did he have that rugged strength that abiding faith that eternal consciousness that lasting affection beside which the rocky paths he often trod were things transient perishable evanescent? Was he a weakling that he fell at the first sight of another woman?

He stopped his ceaseless pace forward and backward and stopped near that frail and futile door. She was there and there was none to prevent. His hand sought the latch.

What was he about to do? God forbid that a thought he could not freely share with humanity should enter his brain then. He held all women sacred and so he had ever done and this woman in her loneliness in her helplessness in her weakness trebly appealed to him. But he would look upon her he would fain see if she were there if it were all not a dream the creation of his disordered imagination.

Men had gone mad in hermitages in the mountains they had been driven insane in lonely cases in vast deserts and they had peopled their solitude with men and women. Was this some working of a disordered brain, too too much turned upon itself and with too tremendous a pressure upon it producing an illusion? Was there a truth any woman there? He would raise the latch and open the door and look. Once more the hand went stealthily to the latch.

The woman slept quietly on. No thin barricade easily unlocked or easily broken protected her. Something intangible yet stronger than the thickest of the most rigid bars of steel guarded her something unseen indescribable but so unmistakable when it throbs in the breast of those who depend on it feel that their dependence is not in vain watched over her.

He Stared From One to the Other

Cherishing no evil thought the man had power to gratify his desire which might yet bear a sinister construction should it be observed. It was her privacy he was invading. She had trusted to him she had said so to his honor or that that stood her in good stead. His honor! Not in five years had he heard the word or thought the thing but he had not forgotten it. She had not appealed to an unreal thing upon that her trust was based. His hand left the latch it fell gently, he drew back and turned away trembling. A conqueror who mastered himself it was awake to the truth again.

What had he been about to do? Profane uninvited the sanctity of her chamber violate the hospitality of his own house? Even with a proper motive imperil his self respect shatter her trust endanger that honor which so suddenly became a part of him on demand? She would not probably know she could never know unless she awoke. What of that? That an silent honor of his life and race rose like a mountain whose scarped face cannot be scaled.

He fell back with a swift turn, a feeling almost womanly and more men perhaps if they lived in few lines isolation as self-centered as women are so often by necessity would be as feminine as their sisters—influenced him overcame him. His hand went to his hunting shirt. Nervously he tore it open he grasped a bright object that hung against his breast. As he did so the thought came to him that not before in five years had he been for a moment unconscious of the pressure of that locket over his heart but now that this other had come he had to seek for it to find it.

The man dragged it out held it in his hand and opened it. He held it so tightly that it almost gave beneath the strong grasp of his strong hand. From a nearby box he drew another object with his other hand. He took the two to the light the soft light of the candle upon the table and stared from one to the other with eyes brimming.

Like crystal gazers he saw other things than those before him. He saw the casual vision. He heard other voices than the beat of the heart in upon the roof the roar of the wind in the canon. A voice that he had sworn he would never forget but which God forgive him had not now the clearness that it might have had yesterday whispered awful words to him.

Anon he looked into another face red too with no hue from the hearth or leaping flame but red with the blood of ghastly wounds. He heard again that report the roar louder and more terrible than any peal of thunder that rived the clouds above his head and made the mountains quake and tremble. He was conscious again of the awful stillness of death that enveloped. He dropped on his knees.

She did not get up immediately but the coldness of the room struck her so soon as she got out of bed. Upon her first awakening she was hardly conscious of her situation her sleep had been too long and too heavy and her awakening too gradual for any sudden appreciation of the new condition. It was not until she had stared around the walls of the rude cabin for some time that she realized where she was and what had happened. When she did so she arose at once.

Her first impulse was to call. Never in her life had she felt such death like stillness. Even in the camp all most always there had been a whisper of breeze through the pine trees or the chatter of water over the rocks. But here there were no pine trees and no sound of rushing brook came to her. It was almost painful. She was keen to dress and go out of the house. She stood upon the rude puncheon floor on one foot scarcely able yet to bear even the lightest pressure upon the other. There were her clothes on chairs and tables before the fireplace. Such had been the heat thrown out by that huge blaze that a brief inspection convinced her that everything was thoroughly dry. Dry or wet she must needs put them on since they were all she had. She noticed that there were no locks on the doors and she realized that the only protection she had was the sense of decency and the honor of the man. That she had been allowed her sleep unmolested made her the more confident on that account.

She dressed hastily although it was the work of some difficulty in view of her wounded foot and of the stiff condition of her rough dried apparel. Presently she was completely clothed save for the disrobed foot. With the big clumsy sandals upon it she could not draw her foot over it and even if she succeeded in that she could in no way make shift to put on her boot.

The situation was awkward the predicament annoying. She was wearing bloomers and a short skirt for her mountain climbing and she did not know quite what to do. She thought of tearing up one of the rough unbleached sheets and wrapping it around her leg but she hesitated as to the. It was very trying. Otherwise she would have opened the door and stepped out into the open air. Now she felt her self virtually a prisoner.

On the other side of the door the unconscious woman slept quietly on. The red firelight died away the glowing coals sank into gray ash. Within the other room the cold dawn stealing through the unshaded window looked upon a field of battle—death wounds triumphs defeats—portrayed upon one poor human face upturned as sometimes victors and vanquished alike upon stark faces from the field to the God above who may pity but who has not intervened.

So Jacob may have looked after that awful night when he wrestled until the day broke with the angel and would not let him go until he blessed him walking forever after with halting step as memorial but with his blessing earned. Hath this man's blessing won or not? And must he pay for it if he hath achieved it?

And all the while the woman slept quietly upon the other side of that door.

CHAPTER XI

The Log Hut in the Mountains

What awakened the woman she did not know in all probability it was the bright sunlight streaming through the narrow window before her. The cabin was so placed that the sun did not strike fairly into the room until it was some hours high consequently she had her long sleep out entirely undisturbed. The man had made no effort whatever to awaken her. What ever tasks he had performed since day break had been so silently accomplished that she had not been aware of them.

So soon as he could do so he had left the cabin and was now busily engaged in his daily duties outside the cabin and beyond earshot. He knew that sleep was the very best medicine for her and it was best that she should not be disturbed until in her own good time she awoke.

The clouds had emptied themselves during the night and the wind had at last died away toward morning and now there was a great calm abroad in the land. The sunlight was dazzling. Outside where the untempered rays beat full upon the crests of the mountains it was doubtless warm but with in the cabin it was chilly. The fire had long since burned completely away and he had not entered the room to replenish it. Yet Enid Maitland had lain snug and warm under her blankets. She presently tested her wounded foot by moving it gently and discovered agreeably that it was much less painful than she had anticipated. The treatment the night before had been very successful.

She did not get up immediately but the coldness of the room struck her so soon as she got out of bed. Upon her first awakening she was hardly conscious of her situation her sleep had been too long and too heavy and her awakening too gradual for any sudden appreciation of the new condition. It was not until she had stared around the walls of the rude cabin for some time that she realized where she was and what had happened. When she did so she arose at once.

Her first impulse was to call. Never in her life had she felt such death like stillness. Even in the camp all most always there had been a whisper of breeze through the pine trees or the chatter of water over the rocks. But here there were no pine trees and no sound of rushing brook came to her. It was almost painful. She was keen to dress and go out of the house. She stood upon the rude puncheon floor on one foot scarcely able yet to bear even the lightest pressure upon the other. There were her clothes on chairs and tables before the fireplace. Such had been the heat thrown out by that huge blaze that a brief inspection convinced her that everything was thoroughly dry. Dry or wet she must needs put them on since they were all she had. She noticed that there were no locks on the doors and she realized that the only protection she had was the sense of decency and the honor of the man. That she had been allowed her sleep unmolested made her the more confident on that account.

She dressed hastily although it was the work of some difficulty in view of her wounded foot and of the stiff condition of her rough dried apparel. Presently she was completely clothed save for the disrobed foot. With the big clumsy sandals upon it she could not draw her foot over it and even if she succeeded in that she could in no way make shift to put on her boot.

The situation was awkward the predicament annoying. She was wearing bloomers and a short skirt for her mountain climbing and she did not know quite what to do. She thought of tearing up one of the rough unbleached sheets and wrapping it around her leg but she hesitated as to the. It was very trying. Otherwise she would have opened the door and stepped out into the open air. Now she felt her self virtually a prisoner.

On the other side of the door the for the man. In her helplessness she thought of his resourcefulness with eagerness. The man however did not appear and there was nothing for her to do but to wait for him. Taking one of the blankets from the bed she sat down and drew it across her knees and took stock of the room.

The cabin was built of logs the room was large perhaps 12 by 20 feet with one side completely taken up by the stone fireplace there were two windows one on either side of the outer door which opened toward the southwest. The walls were unplastered save in the chinks between the rough hewn logs of which it was made.

untranslatable emotions that she studied this picture. She marked with a certain resentment the bold beauty quite apparent despite the dim fading outlines of a photograph never very good. So far as she could discern the woman was dark haired and dark eyed—her direct antithesis! The casual viewer would have found little of fault in the presentment but Enid Maitland's eyes were sharpened by what pray? At any rate she decided that the woman was of a rather coarse fiber that in things finer and higher she would be found wanting. She was such a woman so the girl reasoned acutely as might inspire a passionate

He Caught It Up Quickly

Over the fireplace and around on one side ran a rude shelf covered with books. She had no opportunity to examine them although later she would become familiar with every one of them.

Into the walls on the other side were driven wooden pegs from some of them hung a pair of snow shoes a heavy Winchester rifle fishing tackle and other necessary wilderness paraphernalia. On the puncheon floor wolf and bear skins were spread. In one corner against the wall again were piled several splendid pairs of horns from the mountain sheep.

The furniture consisted of the single bed or berth in which she had slept built against the wall in one of the corners a rude table on which were writing materials and some books. A row of curtained shelves evidently made of small boxes and surmounted by a mirror occupied another space. There were two or three chairs the handwork of the owner comfortable enough in spite of their rude construction. On some other pegs hung a slicker and a sou'wester a fur overcoat a fur cap and other rough clothes a pair of heavy boots stood by the fireplace. On another shelf there were a number of scientific instruments the nature of which she could not determine although she could see that they were all in a beautiful state of preservation.

There was plenty of rude comfort in the room which was excessively manly. In fact there was nothing anywhere which in any way spoke of the existence of woman—except a picture in a small rough wooden frame which stood on the table before which she sat down. The picture was of a handsome woman—naturally Enid Maitland saw that before anything else. She would not have been a woman if that had not engaged her attention more forcibly than any other fact in the room. She picked it up and studied it long and earnestly quite unconscious of the reason for her interest and yet a certain uneasy feeling might have warned her of what was toward in her bosom.

This young woman had not yet had time to get her bearings. She had not been able to realize all the circumstances of her adventure. So soon as she did so she would know that into her life a man had come and what ever the course of that life might be in the future he would never again be out of it.

It was therefore with mingled and affection in a strong hearted reckless youth but whose charms being largely physical would pall in longer and more intimate association a dangerous rival in a charge but not so formidable in a steady campaign.

These thoughts were the result of long and earnest inspection and it was with some reluctance that the girl at last put the photograph aside and looked toward the door. She was hungry ravenously so. She began to be a little alarmed and had just about made up her mind to rise and stumble out as she was when she heard steps outside and a knock on the door.

What is it? she asked in response. May I come in?

Yes was the quick answer. The man opened the door left it ajar and entered the room.

Have you been awake long? he began abruptly.

Not very. I didn't disturb you because you needed sleep more than anything else. How do you feel?

Greatly refreshed thank you. And hungry I suppose?

Very. I will soon remedy that. Your foot?

It seems much better but I—The girl hesitated blushing. I can't get my shoe on and—

Shall I have another look at it? No I don't believe it will be necessary. If I may have some of that liniment or whatever it was you put on it and more of that bandage I think I can attend to it myself but you see my stockings and my boot—

The man nodded he seemed to understand. He went to his cracker box chifftonier and drew from it a long, coarse woolen stocking. That is the best that I can do for you he said.

And that will do very nicely said the girl. It will cover the bandage and that is the main thing.

The man laid on the table by the side of the stocking another strip of bandage torn from the same sheet. As he did so he noticed the picture. He caught it up quickly a dark flush spreading over his face and holding it in his hand he turned abruptly away.

Chicago Cubs Ask for Waivers on Services of Veteran Three Fingering Twirling Star

Mordecai Brown, curving wizard is soon to pass along leaving behind him a record of wonderful deeds in the national game. Waivers have been asked on the three-fingered star who has done so much toward bringing pennants and world's championships to Chicago and his departure from the West side slated for the near future is due to the fact that he injured his right knee while engaged in winning a ten-inning ball game last July. Since that mislaid Brown has been of no service to the club and President Murphy applied for waivers. Last winter he signed a three-year contract.

News of the action taken by the Cub management leaked out in the east and was confirmed by Manager Chance upon his return to Chicago. He stated he had learned this news from an other player while sojourning in the east. Although the waivers have been sought it doesn't necessarily follow that Brown will be lost to the National league for the veteran is regarded by every manager and manager in the country as a star and valuable man in more departments than pitching.

It was while Brown was with Omaha that Chance was first attracted by his pitching. He advised Frank Selee to land the three-fingered twirler, but the deal never was completed until 1903 when the Cub manager showed through a trade whereby Brown came to the West side along with Catcher O'Neill for the veteran Jack Taylor. From the season 1905 to the present time Brown has been rated one of the greatest twirlers the game ever has known.

Four world's championships have been featured by the presence of the Hoosier phenom and in two of these he played a prominent part in helping the Cubs capture the highest honor in organized baseball. For three years he was unbeatable in games between Chicago and Pittsburgh while the New York Giants seldom were able to solve his delivery. Perhaps his greatest feat was staged in Chicago's final triumph over the Giants for the National league flag in 1908 when after Pflaster had been driven from the slab Mordecai went in and from the third to the ninth silenced the enemy without allowing another tally.

AROUND THE BASES

Tesreau leads the New York pitchers in shut out games.

Red Doolin seems to be able to break anything but his streak of bad luck.

Marsans the Cuban is the find of the Cincy team this season. His hitting is wonderfully good.

Eddie Collins thinks Stahl has one of the greatest pitching staffs ever assembled on one big league club.

Harry Tuthill the trainer of the Detroit Tigers is back at his old job training the West Point football team.

It is said that Joe Wood the star pitcher of the American league butted into baseball just to keep from starving.

McGraynor the Reds recruit pitcher from the Ohio State league had a try out with the Yankees two years ago.

Veach the recruit outfielders of the Detroit Tigers is the first big leaguer of that name since the days of the famous Peck a boo.

No truth in the report that the Pittsburgh club is going to change Hans Freddy Cl. He will keep him at the shortstop meadow.

It has been rumored that Bill Donovan ex-Tiger now managing the Providence International league club will manage the Brooklyn next season.

This is Hugh Bedient's second time with the Red Sox. He was drafted by Boston two years ago and later was sent to the International league for a little season.

There are a lot of teams in the National whose players express the hope that Eppa Rixley's paw will keep him out of baseball next season. He's likely to get pesky then.

Frank Chance is quoted as saying that he believes Mathewson is still one of the greatest pitchers in the game. That is a compliment that means much coming from the Cub leader.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so-called Pepsin Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat every thing your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and number us patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets.

A WOMAN'S WISDOM.

The worried mother wakes up to hear her baby's heavy breathing—a little cough—perhaps the croup or whooping cough. She does not want to send for the doctor when perhaps the trouble does not amount to much. Finally she thinks of that medical book her father gave her "The Common Sense Medical Adviser" by R V Pierce M D. She says just the thing to find out what is the matter with the little dear. Two million households in this country own one—and it is to be had for only 30c in stamps—1,000 pages in splendid cloth binding. A good family adviser in any emergency. It is for either sex. This is what many women write Dr Pierce—in respect to his Favorite Prescription, a remedy which has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength.

"My desire is to write a few lines to let you know what your little girl has done for me. Write Mrs MARGARET ZUPHER of 33 S 1st east of Broadway, Baltimore Md. Before the doctor came to our house I was a very sick woman. I wrote you for advice which was kindly given and which made me a different woman in a short time. After taking the first bottle of Favorite Prescription, I began improving so that I hardly knew I was in such a condition. I did my own housework, washing and ironing, cooking, sewing and the worst of all nursed three children who had whooping cough. I hardly knew of the advent ten minutes before—so easy was it. The baby is as fat as a butter ball. Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for any woman to take when in this condition. I recommend it to all my friends."

ADVENTURES OF A HAT

By ADDISON HICKOX

When Andrews announced early in June that he was going to buy a straw hat his family knew that summer was on its way in spite of the bleak winds and cold rains that made them all shiver. Andrews laughed aloud over the foolishness shown by women in being slaves to fashion but he would never venture out with a straw hat before the proper moment even though he sweated for weeks.

Well, his wife sighed. I'm glad of it for that old hat looks too shabby to wear any more. All I ask is that you don't get the latest fad in straw because the latest is never becoming to you.

Oh I'll get a good one all right he assured her cheerfully. A conservative model but one with some dash just the same.

So he did. He was leaving for a business trip and bought the new hat on his way to the train so as to have an up-to-date look when he met the man with whom he was to transact business. In the early afternoon a young boy delivered a large round box at the Andrews home.

Maybe somebody's sent us a present Lucy Andrews cried in pleasant anticipation. It couldn't be flowers could it?

Her mother broke the cord and opened the box and so displayed to view Andrews' old derby.

Isn't that just like a man? exclaimed Mrs. Andrews. The idea of ending home that old hat! It comes in handy for me though because I wanted to have Dan carry out some boxes from the cellar and I'll give this hat as a reward.

Dan was the furniture man. He was pleased with what he termed a swell lid and was profuse in his thanks.

I'll wear it to a christening Thursday week he said. An won't I be the swell guy though!

That night cold rain came down in torrents and Mrs. Andrews did not sleep well because of a new worry that troubled her. Getting up to look after the windows she roused Lucy to whom she expressed her worry.

Your father'll be home tomorrow morning she said and I'm perfectly sure the first thing he'll ask for is that derby hat. If it's raining like this he just can't wear his new straw hat to the office. It would look absurd.

Oh never mind Lucy said consolingly. You can't tell what the weather's going to be. Maybe it'll be hot tomorrow morning.

But it wasn't. Further Andrews had barely kissed his wife and daughter before he asked for his old hat.

What? his wife said vaguely. What hat? I thought you wore your hat out of the store when you bought it.

I did wear my straw hat. I mean he derby. It beats all how unaccountably some stores are. The man promised faithfully to have that derby up here yesterday afternoon yet he doesn't seem to have meant a word he said. Lucy if you don't eat so rapidly you won't choke.

Lucy sat on the window seat in the dining room for two hours that morning watching for Dan supported by the excitement of it and by the joy of staying at home from school. When Dan finally arrived she summoned her mother with a joyous shout.

I'm sorry Dan Mrs. Andrews said awkwardly but I didn't understand that Mr. Andrews wanted that hat. If you don't mind I'll be very glad if you will bring it back today.

I'll bring it if I can ma'am he said grumpily. But I loaned it to a friend of mine to wear to a dance tonight and I've got to hunt him up.

Mrs. Andrews gave him a silver dollar which he rung on the step before he condescended to accept it. Then there was nothing to do but wait. The day seemed as long it would never end dragging its weary hours along until nearly five o'clock and perilously near the home coming hour.

Dan's been here to take out the ashes Lucy said cheerfully. I guess he didn't find the hat after all.

Mrs. Andrews went out in the rain to the next door neighbor's where she saw Dan.

Oh I got it he said sourly. But I had to give the feller 50 cents for it.

Mrs. Andrews refunded the 50 cents and Dan appeared at once at the door bearing the hat in its box for all the world as though it were a wedding cake or a basket of eggs. Mrs. Andrews was so glad to get it that she almost wept and stood off to admire it after she had hung it on the rack in the hall.

There's no use saying anything to papa about it she told Lucy. It would just worry him to think I had so much trouble here he comes now.

The door swung open to admit the man of the house and a gleam of late sunshine.

Hello Andrews cried breezily. My but I'm glad to get home! Well, well there's my hat at last! Looks sort of funny doesn't it? Probably because I've been wearing my new one. I think after all my dear I won't bother with that derby. I didn't realize that it was so shabby. You'd better give it to Dan.

"NIGHT'S ILLUSIONS" By Walt Mason

At night you seek your downy bed and ere you sink to sleep and dream of strange machine you call your head is full of weird and wondrous schemes they seem too grand and great to fail they fill your treasury with dough but morning shows them flat and stale—I often wonder why this so. At eve you are a blithesome soul your future is the one good bet you gaily quaff the flowing bowl or dance the stately minuet your joy is obtrusive and intense but morning finds you full of woe you'd sell yourself for twenty cents—I often wonder why this so. At night you walk beneath the stars and high ambitions fill your soul you'll batter down opposing bars and fight your way and win the goal but morning passes you the ice your visions fade your spirit a low you spend the long day shaking dice—I often wonder why this so. At night you think of things sublime and inspiration fills your heart you think you'll write a deathless rhyme or cut a swath in realms of art but morning finds you looking sick you feel you haven't any show you dig some bait and seek the creek—I often wonder why this so.

Political Dope.

Republican Rally Tonight

Glen Miller and James Devine prominent Republicans and interesting speakers will address the voters of Eureka at a rally which is to be held at the Elks' Pavilion this evening. The meeting will commence at 7:30 and there will be some good musical numbers.

Reports from Silver City indicate that the Socialists are very active and that they stand a very good show of electing their precinct ticket which is as follows: Ralph Birch justice and Edward C. Bigler constable. N. A. Dahle and C. G. Massion are the Democratic candidates for justice of the peace and C. constable at that place. While E. G. Lunnen and Joseph Horton have been nominated by the Republicans.

Unless you voted two years ago at the county election you must register. Voting at the last city election or the liquor election in 1911 doesn't entitle you to vote at the coming election. See that your name is on the list.

The Republicans opened up headquarters in the Marks building opposite Heffernan Thompson's store early in the week.

Members of the various political parties are quite indignant because of the manner in which they are being treated by the officials of the telephone company. During previous campaigns in Tintic telephones were installed in the various party headquarters upon the payment of a month's rental but this year the telephone people are reaching out after all the money they can get and consequently demand a three month's contract with an advance payment of $10.00. When it is understood that the telephone would probably not be used more than a couple or three days this is looked upon as being unreasonable. Since the consolidation of the two telephone systems the bristles are growing very rapidly on the backs of those who are handling the business and it seems that there should be some way of bringing them to time not only with reference to the rates but service.

J. A. Melville Visits Eureka

J. A. Melville Republican candidate for the office of judge of the Fifth Judicial District was in town on Wednesday. He left the following day for Nephi and will be one of the speakers at a rally which is to be held at that place this evening. Mr. Melville has recently visited a large portion of the territory embraced in the Fifth Judicial District and is highly pleased with the outlook declaring that large majorities will be rolled up for the Republican candidates. He will return here next week and will be one of the speakers at a rally here on Friday.

The Democrats of Eureka conducted a successful dance at the Pavilion last Wednesday evening. The ladies assisted in making the dance a success and also served refreshments at the headquarters at the Eureka Hotel.

It is understood that Judge O. W. Powers will wind up the local Democratic campaign at the Elks' Pavilion in Eureka on Monday night before election. The local Democrats and the Wilson Club are preparing a big reception for their favorite spell binder on this occasion.

The following declinations from the Bull Moose ticket have been filed with the county clerk: Miss Pearl Wright of Nephi from the office of county recorder; T. H. Burton as county attorney; John A. Morgan of Levan as county treasurer and Peter B. Cowan of Nephi as county clerk.

The Democratic county committee has filed the nomination of Roy F. Homer principal of the Nephi high school for the office of county superintendent of schools.

Homér P. Burt Socialist candidate for Governor will visit Tintic next week and will speak at both Mammoth and Eureka. He will probably be here on the evening of the 31st—next Thursday.

Arrested for Assault

Ed Rose a car repairer with headquarters at Tintic Junction was arrested on Monday night upon a complaint charging him with assault with a deadly weapon. The complaint was issued at the request of T. Mori a Japanese section foreman with whom Rose had trouble. Marshal Church and Deputy Sheriff Bert Hickman made the trip to the Junction after Rose who was lodged in the Eureka jail. In the absence of precinct Justice of the Peace D. A. Lindsay the case was brought before Judge Dewar of the city court on Wednesday. Rose entered a plea of not guilty and his case was set for hearing next Monday. He was unable to furnish a bond of $100 and is consequently being kept in jail at this place.

Republican Rallies Scheduled.

The Republicans have arranged for a couple of good rallies for the last week of the campaign. Senator George Sutherland who is exceptionally popular in Tintic will be one of the speakers at the rally which is to take place one week from tonight. J. A. Melville candidate for district judge will also be here on that night and will speak at this rally. The campaign in Eureka will be closed by a rousing rally at the Elks' Pavilion on November 4th with Senator Smoot and Judge Frick as the principal speakers.

Hickman's Case Will Be Next

The case of the state vs. James P. Hickman charged with murder in the first degree for the killing of Dave Hutchison will be tried at Nephi immediately following the Gustafson case. Already some of the witnesses recited in the Hickman case have been summoned to the county seat but it is hardly probable that they will be needed before Nov. 10th. Hickman is the man who used a pocket knife with such deadly effect after a quarrel with Dave Hutchison on main street. At the time of his arrest at Goshen following his effort to get out of town Hickman appeared very much unconcerned regarding the outcome of the case and did not even express regret or remorse over the killing. The time spent at the county jail awaiting trial has brought him to a realization of the seriousness of his crime and those who have seen him recently state that he is almost a nervous wreck and is physically just a shadow of his former self. His aged mother who lives in Oklahoma has sent an attorney to Nephi to look after her son's defense.

Burial Of Cassius Darnell.

Funeral services over the remains of Cassius Darnell whose death occurred at Downey Idaho last week were held at that place on October 19th. The funeral also taking place at the Idaho city. Mr. Darnell was well known in Tintic where he was for a number of years engaged in business. During his residence here he was married to Miss Clara Cronin and in addition to his wife and two small children he leaves a number of relatives at Lincoln Neb. The deceased was 28 years of age and during his short residence at Downey had built up a nice little mercantile business. Sympathy of many local people will go to the widow and children who will again take up their residence in Eureka.

Mr. Darnell accompanied by his sister Miss Katie Cronin returned to Eureka on Wednesday.

Tintic High School Student Body

The Tintic High School Student Body gave the first of a series of socials at the I. O. O. F. Hall in this city last Saturday evening. About one hundred were present and all expressed themselves as having had a very enjoyable time. It is not only the students that have felt this wave but many people outside the school have expressed a desire to become members of the Student Body among them being people from Mammoth Silver City and Knightville as well as Eureka.

The Executive Committee have been and are planning to give a grand Halloween ball and social. However we do not want the people to think that socials are the only thing that is going on in the entertainment line. A soccer team is already training hard and Captain Shriver is negotiating for games with some of the other high schools of the state.

This year the students seem to have athletics in their bones for they are already training a strong track team and base ball team and early in the coming spring will try to capture some of the honors in games with other high schools.

The basketball team promises to be the fastest in the history of the Tintic District. The members of the team are already getting into condition and will soon be ready for challenges from any high school team in Utah.

News From the Mines of Tintic District

May Sink Another Shaft

There seems to be a possibility of the Knight people sinking another deep shaft to be used in the handling of the ore from the Dragon and in the development of the old Star section of the Black Jack holdings. The splendid new plant which was ordered several months ago for the Iron Blossom mine would perhaps be used in this new work in case it is taken up. Just at present the Dragon ore is being mined through the Iron Blossom and during the past few days about forty or fifty tons the first lot of ore to be taken from the north end of this mine was hoisted and is now awaiting shipment. Within the next ten days the Dragon will no doubt be shipping about 100 tons of ore each week. The Iron Blossom hoist has for some time been taxed almost to its capacity and this means that it will be a difficult matter to take on any great amount of work for the Dragon property.

New Work at Beck Tunnel

During the week a drift was started toward the north from the 300 level of the No. 2 shaft of the Beck Tunnel. The object in driving this drift being to cut at depth the iron blow out and strong surface croppings located in the northern end of the property. It will be remembered that the old Beck Tunnel ore bodies from which the mine paid its dividends, punched out something like 200 feet to the south of what is known as the No. 2 shaft and for that reason there has been but little work done to the north of this point although extensive prospecting was carried on in a southerly and easterly direction. The work which has just been taken up is considered important because of the fact that it will open an entirely new section of the company's ground.

Will Increase Output

The Opohongo mine is back in the list of shippers after a couple of weeks' absence owing to the cessation of work and other railroad troubles. Two cars of ore were shipped from this mine early in the week and two more cars will probably be sent out before the week is over, and according to Supt. Samuel Cox the weekly output in the future will amount to not less than four carloads. The new ore house at the Opohongo will hold about nine carloads of ore and the property having ample storage room the railroad trouble did not result in the suspension of underground work.

The systematic opening of the big ore body has been going merrily along at the Opohongo ever since the connection was made with the 700 level and the economical handling of the mine's output will certainly spell dividends for the fortunate shareholders. Some development work is now going on upon the 700 level for the purpose of determining the most suitable place to sink a winze for the handling of the ore which undoubtedly goes far below this level.

May Day's New Ore Body.

May Day stock has been one of the features of the holiday season on the exchange and while this stock slipped back a few points after its jump to the 20 cent mark it has been picking up strength again during the past few days and appears to be getting ready for another spurt. Very encouraging reports are being sent out from this mine and those who are familiar with the property are predicting a much better price for the stock. The new ore channel which has already been opened quite extensively from the 400 level is opening up splendidly and everything indicates that the ore is going to much greater depth. The drift on the 500 level has already been driven in to a point almost directly under the ore and this week a raise was started to connect with the ore body. The raise is now up about 25 feet and Supt. Griggs expects to get the ore within the next 20 feet.

New Ore For Colorado Mine

The prospecting started some time ago upon the 300 level of the No. 2 workings of the Colorado mine resulted in the opening of a new ore body a few days ago. A week ago the drift was in a very shallow position and the day the ore made its appearance in the bank of the drift a few feet of raising has since opened four or five feet of good commercial ore. Assays made the other day show the ore to carry from 25 to 35 per cent lead and from 50 to 60 ounces silver. Supt. Perry Fuller feels confident that the new find will materially increase the Colorado's available supply of ore.

Working Richmond & Anaconda.

A few days ago the connection between the main tunnel level of the Uncle Sam mine and the old workings of the Richmond & Anaconda was made and at the present time Supt. O. O. Griggs has a force of men at work putting in new track and making other preparations for an active campaign of development work in the latter property. The Richmond & Anaconda mine which is practically owned by the Uncle Sam company has been idle for the past eight years but previous to that time it was worked quite extensively some ore being placed upon the market. The opening of new ore bodies in that portion of the Uncle Sam ground which adjoins the Richmond & Anaconda has brought about a revival of interest in the latter and resulted in plans being made for its development. This new work which will be handled through the Uncle Sam mine is almost sure to result in the opening of some good ore because the Richmond & Anaconda ground is among the best in that section of the district.

Some new ore is now being developed in the Uncle Sam and by spring the mine will no doubt be in shape for sending out a much heavier tonnage. The point where the new ore is being developed is about 137 feet above the main ore level and in value it will compare favorably with that which the mine has been marketing for several months.

Operations at Lower Mammoth

The Lower Mammoth people are still developing the property from the 1000 and 1100 levels and while general conditions are said to be quite favorable it will perhaps be sixty or ninety days before any important change will be expected as it will take about that length of time to reach the points where the ore should be found.

New Strike Opening Up Big.

The new strike upon the 1000 level of the grand Centennial mine is opening up splendidly and already the ore has been followed upon its strike for a distance of not less than 150 feet. There is still a full face of ore in the drift and the management has decided to drive forward upon the ore before developing it by raising or sinking. Considerable ore has been taken out in driving this drift and being of a nice commercial grade it has been placed upon the market. The Grand Central's ore are reached by both railroads and consequently the mine has no difficulty in getting its ore to the shipmen of their ore.

Power for Operation

The Centennial plant at the portal of the main tunnel was placed in operation early in the week in order that power might be supplied for the operation of a big electrical pumping engine in the Centennial Eureka mine. The Centennial Eureka has been securing power from the Knight company but line trouble early in the present week made it impossible for this mine to secure all the power that was needed and this necessitated the operation of the big emergency power plant which was installed over a year ago at this mine. While the big plant of the Centennial Eureka company was erected simply as an emergency plant its equipment is most complete and able to furnish all the power that is needed at this mine. This week was the first time that the plant has been in operation since the final try out just after its completion but Master Mechanic Knowles experienced but little difficulty in getting the machine in operation.

Lessees Ship Dump Ore.

Elvin Clark and associates who have had a lease upon one of the old dumps at the Beck mine were forced to suspend work on account of the cold weather. They succeeded in sorting out a couple of cars of very good ore which has been placed upon the market and the returns from this ore gave them a little better than wages for their work. They will no doubt continue the work on the dump when the weather moderates.

Shipmen's Resumed at Gold Chain

The shipmen's work at the Gold Chain mine was resumed after a couple of weeks' suspension owing to the failure of the railroad to move its ore. The mine was able to commence shipping again early in the present week. For two weeks the San Pedro Ry. company was unable to take care of the ore from this mine and after the ore house and all the available space underground had been filled up with ore Supt. Wetterstrom found it necessary to materially reduce his force putting those men who were retained upon development work. While a total of nine cars of ore have been moved from this mine since Monday morning Mr. Wetterstrom has not received assurance from the railroad company's officials that the trouble is at an end and consequently does not feel like placing the regular force at work upon ore in the Gold Chain. The moisture in the ore causes it to freeze if it is kept in the ore house for any length of time and for that reason it is quite important that it be loaded upon the cars soon after being hoisted from the mine.

Will Commence Sinking Monday

Supt. William Owens of the Eagle & Blue Bell expects to start sinking the shaft at this mine by the first of next week. Everything at the mine is in readiness for this piece of work and the only thing that can delay sinking will be the failure of the railroad company to deliver the timber two carloads of which left Salt Lake a few days ago. Three shifts will be used in the shaft and the sinking should be carried along at the rate of about 135 or 140 feet a month. Mr. Owens is of the opinion that the work can be handled without interfering to any extent with the regular work and the shipment of ore.

The Eagle & Blue Bell as well as many of the Tintic mines is having trouble in getting cars for the handling of the mine's output but notwithstanding this a total of six cars were loaded this week. Sufficient ore to have loaded three more cars was hoisted and splendid reports are circulated with reference to the physical condition of the mine.

Sioux Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Sioux Cons. mining company was held at Provo on Tuesday at which time the following officers were elected: Reed Smoot, president; T. R. Outler, vice-president; C. E. Loose, general manager; P. L. Anderberg, secretary and treasurer; and these with J. T. Farrer constitute the board of directors.

Mining Notes.

Prof. B. N. Lehman was at the Knight property on Wednesday and Thursday.

Samuel McIntyre returned to Mammoth on Wednesday after a few days' visit at Salt Lake.

The assessment work has just been completed upon the Maggie group of claims in the eastern end of the district.

John Davis who has been working in the North Colorado property in North Tintic made a business trip to the capital on Monday afternoon.

Henry Matsch who has been living at Payson for the past few years arrived in town this week and has decided to engage in leasing in the Gemini mine.

Sebastian Toester has completed the assessment work upon the Sultan and Wyle claims which are located to the northwest of the Centennial Eureka property.

Jackson McChrystal and Hil Clark returned to Salt Lake on Sunday after noon after spending a couple of days in Eureka the former spending his time in looking after the Gemini mine which is under his management.

Ross Bonney a Salt Lake attorney accompanied by his brother Fritz Bonney were out from Salt Lake on mining business early in the week. They have an interest in a North Tintic group of claims.

E. J. Raddatz returned to Salt Lake on Monday after spending a couple of days at the Tintic Standard property in the eastern end of the district. Development work is going along in nice shape from the 1000 level of this ground the work being handled under contract which was awarded to John Westerdahl. The condition of the property is very encouraging at this time and the development work now under way should open up something of value.

L. O. Peterson who is superintending the development of the Selma property in North Tintic returned on Wednesday after spending about ten days at Salt Lake. The shaft at the Selma has now reached a depth of about 100 feet and is going down at the rate of five feet each day. Mr. Peterson says that within the next few days the carpenter shop at the property will be equipped with a saw which will be operated by electricity and that this new improvement will be a great help in the framing of the timbers for the shaft.

Power Companies Consolidated.

At a meeting held on Saturday it was decided to consolidate the Knight Power Co. and the Utah County Light & Power Co., the new company to have a paid up capitalization of $2,000,000. While the merger of the two companies took place on the 1st of the year about two weeks will be required to bring about the details of the consolidation. Both companies are operating in the Tintic district.

Meetings of Tintic Companies

The annual meeting of the Lower Mammoth Company is to be held on January 8th the Tintic Central on the 13th. Chief Cons. on the 9th. Richmond & Anaconda on the 20th. Yankee Cons. on the 22nd.

Break In Line Caused Trouble

The Knight Company's power line between Tintic and American Fork was out of commission early in the week the heavy snow causing one of the wires to break. It required some little time to find the trouble as there was no power for the Knight mines in Tintic over three hundred men were forced to lose a couple of shifts' work. The line was repaired and work resumed at the various Knight mines in this district on Tuesday evening.

Working Leamington Ground

Hugh McKellar returned on Tuesday from Leamington where he performed the assessment work upon claims which he owns in partnership with his brother John McKellar. A tunnel has been driven upon one of the claims for a distance of 215 feet the showing being highly encouraging.

Wreck on Salt Lake Route.

An extra freight train collided with the rear end of a passenger train on the Salt Lake Route on Monday the accident occurring a few miles to the north of Tintic Junction. The wreck happened near the point where the two passenger trains collided head on a little over two years ago killing a couple of people and injuring many others. Monday's wreck was not serious the last car on the passenger train being a diner which was damaged somewhat. No one was injured.

Had His Feet Frozen.

Alexander Gruntan a Russian Finn had his feet frozen while walking from Faust to Tintic Junction on Monday morning. He came to Eureka and Dr. Hensel, the county physician had him removed to the Tintic Hospital at Robinson. A portion of the left foot and the big toe of the right foot were amputated at the hospital. Gruntan recently worked in Bingham and was trying to make his way to Newhouse.

Squire of Dames

One two three One two three counted the dancing teacher while a straggling many footed line of pupils squirmed in more or less successful imitation behind her.

Aw gee said Kendall to the boy in front of him. Don't you hate it?" Sure responded the boy in front, kicking the heels of the boy in front of him who shrilled Ouch!

Boys chanted the teacher at fention please. Now all together. One two three. One two three.

Say Bill said Kendall to the boy in front. Does your mother make you come?

You know it said Bill. Does yours?

Betcherlife returned Kendall. Do you think I'd come if she didn't?

Take partners and wait, cried the teacher rhythmically laying firm hands upon the boy behind her and bearing him off his large unwilling feet dragging behind him.

Kendall seized Billy by the sleeve. Let's duck, he whispered. Here comes that pesky Dorothy. I bet she's going to ask me to dance with her.

Into their retreat the dressing room presently entered Miss Turner. Terpsichore's interpreter.

Come boys, she said ingratiatingly. Get your partners for the cotillon.

I don't want to dance any more, said Kendall bluntly. My foot's sore.

Well come and select your partner, said Miss Turner. And then if your foot really hurts you needn't dance but a few times.

The two victims followed her back into the hall. Presently Miss Turner making her dutiful round of the hall incidentally looking for partners for the group of fluttering wall flowers at the end of the hall pounced gently upon Kendall and Billy.

Well boys, she said sweetly, have you selected your partners yet?

Yep said Billy. Where are they? Inquired Miss Turner looking about in some perplexity.

Here said Billy jerking his thumb toward Kendall.

Oh boys, sighed Miss Turner. Why are you so provoking? You know you have to dance with the girls. Now come with me and I'll find partners for you.

With a polite but unyielding hand upon the shoulder of each she moved toward the neglected blossoms seated together at the end of the hall.

I don't want to dance with Dorothy, he said. Can I dance with Elsie?

"Elsie as a partner said Miss Turner. Next time if you want some special girl you'd better be quicker.

Then can I dance with Marion? pursued Kendall despairingly.

Billy's asking her now said Miss Turner. You see what comes of being so slow. Here's Dorothy though. I think she'll dance with you if you ask her nicely.

Miss Turner brought Kendall to a halt in front of Dorothy who bounded to her feet her eyes shining with joy.

Oh goody goody! she cried casting herself violently upon Kendall.

You must sit down Dorothy said Miss Turner until Kendall asks you. Now, ask her nicely Kendall. Bow to her as I have taught you to do and say May I have the pleasure of this dance?

With an angry shake of his shoulders Kendall growled through the formula. Come on then! he jerked out turning his back upon his eager partner and scudding for the nearest seat.

Dorothy trotted after him and pulled herself up into the chair next to his. She patted down her short skirt fluffed up her huge hair ribbon and dangled her fat legs looking the picture of content.

Oh I just love dancing school don't you Kendall? she queried. Kendall snarled.

I think you dance just lovely Kendall cooed Dorothy beguilingly. Kendall growled.

I like to dance with you Kendall. Don't you like to dance with me? pursued Dorothy peering up and around into Kendall's gloomy countenance.

There was no answer.

Dorothy pouted. If you don't talk to me I won't ever dance with you again, she said with just the suspicion of a tearful sniff.

Kendall withdrew his gaze from the ceiling with a little start. He looked around at Dorothy keenly his face taking on a look that was almost cheerful.

Honest Dorothy? he asked eagerly. Honest and truly black and blue, lay you down and cut you in twos?

Why—why—yes said Dorothy, uncertainly. I guess so.

Kendall gave a subdued yelp of delight. Say Dorothy, he whispered eagerly. If you'll promise that you won't ever dance with me again, hope to die if you do. I'll give you half of my apple that I got out in the dressing room. Will you promise?

Dorothy indignantly not to say scandalized nodded her head so that her ribbon danced wildly. I'll promise, she said, if you'll give me the whole apple.

Urged Mexican Railways

Gen William S. Rosecrans, Who Was Minister to Mexico After Civil War, Was Largely Responsible for Their Development

No soldier who had served with prominence in the Civil war and who was afterwards elected a member of congress ever attracted more attention from the galleries than did Gen William S. Rosecrans. Old Rosie, as his soldiers called him when he entered the house of representatives in 1881. He had as a colleague Gen Joseph E. Johnston with whom he was on most friendly terms and in the senate were Gens John A. Logan and Ambrose C. Burnside and a little later Gen William Mahone. Rosecrans was the personification of sincerity of perfect democracy and he had as so many great soldiers have a distinctive quality of innocence almost childlike in its simplicity.

At the time General Rosecrans became a member of congress a great deal of discussion was prevailing as to the practicability of constructing a ship railroad across the Tehuantepec isthmus of Mexico in order to do away with the long voyage around the Horn. The plan had been advocated by Capt James B. Eads who had gained an international reputation as an engineer partly through the construction of the Eads bridge over the Mississippi at St. Louis and partly through his successful building of the jetty system near the mouth of the Mississippi river which resulted in the long desired deepening of the river's channel. Before General Rosecrans entered congress he had been minister to Mexico. I had heard that he was much interested in Captain Eads' plan for a ship railway across the Tehuantepec isthmus and at the first opportunity I asked the general if he would tell me whether he thought Eads' plan was practicable or not.

I have no doubt about the practicability of the construction of a ship railway across the Tehuantepec isthmus, he said with emphasis. It isn't a very difficult scheme from an engineer's point of view. All that would have to be done would be to build a railroad of six tracks that could accommodate platform cars, then the ships could be hauled from the Atlantic harbor by an incline to these cars constructed on the drydock system and then the locomotives would haul them across the isthmus to the Pacific side. And vice versa. The only trouble with Eads' plan is that it would cost a great deal of money.

When I was minister to Mexico in '88—that was just after Juarez had overthrown Maximilian and set up the republic afresh—there were scarcely any railroads in the country. There was one that ran from Vera Cruz to the capital and there were two or three little ones elsewhere and that about tells the whole story. But I had not been in Mexico six months before I realized that with ample railway facilities the republic would become in time one of the most prosperous nations in the world unquestionably of that part of the world lying to the south of the United States. So I suggested to President Juarez the construction of a railway across Tehuantepec isthmus explaining how such a road would shorten by thousands of miles the transit of freight by water from the Atlantic to the Pacific side of the Americas. President Juarez agreed with me that such a line should be built. I also told him that Mexico should have not only a central railway running to the Rio Grande river but lines parallel to it that would skirt on the east the gulf coast and on the west the Pacific and the Gulf of California. He asked me if I thought a railway could be built across central Mexico through some pass of the Sierra mountains. I told him that I was certain of it that there never yet existed a mountain chain through which somewhere or other passes could not be found.

For some time after I ceased being minister to Mexico I stayed in the country and agitated the railway development of the republic. I believe that I was the first man to suggest to the proper government officials adequate railway development of the Mexican republic and I have often regretted that before I could get my plans well under way business reasons called me to California. I am glad to see however that this development is now under way as regards a central railway though I am not to reap any material benefits from it. And I venture to make the prediction to you that within the next fifteen or twenty years a true transcontinental line will be built across the Tehuantepec isthmus and when it is Mexico's progress as a commercial nation will be magnificently advanced.

General Rosecrans did not live long enough to see the completion of the Tehuantepec railroad—an event that belongs to the twentieth century—but in the last years of his life—he died in 1893—he was greatly gratified to learn that this important Mexican transcontinental line which will compete with the Panama canal for freight and which 30 years before he had advocated was at last under construction.

Upright Senator Sickened

Comments of William P. Frye After All Members of Upper House Except Quay Had Sworn They Hadn't Speculated in Sugar

In the summer of 1894 a committee of the United States senate of which Senator George Gray of Delaware was chairman spent several weeks in investigating accusations publicly made that members of the senate during the consideration of the so-called Wilson tariff bill had speculated in the securities of the American Sugar Refining company commonly called the sugar trust.

The sugar schedule in the Wilson tariff bill occasioned prolonged and excited discussion in the senate. Some senators were in favor of reducing the tariff on raw sugar to a nominal point while many other senators favored increasing the rate and while the discussion was in progress the accusation was publicly made that various senators had been speculating in sugar and so speculating that their votes upon the sugar schedule would favorably affect their venture into the stock market.

In the course of the investigation accusations it was suggested that every senator be called before the committee and made to testify under oath whether or not he had been speculating in sugar at any time during the pendency of the tariff bill. This was done and every senator testified and every one with a single exception denied having directly or indirectly speculated in the securities of the sugar company. The one exception was the late Senator Matthew Stanley Quay of Pennsylvania who frankly and courageously testified that he had speculated adding that he had closed his speculative accounts before the senate had voted upon the sugar schedule.

Some weeks after the close of the investigation I met the late William P. Frye senator from Maine and he knowing that I had been among others summoned before the investigating committee to give testimony and had been indicted for refusing to tell the committee from whom I obtained the information on which I based my newspaper letters accusing senators of speculating in sugar began of his own accord a conversation with me upon that subject.

I have always liked Matt Quay personally said Senator Frye although when I first knew of him I must confess that I knew that he would go a little farther in political management than I was willing to go when I was chairman of the Republican state committee in Maine you may remember that I succeeded Mr. Blaine as chairman of that committee. However that is neither here nor there what I want to say to you now is that Quay gained my unbounded respect and admiration when he appeared before the sugar committee and in reply to the question whether or not he had been speculating in sugar securities frankly and bluntly told the committee that he had. It is my opinion that there is today not a member of the senate who does not entertain for Quay a higher feeling of respect because he had the courage to give that truthful testimony than he ever felt for him before.

And I want to add went on the man who was for so many years president pro tem of the senate and throughout his long public career was greatly esteemed by the public for his integrity of purpose and character. I want to add that it made me sick at heart to see several senators go before that committee and deliberately perjure themselves though they knew as well that members of the committee and other senators were fully aware that they had been speculating in sugar. I haven't yet been able to get rid of the feeling that this is one of the most pitiable exhibitions ever made of the sort of depravity which men who are in politics and who are seeking to make money at the same time are so likely to sink into.

Vindication for the Horse

The horse has vindicated himself. One of that genus the pet of a Chicago owner was stolen the other day and after a lapse of a few days turned up at his proper home drawing a spick and span wagon and proudly wearing a brand new harness. Inquiries by the owner of the horse for the proper owner of the wagon and harness have evoked no response which on reflections is not so inexplicable. This indicates the superiority of the horse to the modern inventions that assume to take his place. When did a stolen automobile ever come home with a new motor or set of tires? What stolen automobile has flown back to its legitimate hangar with a new set of planes?

PROMINENT PEOPLE

HEAD OF NATIONAL GRANGE

The newly elected master of the National Grange chosen at Columbus Ohio is Oliver Wilson of Magnolia Ill. He is a native of Ohio but has lived in Illinois since childhood. He is a farmer and has been a member of the grange 40 years. For fifteen years he has been head of the Illinois state organization.

Patrons of Husbandry, as the grangers are known officially is a secret order of the United States which was founded at Washington D. C., December 4 1867. Its purpose is to promote the interest of persons engaged in agricultural pursuits and in business connected therewith. General depression in this line of activity following the Civil war was the impulse which brought this excellent organization into being. Men connected with several of the departments at Washington conceived the idea and prepared the first ritual but women are gladly accepted as members and have important parts in the initiatory work and conduct of grange lodges. Today thousands of subordinate granges scattered through nearly every state and territory of the Union bear witness to the substantial growth of this beneficial order.

The grange is a chamber of commerce, produce exchange, library, church, insurance company, clearing house for the exchange of valuable information and social club all rolled into one. Outside of its members few are aware of the immeasurable good it has done. The large percentage of farmers among the inhabitants of this country is sufficient proof that any great benefit which they derive must of necessity materially benefit the nation as a whole. Understanding this vital point it is easy to perceive wherein the grange is exerting a stupendous force for good in the great work it is doing.

PERSIAN TREASURER GENERAL

One of the most remarkable situations in history is happening in the case of the young American William Morgan Shuster who as treasurer general of the Persian empire has been besting the keenest diplomats of Europe for the past six months. This young man is only thirty-four years old and he started life as a stenographer.

This youngster who has one of the biggest contracts in the world on his hands was born in Washington D. C., in 1877. His parents live there still. After his graduation from Columbia, Shuster obtained a position as a stenographer in the war department at Washington. When the Spanish war broke out he was made assistant secretary of the commission that had charge of the evacuation of Cuba. He was then only twenty-one. Shuster remained in the Cuban customs service three years and when he got through was special deputy collector of customs for Cuba. This was in 1901 and Shuster was twenty-four years old. A collector of customs for the Philippines was needed. It was one of the big administrative bureaus of the government's colonial possessions. Shuster was chosen. When Shuster had done everything in the way of work in the Philippines he returned to Washington and started a law practice. He was a success as a lawyer and relinquished a paying practice to take charge of affairs in Persia.

The present situation in Persia which is well known to all readers of the news is what took Shuster from America and a lucrative law practice to the general treasurership of that crumbling empire.

COLLEGE PRESIDENT RETIRES

President George Harris the venerable head of the University of Amherst believes that he has reached the age when he should retire in favor of a younger generation and accordingly he has sent in his resignation to the Board of Trustees.

Professor Harris has been president of the university since 1899 and during his administration the institution has progressed and prospered.

It was entirely through the efforts of President Harris that the first fund for increasing the salaries of the junior professors of the faculty was raised. It was also through his efforts that the last fund of $400,000 was realized the object of which was to increase the incomes of the senior members of the teaching staff.

Professor Harris is sixty-eight years old and is among the foremost educationalists in the country. His retirement which he wishes to take place before commencement is deeply ly regretted by his co-workers with whom he has labored for many years.

A GREAT ENGLISH PREACHER

The man who has earned for himself the title of the modern Savonarola, Rev. Bernard Vaughan S. J. the great London preacher is now in this country for a long visit and Americans will have an opportunity to study at close range this fiery and impassioned clergyman who has gained international fame by his exhortations of the sins and follies of the idle and the wealthy in the British metropolis.

Although without any ecclesiastical title Father Bernard Vaughan has as much influence in the church as many prelates. He is a favorite at all the Catholic courts of Europe and he is a frequent guest at Buckingham Palace. And he is also an honored visitor in the London slums where he is as much at home in a meeting of coarsened men as at a king's garden party.

Father Vaughan will visit and will preach in nearly all the big cities of the United States during his visit. His oratory probably will be a surprise to those who are accustomed to the rather cold formalism of English preachers. It astonished his audience when he preached some years ago before Pope Leo XIII in Rome.

Fashionable society is not the only phase of life which Father Vaughan has dealt with in his London sermons. He is as hard on the sins of the east end of the metropolis as he is on the follies and failings of the west end and wherever he speaks he adjusts his discourses to his audiences.

He Was Faithful to Burke

Rufus Choate Owed His Manner of Thought and His Style to Close Study of That Master of English

When Rufus Choate universally conceded to be one of the greatest of American lawyers and orators and a most brilliant student of the classics and English literature and history entered Dartmouth college in 1815. Rev. Dr. Alvan Bond who was for nearly forty years pastor of a Congregational church at Norwich Conn. and in his day one of the foremost clergymen of his denomination was a tutor at Dartmouth.

Rufus Choate became a student under me in Latin. Doctor Bond told my father years afterward I thought that when he entered the classroom for the first time he was the handsomest lad I had ever seen. His hair was brown and very curly his eyes were dark he had a beautiful complexion. But it was after all a singular intellectual revelation which was in his face his manner and his speech which especially attracted me and I am sure all of his fellow students.

His translations of the Latin classics were beyond any comparison the finest that I ever heard in the classroom. They were faithful in expressing the meaning of the Latin text but meaning of the Latin translations Rufus Choate's were expressed in singularly beautiful English. I never tired of hearing him translate.

A little later I discovered that besides having a great gift for the Latin classes young Choate was a precocious reader of the English classics. I remember that in a casual after class conversation with him one day he remarked that greatly as he admired Milton and Bacon and fascinated as he was by Shakespeare nevertheless he thought that in some things especially in his command of the English language Burke was the superior of any of them.

Choate was graduated from Dartmouth shortly after I finished my tutelage there and entered the ministry and I heard little or nothing of him after that until he had gained a reputation both as a lawyer and as an orator though I had looked for him to take up literature and become a teacher probably in Dartmouth. Then one day in reading a speech that he had delivered I was struck with the thought that he had been influenced in his manner of thought and his style by a close study of Burke. Instantly there came back to me most vividly the remark that Rufus Choate when a college lad had made to me about Burke. Since then I have read speech after speech of Choate's and they all make it plain to me that as a man he has been faithful to his boyhood admiration for Edmund Burke. And perhaps because he has been so faithful is one great reason why he is so great an orator so wonderful a master of the English language.

Many years after my father had told me of this talk with Dr. Bond it became known to me that Rufus Choate at the time his cousin Joseph H. Choate formerly ambassador to Great Britain was beginning the study of law wrote to the latter these words: Remember that these four are the great minds of England: Shakespeare, Bacon, Milton and Burke. And remember also that of these Burke is not the least.

Tasting the Drinks

An old custom has just been observed at Market Drayton where the annual fair called the Dirty Fair has been opened by the Court Leet. A proclamation it is reported was read by the Ale Canner who warned all rogues vagabonds cut purses and idle men immediately to depart from this fair.

Ale Canner has a jovial smack about it but we are afraid it is a misprint for Ale-Canter, an ancient and honorable officer both of manors and corporations. His duty was to taste the new brew of every brewer and brewster cook and plebaker and if it were unfit to drink the whole was confiscated and given to the poor.

It should be added that in the middle ages unfit to drink usually meant weak and watery. The chemist was not abroad in those benighted days so there was no risk of arsenical products being present in the pottle.

SYNOPSIS

Howard Jeffries bankers son under the evil influence of Robert Underwood a fellow student at Yale leads a life of dissipation marries the daughter of a gambler who died in prison and is disowned by his father. He tries to get work and fails.

CHAPTER I—Continued

I wish I could help you old man. As it is my own salary barely serves to keep me in neckwear Wall street is great fun but it doesn't pay much that is not unless you play the game yourself.

Howard smiled feebly as he replied. Nonsense—I wouldn't accept help of that sort. I'm not reduced to soliciting charity yet. I guess I'd prefer the river to that. But if you hear of anything keep me in mind.

The athlete made no response. He was apparently lost in thought when suddenly he blurted out:

Say Jeffries you haven't got any money have you—say a couple of thousand dollars?

Howard stared at the questioner as if he doubted his sanity.

"Two thousand dollars," he gasped. "Do you suppose that I'd be wearing out shoe leather looking for a job if I had $2,000?"

Coxe looked disappointed as he replied:

Oh of course I understand you haven't it on you only I thought you might be able to raise it.

Why do you ask? inquired Howard and his curiosity aroused.

Coxe looked around to see if any one was listening. Then in a whisper he said:

It's a cinch. If you had $2,000 you and I could make a snug little fortune. Don't you understand? In my office I get tips. I'm on the inside. I know in advance what the big men are going to do. When they start to move a certain stock up I'm on the job. Understand? If you had $2,000 I could raise as much and we'd pool our capital starting in the business ourselves—on a small scale of course. If we hit it right we might make a nice income.

Howard's mouth watered. Certainly that was the kind of life he liked best. The feverish excitement of gambling the close association with rich men the promise of a luxurious style of living—all this appealed to him strongly. But what was the use? Where could he get $2,000? He couldn't go to his father. He shook his head.

I'm afraid not old sport, he said as they left the saloon and he held out his hand to say good by. But I'll bear it in mind and if things improve I'll look you up. So long.

Climbing wearily up the dirty stairs of the elevated railroad he bought a ticket with one of the few nickels remaining in his pocket and taking a seat in a north bound train started on his trip back to Harlem.

The day was overcast rain threatened. A pall of mingled smoke and mist hung over the entire city. From the car window as the train wound its serpentine course in and out the maze of grimy offices shops and tenements everything appeared drab dirty and squalid. New York was seen at its ugliest. Enconced in a cross seat his chair leaning heavily on his hand Howard gazed dejectedly out of the window. The depressing outlook was in keeping with his own state of mind.

How would the adventure end? Reconciliation with his father was out of the question. Letters sent home remained without response. He wasn't surprised. He knew his father so well to expect that he would be sent so soon. Besides if the old man was so infernally proud he'd show him he had some pride too. He'd drown himself before he'd go down on his knees whining to be forgiven. His father was dead wrong anyway. His marriage might have been foolish. Annie might be beneath him socially. She was not educated and her father wasn't any better than he ought to be. She did not talk correctly her manners left much to be desired at times he was secretly ashamed of her. But her bringing up was her misfortune not her fault. The girl herself was straight as a die. She had a heart of gold. She was far more intelligent far more likely to make him a happy home than some stuck up idle society girl who had no thought for anything save money dress and show. Perhaps if he had been less honorable and not married her his father would have thought more highly of him. If he'd ruined the girl no doubt he would have been welcomed home with open arms. Perhaps he might be a poor wretched fool but thank God they couldn't reproach him with that. Annie had been loyal to him throughout. He'd stuck to her through thick and thin.

As the train swept round the curve at Fifty third street and started on its long straight run up the West side his mind reverted to Robert Underwood. He had seen his old associate only once since leaving college. He was across him one day on Fifth avenue Underwood was coming out of a curio shop. He explained hurriedly that he had left Yale and when asked about his future plans talked vaguely of going in for art. His manner was frigid and nervous—the attitude of the man who fears he may be approached for a small loan. He was evidently well aware of the change in his old associates fortunes and having squeezed all he could out of him had no further use for him. It was only when he had disappeared that Howard suddenly remembered a loan of $250 which Underwood had never repaid. Some time later Howard learned that he occupied apartments at the exclusive and expensive Astoria where he was living in great style. He went there determined to see him and demand his money but the card always came back not at home.

Underwood had always been a mystery to Howard. He knew him to be an inveterate gambler and a man entirely without principle. No one knew who his family were or where he came from. His source of income too was always a puzzle. At college he was always hard up borrowing right and left and forgetting to pay yet he always succeeded in living on the fat of the land. His apartments

I Wish I Could Help You Old Man

In the Astoria cost a small fortune he dressed well drove a smart turn out and entertained lavishly. He was not identified with any particular business or profession. On leaving college he became interested in art. He frequented the important art sales and soon got his name in the news papers as an authority on art matters. His apartment was literally a museum of European and oriental art. On all sides were paintings by old masters beautiful rugs priceless tapestries rare ceramics enamels statuary antique furniture bronzes etc. He passed for a man of wealth and mother with marriageable daughters considering him an eligible young bachelor hastened to invite him to their homes none of them conscious of the danger of letting the wolf slip into the lambs fold.

What a strange power of fascination mused Howard as the train jogged along men of Underwood's bold and reckless type wield especially over women. Their very daring and unscrupulousness seems to render them more attractive. He himself at college had fallen entirely under the man's spell. There was no doubt that he was responsible for all his troubles. Underwood possessed the uncanny gift of being able to bend people to his will. What a fool he had made of him at the university. He had been his evil genius there was no question of that. But for meeting Underwood he might have applied himself to serious study left the university with honors and be now a respectable member of the community. He remembered with a smile that it was through Underwood that he had met his wife. Some of the fellows hinted that Underwood had known her more intimately than he had pretended and had only passed her on to him because he was tired of her. He had naively that as a lie. Annie he could swear was as good a girl as ever breathed.

He couldn't explain Underwood's influence over him. He had done with him what he chose. He wondered why he had not tried to resist. The truth was Underwood exercised a strange subtle power over him. He had the power to make him do everything he wanted him to do no matter how foolish or unreasonable the request. Every one at college used to talk about it. One night Underwood invited all his classmates to his rooms and made him cut up all kinds of capers. He at first refused point blank—but Underwood got up and standing directly in front of him gazed steadily into his eyes. Again he commanded him to do these ridiculous degrading things. Howard felt himself weakening. He was suddenly seized with the feeling that he must obey. Amid roars of laughter he recited the entire alphabet standing on one leg he crouched like a rooster he hopped like a toad and he crawled abjectly on his belly like a snake. One of the fellows told him afterward that he had been hypnotized. He had laughed at it then as a good joke but now he came to think of it perhaps it was true. Possibly he was a subject. Anyway he was glad to be rid of Underwood and his uncanny influence.

The train stopped with a jerk at his station and Howard rode down in the elevator to the street. Crossing Eighth avenue he was going straight home when suddenly he halted. The glitter and tempting array of bottles in a corner saloon window tempted him. He suddenly felt that if there was one thing he needed in the world above all others it was another drink. True he had had more than enough already. But that was Coxes fault. He had invited him and made him drink. There couldn't be any harm in taking another. He might as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb. By the time he emerged from the saloon his speech was thick and his step uncertain. A few minutes later he was painfully climbing up the rickety stairs of a cheap looking flat house. As he

The boxlike hole where Howard sat awaiting his meal was the largest room in a flat which boasted of five and bath. There was a bedroom of equally diminutive proportions and a parlor with wall paper so loud that it talked. There was scarcely enough room to swing a cat around. The thin walls were cracked the rooms were carpetless. Yet it showed the care of a good housekeeper. Floors and windows were clean the cover on the table spotless. The furnishings were as meager as they were ingenious. With their slender purse they had been able to purchase only the bare necessities—a bed a chair or two a dining room table a few kitchen utensils. When they wanted to sit in the parlor they had to carry a chair from the dining room when meal times came the chairs had to travel back again. A soap box turned upside down and neatly covered with chintz did duty as a dresser in the bedroom and with a few photographs and tacks they had managed to impart an aesthetic appearance to the parlor. This place cost the huge sum of $25 a month. It might just as well have cost $100 for all Howard's ability to pay it. The past month's rent was long overdue and the janitor looked more insolent every day. But they did not care. They were young and life was still before them.

Presently Annie came in carrying a steaming dish of stew which she laid on the table. As she helped Howard to a plate full she said: So you had no luck again this morning?

Howard was too busy eating to answer. As he gulped down a huge piece of bread he growled:

Nothing as usual—same old story nothing doing.

Annie sighed. She had been given this answer so often that it would have surprised her to hear anything else. It meant that their hard hand to mouth struggle must go on. She said nothing. What was the use? It would never do to discourage Howard. She tried to make light of it.

Of course it isn't easy I quite understand that. Never mind dear. Something will turn up soon. Where did you go? Whom did you see? Why didn't you let drink alone when you promised me you would?

That was Coxes fault blurted out Howard always ready to blame others for his own shortcomings. You remember Coxes? He was at Yale when I was. A big fair fellow with blue eyes. He pulled stroke in the varsity boat race you remember?

I think I do, replied his wife in differently as she helped him to more stew. What did he want? What was he doing in New York?

He's got a fine place in a brokers office in Wall street. I felt ashamed to let him see me low down like this. He said that I could make a good deal of money if only I had a little capital. He knows everything going on in Wall street. If I went in with him I'd be on Easy street.

How much would it require?"

Two thousand dollars.

The young wife gave a sigh as she answered:

I'm afraid that's a day dream. Only your father could give you such an amount and you wouldn't go to him would you?

Not if we hadn't another crust in the house snapped Howard savagely. You don't want me to do you? he asked looking up at her quickly.

No dear she answered calmly. I have certainly no wish that you should humble yourself. At the same time I am not selfish enough to want to stand in the way of your future. Your father and stepmother hate me. I know that. I am the cause of your separation from your folks. No doubt your father would be very willing to help you if you would consent to leave me.

Howard laughed as he replied: Well if that's the price for the $2,000 I guess I'll go without it. I wouldn't give you up for a million times $2,000.

Annie stretched her hand across the table.

Really? she said.

Engineering in Hospitals
Practically all the important in firmaries and hospitals in England have their own electric generating stations and the size of the installations would surprise the majority of engineers. The equipment has to be designed with unusual care owing to the special conditions which prevail in hospital work. Even where a public supply is available the use of an independent system is justified on account of the security which it gives against failure of current at a critical moment. The installations are used for lighting heating ventilating telephoning and other purposes and many hospitals have laundries operated electrically. One county asylum has its own private electric railway for conveying supplies from the nearest railway station.

The Duration of Dreams
Something regarding the duration of dreams can be gathered from this experience of a man who on sitting down for a dental operation took gas and dreamed. He saw himself finish his work go to the club leave for the station run for the train and miss it. He returned to his club and reclined on a settee in the library. There he passed a miserable restless night getting gradually colder and colder as the fire died down and with a pain gradually growing about his head and face from the hardness of his couch. Five o'clock in the morning came and the steward roused him to say that the club must now be closed. The sleeper got up feeling very stiff—to find that the steward was his dentist and that the night's adventures had lasted exactly 42 seconds.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering and they have been confided to Dr R V Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that a very large percentage of all women treated by Dr Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half a million women in a practice of over 40 years it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases

E W REDMOND City Recorder

Eureka City, Utah, Dec 30, 1911

The Mayor and City Councilmen of Eureka City

Gentlemen
In accordance with your instructions I have audited the books of the City Recorder and City Treasurer for the 2 years ending December 30 1911 I find that the accounts have been properly kept and that all receipts from licenses taxes and general receipts have been properly accounted for but I found a small discrepancy in the poll tax account which the proper officer will make good

I find that the last bond for the water system has been redeemed and there is no indebtedness now standing against the city
The city has paid for the sewer and sidewalk improvements in full and there is now due from the taxpayers on the sewer tax $1300 42 and on the sidewalk tax $1187 18 which will be a source of revenue The books of the City Recorder and City Treasurer are properly balanced and the accounts agree

For Union Workers

Important Happenings in Industrial Circles in This Country and Europe

Indianapolis—That sounds good to me said Thomas Neale general treasurer of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners in referring to the speech made by R. W. Irwin of Grand Rapids at the annual meeting of the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers in this city. Irwin made a speech strongly favoring the establishment of the nine-hour work day in the furniture industry and after considerable discussion the meeting adopted resolutions favoring the shorter day and providing for a committee of fifteen to urge that furniture manufacturers join in the movement. Neale expressed the opinion that the movement thus begun by the furniture manufacturers shows that the $185,000 the carpenters' union spent in the Grand Rapids strike last summer was not spent in vain. It seems he says that this strike will eventually be of benefit to woodworkers all over the country as while it sought the nine-hour day in Grand Rapids the movement among manufacturers is now to become a general one in this country.

Cincinnati O—A temporary restraining order was granted by Common Pleas Judge Cushing enjoining national and local officers of the United Shoe Workers of America from unlawful picketing at the plant of the Miller Shoe Manufacturing company 418 Sycamore street. The judge did not say whether the unionists if they acted peacefully could gather near the plant. It is accepted by lawyers that the intent is to enjoin only picketing that would interfere with operation of the plant.

Washington—Railway systems with a mileage aggregating 47,500 have increased the wages of employees during the last year 4.87 per cent over 1910. The total amount of this increase means that there will have been put into the pockets of the employees at the close of 1911 the sum of $14,636,000 more than was received for the same service in 1910. This result is said to be due to the effective organizations of labor being maintained and strengthened each year by the employees of the great transportation lines of the country.

Cleveland O—The printers have closed an agreement with ten employers in the job and commercial offices that carries with it an increase of $1 per week during the coming year and the same advance beginning January 1, 1914 as well as other betterments. The printer men celebrated the new wage increase and the annual eight-hour victory of several years ago by holding a grand smoking concert.

Cleveland O—Brewery workers are conversing with the bosses about a little matter of entering into a new agreement carrying with it provisions to inaugurate the eight-hour day for all inside men and a small raise in wages. There is a friendly feeling on both sides of the fence and the question will be settled amicably.

Minneapolis—The Minnesota free employment bureau in St. Paul broke all records for the month of October in both the women's and men's departments showing a big increase over 1910. In St. Paul and Minneapolis combined employment was found for 3,440 men and 1,691 women. The employment office at Duluth found employment for 1,440.

Berne Switzerland—The building trades in Switzerland have been unusually active all classes of labor being well employed at remunerative wages. The cost of living has increased materially but there has been little complaint on the part of the laboring classes for the reason that wages have increased proportionately.

Washington—A resolution protesting against the Smoot bill substituting power for hand presses in the printing of the government's money was adopted at the convention of the American Federation of Labor. They contended that the printing of money in power presses would open a way to widespread counterfeiting.

New York—United Textile Workers of America at their last convention took action to affiliate with the International Federation of Textile Workers Association. The membership of the International Federation is approximately 430,000 with headquarters in England.

Washington—The department of agriculture and the department of commerce and labor are having pressed films for moving pictures illustrative of a number of leading industries for the education of all the people of the country.

New York—A special meeting of an emergency committee of the Mining Trades Employers association was called to take up arrears of dues caused by the present strikes at the building trades. The general rate of marble workers is now 18 cents an hour. The marble employers are 1,000 men at work. A meeting of the striking marble workers was held at which it was decided to keep up the strike.

Pasadena Cal—The Labor Temple association has taken the first steps in the erection of a labor temple to cost $50,000.

Berlin Germany—In Germany every person less than 21 years old must have a labor book which is held by the employer during employment and must be shown by an applicant when seeking work. When more than 21 all wage workers except a comparatively small number of the higher paid carry insurance cards there being at present about 18,000,000 persons insured. The card of each individual shows a record of his occupation wages health insurance payments and other economic circumstances. This card he must produce when he takes a new job applies at a labor exchange for work asks his union for out-of-work payment or seeks a lodging in one of the municipal or union shelters.

Indianapolis—That the building laws need revision especially with reference to the construction of concrete buildings was declared by Carpenters Union No. 75 of this city. A committee has been appointed by the union to formulate plans and urge better regulation of all construction but especially that of concrete. The sum of $300 was appropriated by the union to pay expenses incurred in this movement. No. 75 lost some of its members by the collapse of the new Prest-O-Lite building. At the meeting it was declared that carpenters as a rule were not surprised at the accident as it had often been said among carpenters that in the construction of this class of work carelessness was displayed.

Sharon Pa—Announcement is made that the five idle hot mills at the tin plant of the American Sheet and Tinplate company will be placed in operation at once. The plant will be operating at full capacity when these mills resume and over 1,400 men will be employed. It is stated that the plant will be operated steadily. It is also announced that the capacity of the New Castle mills will be increased. The tinplate business is reported good. It is expected the skelp mill of the Carnegie Steel company will resume before the first of the year after a long idleness.

New York—Unless the wrapper kimono and house dress manufacturer grant the demands of their 6,000 employees New York will soon suffer from a kimono famine. The workers say their wages have gone down and down and that it is impossible for them to earn a living wage and say they will strike for better conditions. The demands are for a 54-hour work week an increase in wages from 10 to 20 per cent sanitary conditions and safer work rooms. The wages in the trade range from $2.50 to $6 per week only a small percentage receiving $6.

New York—Officers of the Sheet Metal Workers and Carpenters and Joiners national unions returned to their homes in the west after failing to adjust difficulties between those two trades so as to bring about a settlement of the Sheet Metal Workers strike which has been in progress here for more than three months. The employers declined to treat with the unions although they have agreed to take back the striking workmen as individuals.

Indianapolis—Typographical Union No. 1 of this city has decided to take an interest in the endeavor to create a wider interest in political primaries. A committee consisting of Theodore Perry Harry Slough D. W. Runshe and E. P. Barry has been appointed to draft a measure that will provide for a non-partisan primary. The selection of good men for office was strongly urged at the meeting at which this action was taken.

Washington—The first blow at the central body of organized labor resulting from the agitation over the McNamara's was struck by the Knights of Labor the United Boot and Shoe Workers and the Cutters association. Appeals requesting the affiliated organizations of the American Federation of Labor to sever relations with the Federation were sent broadcast throughout the country by the opposing labor bodies.

Jamestown N. Y.—The upholsterers strike which has been on has come to a close the result of an amicable agreement. A mutually satisfactory understanding has been reached between the Jamestown Lounge company and their upholsterers the strike being called off and the men returned to work. The terms of the agreement have not been made public.

New York—Since 1860 the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners has paid in benefits of various kinds the sum of $18,159,490.

Chicago—Edwin R. Wright has asked the federal bureau of immigration to investigate the causes of unemployment among workers of Illinois. According to his estimate more than 75,000 workmen are now idle in this state and he urges that the flood of immigration here be diverted.

Boston—The attorney general of Massachusetts has given an opinion against the system of grading practiced in many of the textile mills of that state. In reality it is claimed such system is but another form of fining and the latter is prohibited by statute.

Walter Camp the so-called dean of American football in picking his All American football team for 1911 has confined his first team selections to players who have been members of eastern teams. Not one western player is mentioned of the first eleven. Princeton and Yale are given three places each on the mythical all star eleven. Harvard two and the Army Navy and Carlisle one each.

One selection of Camp's which is hardly likely to meet with popular opinion is that of Dalton for full back. While there is no question but that Dalton is entitled to a place on the first team there is considerable

Gossip Among Sports

Ty Cobb is asserting already that the Tigers will wallopp the Athletics in 1912.

Old Bat Nelson is showing a freshness in his declining years that is refreshing.

Packey McFarland admits his hand was not broken in his battle with Tommy Murphy.

President Comiskey of the White Sox wants Hal Chase and who will arise to blame him?

Billy Evans says umpires don't relish roasts. Yes and some don't stand for them either.

Keep college sport clean from the taint of money or give it up and dig roots exclusively thinks Alonzo Stagg.

Both Jennings and Wolgast are well enough to talk to the reporters but more encouraging news than this is sought.

The American A. C. of New York has forever barred the kidney punch. Bat Nelson didn't care to fight there anyway.

Clark Griffith is clearing the deck for action when the real firing begins in the battle for the American league pennant.

Pitcher Burchell of Montreal has the backing of several capitalists and will make an effort to buy the Syracuse franchise.

Wolgast has fought some popular battles in his life but his winning bout with appendicitis is the stellar one of his career.

Walter Camp's all American football selections answer in part the oft repeated query: Why do western prep stars go east?

Appendicitis is the only boxer who has the prod distinction, if it wishes to call it that of putting Wolgast down for the count.

One peculiar point about baseball is that Mathewson the game's greatest pitcher has never received a single automobile from the fans.

It was left for the chess experts to resume athletic relations between the universities of Michigan and Chicago. It is up to others to follow suit.

Baseball fans in every part of the United States were shocked over the injury to Hugh Jennings but imagine the feelings of the Detroit Tiger fans.

Horse Trainer Lutz who performed in a like capacity for Freddie Welsh thinks the appendicitis has prolonged Wolgast's rule as world's champion.

At the Beginning of a New Year

The beginning of a new year—1912—finds the Reporter in prosperous condition with a much larger following of readers than the paper had one year ago. It is our intention to improve the paper during the present year to give all the news of the great Tintic district to boost for everything that will be beneficial to this section and do our part in calling the attention of the outside world to the wonderful resources of this mineral belt. People living elsewhere usually judge a town by its newspaper and for that reason we want to make the Reporter one of the best weekly newspapers in the state. We can do this if we have the cooperation of our friends. We want every resident of Tintic—every one of them—to realize that this paper is their friend ready at all times to assist them in any laudable undertaking and asking their assistance at all times in publishing the news. The Reporter now reaches nearly all the homes in Tintic and it is our desire to cover the field just a little more thoroughly during the present year.

The Old and New Officers

Last Monday morning the old city officers stepped down and out and turned the affairs of the city over to the newly elected officials. Mayor Morley and those who have served under him during the past two years have worked hard in the interest of the public. No weighty questions of statecraft are to be solved by officials of a small city but the many matters of seeming unimportance require careful consideration. Many are prone to criticize and few try to assist public officials and for that reason many a good man has felt a bit more cheerful in retiring from an office than he did upon assuming his official duties.

The overwhelming majorities given to the new officers at the time of their election indicates that they have the implicit confidence of the public.

They are good capable men who have the best interests of the city at heart and the Reporter trusts that during the next two years they will be given the support which they deserve and that every resident will join with them in working to improve local conditions enabling them two years hence to turn the city over to their successors in better condition than that in which they find it at this time.

The officials of the telephone company after being forced to do so investigated and found that they could afford to lower the rates in Eureka to telephone subscribers and as a result of this decrease in rates they have materially increased their business. Perhaps an investigation will show that the rates charged for long distance business are higher than they should be. Wonder if they will investigate this proposition?

The people of Utah County are making an effort to induce the officials of the Salt Lake Route to operate all through trains over the old line instead of running them by way of Garfield, Poose and Pinto. And the worst part of it is that they seem to be in a fair way of accomplishing what they have started out after. The routing of the through trains over the new line is a considerable benefit to the Tintic camps to Tooele County cities and to Garfield and the people of these towns should use their influence to prevent a change. The bulk of the Salt Lake Route's business in Utah comes from the mining and smelting sections which its line traverses and these cities naturally expect something in the way of decent service.

Demonstration Train Coming

The agricultural demonstration train operated under the auspices of the Agricultural College officials will stop at Tintic points on Jan. 26th remaining here until the afternoon of the following day. Professors from the Agricultural College will deliver addresses upon subjects of interest to farmers. Those who are interested in the raising of dry land crops in Tintic were instrumental in having the demonstration train stop in this district.

Masonic Election Tuesday

The members of Tintic Lodge No. 9 F & A M will meet and elect officers next Tuesday evening and immediately after the election the new officers will be installed. A nice banquet is being prepared under the direction of Captain Deprezn at John Morley and this will be served after the completion of the lodge work.

All members and visiting brethren are invited to attend. Lodge work will start promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

Special Meetings in Baptist Church

George R. Varney the noted author, lecturer and preacher will hold meetings in the Baptist Church beginning Sunday evening Jan. 14. Mr. Varney brings with him an electric stereopticon which will be used to illuminate the many artistically hand-painted slides copied from the masters which will be used to illustrate his addresses on the "Life of Christ." The meetings will continue every night during the week. Don't fail to attend.

New School Building for Eureka

If favorable action is taken at the bond election in the Tintic High School District on the 19th of this month it will mean the immediate construction of a new high school building in this city. The cost of the new structure together with its equipment will be approximately $50,000. The building will probably be located upon the south side of the city as near the business district as possible.

New Officers Take Charge.

At ten o'clock on Monday morning the mayor and members of the old city council held a meeting preparatory to turning over the affairs of the city to their successors. Bills amounting to $259.90 were approved and left for payment by the new officers. This budget of bills included the claim of the Electric company for lights for December as well as a number of smaller claims.

Justice Has Easy Month

The city justice John O. Treckleton submitted a report which showed but one arrest during December, a fine of $15 being levied and collected.

Pike Reports on Legal Matters

City Attorney Pike made a verbal report regarding the city's legal affairs stating that there is no litigation at the present time with the exception of an old suit—that of Eureka City vs N. Fernando—which is in the district court upon a motion for a new trial. Another case that of George Parker vs F. J. Benton in which the city is indirectly interested will on doubt be dismissed within the next week or ten days.

City Recorder Redmond's report showed the collection of $710.67 and the disbursement of $428.52 during the month. The money received coming from the following sources: water $633.47, general licenses $0.50, cemetery $2.50 and city scales $4.20.

Condition of City Treasury

City Treasurer Tregoning presented a report which showed that on December 1st the city had a cash balance of $2548.37. The receipts for the month were $6316.92 and included in this was $5500 received from the tax levy for the year 1911. The disbursements for December including the monthly payroll aggregated $428.52 leaving a cash balance on January 1st of $4336.77.

Thomas Clark submitted a report covering the water system for the past month and also an inventory of all supplies upon hand. The material on hand according to this inventory is worth $1378.10.

City Marshal Barrett's report covered the police court as well as the court and sanitary work for the month. A total of $197.50 was expended for street and sanitary work.

Water Committee's Report

James Knowles the chairman of the city council's committee upon fire and water submitted a written report covering the work at the city well. He stated that $678.45 had been expended in this work, the details of which were given in our last issue. The flow of water now amounts to about 1800 gallons daily which will net the city about $210 per month at the rate the city is now paying for water. This will the report says under ordinary conditions be almost sufficient to supply the city needs. The water according to an analysis from the state chemist is equivalent in purity to that of the Little Cottonwood which supplies Salt Lake City. There is now upon hand about 1650 feet of 4 inch pipe being sufficient to connect the well with the main supply tanks of the water system. Delay in the delivery of the pipe prevented its installation before the cold weather set in.

34 Deaths 122 Births

City Physician Laker's report showed that ten cases of smallpox had been quarantined during the month also that there had been one case of diphtheria, 4 cases of chicken pox and one case of tuberculosis and one death from the latter disease. The quarantine had been lifted from 14 cases of smallpox leaving but one under quarantine on January 1st. During the year just passed there were 34 deaths in Eureka and 122 births, 63 of which were males and 59 females.

The report of the special auditor who had been employed to audit the city books was read as was also the annual report of the city recorder and upon motion of Councilman Knowles these reports were ordered published. They appear elsewhere in this issue.

The council then approved the bonds of the new mayor and members of the city council and took a recess until noon at which time the transfer of the city administration was made.

Mayor Morley's Address

When the time arrived for turning the affairs over to the new officers Mayor John Morley made a brief but appropriate address in which he paid the mayor and other new officers a very pretty compliment declaring them to be honest competent men with whom the city's affairs can safely be entrusted. Mr. Morley called attention to the splendid condition of the city's finances and stated that the money now due from sidewalk and sewer taxes will materially increase the surplus in the city treasury giving the new administration a nice working capital. He thanked the retiring officers for the work which they have performed during the past two years and stated that the administration had been marked with harmony and the very best of feeling. In closing he introduced the new mayor A. L. Mitchell and extended to the new officers his best wishes for a successful administration as well as success and happiness in their individual affairs.

Response by Mayor Mitchell

Mayor Mitchell in taking the chair made a fitting response stating that for four years previous he had been one of the actors in a similar scene and that at that time as at present he felt the responsibility of the office to which he had been elected. Four years ago as far as he was able to determine he was the only Socialist elected to the office of mayor in the United States but at the last election over twenty cities placed Socialists at the head of their affairs. Mr. Mitchell made this statement simply to show the wonderful progress which the members of his party are making. He called attention to the strife and turmoil in the ranks of the two older

May Day Earns Big Sum In Oct.

The May Day is rapidly coming to the front as a zinc producer and according to Supt. C. C. Griggs this property closed the month of October with an output of eighteen carloads to its credit. But for the heavy snow storm of the present week which put the wagon roads in bad condition the management could easily have increased this output to twenty carloads. When it is understood that the poorest carload of ore sent out last month netted the May Day company a little better than $300 with the best car bringing $1100 it can readily be seen that the present tonnage is having a very fattening effect on the mine treasury. The eighteen cars sent out last month must have brought in the neighborhood of $18,000 and after deducting the sum of $3,500 for the mine's operating expenses there will still be a very respectable piece of money. A few such months will undoubtedly mean the distribution of some dividend money among the May Day shareholders.

Mr. Griggs is authority for the statement that the May Day mine never looked better than at the present time. Large quantities of zinc being exposed on several levels.

Shipment of Zinc From Lease

J. H. McChrystal, H. F. Gear and Morris Kelly who are operating the New Bullion property in North Tintic placed their first carload of zinc ore on the market during the present week. While no returns have yet been received from this ore it is expected to carry about 35 percent zinc. Another carload of this same character of ore will be sent out in the near future.

A report from the property this week indicates that a bunch of nice ore has also been encountered some little distance above the main tunnel. The deposit at this time is not large but the fact that it is making off into new territory makes the strike an important one. The ore carried enough lead and silver to make it worth about $35 per ton.

Old Certificates Called In.

The secretary of the Uncle Sam Mining company has sent a notice to the shareholders asking them to send in their old certificates in exchange for which new ones will be issued. This has been made necessary by the transfer of the Richmond & Anaconda holdings to the Uncle Sam company.

Centennial Eureka Pumps Removed.

The electrical pumping equipment was hoisted from the 2200 level of the Centennial Eureka mine last Sunday and since that time the water has been allowed to fill up that portion of the mine. Before the pumps were taken out everything was placed in shape so that the water would do little or no damage. It is understood here that the Centennial Eureka people have not given up the hope of sinking the mine's productive below the water level and that as soon as the new equipment which is to increase the capacity of the pumps arrives the 2200 level will again be unwatered and work resumed at that depth. The cost of unwatering the mine will not be heavy a few days continuous hoisting of water being sufficient. It is understood here that the labor trouble which a few weeks ago seemed to threaten all parts of the state but which at this time does not present such a serious aspect was responsible for the pulling of the pumps at the Centennial Eureka. The mine officials refuse to verify such a report however and simply state that the removal of the pumps will clip off about $4,000 per month from the cost of operating this property.

Crown Point Again Drifting.

Over at the Crown Point property a drift is being sent out toward the south east at a depth of about 600 feet. This is nearly 100 feet below the point where a considerable amount of iron ore was discovered some time ago. It is the intention of the management to thoroughly prospect the ground at the 600 level before sinking the shaft to greater depth.

Manager Jacobson McChrystal of the Gemini mine was in town last Saturday and Sunday. He found the property in exceptionally fine condition and was well pleased with the manner in which operations are being handled by lessees who are responsible for most of the mine's shipments.

Another Cave In The Iron Blossom

The winze which for the past few weeks has been following a stringer of nice copper ore in the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom mine broke into a fair sized cave a few days ago after it had reached a point about 50 feet below the 600 level. Supt. Chas. L. Zabruskie says that the cave is smaller than others that have been found in this mine during the past few years and that it contains a very nice show of copper ore which leads him to believe that it will be profitable to sink the winze. The cave is but a few feet in width but it extends north and south for a distance of over 100 feet.

In the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom the stopes above the 600 level are still producing some splendid ore and the deposit is of such large proportions that the present shipments are not reducing the available supply of ore to any noticeable extent.

Railroad Cannot Handle The Ore.

Several of the Tintic mines have for some time been having all kinds of trouble in securing cars for the shipment of their regular output of ore and this week when the two engines used in the Mammoth high line were taken out of commission it was necessary for the Gold Chain mine to close down. The closing down of this mine also resulted in the closing of the Ophir mine which is operating through the Gold Chain shaft. The report that the four mines were closed, going to the majority of the smelters to handle the ore, is erroneous. W. D. Loose who is the assistant manager of the Gold Chain states that the ore at the mine contained in the neighborhood of 12 carloads of ore at the time he ordered a snout down last Tuesday. The engines were laid up for repairs at Tintic Junction and there was no belief in the report. Even after the engines were again in order again Mr. Loose felt that it will be advisable to get the snout up and cleaned up before the ore is sent for a resumption of under ground work. There is nothing to be gained at the present time by an snout.

The Mammoth mine the ore from which is also sent out over the high line was also closed early in the week after the ore bins had been filled to overflowing. The Mammoth has been shipping heavily and when the railroad fell down on handling the ore there was nothing for the management to do but lay off the force.

A report from Mammoth today indicates that the troubles by no means over as the locomotives are still out of commission.

Dragon Has Fine Body of Copper

In that section of the Dragon Consolidated property which is being worked through the Black Jack mine some very nice copper ore is now being mined. This work has been under way for some little time and after the ore was located from the Black Jack's 300 level raising was started and at present there is a very good showing of ore not only in the raise but in the main drift which is being driven in a northerly direction. The raise has penetrated the ore body for not less than thirty feet and a face sample shows a little better than 10 percent copper. This ore can be handled to good advantage through the Black Jack and regular shipments will no doubt be in order in the future.

Chief Doing Development Work

Notwithstanding the fact that the management is keeping the entire force on development work the output from the Chief Consolidated mine for the past week amounted to 9 carloads. It being necessary to remove this amount of ore in the process of developing the mine. Just as soon as the International Smelting company is able to handle the usual amount of ore the Chief will increase its force and commence moving a heavier tonnage. It is generally understood that some new ore deposits have been encountered during the past few weeks in this mine and that the discontinuance of heavy shipments has been a benefit to the mine in one way because it has enabled the prospecting of some very important territory from which splendid returns are expected.

Upon his return from the east Manager Walter H. Hinch will undoubtedly have something to give out regarding the initial dividend of this mine which may possibly be declared during the present month.

Eagle Making Fine Record

The Eagle seems destined to take its place among the biggest producers of the Tintic District. The output from this property for the month of October amounted to about fifty carloads with a net value of approximately $40,000. The new connection with the main working shaft and the new ore house which is now in use makes it possible to handle the entire output to the best advantage. According to Supt. Owens the mine is in its usual good condition and the present tonnage is being mined from the 600, 1000, 1200 and 1300 levels.

Greenwood Booster Hands

Tintic People A Fine Bunch

The Iron County, Herod of Cedar City, the Juab County Times of Helper and certain other newspapers in the Fifth Judicial District have just published a lengthy article boosting the candidacy of Joshua Greenwood, present Judge who is willing a bid anxious to succeed himself on the bench, having been renominated on the Democratic ticket. The article was no doubt written by Greenwood and published in these papers at his request (for a consideration) and if it is not from his pen it is undoubtedly his endorsement. Were it not for the fact that it contains a number of barefaced lies and slanderous statements regarding the Tintic District, no one here would have given it more than a passing notice. One of the paragraphs referring to the Tintic District is reprinted below.

It is reported that he (Judge Greenwood) will meet with considerable opposition in one of the mining camps of the district due to the fact that a considerable portion of the population is composed of a criminal element, and the discharge of his duties Judge Greenwood has been obliged to sentence a number of murderers and outlaws to long terms in the state prison following their conviction by a jury of disinterested men and in their characteristic contempt for law the friends of those who have met justice are seeking to defeat him.

Voters of the Tintic District should read the above paragraph carefully then clip it out and keep it until next Tuesday and if perchance when they go to vote they should discover the name of Joshua Greenwood on their ticket they should be absolutely sure that their vote will not help him in his effort to hang on to the office which he now holds. The Reporter has been a fair non-partisan as possible in the present campaign and all political parties have been given equal consideration in our columns but an insult such as Judge Greenwood has just passed out must not be allowed to go unchallenged. If in this district where as the above article says a considerable portion of the population is composed of a criminal element Greenwood is given any votes at all it will be because so none of the people are immune from insanity and it is to their interests. Will some brother or sister who is in the registration go forward and tell us when Judge Greenwood is elected it is necessary to sentence a number of murderers and outlaws. As a prosecuting attorney he made a hopeless failure whenever he attempted to prosecute any case of importance and the fact that he has been reversed in no territory where an appeal has been taken from his court shows that his decisions have not been tenored with common sense or justice. One of his many blunders was his effort to turn a murderer into a technician while he immediately followed this up by giving an unfortunate depositor a three year sentence for stealing $18. Another unfortunate got practically the same kind of a sentence for stealing a pair of quarters.

Mining Notes.

C. J. Hannan and Billy McPherson returned late last week after spending several weeks in the Deep Creek mining district where the former is interested in mining claims. The trip was made for the purpose of doing the regular annual assessment work on this ground.

Manager E. J. Raddatz of the Tintic Standard property was out from the capital on Saturday and Sunday for the purpose of inspecting the development work which is now under way at a depth of 1000 feet on this ground. This company has made application for a government patent on some of its claims the notice being published for the first time in this issue of the Reporter.

The story in the Herald Republican of last Saturday to the effect that agents for Tintic and Park City mines were in Bingham for the purpose of picking up some of the idle miners for work in these districts contained about as much truth as some of the other dope that is dished out each day to the readers of that unreliable sheet. Tintic does not need any of the Bingham miners. There are plenty of men here to fill all the jobs that are open at the mines with some to spare.

Assistant Manager Frank Birch of the Knight properties states that the construction of the new mill which is to be erected in the south end of the district will undoubtedly be taken up within the next few weeks. The orders have already been placed for the machinery which will soon be delivered. The new site which has been selected for the plant is a most desirable one and only a small amount of excavating will be needed to put it in readiness for the building and machinery.

Don't overlook the Republican rally this evening. Speakers Set at Botherland and J. A. Melville candidate for judge. Good music.

PLAYING THE GAME

By ENOCH KYLE.

The man was going to get married. He had sown his wild oats, and now he meant to settle down. Well off good looking a first rate sportsman a favorite with men and women alike the Fates spinning busily had smiled upon him at birth and had woven only gold threads in the web of his life.

It was because he felt it incumbent upon him to play the game that he decided to tell the woman he was going to marry of a certain newly closed episode in his life. The consideration that perhaps it would be as well for her to hear the tale from him first hand instead of embroidered with lies on a foundation of truth as she might hear it from some one else, may have counted for something too.

But the reason he gave himself as he knotted his tie carefully before the mirror on the fateful morning of confession was that he must play the game.

I hardly know how to tell you dear he began awkwardly standing tall and perfectly groomed on the hearthrug that afternoon. It is so difficult to speak to women—pure women like you—about certain things but the fact of the matter is I've been an awful rotter Evelyn and I feel it's up to me to own it. You're not marring a saint you know.

The fair haired woman in the big armchair looked up at him sweetly out of innocent blue eyes. Dear, I do know, she said gently.

He moved uncomfortably. But it's just what you don't know he told her. I'm worrying about I'm not thinking of cards and racing and things like that. It's about women I want to speak to you. Especially one woman. He paused and bit his lip nervously.

Ah! said the woman softly looking down.

She was a nice little thing went on the man. Not quite a lady you know but very pretty and all that.

Her father drank. She ran away from home. Hadn't a friend in the world when I picked her up. Only the streets in front of her. A good woman like you Evelyn can't realize what the horror of that means.

I took a flat for her.

Ah! said the woman softly.

I lived with her more or less for three years went on the man gathering courage from her passiveness. She was very grateful for all I had done for her. She was really quite a nice little thing. But of course that's all over and done with now. I settled up finally with her today. I shall never see her again. There was no reason for you ever to know, Evelyn.

Only that I felt it wouldn't be quite playing the game not to tell you. What has become of the girl? asked the woman still softly and still looking away.

The man shrugged his shoulders. Still in the flat I presume he said carelessly. The rent is paid till December. His voice became persuasive. He bent down so that his face was very near the coils of hair wound smoothly round her head. Don't let's talk about her any more he urged.

It's all finished and done with. Now don't frown but just kiss and say you forgive me.

You're a very naughty boy Jack said the woman reprovingly but she let him wind her smooth white arms round his neck as he knelt beside her on the floor. Then if you promise never never to do it again I'll forgive you she said prettily.

He caught her flushed and smiling to him fiercely. My saint! he breathed upon her mouth.

In a daintily furnished room of a little flat in Queen's Club Gardens a woman lay dead upon the bed with an empty phial in her hand. There were traces of tears upon her white cold cheeks. Her closed eyelids were swollen. Her lover had failed her. There was nothing between her but the treetops.

So she too had played the game. God will decide who played it best.

Handy Life Insurance Policy. A curious festival takes place annually in the village of Isobe in the southern province of Japan. The festival is called the Omits and attracts large crowds from neighboring districts. The young men stripping off their clothing take their positions in a rice field where they struggle violently with one another for possession of a decorated bamboo pole. The man who succeeds in pulling the pole down promptly cuts it into pieces which he distributes among his less fortunate competitors retaining a portion for himself. It is believed that if any one meets with a storm out at sea he can easily save himself from a watery grave by simply throwing a portion of this pole into the sea. With a handy life insurance policy of this kind to be obtained at the price of a little effort it can be understood that the struggle for the pole is a distinctly strenuous one—Wide World.

Some on the Doctor, Too. A doctor who had a custom of cultivating the lawn and walk in front of his home every spring engaged O'Brien to do the job. He went away for three days and when he returned found O'Brien waiting for his money. The doctor was not satisfied with his work and said:

O'Brien the whole walk is covered with gravel and dirt and in my estimation it's a bad job.

O'Brien looked at him in surprise for a moment and replied:

Shure doc there's many a bad job of yours covered with gravel and dirt.

Political Dope.

The first Republican Rally of the present campaign in Eureka was held at the pavilion on Friday evening of last week the speakers being James Devine of this city and Glen Miller of Salt Lake. James D. Stack acted as chairman of the meeting and musical numbers were rendered by the Juvenile band under the leadership of Vern Firth. The attendance was not large but liberal applause punctuated every telling point in the speeches.

Registration was quite heavy in the four precincts of Eureka on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week and the leaders of the various political parties anticipate a large vote next Tuesday. The heavy snow storm of Wednesday undoubtedly interfered with the registration of new voters but some carriages were in use notwithstanding the inclement weather.

Joseph H. McKnight, Republican candidate for the office of county attorney was in the eastern end of Juab county and also in some of the other counties of the Fifth Judicial District during the past week. His trip to the southern part of the state was made for the purpose of boosting the candidacy of L. H. Ryan, who is up for re-election to the office of district attorney. Mr. McKnight has addressed a number of political meetings since leaving Eureka.

Edward Pike, Democratic candidate for county attorney was one of the speakers at a rally which was held at Levan last Saturday evening.

Joseph Wirthlin was out from Salt Lake this week explaining the political situation and telling his friends how the Bull Moosers are going to carry Salt Lake county next Tuesday.

The total vote in Juab county two years ago was a little less than 3050. In Eureka 1152 votes were polled. The average vote for the Socialist candidates was 407.

Who Will Win Next Tuesday?

From present indications a mixed ticket will be elected in Juab county. The leaders of three of the parties, the Republicans, Democrats and Socialists are confident of winning but all of them admit that it is going to be a pretty close fight. Two years ago the county was carried by the Republicans and Herbert Hopes who is directing the county campaign for this party says that there is absolutely no reason why the Republicans should not win out again this year. He says that while there may have been some dissatisfaction in the ranks early in the game this has now given way to the best of feeling and every member of the party will be in line next Tuesday and the county being normally Republican this can mean but one thing.

W. C. Andrews, the county chairman for the Democratic party telephoned the Reporter this morning from Nephi and states that everything is favorable for the election of a majority if not all of the candidates for county offices. Mr. Andrews claims that the Democrats will have a big vote on the east side of the county and with anything like an even break in Tintic they can win.

Socialist leaders are doing but little talking but those who are directing the work state that their organization was never more complete. While their biggest vote will come from the mining camps of Tintic they have been doing some hard work in Nephi and Levan and claim that the vote which will be given their candidates on the east side of the county will be a big surprise to the two older parties.

Says That Tift Will Win

John R. Edgehill, Republican candidate for state senator for the district which comprises Juab and Millard counties arrived in town today and will remain for the night. He is expected to be in the city on Tuesday. Mr. Edgehill recently returned after a business trip in the east and states that the last sentiment is for win, and he looks for the president to be elected.

Where To Vote On Tuesday

The voting places in the four precincts of Eureka for the election next Tuesday will be as follows:

- No. 1—County Court House
- No. 2—City Hall Main street
- No. 3—Residence of Mrs. Ferguson Leadville Ro v
- No. 4—L. D. Church Main street

Gustaldi "Not Guilty" Says Jary

The presentation of testimony for the defense in the case of the state vs. H. Gustaldi charged with murder in the first degree occupied the attention of Judge Greenwood during the early part of the present week. The case was brought to the jury on Wednesday evening. After remaining in court all day the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty this afternoon.

Inter Class Basket Ball League

Monday—Seniors 25, Sophomores 17
Tuesday—Juniors 48, Freshmen 30
Wednesday—Sophomores 40, Freshmen 12

Thursday—Seniors 17, Juniors 20
All of the above teams are working hard in an effort to win the class series. The teams which are equally divided a little more practice will put the players in condition for the good games. The object of the series of games now being played is to arouse patriotic as well as give our manager and physical director a chance to watch the players perform. Thus making it possible to select the best material for the team. This will be no easy task as all of the teams have some fast players. For that reason it is almost certain that each team will be represented on the final High School Basket Ball team which is going to be played at the end of the first season in the state during the coming season.

"HALLOWE'EN" By Walt Mason

Tonight the boys will take the town and doubtless turn it upside down. They'll sport around with joyous zest and knock the landscape galley west and when the morning comes I'll see my bug in an apple tree, the air will be led up in the lawn, the boys with all their feathers gone. I'll hear my boys in the morning yell down at the bottom of the well while Dobb stands upon the roof and yells for help a frantic hoof. Last year the boys brought a milk I slept and in the morning I screamed and I wept when I awoke at the work they'd done. I said "Next year I'll get a gun and watch for these rich evildoers and shoot the darlings full of holes." But granny heard me and she said "While water is cheap go soak your head, you orce were young you self by George! and people voted you a seonige you played so many feishish tricks you filled so many lats with bricks that terror came to every one when you went forth to ha e some fun. The village pastor used to say "When that young rascal comes my way I always beat a swift retreat—I'd rather have the prickly heat! And so I haven't bought a gun and so the boys may have their fun and if the morning should disclose the cr mney filled with garden hose the watchdog painted green and brown the henhouse standing up side down I'll make no melancholy noise but say Boys (durn em!) will be boys!

Ballot Published This Week

The publication of the official ballot for the coming election together with other advertising which is in addition to the regularly earned by this paper has necessitated two extra pages for this issue making ten in all. The county commissioners at their last meeting ordered the ballot published in the reporter in order that the voters of Juab county might have an opportunity of becoming familiar with it previous to election day. I took it over and decided how you are going to vote.

FOR FLETCHER'S

J. R. Edgehill, Republican Candidate for State Senator

The Republican of Juab and Millard counties are to be congratulated on the choice which they made for State Senator in the person of J. R. Edgehill of Nephi.

Mr. Edgehill was born and raised in Nephi one of the most enterprising citizens in the state south of Salt Lake and by reason of his successful business activities is widely well and favorably known throughout the district.

Early in life he engaged in the live stock business with marked success. As a stockman he is recognized throughout the West as a man of tireless energy and unerring judgment.

For the past several years he has represented Halowell Jones & Donald wool merchants of Boston as their western agent in the purchase of wool. His work in this line covers a vast territory which embraces several states. His success in wool buying is due to fair and square dealing. This is a large measure accounts for the fact that he has advanced to the front rank of western wool buyers.

Mr. Edgehill has been an active worker in the Republican party since its organization in the state and has had considerable experience in legislative matters having been an officer of the senate for two terms so that when he takes his seat in that body he will go well equipped to discharge the duties of senator.

We question if there is a man in the state better qualified to effectively and in the making of needed laws. He is familiar as few men are with the varied resources of the state. He knows just the kind of legislation most needed to further Utah's interests. To repeal laws that have been proven to be impractical, vicious and inimical to the best interests of the people and to place in their stead wholesome laws will be his endeavor and to this end will bring to bear his vigorous energy, learning and experience.

The election of Mr. Edgehill will give the people of Juab and Millard counties the proud satisfaction of knowing that they have sent to the senate one of its most able and valuable members.—Adv.

Republican Rally Tonight.

Senator George D. H. Ireland arrived in Tintic today and will be one of the speakers at a Republican rally which is to be held this evening at the Elks hall. Senator Sutherland is a great favorite with the Tintic people. His home for a number of years having been in this district and he is never failed to draw out an immense audience when called upon to speak during a political campaign.

J. A. Melville candidate for judge will also be a speaker at tonight's rally.

Mrs. Miller Found to Be Insane

Mrs. Ruben Miller of Eureka was examined as to her sanity by Judge Greenwald last Saturday and ordered committed to the state mental hospital at Provo. She is the mother of several children who will be cared for by the county for the present and an appeal is being made for some orphanage.

Hunters Get Two Fine Deer

Why Not Make It Unanimous For WILSON?

Mr. Voter at this writing is sending dispatches from all parts of the United States indicating a overwhelming victory, next Tuesday for Woodrow Wilson the Democrat, and date for the defeat of the United States. The people will speak through their ballots as they have not spoken before and the result will be to inaugurate Wilson and his policy of reform. All through the campaign the sentiment has been growing that the Democratic party is the party of the people—the whole people—as it has never been before. The magnificent fight of William J. Bryan in the Baltimore convention for the right of the people to rule marked a new epoch in American politics. He purified the Democratic party of the grafters even as Christ purified the temple of the money changers and made the nomination and election of Woodrow Wilson possible.

And Woodrow Wilson will be elected because he is of the people, believes in the people and will use his office for the benefit of the people.

His record shows it. While Governor of New Jersey he has used his good offices to have enacted into law measures of great benefit to labor and sixteen of which were of vital importance to wage earners among them the following:

An eight hour day on State, county and municipal work.

Providing for at least one half hour meal time to six continuous hours of labor.

Providing for sanitation of bake shops, etc. and compelling the licensing of the same.

Providing a semi-monthly pay-day for railroad employees.

Abolishing contract labor in penal institutions.

Regulating employment agencies and licensing the same.

Employers' liability and compensation act.

Prohibiting the employment of children in mercantile establishments during school hours providing for a half hour week and prohibiting children under 16 years of age to work between the hours of 7 p. m. and 7 a. m.

Making a misdemeanor the improper influence of labor representatives or foremen.

Fire escape law amending factory laws and placing New Jersey in the vanguard of States in the protection of workmen in factories and workshops.

In recognition of which the Executive Board of the New Jersey State Board of Labor representing the organized workers of New Jersey in regular session assembled the 13th day of February 1911 passed a resolution commending Governor Wilson for his untiring and untiring efforts in assisting to bring about better conditions for the wage earners of New Jersey.

Governor Wilson has also expressed himself in these matters in a speech made at St. Paul, September 12, 1912 as follows:

What I am interested in is having the Government of the United States more concerned about human rights than about property rights. Property is an instrument of humanity, humanity is not an instrument of property. And yet when you see men riding the great industries as if they were driving a car of juggernaut not looking to see what multitudes prostrate themselves before the car and loose their lives in the crushing effect of their industry you wonder how long men are going to be permitted to think more of their machinery than they think of their men. I say the more that property, as compared with humanity, as compared with the vital blood of the American people must take second place not first and that we must see to it that there is no overcropping.

On the tariff question he is quite emphatic. He has aptly characterized monopoly as slavery—slavery for the consumer. For instance in Chicago you can buy a sack of Utah sugar for about $5 in Tintic just a few miles from where the sugar is manufactured every house wife knows she must pay $7 for the same sack of sugar. Does the sugar beet farmer get the difference? Not much. He gets just 5 cents more a ton for his beets now than he did when sugar was selling to the consumer in Utah for $4.75 per sack. That's a trust and monopoly.

In Utah salt should be one of the cheapest commodities furnished the household. Millions of tons are lying on the shores of the great Salt Lake. It is cheaper than elsewhere than Utah salt in Chicago. Not at all. That's more true than monopoly. And so without end American manufactured goods sold cheaper in foreign countries than at home. All because of philanthropic desire of the special interests to give to the American laborer the benefit of the difference in the cost of production here and abroad plus a reasonable profit for the manufacturer. In the matter of the cost of living an advance has been made in the last few years of sixty per cent according to Bradstreet's. The increase in wages has been—well you have to get a prosperity spell book to calculate it.

It is calculated to never by good authority that every family in the United States average an annual payment of $15 tariff tax, and of this $15 goes to the government and $9 to the trusts. Put that in your pipe with your trust tobacco and smoke it. You will also find that the trust prosecutions so far have not sent a wholly to jail or made the business of these combinations less profitable and the people are still bearing the burden.

What will Governor Wilson do when he is elected President? He will enforce the law and the black magic of the campaign fund will no longer be sold and protection to the unlawful combination and high tariff robbers who have been exacting the last drop of flesh from the unwary consumer under the pretense that they were saving the difference to American labor.

In the tough accord with the Democratic ticket the Democrats of this state have placed a splendid ticket before the people of Utah. J. T. Tolton for Governor has been minor, fairer and merchant successful in all his business affairs and thoroughly conversant with state business. He may not feel at home in good place and his buttons nor will he care to ride in a special car but his hand and his heart and his everyday greeting will be with the common people if he is elected and his administration will be for all. And in Juab County the Democrats have their pick of the best men in their party to fill the difficult offices. Enoch Burton of Nephi for Representative to the Legislature is a contractor who has built many of the school houses of the state. He labors with his head and his hands, and will labor for the good of Juab County in the next Legislature with the same earnestness and capability he has displayed in his own business enterprises. Dr. Steele Bailey or Mammoth will be an able co-worker with Burton in the Senate of the next Legislature.

For the office of County Superintendent of Schools the Democratic party has been particularly fortunate in placing on its ticket the name of Prof. Roy F. Homer, the well known principal of the Nephi high school. There should be no question of his election for he is easily the most efficient and best equipped man mentioned for that position and the one interested in educational matters should see that Professor Homer is elected with united regards to partisanship.

For Sheriff George M. Hayes of Breese. For County Attorney Edward Pike of Eureka. For County Commissioner W. E. Evans of Knightville.

From the Nephi side of the county men have been nominated because of their special fitness for the offices of Clerk, Assessor, Treasurer and Commissioner and then nominations have given the assurance that everything in Nephi will be Democratic this year.

Why not?

The Republican party cannot win this year.

The Progressive party cannot win this year.

Why not place Utah in the great column of Democratic States on November 5th?

Why Not Make It Unanimous For WILSON?

that this matter has been misrepresented with a view to injuring me in the election.

I also understand that some person writing concerning my record on the bench has referred to the opposition to my candidacy in certain mining camps in a manner reflecting on the people thereof and should anyone take exceptions to this statement I wish to say that I had absolutely nothing to do with the writing of any piece in any paper and more especially against the people in any local city nor have I said anything against the people of Eureka or the Tintic District as I have never felt but what the people of Tintic are respectable law abiding citizens that go to make up the highest type of American citizenship.

Respectfully Yours

No Cases During October.

Business was not very brisk in the local police court during the month of October according to the report from Justice Dewar who will be presented at the meeting of the council tonight. There was not a single case on the docket during the entire month. A wave of reform seems to have swept over the camp.

Election Dance For Tuesday

An election dance will be given at the Elks pavilion in this city next Tuesday evening. Spectator music and a jolly time for all who attend. Election returns will be received during the evening.

Eagle Gets Ore On 2300 Level.

An accident on the railroad spur which connects the Eagle & Blue Bell mine with the main Tintic line of the Pio Grande Ry. prevented the shipment of the regular tonnage from this property. Notwithstanding this trouble which tied things up for a couple of three days the Eagle got out a very nice lot of ore for the week which has just closed.

Recently Superintendent William Owens has succeeded in opening the main ore channel at a depth of 1350 feet and a report from the mine today indicates that there is a full face of fine ore on that level—the deepest in the property. In the Eagle there are two deposits of ore located better than 100 feet apart. One carries a high grade lead product while the other ore comes in the quartz. The values being in gold and silver. Both of these deposits have been located on the 1350 level and what pleases the manager is the fact that the ore appears to be good for much greater depth.

The Eagle & Blue Bell has paid its way ever since work was taken up under the present management several years ago. At the time work was resumed some of the company's officials were somewhat dubious about the outcome but the management and Supt. Owens had absolute faith in the mine and managed after considerable difficulty to secure permission to proceed with the work if they could make the property pay its way. The mine made good and will soon be among the dividend payers of the district.

Beck May Ship Zinc Ore

Tintic is surely a wonderful district and it seems that in no other section of the west is there such a variety of metals. This accounts for the stability of the mines which keeps things moving along in the same splendid manner year in and year out while almost every other mining district is having its ups and downs. As the demand for zinc increased and the price of this metal advanced Tintic mine owners commenced looking around for this metal which has been found to exist in large quantities in many of the mines. Years ago the presence of zinc deposits in a mine was detrimental rather than beneficial but today nothing could be more desirable than this metal which runs into real money at a very lively clip. The Bullion Beck mine, one of the oldest producers in the district promises soon to be in line with zinc shipment.

Supt. L. C. Doty is now driving a drift on the 1300 level for the purpose of reaching a body of zinc which was first encountered years ago and which is now inaccessible owing to the fact that a cave in makes it impossible to get into that part of the mine.

United Tintic Working Again

Work has again been resumed on the property of the United Tintic Co. in the south end of the district. Work being under way on the drift on the 2100 foot level. At the point where the work is now going on there is a fair showing of ore and the management is of the opinion that the United Tintic will be able to ship an occasional car which will help out materially on the expense account.

Mines At Mammoth Resume Work

The Gold Chain and Ophongon mines which last week were forced to close down because the railroad company could not take care of the ore started up again early in the present week and are now mining the usual tonnage. The Mammoth mine was also able to resume operations. The ore from these three mines is sent out over the Mammoth high line and last week both the engines used on this road went out of commission and after the ore bins had been filled to overflowing there was nothing to do but cease work. The railroad companies are having some trouble in supplying cars for the shipment of ore from the Tintic mines but from present indications conditions will soon be normal.

Grand Central In Ore On The 2300

The opening of a splendid body of ore on the 2300 level promises to make a new mine out of the famous old Grand Central mine at Mammoth. The vein which is now being developed at that depth is an exceptionally large one and some of the ore which is now being saved for shipment shows 20 per cent copper, $1.50 in gold and from 3 to 4 ounces in silver. Assistant Manager W. D. Loose states that it is just a little early to say much about the ore body at that depth but intimates that it is almost sure to be one of the most important finds that has been made in the Grand Central mine in recent years. The ore seems to be strongest in the bottom of the drift by which it is now being developed and for that

Chief Cons. Has A Record Winze

The Chief Cons. is still awaiting a time when the International Smelting company will be able to take care of the mine's regular tonnage of ore. The ore which is now being sent out from this mine is simply the production which the management is obliged to forward in carrying out the plan for the development of the property. Recently a connection was made by way of the 1200 level with the winze which was sunk from the 1000 and just now preparations are being made for the stopping of the ore which was developed by this winze. In one respect this winze has established a new record in Tintic mining operations. For a distance of 193 feet it was in one the last 13 feet being in lime. In some of the older mines where large ore deposits are by no means uncommon there are also places where a winze might possibly have been sunk in ore for that distance but we know of no place where a winze was actually sunk vertically in ore for a distance of nearly 200 feet as in the Chief Cons. mine. Of course the extent of this ore body remains to be determined but it is only natural that the management should anticipate something big.

When conditions at the smelter are such that the Chief Cons. can commence shipping whatever quantity of ore the mine is able to produce there is a prospect of it beating the splendid record of some weeks ago.

reason a winze may possibly be sunk from the 2300 level. This is how ever a matter for later consideration.

At The Swansea Property

Satisfactory reports are being sent out from the Swansea property in the Silver City end of the district. The mine closed the month of October with a total of about 2000 tons of ore to its credit and according to the superintendent John Hoffman the present daily output is about seventy five tons. Mr. Hoffman has just commenced work in the south drift from the old winze which was sunk years ago. This drift will undoubtedly get into the ore within the next ten or fifteen feet and in the opinion of Mr. Hoffman the deposit should not only be an extensive one but better values should be found than where the same ore is being mined on the level above. Most of the ore which is now being sent out from the Swansea is being taken from the 800, 900 and intermediate levels and from that portion of the mine which is near the winze.

Gold Chain Makes Strike

According to Assistant Manager W. D. Loose a nice strike has just been made on the 500 level of the Gold Chain. For some months a drift has been following the main ore fissure at that depth and the point at which the ore was picked up is about 1000 feet from the shaft. Mr. Loose states that he got into the ore sooner than he expected and for that reason there is a possibility of it having no connection with that which is being mined from the other levels of the property. The ore however is of practically the same grade, the values being chiefly in copper with some gold and silver. In width the deposit is from six to eight feet and already the drift has cut through the ore for a distance of about twenty five or thirty feet.

Swansea Extension Drifting South

The Swansea Extension property on a drift is now being sent out to the south on the 400 level the work on the east drift having been discontinued for the present. The south drift is following a north and south fissure and about 125 feet of drifting will be sufficient to intersect a cross break which is expected to contain good ore indications.

May Day Making Splendid Record.

The May Day mine still maintains its heavy output of zinc ore notwithstanding the fact that the wagon road between the mine and the railroad is in fearful condition as a result of the recent storms. The earnings of the May Day for the month of September were approximately $10,000 and this sum was sufficient to wipe out the company's indebtedness leaving the balance on the right side of the ledger on the first of October. For last month the mine record was even better than for the previous month and it is no doubt safe to say that the earnings exceeded $15,000. This means that the May Day shareholders will be able to drag out a little dividend money early in the new year.

The Iron Blossom's New Plant

A report from the Iron Blossom mine today indicates that the new machinery will be ready to go into commission before the end of the present month. The master mechanic is now putting the finish touches on the new plant and thinks that he can have everything in running order within three weeks. The steel for the girders frame has been ordered from the Minneapolis Steel Co. and this firm will send expert steel workers to Tintic to attend to the installation. It is said that they will erect the steel frame over the old wooden frame and switch from one to the other without the loss of more than a couple of days work at the mine. According to Assistant Manager Buck the new hoisting plant will probably be used for a week or two while awaiting for the completion of the new steel gallois frame.

Lessees Make Shipment

C. G. Asson and N. E. Dahle who are operating the Sunbeam property in the south end of the district under a lease agreement sent out their first shipment of ore early in the present week. The ore was taken from the dump and the lessees expect to be in line with another car of the same character of ore next week. The first shipment contained in the neighborhood of forty tons. Preparations have been made for underground work but while the weather remains favorable the lessees will operate on the dump.

At The Beck Tunnel

Supt. Perry Fuller states that in the Beck Tunnel he is still following the Humboldt chute toward the south and that while nothing big has been opened there is still a very nice showing of ore. As the work progresses toward the south and into new territory there is always a possibility of finding an important ore deposit. Everything considered the Beck Tunnel is looking very good and being exposed in three separate places in the mine.

From Silver City comes the report that actual construction work will soon be under way on the new mill which the Knight people intend to have in running order within a very few months. The recent change in the weather will be beneficial to those who have taken the contract for the excavating and installation of the cement foundations.

Mining Notes.

The annual meeting of the Colorado company will be held on the 16th of the present month.

The South Iron Blossom mining company has just levied another assessment of one eighth of one cent per share. This money will be used in the further development of the property.

In an interview with the Tribune's mining editor a few days ago Jesse Knight confirmed the report that a dividend would be paid by the Colorado company before the close of the year possibly for Christmas. The last dividend from this mine was paid in June.

Frank Pozelle was in town on Wednesday from the Wanless property in the North Tintic district and states that the shaft has now reached a depth of 175 feet. Mr. Pozelle is now making arrangements to drive a drift out to the quartzite a distance of about sixty feet from the shaft and feels quite sure that something of importance can be expected at that point. At the Wanless property everything appears to be dipping into the quartzite.

Edward Keith, who is an ore buyer for the Empire Zinc Co. of Kansas City was in Tintic during the week. His trip here was for the purpose of visiting the local zinc producers with a view to contracting for some of the zinc ore which is now being mined in the Tintic district. Something like twenty years ago Mr. Keith was a resident of Eureka, being an engineer in the employ of the Eureka Hill Mining company, and during his short stay here he found time to look up some of his old time friends among them J. H. McChrystal and L. C. Doty.

Meeting of City Council.

Considerable routine business was transacted at the meeting of the city council held last Friday evening all of the councilmen and the mayor attending the roll call.

A letter was received from H. M. To remove an official of the telephone company asking that the city give the telephone company written consent permitting the use of the poles of the Electric Co. in this city. The telephone wires are already on these poles but it appears they were placed there without a written agreement. In order to remove the old telephone poles from Main street and Church street it will be necessary to continue the use of the poles of the Electric Co. It is claimed that by placing all wires in cables it can be done with perfect safety. This matter was referred to the city attorney and city recorder for proper investigation.

Bills against the city amounting in all to $1,386.46 were read and after receiving the endorsement of the auditing committee were ordered paid. This budget of claims included the regular monthly pay roll of city officers.

John Smith was upon motion of the proper committee given a rebate on saloon license.

The committee on streets reported in favor of accepting the proposition made to the city by the officials of the telephone company which means the removal of the old telephone poles from Main street and Church street. The council accepted the report of the committee.

The committee appointed to investigate the recent explosion at the Chief Cons. mine made a report which showed that the point at which the powder was stored and where the explosion occurred was outside the city limits. The report was accepted.

The city property committee reported that they were still at work on the proposition of heating the city hall with the heating plant now in use at the public library. The recorder was instructed to communicate with Mr. Dianenthal who installed the plant with reference to changes.

Several of the city officers presented their monthly reports among them being the Sexton, Recorder, Engineer, Physician, Marshal and Water master.

The Sexton William Houghton reported four burials for the month of October.

The Recorder William Bacon reported the collection of $2,558.65 for October and the disbursement of $2,118.41 for the same period. His receipts included $1,600 from liquor licenses.

Miss Anabel Mooney, the treasurer, submitted a report which checked in every way with that of the recorder. On October 1st the city had an overdraft of $411.41 while there was a cash balance of $139.63 on the first of the present month.

Dr. Hessel reported one case of chicken pox under quarantine.

Major Church reported the collection of $12 in poll tax and the expenditure of $174 for street work.

The next meeting of the council will be on November 10th.

Ore shipments, stock quotation and additional mining news on page 3.

John Asplund was in town the early part of the week enroute to the Union property in the Erickson district. He went there to look after the regular annual assessment work. Mr. Asplund has for the past year been living in the Bingham district.

"Entering the main room he led her gently to one of the chairs near the table and immediately thereafter lighted the fire which he had taken the precaution to lay before his departure It had been dark in the cabin but the fire soon filled it with glorious light She watched him at his task and as he rose from the hearth questioned him

"Now tell me she began you found—

"First your supper and then the story he answered turning toward the door of the other room

"No pleaded the girl can't you see that nothing is of any importance to me but the story? Did you find the camp?"

"I found the place where it had been

"Where it had been?"

"There wasn't a single vestige of it left That whole pocket I knew it well had been swept clean by the flood

"But Kirkby and Mrs Maitland—

"They weren't there

"Did you search for them?"

"Certainly

"But they can't have been drowned she exclaimed pitiously

"Of course not he began reassuringly Kirkby is a veteran of these mountains and—

"But do you know him?" queried the girl in great surprise

"I did once said the man flushing darkly at his admission I haven't seen him for five years

"So that was the measure of his isolation thought the woman keen for the slightest evidence as to her companion's history of which by the way he meant to tell her nothing

"Well?" she asked breaking the pause

"Kirkby would certainly see the cloud burst coming and he would take the people with him in the camp up on the hogback near it It is far above the flood line they would be quite safe there

"And did you look for them here?"

"I did The trail had been washed out but I scrambled up and found undisputed evidence that my surmise was correct I haven't a doubt that all who were in the camp were saved

"Thank God for that said the girl greatly relieved and comforted by his reassuring words And Robert Maitland and the rest on the mountain what do you think of them?"

"I am sure that they must have escaped too I don't think any of them have suffered more than a thorough drenching in the downpour and that they are all safe and perhaps on their way to the settlements now

"But they wouldn't go back without searching for me would they?" cried the girl

"Certainly not I suppose they are searching for you now

"Well then—

"Wait said the man You started down the canon you told every body you were going that way They naturally searched in that direction they hadn't the faintest idea that you were going up the river

"No admitted Enid that is true I did not tell anyone I didn't dream of going up the canon when I started out in the morning it was the result of a sudden impulse

"God bless that— burst out the man and then he checked himself flushing again darkly

"What had he been about to say?" The question flashed across his own mind and into the woman's mind at the same time when she heard the incomplete sentence but she too checked the question that rose to her lips

"This is the way I figure it continued the man hurriedly to cover up his confusion They fancy themselves alone in these mountains which save for me they are they believe you to have gone down the can on Kirkby with Mrs Maitland and the others waited on the ridge until Mr Maitland and his party joined them They couldn't have saved very much to eat or wear from the camp they were miles from a settlement they probably divided into two parties the larger with the woman and children started for home the second went down the canon searching for your dead body!

"And had it not been for you cried the girl impulsively they had found it

"God permitted me to be of service to you answered the man simply I can follow their speculations exactly up or down they believed you to have been in the canon when the cloud burst therefore there was only one place and one direction to search for you "And that was?"

"Down the canon?"

"What did you do then?"

"I went down the canon myself I think I saw evidence that some one had preceded me too

"Did you overtake them?"

"Certainly not they traveled as rapidly as I they must have started early in the morning and they had several hours the advantage of me

"But they must have stopped some where for the night and—

"Yes answered the man If I had only myself to consider I should have pressed on through the night and overtaken them when they camped

"Only yourself?"

"You made me promise to return here by nightfall I don't know whether I should have obeyed you or not I kept on as long as I dared and still leave myself time to get back to you by dark

"She had no idea of the desperate speed he had made to reach her while it was still daylight

"If you hadn't come when you did I should have died cried the girl impetuously You did perfectly right I don't think I am a coward I hope not I never was afraid before but—

"Don't apologize or explain to me it's not necessary I understand everything you feel It was only because I had given you my word to be back by sunset that I left off following their trail I was afraid that you might think me dead or that something had happened and—

"I should I did admitted the girl It wasn't so bad during the day time but when the sun went down and you did not come I began to imagine everything I saw myself left alone here in these mountains helpless wounded without a human being to speak to I could not bear it

"But I have been here alone for five years said the man grimly

"That's different I don't know why you have chosen solitude but I—

"You are a woman returned the other gently and you have suffered that accounts for everything

"Thank you said Enid gratefully And I am so glad you came back to me

"Back to you reiterated the man and then he stopped If he had allowed his heart to speak he would have said Back to you from the very ends of the world But I want you to believe that I honestly did not leave the trail until the ultimate moment he added

"I do believe it she extended her hand to him You have been very good to me I trust you absolutely

"And for the second time he took that graceful dainty aristocratic hand in his own larger stronger firmer grasp His face flushed again under other circumstances and in other days perhaps he might have kissed that hand As it was he only held it for a moment and then gently released it

"And you think they are searching for me?" she asked

"I know I am sure of what I myself would do for one I love—I loved I mean and they—

"And they will find me?"

"The man shook his head

"I am afraid they will be convinced that you have gone down with the flood Didn't you have a cap or—

"Yes said the woman and a sweater The bear you shot covered the sweater with blood I could not put it on again

"As she spoke she flushed a glorious crimson at the remembrance of that meeting but the man was looking away with studied care She thanked him in her heart for such generous and kindly consideration

"They will have gone down the stream with the rest and it's just possible that the searchers may find them the body of the bear too This river ends in a deep mountain lake and I think it is going to snow it will be frozen hard tomorrow

"And they will think me—there?"

"I am afraid so

"And they won't come up here?"

"It is scarcely possible

"Oh! exclaimed the woman faintly at the dire possibility that she might not be found

"I took an empty bottle with me said the man breaking the silence in which I had enclosed a paper saying that you were here and safe save for your wounded foot and giving direction how to reach the place I built a cairn of rocks in a sheltered nook in the valley where your camp had been pitched and left the tightly corked bottle wedged on top of it If they return to the camp they could scarcely fail to see it

"But if they don't go back there

"Well it was just a chance

"And if they don't find me?"

"You will have to stay here for a while until your foot gets well enough to travel anyway returned the man evasively

"But winter is coming on you said the lake would freeze tonight and if it snows?"

"It will snow

"The woman stared at him appalled

"And in that case—

"I am afraid was the slow reply that you will have to stay here

"He hesitated in the face of her white still face—all winter he added desperately

"My God exclaimed the girl alone with you?"

"Miss Maitland said the man resolutely I might as well tell you the truth I can make my way to the settlements now or later but it will be a journey of perhaps a week There will be no danger to me but you will have to stay here You could not go with me If I am any judge you couldn't possibly use your foot for a mountain journey for at least three weeks and by that time we shall be snowed in

"Have you needle thread and cloth?" she asked "Everything was the prompt answer

"Then I shall not suffer

"Are you that wonder of wonders asked the man smiling lightly an educated woman who knows how to sew?"

"It is a tradition in Philadelphia

And Who Is James Armstrong?

as effectually as if we were within the arctic circle But if you will let me go alone to the settlement I can bring back your uncle a woman to keep you company before the trails are impassable Or enough men to make it practicable to take you through the canons and down the trails to your home again I could not do that alone even if you were well in the depth of winter

"The girl shook her head stubbornly A week alone in these mountains and I should be mad she said decisively It isn't to be thought of

"It must be thought of urged the man You don't understand It is either that or spend the winter here with me

"The woman looked at him steadily And what have I to fear from you?" she asked

"Nothing nothing as God is my witness protested the other but the world?"

"The world said the woman reflectively I don't mean to say that it means nothing to me but it has caused enough for what I would fain say now She came to her decision swiftly There is no help for it she continued we are marooned—she answered the girl that her daughters should be expert needlewomen

"Oh you are from Philadelphia

"Yes and you?"

"She threw the question at him so deftly and so quickly that she caught him unaware and off his guard a second time within the hour

"Baltimore he answered before he thought and then bit his lip He had determined to vouchsafe her no information regarding himself and here she had surprised him into an admission in the first blush of their acquaintance and she knew that she had triumphed for she smiled in recognition of it

"She tried another tack

"Mr Newbold she began at a venture and as it was five years since he had heard that name his surprise at her knowledge which after all was very simple betrayed him a third time We are like stories I have read of people who have been cast away on desert islands and—

"Yes said the man but no castaways that I have ever read of have been so thoughtfully provided with everything necessary to the comfort of life as we are I told you I lacked nothing for your material welfare and even your mind need not stagnate

"I have looked at your books already said the woman answering his glance

"This was where she had found his name he realized

"You will have this room for your own use and I will take the other for mine— he continued

"I am loath to dispossess you

"I shall be quite comfortable there and this shall be your room exclusively except when you bid me enter as when I bring you your meals I shall hold it inviolate

"But said the woman there must be an equal division of labor I must do my share

"There isn't much to do in the winter except to take care of the burros keep up the fire and prepare what we have to eat

"I am afraid I should be unequal to outdoor work but in the rest I must do my part

"He recognized at once that idleness would be irksome

"So you shall he assented heartily when your foot is well enough to make you an efficient member of our little society

"Thank you and now—

"Is there anything else before I get supper?"

"You think there is no hope of their searching for me here?"

"The man shook his head

"If James Armstrong had been in the party she said reflectively I am sure he would never have given up

"And who is James Armstrong may I ask? burst forth the other bluntly

"Why he—he is a friend of my uncle and an acquaintance of my own

"Oh said the man shortly and gloomily as he turned away

"Enid Maitland had been very brave in his presence but when he went out she put her head down on her arms on the table and cried softly to herself

"Was ever a woman in such a predicament thrown into the arms of a man who had established every conceivable claim upon her gratitude forced to live with him shut up in a two-room log cabin upon a lonely mountain range surrounded by lofty and inaccessible peaks pierced by terrific gorges soon to be impassable from the snows? She had read many stories of castaways from Charles Reade's famous Foul Play down to more modern instances but in those cases there had always been an island comparatively large over which to reign with privacy seclusion opportunity for withdrawal bright heavens balmy breezes idyllic conditions Here were two uplifted from the earth upon a sky piercing mountain They would have had more range of action and more liberty of motion if they had been upon a derelict in the ocean

"And she realized at the same time that in all those stories the two castaways always loved each other Would it be so with them? Was it so? And again the hot flame within outvied the fire of the hearth as the blood rushed to the smooth surface of her cheek again

"What would her father say if he could know her position what would the world say and above all what would Armstrong say It cannot be denied that her thoughts were terribly and overwhelmingly dismayed and yet that despair was not without a certain relief No man had ever so interested her as this one What was the mystery of his life why was he there what had he meant when he had blessed the idle impulse that had sent her into his arms?

"Her heart throbbed again She lifted her face from her hands and dried her tears a warm glow stole over her and once again not altogether from the fire Who and what was this man? Who was that woman whose picture he had taken from her? Well she would have time to find out And meantime the world outside could think and do what it pleased She sat staring into the fire light seeing pictures there dreaming dreams She was as lovely as an angel to the man when he came back into the room

CHAPTER XIV

The Woman's Heart

That upper earth on which they lived was covered with a thick blanket of snow The lakes and pools were frozen from shore to shore The mountain brooks if they flowed at all ran under thick arches of ice The deepest canons were well nigh impassable from huge drifts that sometimes almost rose level with the tops of the walls In every sheltered spot great banks of white were massed The spreading branches of the tall pine trees in the valleys drooped under heavy burdens of snow Only here and there sharp gaunt peaks were swept clean by the fierce winter winds and thrust themselves upward in icy air naked and bare The cold was polar in its bitter intensity

The little shelf or plateau jutting out from the mountain side upon which the lonely cabin stood was sheltered from the prevailing winds but the house itself was almost covered with the drifts The constant fire roaring up the huge stone chimney had melted some of the snow at the top and it had run down the slanting roof and formed huge icicles on what had been the eaves of the house The man had cut away the drifts from doors and windows for light and liberty At first every stormy night would fill his laborious clearings with drifting snow but as it became packed down and frozen solid he was able to keep his various ways open without a great deal of difficulty A little work every morning and evening sufficed

Every day he had to go down the mountain stairway to the bottom of the pocket to feed and water the burros What was a quick and simple task in milder warmer seasons sometimes took him a half a day under the present rigorous conditions And the woman never saw him start out in the storm without a sinking heart and grave apprehension On his return to the cabin half-frozen almost spent and exhausted she ever welcomed him with eager gratitude and satisfaction which would shine in her eyes throb in her heart and tremble upon her lips control it as she might And he thought it was well worth all the trouble and hardships of his task to be so greeted when he came back to her

Winter had set in unusually early and with unprecedented severity Any kind of winter in the mountains would have amazed the girl but even the man with his larger experience declared he had never before known such sharp and sudden cold or such deep and lasting snows His old records had never shown such low temperatures nor had his observation ever noted such wild and furious storms as raged then and there It seemed as if Nature were in a conspiracy to seal up the mountains and all they contained to make ingress and egress alike impossible

A month had elapsed and Enid's foot was now quite well The man had managed to sew up her boot where the knife had cut it and although the job was a clumsy one the result was a usable shoe It is astonishing the comfort she took when she first put it on and discarded for good the shapeless woolen stocking which had covered the clumsy bandage happily no longer necessary Although the torn and bruised member had healed and she could use it with care her foot was still very tender and capable of sustaining no violent or long continued strain Of necessity she had been largely confined to the house but whenever it had been possible he had wrapped her in his great bear skin coat and had helped her out to the edge of the cliff for a breath of fresh air

Sometimes he would leave her there alone would perhaps have left her alone there always had she not imperiously required his company

Insensibly she had acquired the habit—not a difficult one for a woman to fall into—of taking the lead in the small affairs of their circumscribed existence and he had acquiesced in her dominance without hesitation or remonstrance It was she who ordered their daily walk and conversation Her wishes were consulted about everything to be sure no great range of choice was allowed them of liberty of action or freedom in the constraints with which nature bound them but whenever there was any selection she made it

The man yielded everything for her and yet he did it without in any way derogating from his self respect or without surrendering his natural independence The woman instinctively realized that in any great crisis in any large matter the determination of which would naturally effect their present or their future their happiness welfare life he would assert himself and his assertion would be unquestioned and unquestionable by her

There was a delightful satisfaction to the woman in the whole situation She had a woman's desire to lead in the smaller things in life and yet craved the woman's consciousness that in the great emergencies she would be led in the great battles she would be fought for in the great dangers she would be protected in the great perils she would be saved There was rest comfort joy and satisfaction in these thoughts

The strength of the man she mastered was estimate of her own power and charm There was a great sweet voiceless unconscious flattery in his deference of which she could not be unaware

Gone to Stay

Booth Tarkington was telling stories to a group of college graduates in a New York club when one of the party suddenly inquired: "What has become of Davis?"

He has gone out of town on business for a few days I guess replied another of the party.

He has gone for a long while observed Mr. Tarkington with a smile. Davis is one of those men who leave unmistakable evidence of their purposes. Whenever Davis goes away to stay a long period he takes with him an old mouth organ which he loves dearly to play while he occasionally nibbles at gingerbread. I have made an investigation of Davis' room and have found that the mouth organ disappeared with him. The presence or absence of that instrument is enough to tell me what Davis plans are.

The party learned soon after that Davis had left for Wisconsin to reside permanently.

An article that has had great merit showing the value of Foley's Kidney Pills. This is the case with Clamshell's Cough Remedy. Basket Ball For Past Week

The following scores were made at the basketball games for the past week at the local high school.

Monday—Juniors 32 Freshmen 13
Tuesday—Seniors 34 Sophomores 31
Wednesday—Seniors 42 Juniors 12
Thursday—Freshmen 15 Sophomores 41

The game at Knightville on Tuesday which resulted in a score of 34 to 31 was one of the fastest that has been witnessed in Tintic this season. The Seniors took the lead right from the sound of the whistle when the game was started and at the end of the first half the score stood 20 to 10 in their favor. In the second half they fell down and the score was soon tied. Then came the real struggle for supremacy in the third and fourth quarters. The time keeper (a member of the four sex) learned to tell us that the second half of the game was settled when the Physical Director led the teams to the line. This seemed a great feat to both captains. Again on Thursday November 14th these teams will meet and the game will go a long way toward deciding the inter-school championship.

Election of Judge Is Still Uncertain

While complete returns from all the precincts in the Fifth Judicial District are not available it is quite certain that J. A. Melville has been elected to the office of district judge, defeating the Democratic candidate, Joshua Greenwood by a small majority. J. H. Ryan Republican was elected to the office of district attorney by a decided majority. His opponent on the Democratic ticket was George A. Hall of Eureka.

A message from Millard County reaching the Reporter at noon today indicates that Joshua Greenwood has a slight lead over his opponent Mr. Melville, but the fact that several small precincts in Just Millard and Iron counties are yet to be counted makes the outcome somewhat uncertain. It is too early to say which candidate has been elected and this question may not be settled until after the returns have been canvassed in each of the counties embraced in the Fifth Judicial District.

The race between Dr. Steele Bailey Jr. and John R. Edgell for the office of state senator, seems to be just as close as it is interesting as the fight for the judgeship. Mr. Bailey carried Juab county by a nice margin but the heavy vote given to his opponent in Millard county indicates that Mr. Edgell has been elected by a small majority. Figures showing the complete vote are not available.

Ignored His Inspiration

One day said Representative Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts I heard a perfectly good anecdote. It was about Thad Stevens. Then running the government during the Civil war was walking down Pennsylvania avenue one morning with a colleague. They stopped in at George Parker's place across from the oil well for a toddy and before leaving Thad toyed for a few minutes with the faro bank and won $100—a hundred dollar bill. Resuming his walk he was accosted on the capital steps by a Quaker delegation from Pennsylvania. Some of his constituents who said they were interested in a worthy charity in his district and would like to receive a contribution. Thad took the hundred dollar bill from his pocket and with a grand flourish handed it to the spokesman who was profuse in his thanks. Turning away Mr. Stevens said to his companion, "God moves in a mysterious way. His wonders to perform."

Well I liked that anecdote. The more I thought of it the more I liked it and finally I became interested in the career of Stevens and wrote his biography. But do you know after it was published I discovered that I had forgot to put the anecdote in the book.

PATHETIC PLEA FOR CHILDREN

Words of Charles Kingsley Worth Hearing by Every Man and Woman of Any Worth

Do not deceive yourselves about the little dirty offensive children in the street. If they be offensive to you they are not to him that made them. Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones for I say unto you that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my father which is in heaven. Is there not in every one of them as in you the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world? And know you not what that light is and what he said of little children? Then take heed I say lest you despise one of these little ones. Listen not to the Pharisee when he says: Except the little child be converted and become as I am he shall in nowise enter into the kingdom of heaven. But listen to the voice of him who knew what is in man when he said: Except ye be converted ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Their souls are like their bodies not perfect but beautiful enough and fresh enough to shame anyone who shall dare to look down upon them. Their souls are like their bodies hidden by the rags foul with the dirt of what we miscall civilization. But take them to the pure stream strip off the ugly shapeless rags wash the young limbs again and you shall find them body and soul fresh and lithe graceful and capable—capable of how much God alone who made them knows. From Charles Kingsley's Address on Human Soot

COST THE LEOPARD HIS LIFE

Baboons Had Revenge for the Seizure of One of Their Number Though Many Were Sacrificed

The leopard likes the meat of certain monkeys but the indulgence of his taste sometimes costs him dear. A remarkable battle between a leopard and a company of baboons seen by a traveler in Africa is described in Das Buch fur Alle.

I was sitting in the shade of a ravine resting from the midday sun when a company of baboons came clambering down the opposite wall toward the water that trickled through the gully. I sat still and watched them. A big male led and after satisfying himself that all was safe uttered a few deep notes.

Reassured by the call the others quickly followed a mother with an ever watchful eye on her two young ones brought up the rear.

Suddenly like a streak of lightning a leopard sprang from behind a rock and with one blow of his paw felled the little baboon nearest him. But before he could make off with his prey the furious mother attacked him. The attack had come so quickly that the rest of the company hardly realized what had happened. But at the mother's cry of rage they all at once turned and fell upon the robber.

In a moment the leopard was surrounded and almost covered with furious baboons. The battle waxed hot. Although numbers of baboons went down before the powerful paws of the cat their places were immediately filled by others. It was not long before the leopard began to tire. He could make no noticeable impression upon his assailants and his strength was sapped by their sharp teeth. He struggled bravely but in vain slowly he sank out of sight beneath the fiercely chattering foe that he had despised. The baby baboon was avenged—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

New Yorker in the Provinces
Don't tell them out in the provinces that you are a New Yorker remarked an old time drummer to a younger commercial traveler or they will stick you half the time. Here's an instance. I was just starting home from a city in the far west and a few minutes before train time broke the glass in my watch. There was a watchmaker's shop opposite the station and I rushed in with a request for hasty repairs as I was just starting for New York. The watch mechanic looked me over and apparently sized me up as a New Yorker. He went to his bench fooled around for a minute or two snapped the case shut handed me the timepiece and demanded 50 cents. I poked the watch in my pocket and caught the rear platform as the train rolled out. When I looked at the watch an hour later there was no sign of a crystal on it. —New York Tribune

World of Labor

News from All Parts of the World,
of General Interest to the Worker

Washington—A settlement of the protracted wage and working conditions controversy between the southern railway and its employees has been reached. The men by the agreement signed will receive an average advance in wages of approximately 10 per cent. The rules and working conditions on each of the roads remain substantially unchanged. About 13,000 employees of whom 3,000 are negroes are affected. They include conductors, brakemen, baggage men, flagmen and yardmen. Track men and shopmen were not involved in the controversy. The agreement means to the roads an increase in fixed charges for operating expenses of approximately $1,300,000 a year. As an offset to this assurance is given that there will be no strike of the men. The roads involved in the controversy were: The Atlantic Coast line, Alabama Great Southern, Alabama and Vicksburg Central of Georgia, Cincinnati New Orleans and Texas Pacific, Georgia Southern and Florida, Mobile and Ohio, Northern Alabama, New Orleans and Northeastern, New Orleans Mobile and Chicago, Seaboard Air line, Southern railway, Southern Railway in Mississippi, Tennessee Central, Vicksburg Shreveport and Pacific and Virginia and Southwestern.

Chester Pa.—The loom fixers employed by the Aberfoyle Galey & Lord and the Arasapha Manufacturing companies among the largest textile plants in the city were paid off in full and left the employ of the concern. It was practically a lockout and involves about 40 loom fixers all of whom are union men. They recently demanded an increase of $2 a week in their wages and threatened to walk out if it was not granted. The management of the mills offered to increase the men's wages by giving a premium on all work in addition to their regular rate of $18 per week which would make the average about $20. The crisis came when the men were paid off and left with their tools. The strike involves 1,500 employees should all the mills close.

New York—The majority of pianomakers in the city said a manufacturer are making more money today than they have made since 1907. A good workman makes from $25 to $30 a week. These figures are wrong, asserted President Dold of the union. The average pay of pianomakers is about $12 a week. Perhaps a few foremen receive the money mentioned but certainly it is not what is paid to the average skilled workman. The strikers demand both recognition of the union and a 15 per cent increase in wages.

Hazleton Pa.—Officials of the firm of C. Pardee Bros. & Co. operating the Lattimer collieries issued an order prohibiting miners from working alone. Every miner must have a mate. This has been done both for the protection of the miners and the company. Recently a worker who had a chamber alone was killed during the night at Cranberry and no one knew he was dead until his wife came to him nine days afterward and reported his disappearance.

Chicago—Patternmakers apprentices will affiliate with the senior patternmakers union. It has been agreed to have a graduated scale of dues for the apprentices according to the length of time they have served. Those who have served a year will pay ten cents a week, two years twenty cents and three years thirty cents. A system of local sick and death benefits and tool insurance will be inaugurated.

Augusta Ga.—In response to a general strike order conductors and trainmen of the Georgia railroad went on a strike. The strike order was issued by Vice President T. A. Gregg of the Order of Railway Conductors and Vice President James Murdoch of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen in charge of the local situation for their respective organizations.

New York—The New York State Steel company announces that arrangements have been made to start the steel plant of the company Abbott road and Buffalo river in the next few weeks. The plant has a capacity of about 12,000 tons monthly which will mean employment for an additional 400 men. The blast furnace has been in operation since April.

South Bethlehem Pa.—The Bethlehem Steel company has announced an increase in wages of one cent an hour for laborers. The old rate was 13 1/2 cents an hour. About three thousand men are affected.

Springfield Ill.—The supreme court denied a motion for a rehearing in the case of Harry M. Kemp and others of Chicago against Division No. 241 Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America. In June the court ruled that employees have a right to strike when the closed shop rule is violated.

Pittsburg—According to the latest report compiled by the committee on welfare more than 24,580 employees of the United States Steel corporation are stockholders of the company. Their aggregate holdings amounting to more than 102,245 shares.

Chicago—The report of Secretary Frank Duffy to the convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters is a revelation. Nearly all of the local unions have reported an increase in wages and shortening of hours when ever this result has been attained. Trade movements of the carpenters have been general and in amplifying the report it is found that in a large number of cities there has been an average increase in the daily wage taking into consideration the shortening of hours without reduction in pay of 38 1/2 cents. On an approximated membership of 200,000 this yields an advance in wages of $76,800 per day. Computed on 209 working days in the year this increase yields $22,631,200 as a record for one year. When it is taken into consideration that the total sum expended by the Brotherhood in the year under consideration was only $701,166.67 it is revealed that the United Brotherhood of Carpenters is paying a dividend to its members unparalleled by any corporate body engaged in the mercantile or any other business in the entire world. It is an argument in favor of the organization of the workmen that cannot be controverted.

Chicago—Thirty teamsters employed by the Chicago Consolidated Bottling company at North Paulina and West Kinzie streets quit work because the company had put into service six large auto trucks each of which will do the work of two teams. The strike caused alarm to concerns throughout the city. This is the first instance of a strike of teamsters because of the introduction of auto trucks that I have heard of. said an officer of a teaming concern. The introduction of auto trucks is simply a logical development in the transportation problem. They will not throw nearly as many men out of their jobs as did automatic machinery.

New York—The new 54 hour-week labor law which will affect nearly half a million girls women and boys in New York has gone into effect. The law which is an outgrowth of the agitation following the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory fire affected all girls and women and boys under 18 years old. It applies to factories, a factory being defined as any mill, workshop or other manufacturing or business establishment where one or more persons are employed at labor.

San Francisco—That all city employees are entitled to a six day week in accordance with the state law and that there is no good reason why any city employee should be compelled to work seven consecutive days each week is the opinion of Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher, past secretary of the San Francisco Labor council who some time ago introduced into the board of supervisors a resolution providing for one day's rest in seven for all city employees.

Boston—The annual report of the Boston Elevated Railroad company just issued reflects the strike which was called on that system June 7. The worst effect so far as the company's revenue is concerned occurred during the early stages of the strike when the so-called strike breakers pocketed the greater part of the proceeds collected. The net result was a deficit of $491,600 after the payment of 3 per cent on the company's capital.

Hazleton Pa.—The linemen of the Harwood Electric company the big concern that is supplying current from here to towns in this section of the state within a radius of forty miles received notice of a wage advance. Heretofore they got $2.50 a day and had no limit of hours. In the future they will be paid 33 cents an hour. They work no fewer than eight hours a day. There was talk of a strike in case the demands had been turned down.

Chicago—The Illinois Central Railroad company was sued by James H. Wilkerson United States attorney for violations of the sixteen hour regulations for railroads. The prosecutions were recommended by Attorney General Wickersham and suggested by the Interstate Commerce commission. The suit is of ten counts and charges the maintenance of crews on trains between Mounds and East St. Louis Ill. for more than sixteen consecutive hours.

Bethlehem Pa.—Good news to more than 1,000 employees of the Alpha Cement company's employees was the notice posted in which the company granted a 10 per cent raise in wages. The men affected are at the Martin's Creek and Alpha N. J. plants.

Boston—Firms employing more than 80 per cent of the members of Boston Upholsterers Union 55 have conceded the new union scale of a minimum of $21 for the 47 hour work week. The members are still on strike at 12 places. The strike is entering its fourth week.

Baltimore—Resolutions providing that no member of the Cigarmakers International union should belong to the National Civic Federation were defeated at the convention here. The vote against the resolutions was 235 to 95. Samuel Gompers led the fight against the resolutions.

PUZZLES IN FOOTBALL

Line Must Be in Two Places at Same Time.

Present Revival of Regulations Promises to Give Many Coaches More Worries—Situation Not Clear to "Rooter"

Wizards of football the men who devise the plays and direct the big college elevens are facing a proposition this fall that has never been presented before in the history of the sport that of mapping out a defense that will be in two places at the same time and that can cover a territory which may extend over almost the field. While the radical departure from the old smashing game that came with the change in the rules in 1905 gave trouble to the coaches for a season or two the present revival of the regulations promises to give them even more worries.

During the career of the forward pass the twenty yard zone placed a limitation upon the hurling proclivities of the offensive team that could be governed by the secondary defense of the opponents backfield. It was comparatively easy for the backs stationed as they were behind the line of scrimmage and near the ends to block the forward passes. But with abolishment of the twenty yard zone the secondary defense is left without a base to work from. Now it will be possible to pass the ball as far forward as the team pleases which means practically as far as a swift end can travel while opposing team is being blocked. To the secondary defense or to some new arrangement of defense will be left the task of stopping such plays and judging by the speed of the ends that was displayed last season it will not be an easy one.

On the other hand the game as predicted from the new rules offers exceptional opportunities for a modified form of the old line smashes. With four trials to make the required ten yards instead of the three downs, this year's game promises the use of the plunging play. Plunging under the three down rule and with assistance prohibited gave little opportunity for long gains where the defense was fairly strong. Now with an additional trial, just that much more chance is brought in play. And besides the secondary defense bids fair not to have its strong position immediately back of the line and ready to stop any back who tackles. This defense will be watching for long forward passes and the work of playing thirty yards down the field and immediately back of center seems impossible.

So it is indeed a problem and one that will be watched with interest by every lover of the gridiron game. That such geniuses as Fielding H. Yost and Walter Camp have already formed some plan goes without saying. They have always had plans way in advance. But for the average rooter and the coach of less ability the situation is far from clear and probably will not be till the masters have shown the way.

"The Stricken Toiler" By Walt Mason

He labored on the railway track, his task was to break a horse's back. He tagged at the gate, weighed a ton, and all the time the sun mer sun blazed down on him where he toiled and still he worked through fire and froil. I grieved for this poor section man who drank warm water from a canteen late in the day with greenish cheese and hid his blisters on his knees. Odds fish, poor I, when day is dead, I think you straightway to bed, too labor worn, to have a sigh as I would soldiers go to die. That's where you're off, the toiler said, I'm in no rush to go to bed, you must be talking in a trance—tonight I'm going to a dance! (Gazooks!) I thought I'd eke out blood! My tears have streamed a bruise flood because of all the cares and woes the horny-handed toiler knows! And it would seem from what I learn that he is as fun and some to burn. Gadzooks again! It seemeth plain that weeping in this world is vain!

The Closing Rallies

The Democrats held their closing rally at the Elks Pavilion on Monday evening. John Beesley, the local chairman, presided and speeches were made by George A. Ullrich, Joshua Greenwood and A. J. Weber.

The Republicans conducted two rallies in Eureka during the latter part of last week. On Friday night Senator Sutherland, Lawrence Miner and T. L. Foote were the speakers at the Elks Pavilion. James D. Stael, president of this meeting, Saturday evening Governor William Spry delivered a splendid talk at the opera house. Other speakers at this rally were J. H. McKnight, John R. Edgehill and James Devine. Herbert Hopes, county chairman of the Republican party, presided at this meeting.

Party Leaders Did Good Work

John Beesley, who managed the local campaign for the Democrats, is an old timer in the political game. He was on the job early and late and it is said that the Tintic Democrats never had a better organized campaign. The result of the national election was so cheering to him that the loss of the county didn't hurt a bit.

Herbert Hopes, county chairman of one of the leading Republicans of Tintic, on a regret that his party did not make a clean sweep in Juab county. Considering the fact that there was some dissatisfaction in the ranks, he states that it was a splendid victory. It was the work of Republicans and not their opponents that prevented the election of a complete ticket.

The Socialist campaign in Tintic was under the management of James Hanley, the president of the Tintic District Miners Union, and the figures published elsewhere in this issue shows that there has been a splendid growth in the ranks of this party since the county election of two years ago. The Socialists carried the three cities of Tintic, electing all except one of the precinct officers. The vote of the Socialist party is also increasing in the eastern end of the county. Mr. Hanley and the other party leaders here are greatly pleased with the outcome of the election.

In the election last Tuesday the Utah Republicans scored another sweeping victory, this state being one of the few to give its electoral vote to President Taft. Most of the counties in the state were carried by the Republicans who will consequently have control of the next state legislature. Juab county gave the Republican candidates for state offices had some pluralities and the entire Republican ticket was elected in this county with the exception of the year 1908. Senator W. E. Evans, a Democrat, was elected to the office, defeating Gus J. Hendrick, the Republican candidate. George Jones of Robinson will represent this county in the next legislature and John R. Socialist Precinct Officers In

Eureka, Mammoth and Silver

The Socialists elected all the precinct officers in the Tintic District with the exception of John Harris, constable at Eureka. Mr. Harris had the endorsement of the Republicans, Democrats and Progressives.

Silver City

The vote for precinct officers at Silver City follows:

For justice—Ralph B. Beh (S) 10 N. E. D. H. (D) 58 E. G. L. (R) 19. For Constable—E. L. C. B. G. (S) 73 C. G. Mass on (D) 34 Joseph Orton (R) 25.

Mammoth

For justice—Helen Neilson (S) 16 Alfred M. (D) 140 Irving S. (S) 10 (R) 113 John O. Stevick (D) 8. For constable—Frank L. Clay on (S) 169 Fred S. (D) 128 Jerry Sullivan (R) 125 Frank Peterson (R) 66.

Eureka

For justice—N. A. Peterson (S) 44 D. A. Lindsay (R) 237 John O. Edgell (D) 316 George T. Bridges (P) 71. For constable—John Harris, endorsed by three parties 663 Joseph D. (S) 432.

Notes of the Election

Dr. Steele Bailey got a splendid vote in his home town—Mammoth—receiving 280 as against 65 for Edgell.

In Eureka the straight votes were as follows for the three leading parties: Socialists 207, Republicans 186, Democrats 106.

At Silver City there were 147 votes. The straight tickets were as follows: Socialists 43, Democrats 19, Republicans 10. Progressives 1.

The total vote in the four precincts of Eureka was 1274, the largest in the history of Eureka so far as the Reporter is able to determine at this time. The vote by precincts follows: No. 1 313 No. 2 300 No. 3 350 and No. 4 237.

The election judges had a dead hard job and certainly earned their money. In some cases the votes were not counted until noon the next day.

A very small percentage of the Tintic people voted on the proposed amendments to the constitution and most of those who did vote were opposed to the amendments.

Betting was not very heavy in Eureka although a number of wagers were made during the closing days of the campaign. Henry Bannon was perhaps the heaviest winner, having put up a large amount of money on Wilson. Henry could have won more money had he not been quite so liberal in giving odds. A ten to one bet looked as good to him as even money.

Know It Well

But the endorsement of it is in the name of the people. You had a bad back. A lame neck or aching one. Would you expect a cure on it? You will need many so called cures. Endorsed by straight grain for far away places.

It is different when the endorsement comes from home. Easy to prove. Read this case.

Hickman Case Now On At Nephi

The case of the state vs. Jas. H. Hickman charged with murder in the first degree for the killing of Dave Hutchins on November 11, 1912, at Nephi, having been opened this morning. Hickman fully stated Hutchins following a quarrel on Main street in this city. Hickman is another who lives in Oklahoma and has sent an attorney to Nephi to look after his defense. Some little time will probably be taken up in securing a jury and the witnesses will consequently not be needed in some time next week.

Credit to Stott and Marioneaux

Judge Lowers caused the following notice to be published in the Tribune after that paper had published a story that J. H. Hickman had been found guilty of murder in the first degree. I am not entitled to all the credit for the result in the state vs. Gustafson, as indicated by your dispatch. The case was splendidly prepared by Attorney Stott of Eureka and Judge Marioneaux whose argument was a forceful masterpiece, too the leading attorney in the trial.

Immense Deposits At Iron Blossom

For the past two years all students of Iron Blossom have been thoroughly familiar with the No. 1 shaft in the main channel of the Iron Blossom. This shaft has produced the bulk of the good ore which has come from the No. 1 workings. It was first discovered on the 80 ft level where it showed excellent values in gold—from which its name comes. This shaft has been mined for a couple of hundred feet in length and the extraction of ore has raised more than 180 feet where the present excellent find has been made. The vein here where the good lead silver values commenced to come in strong was about 10 feet in width but has now widened out to approximately 20 feet and is still widening out.

A drift was run from the 600 level where the vein was tapped and great quantities of ore extracted. Here the vein again proved to be wide and extensive as found above so the company drifted from the station at the 700 level in the shaft and has again cut the vein where two feet of good shipping ore has been found. This last development has not as yet been carried very far into the vein but every indication for extensive ore bodies are for the best. The ore has been carrying better values as the workings have raised until at the present time this shaft in its upper workings is getting an excellent grade of lead silver ore which makes the shipments from No. 1 compare very favorably in ore values with those of No. 3. We are given to understand by those who know that the values are averaging more than $50 in silver to the ton—this besides the lead and gold contents of the ore.

The other large deposit is developed and definite in form. It lies along the 500 level south of the No. 3 shaft in the main fissure. The north end of this deposit has a width of 25 feet and a height of 70 feet this entire face of ore is of a shipping grade. Part of it being shipped at the present time from this shaft the company has run its drift south through the vein for 300 feet in ore of practically the same grade where a raise has been put up through the ore for nearly as far as the one at the other end. Here is a deposit 25 by 70 feet on one end and almost as large on the other which extends for 300 feet through the vein. This is blocked out ore which the company is now shipping from and which at the rate they are now shipping will last them a couple of years.

It is impossible to say what else can be found in a mine which has such great territory on a mineral belt but it is certain that Iron Blossom will be a producer for a number of years to come.

Iron Blossom Gets Ore On 700

The latest in Iron Blossom forerunning for ore moment the fine showings in the stope is the encountering of the vein on the 700 level at the No. 1 shaft. It is with great pride that the shareholders of Iron Blossom look up on their idol as a past and future producer. While the company is not shipping today more than half its former production it is in a much better position from an ore standpoint to ship heavily than ever before. This is owing to the way the stope is enlarging in size and the good returns which are being realized from the development work which is now going on. The reserving of the lower grade ore is an economical policy which the company has adopted which will bring to the shareholders much more in return for the same class of ore than could be gotten from the present market. The encountering of the vein on the 700 level is a silent cause for the advance of the stock which has occurred during the past few days.

At the Lehi Tintic

Geo. Nichols Supt. of the Lehi Tintic was in town during the week he states that the main tunnel is now in 1540 feet he thinks the drift will have to continue for another 150 feet before the quartz ledge is encountered. The Lehi Tintic's main tunnel is being driven to the north east to get in under the blow out and old workings of the Gold Blossom. From this tunnel two cross cuts are being driven one to the north and the other to the east. The ground of the Lehi Tintic is quite a history. It was formerly the Gold Blossom and the Nichols group. Later the Gold Blossom was purchased for $10,000 and the present company formed. Considerable ore has been shipped from the ground of this company and the present development work is aimed to drift in under the old workings and tap the vein in hopes of getting a continuation of the old ore chute.

Tintic Delegates to Mining Congress

Governor Spry has appointed John H. McChrystal, J. C. Sullivan, Walter Fitch and Robert Brown of this city and J. W. Knight of Provo as delegates to the fifteenth annual session of the American Mining Congress to be held at Spokane, Washington, November 21 to 29th.

Lower Mammoth Looking Fine

Since Supt. Price took charge the Lower Mammoth has been quite a steady shipper putting out about one car a week of 2000 ore which is being taken from the 1000 and the 1800 levels. Supt. Price states that it has been fully demonstrated that the workings on these levels are in the same fissure. In fact this fissure has been encountered on the 700 level where a raise is now being put through to the 1500. Mr. Price is enthusiastic over the prospects which the mine shows for future development both for zinc and lead and is to be congratulated over the profits which are being made each month. The zinc ore which is being mined is netting the company over all expenses of production and treatment from $7.00 to $9.00 a car. Besides the zinc which is being mined the company is mining some lead from the 1500 level to the south where a drift is being run to reach the granite contact. Past experience has been that where a vein strikes the contact enlarged deposits have been formed.

Bright Prospects For Uncle Sam

The saying that an old timer can't come back does not apply when it comes to the mines of Tintic which has been demonstrated time and time again. Among the most conspicuous of the Tintic mines which could be mentioned as having come back would be that of the Uncle Sam. During the past fifteen years the Uncle Sam has been up and down almost as many times as an elevator boy. Each time when the mine has been considered worked out—which by the way is not a condition which can be said to exist in Tintic mines owing to the formation and the way in which the ore makes—it has again found deposits on which a new life has been built until dividends flowed again from its coffers to the shareholders.

Now that the Uncle Sam company has purchased through the increase of its shares the ground of the Richmond Anaconda it has greatly added to its holdings and its possibilities for the future. At the present time the Uncle Sam has more than a dozen men employed in prospecting the ground in the vicinity of the Richmond Anaconda and in the extraction of zinc from the old stope. The company aims to ship two cars of ore a month which is fully paying all of its expenses and making possible the finding of new ore without assessing.

1,600 Foot Drift in Tintic Central

The report comes from Tintic Central that the drift on the 950 has now reached a point more than 1000 feet to the north east of the shaft. This drift is occupying the entire time of the company as it is intended to fully develop this part of the company's ground and determine the formation. The face of the drift is still in non ledge matter through which it has been passing for more than 400 feet. A number of small fissures have been cut which have given considerable encouragement and in which some work has been done. The drift is now going directly to the east and cutting the formation at right angles. A nice quartz ledge was recently cut which was so promising that the company expects that it shall have further development.

The Tintic Central is now cutting format on the strike of which is north and south should anything of great importance be encountered the East Crown Point and Crown Point mines would be benefited.

Stock Market Improving

There has been a decided improvement in the tone of the stock market. The week Crown Point, Iron Blossom, Grand Central, Gold Chain, May Day and Colorado have been the principal stocks which have advanced. This condition is indeed encouraging. It is undoubtedly the revival of activity which always comes after the presidential election when the political hatchet has been buried and all are assured that no matter who has been elected the country will go on improving in the future as it has in the past.

Crown Point Makes Advance

A sensation was caused among the traders in stock on Monday when Crown Point made a rather spectacular advance from one and one half to five cents bid offered at five and one fourth. The trading on the exchange was rather brisk the purchasing brokers taking all stock which was offered within reason and totaling up the sales to over 16,000 shares for the day.

This has been but a sample of what any active Tintic stock will do when a strike is made or when a good change in the formation occurs. One broker alone had an order for twenty thousand shares and at least six other brokers were bidding for their proportion of the stock which was being offered. No one could expect to get anything like the amount of stock which they wanted owing to the lack of selling orders on the exchange. It is only the investor who buys when the market is quiet and during an ebb in the stock movement that can secure his desired amount of stock at a reasonable figure.

Joseph Withlin and John Poundy the president and manager of the Crown Point both came to Tintic Monday night to investigate the condition of the mine. In an interview Roundy stated that the showing was very likely for ore. That the drift to the south on the 600 level had encountered a small cave showing quartz, iron manganese and spar. The management seemed very much encouraged over the showing.

Good Earnings for Knight Mines

The Knight mines held their monthly meeting on Monday the 11th as the 10th came on Sunday. Very encouraging reports were given out. The treasurer's report of the October earnings of Iron Blossom was a pleasant surprise to the general public when it was announced that the company cleared above all expenses the tidy sum of $51,000. This is indeed gratifying when it is noted that the shipments from the mine since its curtailment have not quite reached one half of its former output. Colorado for the same time cleared a net profit of $5,500 from 10 cars of ore with the possibility of a Christmas dividend holding the stock firm around the 16 cent mark. Besides the above it was also reported that Dragon Cons made a profit of $7,000 and Beck Tunnel $1,600.

Grand Central Has Good Showing

At the meeting of the Grand Central and Gold Chain which was held in Provo encouraging reports were given which showed both companies adding freely to their surplus cash. It is reported that Grand Central will likely pay an extra dividend for Christmas.

Mining Notes

The ore shipments of Tintic would be around the 250 car a week mark if it wasn't for the Knight mines curtailment.

There is still a car shortage in the camp but the railroads are making every effort to supply the mines with all the cars needed.

Upon the heels of the sweeping Democratic election lead took a tumble of sixty cents a hundred but has since then partially recovered.

B. F. Fleiner was in town during the week getting supplies. He states that the Erickson district is full of zinc. He has recently taken assays from his property which have gone as high as 51 per cent of the metal.

Mr. James O. Graves and L. L. Sackett president and secretary of the Eagle & Blue Bell spent last Saturday in Eureka looking over the new developments at the mine. The gentlemen were very well pleased with the showing which has been made.

Increased Interest In Mining

It is extremely gratifying to note the greatly increased activity which dominates the mining industry of the west and to observe the most feverish demand in almost every walk of life for gilt edged mining properties. The condition as to mining has much improved during the past two or three years and investors and capitalists who not so very long ago looked upon mining as a gamble and the mining operator as a shark are now glad to become interested in the former and to become intimately associated with the latter. Thus it is that opinions will change and that things to the investor which were black a few years ago are now white for experience has shown that mining as a whole is legitimate that fortunes are more easily made in mining enterprises than in any other commercial manufacturing agricultural or business occupation. Bitter prejudices against mining have been buried in oblivion and because of the fact that their holders could not stand out against the overwhelming evidence that mining was both profitable and legitimate. They could no longer arraign the mining industry as a fake a gamble when on every hand they heard of millions made from thousands invested of incomes pouring steadily into the laps of friends who would have been fortunes for kings and rulers of the olden times, and as a consequence the mining industry is now glad to become identified with this fascinating industry—Mining Review.

Death of J. C. Sullivan.

John C. Sullivan, director and general manager of the Victoria Cons Mining company of Laramie one of the best known mining men of the state died at 10:30 clock Wednesday night at Holy Cross hospital. Mr. Sullivan went to Salt Lake last Thursday to attend a directors meeting, with a cold and with pneumonia the next day he remained in the Cullen hotel until Sunday when he was removed to the hospital.

Mr. Sullivan was born in Ireland forty seven years ago and came to this country when he was 15 years old. He went first to the copper mines in Michigan where he worked for several years. He then came west and worked for several years in the El Paso mine in Clark City. As a prospect he came to Eureka twenty eight years ago and he resided here until the time of his death. He located most of the ground that constitutes what is now the Victoria Cons mine. He was married and had a family. He was a member of the Victoria Cons and the Victoria Cons and the Victoria Cons.

Mr. Sullivan for many years past suffered with the heart and artery and it was only a matter of time before he would be relieved from the councils of this city.

His wife and three children who were present at the time of Mr. Sullivan's death. The children are John, William, and Lillian. In addition to his immediate family Mr. Sullivan is survived by his mother and father who live in Ireland and his sister who live in Montana.

Mr. Sullivan always at the time of his death was at heart an old friend of the city and a great patriot to the west and a great patriot to the west. He was a great patriot to the west and a great patriot to the west. He was a great patriot to the west and a great patriot to the west.

hermit falls in love with Enid.

Having little else to do she studied the man and she studied him with a warm desire and an enthusiastic propensity to find the best in him. She would not have been a human girl if she had not been thrilled to the very heart of her by what that man had done for her. She recognized that whether he asserted it or not he had established an everlasting and indisputable claim upon her

The circumstances of their first meeting which as the days passed did not seem quite so horrible to her and yet a thought of which would bring the blood to her cheek still on the instant had in some way turned her over to him. His consideration of her his gracious tenderness to ward her his absolute abnegation his evident overwhelming desire to please her to make the anomalous situation in which they stood to each other bearable in spite of their lonely and unobserved intimacy by an absolute lack of presumption on his part—all those things touched her profoundly

1 Although she did not recognize the fact then perhaps she loved him from the moment her eyes had opened in the mist and rain after that awful battle in the torrent to see him bend ing over her

No sight that had ever met Eald Matiland's eyes was so glorious so awe inspiring so uplifting and magnificent as the view from the verge of the cliff in the sunlight of some bright winter morning. Few women had ever enjoyed such privileges as hers. She did not know whether she liked the winter crowned range best that way or whether she preferred the snowy world glittering cold in the moonlight or even whether it was more attractive when it was dark and the peaks and drifts were only lighted by the stars which shone never so brightly as just above her head.

When he allowed her she loved to stand sometimes in the full fury of the gale with the wind shrieking and sobbing like lost souls in some icy inferno through the hills and over the timpanes the snow beating upon her the sleet cutting her face as if she dared to turn toward the storm. Generally he left her alone in the quieter moments but in the tempest he stood watchful on guard by her side buttressing her protecting her sheltering her. Indeed his presence then was necessary without him she could scarce have maintained a footing. The force of the wind might have hurled her down the mountain but for his great arm. When the cold grew too strong he led her back carefully to the hut and the warm fire.

Ah yes life and the world were both beautiful to her then in night day by sunlight by moonlight in calm and storm. Yet it made no difference what was spread before the woman's eyes what glorious picture was exhibited to her gaze she could not look at it more than a moment without thinking of the man With the most fascinating panorama that the earth's surface could spread before human vision to engage her attention she looked into her own heart and saw there this man

Oh she had fought against it at first but lately she had luxuriated in it. She loved him she loved him and why not? What is it that women love in men? Strength of body? She could remember yet how he had carried her over the mountains in the midst of the storm how she had been so bravely upheld by his arms to his heart. She realized later what a task that had been what a feat of strength the uprooting of that sapling and the overturning of that huge Grizzly were child's play to the long portage up the almost impassable canon and mountain side which had brought her to this dear haven

Was it strength of character she sought resolution determination? This man had deliberately withdrawn from the world buried himself in this mountain and had stayed there deaf to the alluring call of man or woman he had had the courage to do that

Was it strength of mind she admired? Enid Maitland was no mean judge of the mental powers of her acquaintance. She was just as full of life and spirit and the joy of them as any young woman should be, but she had not been trained by and thrown with the best for nothing. Noblesse oblige. That his was a mind well stored with knowledge of the most varied sort she easily and at once perceived. Of course the popular books of the last five years had passed him by and of such he knew nothing, but he could talk intelligently interestingly entertainingly upon the great classics Keats and Shakespeare were his most thumbed volumes. He had graduated from Harvard as a civil engineer with the highest honors of his class and school and the youngest man to get his sheepskin! Enid Maitland herself was a woman of broad culture and wide reading and she deliberately set herself to fathom this man's capabilities. Not infrequently much to her surprise sometimes to her dismay but generally to her satisfaction she found that she had no plummet with which to sound his greater depths.

Did she seek in him that fine flower of good breeding gentleness and consideration? Where could she find these qualities better displayed? She was absolutely alone with this man entirely in his power shut off from the world and its interference as effectually as if they had both been abandoned in an ice floe at the North Pole or cast away on some lonely island in the South Seas yet she felt as safe as if she had been in her own house or her uncle's with every protection that human power could give. He had never presumed upon the situation in the least degree he never referred to the circumstances of their meeting in the remotest way he never even discussed her rescue from the flood he never told her how he had borne her through the rain to its crown of sunny hair rising above the rushing water. He had listened to the roar of the wind through the long nights when she thought him asleep if she thought of him at all, and heard again the scream of the storm that had brought her to his arms. No snow drop that touched his cheek when he was abroad but reminded him of that night in the cold rain when he had held her close and carried her on. He could not sit and mend her boot without remembering that white foot before which he would fain have prostrated himself and upon which he would have pressed passionate kisses if he had given way to his desires. But he kept all these things in his heart, pondered them and made no sign.

Did she ask beauty in her lover?
Ah there at last he failed. According to the canons of perfection he did not measure up to the standard.
His features were irregular his chin a trifle too square his mouth a thought too firm his brow wrinkled a little but he was good to look at for he looked strong he looked clean and he looked true. There was about him too that stamp of practical efficiency that men who can do things always have. You looked at him and you felt sure that what he undertook that he would accomplish that decision and capability were incarnate in him.

But after all the things are said
Love goes where it is sent and at least am not the sender.
This woman loved this man neither for because not in spite of these qualities That they were might account for her affection but if they had not been it may be that that affection that that passion would have inhabited her heart still No one can say no one can tell how or why these things are She had loved him while she raged against him and hated him She did neither the one nor the other of those two last things now and she loved him the more.

Mystery is a great mover there is nothing so attractive as a problem we cannot solve The very situation of

She said in her heart—and I am not one to dispute her conclusions—that she would have loved him had he been one among millions to stand before her and it was true. He was the complement of her nature. They differed in temperament as much as in complexion and yet in those differences as must always be to make perfect love and perfect union there were striking resemblances necessary points of contact

There was no reason whatever why Miss Matland should not love this man. The only possible check upon her feelings would have been her rather anomalous relation to Armistead, but she reflected that she had promised him definitely nothing. When she had met him she had been a heart whole he had made some impression upon her fancy and might have made more with greater opportunity but unfortunately for him luckily for her he had not enjoyed that privilege.

ut there is a sweetness even in the espair of the truly loving

Enid Matfield however did not have to endure indifference or fight against a passion which met with no response for this man loved her with love that was greater even than her own. The moon in the trite aphorism looks on many brooks the brook sees no moon but the one above him in the heavens. In one sense his merit in winning her affection for him self from the hundreds of men she knew was the greater in many years he had only seen this one woman naturally she should be everything to him. She represented to him not only a woman but womankind. He had seen a boy practically when he had hurried himself in those mountains and in all that time he had seen no body like Enid Matfield. Every arrangement which had been exploited to show why she should love him could be turned about to account for his away or which may be expressed from the soft petals by the hard circumstances of pain and sorrow until there is left nothing but the lingering perfume of the flower

His body trembled if she laid a hand upon him his soul thirsted for her presence or absent he conjured before his tortured brain the sweetest that inhabited her breast. He had been clearlighted enough in analyzing the past he was neither clearlighted nor coherent in thinking of her present He worshiped her he could have thrown himself upon his knees to her if it would have added to her happiness she could have killed him smiling at her Rode she the Juggernaut car of the ancient of with his body would he have unhesitatingly paved the way and have men gladd of the privilege He longed to compass her with sweet observations The world revenged itself on him for his long neglect it had crammed up in this one woman all its charm its beauty its romance and thrust her into his very arms. It was one of those great passions which illuminate the records of the past Paolo had not loved Francesca before

Oh yes the woman knew he loved her. It was not in the power of mortal man no matter how iron his restraint how absolute the imposition of his will to keep his heart hidden, his passion undisclosed. No one could keep such things secret his love for her cried aloud in a thousand ways, in her look when he dared to turn his eyes upon her was eloquent of his calling. He never said a word how much he held his lips at least fettered and bound for he believed that honor of his obligations weighed down the balance upon the contrary side to which his inclinations lay.

He was not worthy of this woman. The first place all he had to do for her was a blood stained hand. That might have been overcome in his mind but pride in his self prevented his resolution to withdraw himself from man and woman until such time as God completed his exaltation and signified his acceptance of him as a penitent by taking away his life, and him inexorably the dark face of his wife rose before him. He forced himself to think of her. She had loved him. She had forgiven him all that she could. He remembered how she had pleaded with him that he take her on that last and most dangerous of journeys her devotion to him had been so great she would not let him go out of her sight. At the moment he thought fathusly! And he killed her. In the queer turmoil of his brain he blessed himself for every thing. He could not be false to his wife, he could not let her memory unjustly suffer the passion in which he be- lieved she had held him and which he believed he had inspired.

He had gone out in the world, for her death he might have forgotten most of these things he might have lived them down. Saneer clear-views would have come to him, morbid self-reproach and self-consciousness would have been changed, he had lived with them alone for years and now there was no put them aside. Honor and pride, only things that may successfully against love overcome him. He did not give way. He wanted to every time he was in her presence he tried to sweep her to his heart and hold her in his arms and bend her back and press lips of fire on lips.

but honor and pride held him back.

 ercise dominion over him? Would ing like a sea would thunder upon first the disparity between their notions not so much upon account of family or of property—the treasure of the mountains hidden since he had discovered and let lie—because of the youth and position of the woman compared to his maturer years his desperate exile and his social withdrawal reinforced his determination to love without a sign. But he long since got beyond this. Had been free he would have taken her a Viking of old if he had to pluck her from amid a thousand swords and her to a beggar's hut which Jove had turned to a palace. And would have come with him on the conditions

She would not have been human if her mind had not dwelt upon the world beyond the skyline on the other side of the range. She knew how those who loved her must be suffering on account of her disappearance but knowing herself safe and realizing that within a short time when the spring came again she would go back to them and that their mourning would be turned into joy by her arrival she could not concern herself very greatly over their present feelings and emotions and besides what would be the use of worrying over those things? There was metal more attractive for her thoughts close at hand. And she was too blissfully happy to entertain for more than a moment any sorrow

She pictured often her return and never by any chance did she think of going back to civilization alone. The man she loved would be by her side, the church's blessing would make them one. To do her justice in the simplicity and purity of her thoughts she never once thought of what the world might say about that long winter sojourn alone with this man. She was so conscious of her own innocence and of his delicate forbearance she never once thought how humanity would raise its eyes and fairly cry upon her from the house tops. She did not realize that were she ever so pure and so innocent she could not now or ever reach the high position which Caesar who was none too reputable himself would fain have his wife enjoy.

CHAPTER XV

The Man's Heart

Now love produces both happiness and unhappiness but on the whole I think the happiness predominates for love itself if it be true and high is its own reward Love may feel itself unworthy and may shrink even from the unlatching of the shoe lace of the beloved yet it joys in its own existence nevertheless Of course its greatest satisfaction is in the return passion for her They are not necessary they are all supererogatory idle words To him also love had been born in an hour It had flashed into existence as if from the fiat of the Divine

On he had fought against it Like the cremites of old he had been scoured into the desert by remorse and another passion but time had done its work The woman he first loved had ministered not to the spiritual side of the man or if she had so ministered in any degree it was because he had looked at her with a glamour of inexperience and youth
During those five years of solitude of study and of reflection the truth had gradually unrolled itself before him Conclusions vastly at variance with what he had ever believed possible as to the woman upon whom he had first bestowed his heart had got into his being and were in solution there this present woman was the precipitant which brought them to life He knew now what the old appeal of his wife had been He knew now what the new appeal of this woman was

In humanity two things in life are inextricably intermingled body and soul Where the function of one begins and the function of the other ends no one is able to say In all human passions are admixtures of the earth earthy We are born the sons of old Adam as we are reborn the sons of the New Passions are complex As in harvest wheat and tares grow together until the end so in love earth and heaven mingle ever I remembered a clause from an ancient marriage service he had read With my body I thee worship and with every fibre of his physical being he loved this woman

It would be idle to deny that in possible to disguise the facts but in the melting pot of passion the preponderant ingredient was mental and spiritual and just because higher and other things predominated he held dear in his heart a sacred thing Love as like a rose the material part is the beautiful blossom the spiritual factor is the fragrance which abides in the rose far even after every leaf has faded.

the lonely shelter of the hills and in no way did he say anything that the most keenly scrutinizing mind would torture into an allusion to the pool and the bear and the woman. The fineness of his breeding was never so well exhibited as in this reticence. More often than not it is what he does not rather than what he does that indicates the man.

It would be folly to deny that he never thought of these things. Had he forgotten them there would be no merit in his silence but to remember them and to keep still—aye that showed the man! He would close his eyes in that little room on the other side of the door and see again the dark pool her white shoulders her graceful arms the lovely face with the man how he came there what he did there why he remained there questions to which she had yet no answer/ stimulated her profoundly Because she did not know she questioned in secret interest was aroused and the transition to love was easy Propinquity too is responsible for many an affection The ivy clings to the first met tree Given a man and woman heart free and throw them together and let there be decent kindness on both sides and it is almost inevitable that each shall love the other Isolate them from the world let them see no other companions but the one man and the one woman and the result becomes more inevitable

Yes this woman loved this man

Fish Springs District

Conditions out in the Fish Springs district in western Juab county are reported to be rather quiet right now owing to the sloppy weather making the roads almost impassable for the ore hauling teams. Thomas Heiman, one of the leasers on the old Emma ground which adjoins the famous little Utah mine on the south was in Salt Lake Monday. He came to look after the marketing of a carload of assorted ore from that property. It is learned that this ore came from the 100 foot incline shaft which has opened up ore similar to that in the husky little neighbor on the north. This ore will no doubt sample better than $100 a ton. The values should approximate 50 per cent lead and better than 10 ounces in silver to the ton. The property is a decidedly promising one and when opened as deep as the Utah mine should prove a steady and consistent shipper also.

The Coldhurst property nearly has been working during the past season and made a number of shipments of ore of near the $100 grade. This property is opened to the 150 to 200 foot level by a vertical shaft. At present it has a consignment of the rich stuff at Oas on the Salt Lake Route and still more ore at the mine awaiting transportation to the railroad.

The Utah mine the mainstay of the isolated district with its very five mile wagon haul shipped in October two carloads of ore which brought gross to the company near $5,000. This ore comes out of most of the levels from the 500, the deepest to near the surface. It is reported that a few days ago the two ten horse teams reached Oas on the shipping point with but one wagon each. The customary haul is four wagons or three trailers. The deep mud made it necessary to leave the trailers for return trips.

And yet in the face of all this discouragement this district has been producing for upwards of a score of years meeting every day's demand for dividends in fat years and never an assessment. The little Utah mine is a beacon light and should be a pattern to a thousand more favorably situated mines in the west. -Hera's Republican

Indianapolis—International labor unions with headquarters in this city are in unusually good condition according to reports at their offices. In speaking of the condition of the International Typographical union John W. Hays, secretary treasurer, said as to membership finances and general conditions the organization has never been in better condition than at present. There is a membership of about 60,000 a gain of about 6,000 in the last year and Mr. Hays points out that practically all of these members are working. The organization he said has been very successful in negotiating increased wage scales with out difficulty. There are no strikes of any consequence now and in the last year less than one hundred and twenty men have been on strike. As an indication of the financial condition of the International Typographical union it might be said that the organization is now negotiating for the purchase of one half million dollars worth of bonds as an investment. There is about $800,000 in the treasury and the money is constantly increasing said Mr. Hays. The organization is having plans drawn for a monument in the cemetery at the union printers home. The monument is to cost not less than $10,000 and is to be in honor of the old time members of the organization both living and dead.

Ottawa, Canada—The report of the secretary treasurer at the recent meeting of the Dominion Trades and Labor congress showed receipts during the last year of $15,699.79 and expenditures of $10,219.82. The membership paying per capita tax being 66.128 in addition to which there are two provincial federations of labor and 44 trades in the labor councils. St. Paul, Minn.—General headquarters of the International Union of Steam Engineers will be located in St. Paul and an assessment will be levied on the members throughout the United States and Canada to raise funds to erect an office building if plans now under way materialize. The business men of St. Paul have offered a suitable site for a headquarters building.

Washington—The United States bureau of mines reports a decrease of 1,000 in the yearly death list from mine explosions during 1911. This is believed to be due to the active work of the bureau which has encouraged at least 1,000 mining companies to include rescue stations in their equipment.

Hartford, Conn.—The award of $80,000 and costs for D. E. Loewe & Co. of Danbury plaintiffs in the suit against members of the United Hatters Union of North America will be trebled making the total $240,000. The Sherman anti-trust law makes the increased award possible. The verdict was reached by a jury in the United States district court after four hours deliberation most of the time being taken up in examination of the expense accounts of the plaintiff. The verdict is for the full amount sought. This already famous case has been before the court for nine years during which time it has gone to the United States court of appeals twice and once to the United States supreme court.

London, England—Arrangements are to be made to begin a campaign to amalgamate all of the unions connected with the tailoring and clothiers trade in England under the title of the United Garment Workers' union. Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat every thing your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

"I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets."

The Chambers Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

COACH YOST SATISFIED WITH NEW RULES

Hurry Up Yost of Michigan

Hurry Up Yost is greatly pleased with the 1912 football rules. No one is better fitted to express an opinion concerning the changes and he says the game will allow a decided lessening of the complexity of the old system thereby making the play far more appealing to spectator and player.

Under the old rules where the strength of the two teams was evenly balanced great difficulty was encountered in scoring except through fumble or accident. This fault was especially prominent at barring any consistent advance within the 15 yard line because of the old restriction of the forward pass and the necessity of making three down against a concentrated defense.

The new rules Yost believes will serve to eliminate this fault for with the limitations of the forward pass removed an alert shift eleven will be able to vastly increase its chances of scoring while the heavier teams will be forced to concentrate their defense more and more whereas in the past the close defense being unnecessary the heavier eleven were able to shift back and thus easily block the open field play of their weaker opponents.

Yost is enthusiastic over the elimination of the inside kick since the success of this play was at all times dependent upon chance as no kicker no matter how expert he be could ever hope to control the direction in which the ball bounded. The policy of booting the ball up and down the field hoping for some misplay by the opposing backs which might result in advantage to the kicking side will receive a death blow under the new style of play.

Yost scouts the fear that some have that the new rules will cause a return to the old pushing smashing game since when the ball is put in play there must be seven players on the scrimmage line and a runner shall not be entitled to any assistance by his teammates.

On the whole so Yost thinks the public will be far more interested in the new play than in that of 1911 for the game will be faster as free from accidents as it is possible to make the game and luck fluke plays and the like will give place to science ver satility of attack and power of defense.

GOSSIP AMONG SPORTS

Isn't it about time to start a scandal about a few intelligible football players?

Hoban a former Dartmouth half back is playing on the Lehigh squad this season.

Penn coaches think they have an other Stevenson in Craig last year's freshman quarterback.

Captain Thorpe of the Carlisle Indians is doing all that was expected of him on the football field.

Hank O Day is quoted as saying he will not return to umpiring even if he doesn't connect as manager of the Reds again.

Leach Cross seems to be the eternal question to New York fight fans. One day he is all in the next day he is a world beater.

Gerald Hayes the oldest umpire in point of service in the American association has announced that he is through with the game.

Each member of Joe Kelly's International league champions was presented with a gold medal and a purse of money by Toronto fans.

There were three triple plays in the majors this year—two in the American and one in the National. The White Sox Tigers and Dodgers got one each.

All Boston paid for Hugh Bedient is $700 it is said. The one game Bedient won meant $1000 extra to each player not to mention what the club owners pulled down.

LOOKING FOR DINNER

By H. LITHGOW.

Cunniff's invitation to Thanksgiving dinner had been delivered over the telephone as has become a usual custom in these hurried and unregenerate days. This however did not lead Cunniff to infer that the entertainment was to be in the least degree informal. On the contrary Cunniff believed that when the Drummonds did anything they did it well. He was judging from their automobile and Mrs. Drummond's gowns and their general air of prosperity for although he knew the family rather well he had never been at their house.

Say Cunniff asked Brown who likewise was to be a guest at the dinner where do the Drummonds live anyway?

At Fifth and Timberwood avenue said Brown. That big gray stone affair. You know it?

Oh yes said Cunniff grandly
However as a matter of fact, he did not know it at all.

Late on Thanksgiving day he looked up the Drummonds in the telephone directory between wrestling with his tie and brushing his hair. He found the name at once—4949 Timberwood avenue. Having got the tie to suit him Cunniff started off briskly at a quarter to seven for the house was only five blocks from his residence.

He ascended the steps briskly and was a trifle annoyed at the delay in answering his ring. When the door was at last opened Cunniff took a forward step and murmured tentatively his host's name.

The maid swung the door open.
Yes this is Mr. Drummond's house.
Come in she said. Please wait in the library. Then she vanished.

Cunniff in some bewilderment divested himself of coat and hat in the large entrance hall and proceeded into the room indicated. It was empty.

There was neither host nor hostess lurking in the corners and no other guests had arrived.

My watch must be horribly fast,"
Cunniff said to himself uncomfortably.

He sat down because there was nothing else to do and looked about him. The room was indeed handsome and probably would appear still more attractive when all the artistically shaded lights were turned on. At present only one burned on the wall near an oaken reading table.

A dead silence reigned. As his eyes grew accustomed to the semigloom Cunniff made out the dining room table some distance off in the adjoining room. Only the bare mahogany confronted him. Even a mere man knows that for a dinner party the setting of the table must come some minutes before the eating of the meal.
Cunniff crossed one foot over the other and tried to be patient. When twenty minutes had passed without another arrival or the appearance of his entertainers the unpleasant conviction that something was wrong broke upon him.

Yet why had he been admitted if anybody had come down with a serious illness and the dinner had been abandoned?

Just as Cunniff in a cold perspiration was miserably meditating seizing his hat and coat and sneaking out he heard footsteps on the stairs. The set society smile he at once donned for Mrs. Drummond's delectation froze on his face as a girl walked in whom he had never seen before. She was a young woman with a most delicious face and Cunniff observed attractive little quirks at the corners of her rosy lips.

Good evening she said a little dubiously as she eyed Cunniff. She acted as though she had expected somebody else. Father has just telephoned me from the railroad station.
He and mother have arrived in the city from their Thanksgiving visit.
They failed to get the earlier train.
If you can wait till eight o'clock—

But Cunniff stammered "what about the dinner party?"

The pretty girl took hold of a chair and stood behind it. "There isn't any she said mildly. Did—did father ask you to dinner?" He so absurdly absent minded occasionally Aren't you Mr. Beckmore, the president of the road?"

Good gracious no! Cunniff got out glad of something tangible to dispute. My names Cunniff and I am supposed to be at a dinner party at the Drummonds at Fifth street and Timberwood avenue! And I want to know what has happened to the dinner!

The pretty girl bent over the chair back and laughed. Why I'm so sorry she choked. It's the Drummonds two doors up! We always get each other's mail and packages but we never got one of their dinner guests before! And you've waited all this time!

I don't mind the wait—now said
Cunniff daintily. Then he fed
Now he ended fifteen minutes later when he had completed the tale of his wanderings at the dinner table of the right Drummonds and had been forgotten because he had helped out the conversation the only way you can square yourself for distracting me by living in a block full of Drummonds is to introduce me to the other ones. At least to the younger members of the family! I'm going to like that girl immensely when I know her!

"MAZEPPA" By Walt Mason

Mazeppa strapped upon a seed made sixty miles at frightful speed through the valley and on across through verdant strips of garden sassafras and oak brake and for a stream the spell as though repelled by a bear. The bear sat up to see him go the wolves pursued the mad dash and when it was over the bear's dying charge tumbled down. Mazeppa rose without a scratch and a swiftly wrote a long dispatch which he chided the Sporting Life that night. I've knocked the record flat all right. No other fellow anywhere has traveled on a knee sprung mare over sixty miles of right of way while trussed up like a bale of hay. Please hire a hall a statement write that I will lecture every night for twenty years—my lecture is free—the moving picture rights are mine. If any challenger should come and put up a substantial sum and say that he'd be glad to ride upon a law-boned horse tied for sixty miles or maybe more for money marbles or talk or gore just say my last long ride is made until the lecture graft is played.

The Editor's Advantage

Did you ever stop to think of how many more whacks the editor gets at his victim than any other business man in town does? With the editor the whacking process lasts from the cradle to the grave. When a person is born even before the preacher gets a chance to baptize him the editor has congratulated the happy parents and has specified in extravagant phrases the weight, sex and pedigree of the new arrival. At the christening the editor often manages to squeeze out a personal item of interest to his readers which is far better than the preacher can do for he has to charge up his labors to the Lord who is far harder to get cash out of even than a subscriber. When the victim graduates from the town high school the editor generally expects to reap about a column of good reading matter and often prints a picture. Then if the victim gets married the preacher gets five dollars and the editor gets twenty-five dollars worth of surprise for his readers. When Mr. Victim gets sick the doctor gets a fair chance of some day collecting a bill against him, but the editor has some cash news every day telling the patient's many friends how he is getting along. And then if he dies the editor gets the most valuable news of all. Not that he is ever glad of the misfortune, but the news is worth money just the same. Maybe the undertaker gets a little more than the editor but it is the only chance he has had at the victim during his whole career while the editor has been pulling something out of him all along the line.—Exchange

Grand Central To Sink From 2300.

Some of the finest ore that has ever been taken from the Grand Central mine is now being hoisted from the 2300 level and not withstanding the fact that this mine in sinking its shaft to that depth established a new record in mining operations not only in Tintic District but in the entire state preparations are already under way for following this body of ore to even greater depth. Assistant Manager W. D. Loose when interviewed today said that he is now cutting out for a winze which will follow the ore below the 2300. The work which has already been done on this level indicates that the bulk of the ore is below better copper values being encountered on the level than in the raise which is now following the ore above this point. The assays of the past few days show the ore to carry about 30 per cent copper with some gold and silver. A remarkable thing in connection with the Grand Central is the fact that its deepest level—the 2300—is one of the driest in the mine while neighboring properties such as the Opex and Centennial Eureka tapped the water before attaining any such depth. In the Grand Central there is no porphyry intrusion and people familiar with the mine's formation believe that the workings can be deepened 200 or 300 feet possibly more without interruption from water. When it is understood that in most copper producing mines the values increase with depth (and the work in the Grand Central seems to prove this theory) it can readily be seen that the mine's possibilities are almost unlimited.

Scranton Miners Strike.

Twenty five men employed at the Scranton mine in the North Tintic mining district went out on a strike last week when the price of board at the company boarding house was raised from $5 to $30 per month. It appears that some time ago the men asked for a raise in wages which would make it possible for them to earn the same scale as is now being paid at the other properties of this district. The raise was granted but the price of board also went up and this is what caused the walk out. The men who quit their jobs state that $30 per month is too much for the meals and the sleeping accommodations at this mine and they point to the fact that at other Tintic mines where

Line-casting Machine for Reporter

The new American Typograph for use in the office of the Eureka Reporter was delivered here this week and will no doubt be in working order before the publication of our next issue. The machine which is the first one to be installed between Denver and the Pacific coast is similar to the Lynotype and for use in the smaller offices where weekly or semi-daily papers are published it has quite an advantage over that machine owing to simplicity of operation. The Lynotype requiring a skilled operator at all times and a machinist to keep it in repair. The installation of the Typograph in this office will enable us to handle our newspaper composition in a much shorter period of time and as the machine casts slugs (taking the place of type) which are dumped into the metal pot after their use there is no expense of distribution such as accompanies the use of type. With the Typograph in operation we can take care of a larger amount of late copy on press day and this should enable us to get out a better paper.

We are just a little proud to announce the installation of this new machine which has cost us a very large sum of money because in addition to our present equipment this is the first in a class by itself among the weekly newspapers of this state. There is no other office in the state with more complete equipment for the publication of a newspaper or for handling all kinds of printing.

boarding houses are operated the charge is but $5 per month. Of course there are places where board and room cost as much as $100 per day but the Scranton miners call attention to the fact that in such cases the room is poorly furnished and kept clean while at the Scranton bunk house the men must furnish their own blankets and keep their own rooms in condition.

When asked regarding the walk out Supt. Nebeker stated that he is waiting to hear from Manager N. A. Dunham.

Important Work For Iron Blossom

An important piece of development work has been mapped out and will immediately be taken up in the north end or No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom property. In this portion of the mine the greatest depth attained is but little over 600 feet and now the management proposes to sink a deep winze from the 600 level going down 500 or 600 feet. Supt. Zabriskie is already cutting out a station on this level to admit of the installation of a monkey engine and the work of sinking the winze will no doubt be under way at once. This winze will be sent down in the ore zone where the vein of manganese and quartz is fully 10 feet in width and the point which has been picked for this important piece of prospecting is near the contact between the gray dolomite and white lime. Mr. Zabriskie has for some time been anxious to prospect at greater depth in the north end of the Iron Blossom and he states that a spot containing better ore indications could not have been found anywhere. As this winze is driven down drifts will be sent out at the various levels for the purpose of thoroughly cross cutting the country. This piece of development work will be watched with a great deal of interest by the officials of the Iron Blossom who feel sure that it will be the means of adding to the mine's ore supply.

On the 700 level of the No. 1 workings of the mine a raise is now following a bunch of high grade copper ore. This ore which carries from 10 to 12 per cent copper is located almost directly under the copper stope on the 600 level and at the point where the work is now being prosecuted there is fully four feet of fine ore.

Iron Shipments From Dragon

The Dragon Iron mine at Silver City is crowding its present smelter contract somewhat sending out about 12 tons of ore daily. Supt. E. P. Peterson states that the mine is "hot" and "good" and the only regrettable thing in connection with the operation of the mine at this time is the inability of the smelter to handle a large tonnage of ore. The large bodies of iron ore at the Dragon have been developed to such an extent that the mine can be called upon for almost any amount of ore but now the smelters having their own iron deposits there is not a very good market for this particular character of ore.

Swansea Stops Development Work

Notwithstanding the fact that the Swansea mine has been sending out a pretty heavy tonnage of ore the revenue received from this source has not been sufficient to meet the heavy operating expenses and in order to prevent the company from going into debt the development work has been discontinued. This week about fifteen men were laid off and practically all of the forty men now on the payroll will be kept at work on ore. This will perhaps enable the company to break even. The Swansea ore is of a very low grade. For some time past rumors of a shut down at this mine having been in circulation and there is still a possibility of work being suspended although the management is willing to keep things moving if it can be done without building up an overdraft.

Iron Blossom Earnings

The earnings of the Iron Blossom mine for the month of October amounted to something over $1000 and the record for the present month should be equally as good. The fact that the mine is able to earn such a splendid sum of money each month notwithstanding that much of the ore is being held back for the new mill which the stock has recently displayed on the exchange. While it is not generally known it is nevertheless a fact that the mine is earning as much money with its present limited tonnage as it was a few months ago when much heavier shipments were in order. Some of the Tintic mining men whose predictions on matters of this kind have not been very far wrong in the past are of the opinion that there is a Christmas dividend of about 3 cents a share in store for the shareholders of this mine.

Dragon Shipping Good Ore

Already this month four carloads of ore have been taken from that portion of the Dragon property which is being developed from the Black Jack mine and now that stoping operations are under way above the 300 level a large tonnage will be sent out in order. A tunnel taps the Black Jack shaft at the 300 level and the Dragon ore can consequently be trammed directly to the surface and this means that the mining cost can be held down to the minimum point. This ore carries from 3 to 7 per cent copper a few ounces in silver and some gold making it worth in the neighborhood of $22 to the ton. During the past few days the mine assays have shown an improvement in the gold values but the management is not talking about this until sufficient work has been done to show that the change is a permanent one.

Knight People Get New Claims

Jesse Knight is still adding to his Tintic holdings and this week he closed a deal for the purchase of the four unpatented claims of the Middle Swansea Mining company, this ground being to the west of the Eureka Swansea Extension. Assistant Manager Frank Puch of the Knight properties in this district states that these claims overlap the contact between the lime and quartzite and that it is the intention of Mr. Knight to drive a drift from the Eureka Swansea Extension shaft for the purpose of cutting this contact. The drift will probably leave the shaft of the above company at a depth of 300 or 400 feet and before reaching the contact it will cut through a very likely looking section of mineral ground. The contact of the Middle Swansea was for a number of years in the hands of Richard B. Shepard and associates. Mr. Shepard and George Jones, who was also one of the old directors, will remain on the board along with Jesse Knight, J. William Knight and W. Lester Mungin.

Ore From Victor Cons.

Joseph Trejoar was in Eureka yesterday and states that the Trejoars who are operating in the Victor Consolidated property at Mammoth are now taking out some copper ore of very fine grade. One carload going forward to the smelter on Wednesday of this week. This lot of ore was mined by Alfred Moyle and Thomas Trejoar, who have a lease which covers the older workings of the property. Another block of ground is being worked by the Smith brothers, Lloyd Ivey and Thomas Hillman.

Scranton Without Zinc Contract

The contract under which the Scranton mine has been shipping its zinc product for the past few years has expired and at the time of the shut down last week the entire force was being kept busy on development work. Zinc is not only bringing a good price but it seems to be in demand and the Scranton people should have no difficulty in signing up a new contract. Supt. Nebeker states that the older workings of the mine are in very good condition and that on the lower levels where some development work has been under way for some months there is a splendid mineralization which indicates that the ore will be picked up at depth.

Preparations are now being made for the installation of the new electrical equipment which will greatly facilitate work at this mine.

Will Connect Chief And Gemini Mines

Manager Walter Fitch of the Chief Consolidated property states that within the next few months he will have a connection through between this mine and the Gemini. For over a year the Chief people have been pushing a drift out in that direction for the purpose of prospecting the Eureka City Mining Co.'s ground and recently in order to hurry this connection a contract was made whereby work will be carried on from the Gemini side. At the present time the Chief is not connected with any other mine and the management is realizing that such a connection will be a big advantage not only in ventilation but that it may possibly prevent serious difficulty in case anything should go wrong in the main shaft. It was decided to drive through to the Gemini workings. The few hundred feet of ground separating the faces of the two drifts will be cut out within the next couple of months.

John Shra has been selected to superintend operations at the Victor mine at this place, the mine having previously been under the management of J. C. Sullivan, whose death took place last week. Mr. Shra has been employed as a foreman at this mine for the past few years and is thoroughly familiar with the property. Just at present arrangements are being made for the installation of the new machinery which will equip a switch over from steam to electric power.

He did not know that Women have learned through centuries of weakness that fine art of concealment which man has never mastered. She never let him see what she thought of him. Yet he was not without suspicion. If that suspicion grew to certainty would he control himself then?

At first he had sought to keep out of her way but she had compelled him to come in. The room that was kitchen and bed room and store room for him was cheerless and somewhat cold. Save at night or when he was busy with other tasks outside they lived together in the great room. It was always warm it was always bright it was always cheerful there.

The little piles of manuscript she had noted were books that he had written. He made no effort to conceal such things from her. He talked frankly enough about his life in the hills. Indeed there was no possibility of avoiding the discussion of such topics. On but two subjects was he inexorably silent. One was the present state of his affections and the other was the why and wherefore of his lonely life. She knew beyond peradventure that he loved her but she had no faint suspicion even as to the reason why he had become a recluse. He had never given her the slightest clew to his past save that admission that he had known Kirkby which was in itself nothing definitive and which she never connected with that package of letters which she still kept with her.

The man's mind was too active and fertile to be satisfied with manual labor alone. The books that he had written were scientific treatises in the main. One was a learned discussion of the fauna and flora of the mountains. Another was an exhaustive account of the mineral resources and geological formations of the range. He had only to allow a whisper of a suspicion of his discovery of gold and silver in the mountains to escape him and the canons and crevices alike would be filled with eager prospectors. Still a third work was a scientific analysis of the water powers in the canons.

He had willingly allowed her to read them all. Much of them she found technical and aside from the fact that he had written them uninteresting. But there was one book remaining in which he simply discussed the mountains in the various seasons of the year when the snows covered them when the grass and the moss came again when the flowers bloomed when autumn touched the trees. There was the soul of the man poetry expressed in prose man like but none the less poetry for that. This book pored over she questioned him about it. They discussed it as they discussed Keats and the other poets.

Those were happy evenings. She on one side of the fire sewing her finger wound with cloth to hold his giant tumbled fashioning for herself some winter garments out of a gay colored red white and black ancient and exquisitely woven Navajo blanket soft and pliable almost as an old fashioned piece of satin—priceless if she had but known it—which he put at her disposal. While on the other side of the same homely blaze he made for her out of the skins of some of the animals that he had killed a shapless foot covering half moccasins and wholly leggings which she could wear over her shoes in her short excursions around the plateau and which would keep her feet warm and comfortable.

By her permission he smoked as he worked enjoying the hour putting aside the past and the future and for a few moments blissfully content.

Sometimes he laid aside his pipe and whatever work he was engaged upon and read to her from some immortal noble number. Sometimes the entertainment fell to her and she sang to him in her glorious contralto voice music that made him sad. Once he could stand it no longer. At the end of a burst of song which filled the little room—he had risen to his feet while she sang, compelled to the erect position by the magnificent melody—as the last notes died away and she smiled at him triumphant and expectant of his praise and his approval he hurried himself out of the room and into the night wrestling for hours with the storm which after all was but a trifle to that which raged in his bosom. While she left alone and deserted quailed within the silent room till she heard him come back.

Often and often when she slept quietly on one side the thin partition he lay awake on the other and sometimes his passion drove him forth to cool the fever the fire in his soul in the icy wintry air. The struggle within him preyed upon him the keen loving eye of the woman searched his face scrutinized him looked into his heart saw what was there.

She determined to end it deciding that he must confess his affections. She had no premonition of the truth and no consideration of any evil consequences held her back. She could give free range to her love and her devotion. She had the ordering of their lives and she had the power to end the situation growing more and more impossible. She fancied the matter easily terminable. She thought she had only to let him see her heart in such ways as a maiden may to bring joy to his own to make him speak. She did not dream of the reality.

One night therefore a month or more after she had come she resolved to end the uncertainty. She believed the easiest and the quickest way would be to get him to tell her why he was there. She naturally surmised that the woman of the picture which she had never seen since the first day of her arrival was in some measure the cause of it and the only pain she had in the situation was the keen jealousy that would obtrude itself at the thought of that woman.

He Stood—Entranced

She remembered everything that he had said to her and she recalled that he had once made the remark that he would treat her as he would have his wife treated if he had one there fore whoever and whatever the picture of this woman was she was not his wife. She might have been some one he had loved but who had not loved him. She might have died. She was jealous of her but she did not fear her.

After a long and painful effort the woman had completed the winter suit she had made for herself. He had advised her and had helped her. It was a belted tunic that fell to her knees the red and black stripes ran around it edged the broad collar cuffed the warm sleeves and marked the graceful waist line. It was excessively becoming to her. He had been down in the valley or the pocket for a final inspection of the burros before the night which promised to be severe, fell and she had taken advantage of the opportunity to put it on.

She knew that she was beautiful, her determination to make this evening count had brought an unusual color to her cheeks, an unvoiced sparkle to her eye. She stood up as she heard him enter the other room she was standing erect as he came through the door and faced her. He had only seen her in the now somewhat shabby blue of her ordinary camp dress before and her beauty fairly smote him in his face. He stood before her wrapped in his great coat snow and ice clinging to it. Entranced. The woman smiled at the effect she produced.

Tale off your coat, she said gently approaching him. Here let me help you. Do you realize that I have been here over a month now? I want to have a little talk with you. I want you to tell me something.

CHAPTER XVI

The Kiss on the Hand

Did it ever occur to you began Enid Maitland gravely enough for she quite realized the serious nature of the impending conversation did it ever occur to you that you know practically all about me while I know practically nothing about you?

The man bowed his head. You may have fancied that I was not aware of it but in one way or another you have possessed yourself of pretty all of my short and until I met you most uneventful life she continued.

Newbold might have answered that there was one aspect which had been casually introduced by her upon one occasion and to which she had never again referred but which was to him the most important of all subjects connected with her and that was the nature of her relationship to one James Armstrong whose name although ed to know I have told you. I had nothing to conceal as you have found out. Why you wanted to know about me I am not quite sure.

It was because—burst out the man impetuously and then he stopped abruptly and just in time. Enid Maitland smiled at him in a way that indicated she knew what was behind the sudden check he had imposed upon himself.

Whatever your reason your curiosity—

Don't call it that please.

Your desire then has been gratified. Now it is my turn. I am not even sure about your name. I have seen it in these books and naturally I have imagined that it is yours.

It is mine.

Well that is really all that I know about you. And now I shall be quite frank. I want to know more. You evidently have something to conceal or you would not be living here in this way. I have never asked you about yourself or manifested the least curiosity to solve the problem you present to find the solution of the mystery of your life.

Perhaps said the man you didn't care enough about it to take the trouble to inquire.

You know answered the girl that is not true. I have been consumed with desire to know.

A woman's curiosity?

Not that was the soft answer that turned away his wrath. She was indeed frank. There was that in her way of uttering those two simple words that set his pulses bounding. He was not altogether and absolutely blind.

Come said the girl extending her hand to him we are alone here to gether. We must help each other. You have helped me you have been of the greatest service to me. I can't begin to count all that you have done for me my gratitude—

Only that?

But that is all that you have ever asked or expected answered the young woman in a low voice whose gentle tones did not at all accord with the boldness and courage of the speech.

You mean? asked the man staring at her his face aflame.

I mean answered the girl swiftly willfully misinterpreting and turning his half spoken question another way. I mean that I am sure that trouble has brought you here. I do not wish to force your confidence. I have no right to do so yet I should like to enjoy it. Can't you give it to me? want to help you I want to do my best to make some return for what you have been to me and have done for me.

I ask but one thing he said quickly.

And what is that?

But again he checked himself.

No he said I am not free to ask anything of you.

And that answer to Enid Maitland was like a knife thrust in the heart. The two had been standing confronting each other. Her heart grew faint within her. She stretched out her hand vaguely as if for support. He stepped toward her but before he reached her she caught the back of the chair and sank down weakly. That he should be bound and not free had never once occurred to her. She had quite misinterpreted the meaning of his remark.

The man did not help her he could not help her. He just stood and looked at her. She fought valiantly for self control a moment or two and then utterly oblivious to the betrayal of her feelings involved in the question—the moments were too great for consideration of such trivial matters—she faltered.

You mean there is some other woman?

He shook his head in negation.

I don't understand. There was some other woman?

Yes.

Where is she now?

Dead.

But you said you were not free.

He nodded.

Did you care so much for her that now—that now—

Enid he cried desperately. Believe me I never knew what love was until I met you.

The secret was out now it had been known to her long since but now it was publicly proclaimed. Even a man as blind as obsessed as he could not mistake the joy that illuminated her face at this announcement. That very joy and satisfaction produced upon him however a very different effect than might have been anticipated. Had he been free in deed he would have swept her to his breast and covered her sweet face with kisses broken by whispered words of passionate endearment. Instead of that he shrank back from her and it was she who was forced to take up the burden of the conversation.

I have withheld nothing from you went on the girl, whatever you want

You say that she is dead? she began in sweet appealing bewilderment, and that you care so much for me and yet you—

I am a murderer he broke out harshly. There is blood upon my hands the blood of a woman who loved me and whom boy as I was I thought that I loved. She was my wife I killed her.

Great God! cried the girl amazed beyond measure or expectation by this sudden avowal which she had once suspected and her hand instinctively went to the bosom of her dress where she kept that soiled water stained packet of letters are you that man?

I am the man that did that thing for me I don't deserve it and it started on the last journey I was going alone again but she was so unhappy over my departure she clung to me pleaded with me implored me to take her with me insisted on going wherever I went would not be left behind. I didn't understand it, frankly I didn't know what such love was—then—but I took her along. Shall I not be honest with you? for me I don't deserve it and it started on the last journey I was going alone again but she was so unhappy over my departure she clung to me pleaded with me implored me to take her with me insisted on going wherever I went would not be left behind. She couldn't bear me out of her sight it seemed. I don't know what there was in me to have inspired such devotion but I must speak the truth however it may sound. She seemed wild crazy about me. I didn't understand it, frankly I didn't know what such love was—then—but I took her along. Shall I not be honest with you? In spite of the attraction physical I had begun to feel even then that she was not the mate

Unique Table Decoration

A Thanksgiving table decoration scheme with the Puritan maid and the Indian in evidence is very suggestive of the day. Crepe paper with a corn design is used for the table cloth. This is cut out around the edge and placed over a flounce of plain white crepe paper and a heavy cord of green crepe paper twisted to form a rope is attached around the edge of the table. A doll representing an Indian is dressed in a tan crepe paper suit with fringe of black crepe paper. The Puritan maid is dressed in gray crepe paper with a white shawl and apron. The corn centerpiece is constructed out of green paper leaves with the ears of corn made of yellow paper mounted on cardboard the shape of an ear of corn.

The place cards are of white cardboard decorated with ears of corn. The design can be cut out of crepe paper and pasted on.

The punch boxes are made of small pasteboard boxes covered with yellow paper in a corn design and trimmed with green paper leaves. The favors are large ears of corn made of yellow paper with green leaves mounted on pasteboard.

OUR GREAT FESTIVAL

By ELLEN FOSTER STONE

AND now we meet on common ground. Let's expect unanimity while we consider Thanksgiving day. What is now our national festival of thanksgiving was inaugurated as we remember by the Pilgrim fathers at the end of their first year as pioneers. In praise and gratitude for blessing they openly gave thanks.

What a years' toil and privation meant to them we will not try to picture but at its end we know they commemorated all in a day of thanks for the harvest which was theirs. For the earth had brought forth her increase and they were glad.

And for that first Thanksgiving day we should now give thanks. It was much a factor in preserving blessings to us of today.

Are we not content to believe then and believing to show in acts that the spirit of our Thanksgiving day should animate the doings of all our days? We are told you know that when all the people praise their then shall the earth bring forth her increase. From this we learn that the earth brings forth her increase as a result of the co-operation between man and his Maker. Thus we find man praising, before the increase comes. For this increase comes at the end of toil and labor. So then work is praise. Some decried the modern commemoration of Thanksgiving day saying the spirit and significance the original intent is lost now in frolicsome forgetfulness. The day runs to sports and merrymaking.

Is it not better and happier to feel that it is not the spirit but the expression only that is changed—not lost. And this like other changes has come to us as the sum of man's achieving skill in making possible the many avenues for recreation. This in itself is cause again for thanks giving.

There is always cause for thanks giving and chief among the causes is this very one that we have reached a state in life where we have time to play a little. We grown-ups need our playtimes just as the children need their toys. So when we see hurrying throngs on pleasure bent on our national Thanksgiving day is it not true we catch the spirit of their whole some happiness? Is this not better to believe than that the day is degraded from its original intent or ideal?

We should let the memory of those early fathers strengthen our hearts and characters and help us to be gracious hosts to those pilgrims still who come. To them as to those earlier comers this is a land of promise and hope. No fairer compliment can a man pay a land than to leave his home for it. And no fairer compliment can we as hosts extend than to have our house in order to receive our guests. The lures and snares that might cripple and engulf them we should banish. Keeping our standard clean and high our guests must strive to honor it. And that we of today may welcome and aid in shaping these newcomers into noble self-helping citizens should give us cause for thanks giving.

And happily, in this work of modeling by example we each can aid for education is largely imitation following the word and art of another so the small child the middle-aged child the adult and the aged each can have a part in this thanksgiving making this standard bear.

There is so much to be thankful for. Not only for the earth's increase but for everything that comes of good or ill. For we may thus bind the good in our hearts and work to eliminate the ill. Let's think mothers dear of a few more things for which we may be thankful.

For the smiling faces of children the touch of baby fingers. For the sights that please us the sounds that soothe us the hands that serve us. For the workers seen and unseen whose labors lend to our comfort. For ears to hear eyes to see and strength to speed us thanksgiving. For the stretch of woodland the valleys and the hills for the art in nature that causes a stream to pursue its sinuous course rather than the straight line. For the glister of the plumage of birds and their sweet throated notes at matins or at eventide. For the beauty and wonder and vista of thought opened by a polished sculptured column of shimmering marble. Its journey from the quarry to the dome it supports the road builders the vehicles of transportation and they who conduct the traffic all these represent uncounted toil and ability and genius. Of the tools with which all these are fashioned and the skill directing them. For all these works wrought and for the workers thanksgiving.

For the blessings of the present thanksgiving. They come to us as fruitage of the blessings of the past.

For the journeyings of the Israelites for the selling of Joseph into Egypt for David and Goliath for the light from Nazareth for the doubts of Thomas. For all these thanksgiving. Are they not blue prints or charts for character building? Do we not see in these stories of old parallels daily? We wander and disobey we repent and are blessed too often turning again forgetful.

And often does not the going of our Josephs down into Egypt found our future prosperity and happiness? We mothers know the anguish of bitter parting whose clouds are but screen ing coming light. And daily do we little Davids not meet our Goliaths? Stalking disdainful but surrendering if we are valiant and use the weapons we know best.

Would you believe there is really so much to be thankful for?

Yes for the cords that bind us the trials that shape us for our present day comforts and conveniences. With all these for which to be thankful how can we go heavily about our work? Because of the evils that beset? True enough but for their realization we should be thankful for it is only so that we recognizing may work to banish. And that is our present work. That less of wrong shall confront those who come after is our desire.

And greatest of all things for which we may be thankful is friendship. It shall bring our souls singing into endless day for that being is blessed who finds from out the world the true heart of a friend.

Death of Well Known Eureka Man

John Davey, one of Eureka's most prominent citizens, died at his home here at 10 o'clock this morning from an illness from which he has been suffering for several months. Mr. Davey was born in Chesswater, Cornwall, England, January 24th, 1851. He came to Eureka two or three years ago and previous to that time had followed mining in Michigan, Colorado, Nevada and other states. Mr. Davey was a well known local mining circles and for many years held the position of foreman of the Gem mine, resigning when poor health made it impossible for him to continue his work. Jack, as he was called by his many friends, was always a quiet, honest and upright man and his death will be sincerely regretted in Tintic.

Mr. Davey is survived by his wife and a daughter, Mrs. Mamie Sandler, son and a large number of other relatives who were at his bedside when death came.

Funeral services will be held at the M. E. Church on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with interment at the city cemetery. Friends can view the remains at the residence.

Impressive Funeral For J. C. Sullivan

At the St. Mary's Cathedral at Salt Lake last Sunday afternoon funeral services were held over the remains of the late J. C. Sullivan, the well known Tintic mining man who died very suddenly last week from pneumonia. Hundreds of friends attended among them being scores of Tintic people who had been on terms of the closest friendship with the deceased during his long residence in Eureka and in the cathedral where the simple burial service of the Catholic Church was carried out were many of the prominent men of the state who went there to pay a last sad tribute to one of Utah's foremost citizens. Rev. Dennis Kiely who had known the deceased for more than a quarter of a century, preached an eloquent sermon telling something of the sterling qualities of the man who had been stricken down in the prime of a busy and useful life and speaking words of comfort to those who felt his death most keenly. Beautiful music characterized the services. Mrs. Nora Cleason playing the cathedral organ and directing the singing. Floral offerings of unusual beauty were presented by many sorrowing friends from throughout the state. The remains were interred at the Mount Calvary Cemetery where there was also a brief service.

The active pall bearers were P. J. Petrell, Gus J. Hendrick, J. H. Donnelly, J. D. Stack, William Owens and J. E. Driscoll. The honorary pall bearers were Ezra Thompson, J. C. Lynch, Frank Knox, C. E. Loose, R. G. Wilson and E. G. O'Donnell.

Result of Basket Ball Games

The following figures show the manner in which the various High School teams finished in the series of basket ball games:

Seniors	13	7	1
Juniors	6	2	1
Freshmen	6	6	6

As the result of the series there were three fast teams competing for first place and it was sure an honor for a class to have a team in the either first or second place. The series of games the teams were in the evenly matched class. Patriotism was aroused and the players practiced hard for the first.

While this is the series for 1912 there will be another series in 1913. The high school team is somewhat handicapped at present in having a suitable building for practice work and everyone will certainly appreciate the completion of the new gymnasium. Last Friday night the high school team defeated the Silver City team at Silver City. The game being played in a large arena in the bunch of roofs. The Silver City team have no doubt been to the conclusion that to get team work the rapid passing of the ball and an understanding of the game count for more than the size of the players. However, Silver City's fast game and with proper team work should give the other team's of Tintic some hard contests. The feature of the game was the fast snappy passing and team work of the local players, which can be depended upon for some good games the following season.

Next Saturday night at Knightville these teams will play another game. Everybody is invited to come out and root for the Tintic high school. Admission free. Game starts at 7:30. Ross Ingervoll, referee.

The Barrier That Was Burned

A Rex Beach story

Alaska life and scenes are as familiar to the writer as Broadway is to Anna Held. Gambling dens, noisy dance halls, silent sweeps of snow or howling winds in groaning forests, the welcome warmth of roaring firelogs or the strong passions of pioneer people—all these are fused by his genius into themes that thrill and thrill with intense interest. This story is one of his best and the Vitagraph company has done it full justice.

Marjorie's Diamond Ring

A best yet Edison comedy

Dick buys a $300 engagement ring for Marjorie but in his excitement leaves it lying on the jeweler's counter. Not to disappoint her he buys a cheap paste ring and gives it to her that night. While washing her hands the ring falls into the drain pipe. How the plumbers come to tear up the wrong pipes and the house generally how the genuine solitaire at last appears turns in a comedy that tickles and ends in a screaming farce.

A Moonshiner's Heart

Another G. M. Anderson picture showing how noble a crude mountaineer's heart can be. These Anderson Bertram pictures are so well known and well liked by all that it is unnecessary to tell the story. When these characters appear in the picture it simply must be a good one.

Since leaving Eureka he has been making his home at Grants Pass, Oregon, where he has a splendid piece of fruit land. Mrs. Martin found the wet winter weather of Oregon detrimental to her health and consequently returned to Eureka and this accounts for Mr. Martin's visit here at this time. Dan likes his new home and says that farm labor seems to agree with him.

Reduced Telephone Rates For Long Distance Service

Effective November 26, 1912, we will make a great reduction in toll rates over our Long Distance Lines in the States of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Utah, and between these states and Colorado.

This reduction is made because the toll rates charged by the former Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Company were higher than those in other parts of The Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Company's territory. For instance, it formerly cost $1.00 to talk 100 miles in Utah, while in Colorado it cost 80c. Under the new tariff schedule the rates will be the same for like distances throughout our system. A few examples are given below:

From EUREKA, UTAH, TO	Old Rate	New Rate
American Fork	30	25
Evanston	1 10	90
Logan	1 20	95
Nephi	30	25
Ogden	90	70
Payson	25	20
Pocatello	2 00	1 60
Provo	35	25
Salt Lake	55	45

For reductions to hundreds of other points in these states, inquire of the "Long Distance" Operator.

We have 75 000 miles of copper wires connecting 200 000 subscribers reaching practically every city, town village and hamlet in the Mountain States from Canada to Mexico

EVERS FACES TOUGH PROBLEM AS MANAGER

Johnny Evers New Manager of Cubs

Stepping into his new job as manager of the Cubs with the best wishes of the fans Johnny Evers neverthe less faces about the fanciest bunch of trouble ever gathered under one tent says the Chicago Evening Post.

Before signing him up—and Evers wasn't exactly yearning for the job—Charles Webb Murphy made him agree to carry out some of the policies which Frank Chance out of the wealth of his experience as a baseball general had refused to consider.

It looks like tough sledding for a while Evers admitted after he had put his name to a contract which called down by Murphy for making these statements for publication Tinker repeated them to Murphy's face.

But Evers situation was different Johnny has been unfortunate in financial matters and the added salary as manager was a great inducement. Then too Murphy's hand had been forced by statements that he was stalling and was having trouble finding anybody who would work for him and he was determined to sign Evers.

It was a case of become manager or quit baseball Evers couldn't refuse. Nobody knows better than he does what he is up against but he is game and may make a success of it. He doesn't go into the job with any illusions. He has been playing for the Cubs for ten years and he knows Murphy Johnny isn't harboring the delusion that he is lying down to pleasant dreams in a bed of roses.

If the fans will stick by him until he gets a fair tryout that's all he asks. And he believes they will. It looks like a second division team for the West Side for a couple of years but after the new machine gets to working properly Johnny thinks he can bring it up to the top again.

I'm glad it's all over said Chance. The strain of the last few developments in my case has been a tough one for a man just out of a hospital. I'm looking forward to a good rest on my ranch where there will be nothing to worry me.

There are no hard feelings between Evers and myself. I want you to emphasize that point. It is a promotion for Johnny and he deserves it. He will make good. The boys will play ball for him after the bitterness wears away and Johnny is popular with the fans. No city can show a more loyal bunch of fans than Chicago has. They have been my friends in the past and I believe they are my friends now. All I can say is that in return for their loyalty I have always given the best that was in me.

Frank Chance Ex Manager

made him manager of the team for the next five years. There will be many changes. But Mr Murphy has assured me that I can do anything I want to in the way of trades and I will be responsible for whatever happens.

There had been many reports that after Chance had been completely shorn of any authority to protest the Cub team would be torn to pieces and Evers statement appears to substantiate these rumors.

The circumstances under which Evers stepped into Chances shoes were explained by a member of the team.

Evers didn't want the job and it took a lot of persuasion to force him to it he declared. In fact there wasn't a man on the team who wanted to become manager. Tinker frankly said he wouldn't take it under any circumstances and when he was

Gold Chain Gets New Ore Body.

Work Through Lower Mammoth Opens New Ore Deposit

A splendid strike was made this week in the western portion of the Gold Chain property and W. D. Looe, the assistant manager, feels confident that he has encountered the western system of the Grand Central ore zone. For some time the Gold Chain people have been developing the western section of their property from the Lower Mammoth workings, the drift which cut the ore being fully 1600 feet below the collar of the Gold Chain shaft and at least 100 feet lower than any of the ore which is now exposed in the older workings of the mine. For several reasons the strike is one of the most important ever made in this mine. In the first place it is far below the mine's deepest workings and then it is about 500 feet to the west of the ore body from which present shipments are being taken. Looe states that for over a month he has been getting values in the drift from the Lower Mammoth mine and that the strike was consequently expected. A report from the mine today indicates that the ore is carrying 41 ounces in silver, $2.50 in gold and 3 per cent copper. The Gold Chain will not doubt be in position to commence shipping from the new strike at an early date and if the proper arrangements can be made with the Lower Mammoth people an extensive campaign of work will be mapped out for that section of the property.

Operating Old Sunbeam

The lessees of the old Sunbeam mine at Silver City have already sent out a couple of carloads of dump ore and at the present time have a small force of men at work on the 300 level of the property. At that depth there is a fair sized stringer of good ore which is now being followed in the hope that it will lead to a larger deposit.

Operations at the Opohongo

Recent smelter returns show that the Opohongo ore is carrying better gold values and while there have been no new ore developments in this property during the past few months there is still a fair showing of ore between the 600 and 300 levels from which portion of the property the present tonnage of four carloads a week is being taken. The present selling price of the company's shares indicate the disappointment of the public in the failure to locate the ore on the lower levels. It is sometimes an easy matter to miss an ore body however and the management is still confident of getting into the ore from the mine which was sunk to a point about fifty feet below the 700. The drift which is being driven from this mine now contains some ore but it is quite evident that some more development work will be necessary in order to get into the main deposit. This drift is going off to the north and in that direction the Opohongo has a good sized strip of virgin ground. On the 300 level a drift is also being sent out toward the east. This is looked upon as an important piece of work as the face of the drift is still over 250 feet from the company's side line.

Better Ore From Grand Central

During the past week there has been quite an improvement on the 2700 level of the Grand Central mine where an important strike was made a short time ago. Assistant manager W. D. Looe says that a better grade of ore was also made its appearance in the raise which is being driven from this level. An assay made the other day showing 15 per cent copper, 6 ounces in silver and $2 in gold.

The Grand Central will undoubtedly be in line with a dividend during the month of December.

Eagle Has Rich Ore On 1300.

One of Tintic's newest bonanzas the Eagle & Blue Bell mine is certainly making a fine record in the matter of ore production and the best part of it is that ore which this property is now sending out is of very high grade. For many months the Eagle has had some high grade ore on the 100 level and recently the same character of ore was encountered on the 1300 level which has for some time been producing a large percentage of the mine's output. The ore on the 1300 level has already produced a number of cars which were good for $6,000 per car or thereabouts and some of the ore now being mined on the 1300 will run very close to this figure.

Supt. William Owens states that he aims to keep the mine's shipments up to about 14 carloads a week and that the manner in which the ore bodies have been developed makes this an easy matter.

Ore shipments, stock quotations and additional mining news on page 3.

Heavy Tonnage From May Day.

Mine Leading Tintic Properties in Production of Zinc Ore

In the production of zinc ore the May Day is leading all of the Tintic mines and according to Superintendent C. O. G. there is no less than thirty three faces of zinc ore exposed on six different levels of the mine. For November the output from this property will be 26 carloads or about 1300 tons. Of this output 250 tons was high grade lead ore and the balance zinc and when it is understood that the latter ore is netting the company on an average of about $850 per carload it can readily be seen that the May Day mine is making money in the absence of figures from the Salt Lake office it is hard to say what amount of money the company's treasury contains but the prediction that it will be a dividend for the fortunate shareholders in the near future seems to be well founded.

On the 1100 level of the May Day two machines are now in operation in a splendid body of ore faces samples from which show from 42 to 40 per cent lead. The most pleasing part of this new development is the fact that this is the first strike of importance to be made at such depth on the east side of Goddard mountain and for that reason the development of this ore body will be of interest to some of the neighboring properties.

On Wednesday of this week Supt. Griggs established a new record at the May Day when he hoisted and shipped a total of 123 tons of ore, previous to that time the best record for any one day being 75 tons. The May Day's tonnage for the week just closed also attained record breaking proportions a total of twelve cars being billed out.

Victoria's New Equipment

Within the next ten days the hostess Victoria mine will be operated by electricity all of the material necessary for this change in the equipment now being on the ground. The new compressor is also expected with in the next few days and it is perhaps safe to say that before the end of the year the switch over from steam power to electricity will have been brought about. This new machinery will put the mine in splendid shape for extensive operations and a much larger tonnage can then be expected. Conditions underground were never more satisfactory than at the present time.

Zinc From East Tintic Dev

Buckley and Scott who are operating the East Tintic Development property under lease are now making a pretty good force of men and making regular shipments of zinc ore which is being mined in various parts of the underground workings. They have already sent out about seven cars of this ore the returns from which have been highly satisfactory. Most of the ore shipped is coming from $800 to $900 per carload. During the past 18 months the adjoining properties the Proto and Eureka Lilly have been sampled for zinc but it seems that in this particular part of the district the East Tintic Development mine has a monopoly on that metal which of value having been found in the other mines.

Swansea Mine To Close

Within the next few days work will be suspended at the Swansea mine in the south end of the district. After a hard struggle in an effort to make the property pay its way the management decided upon a shut down and early in the present week preparations were made for the removal of the pumps and other equipment from the underground workings. This work will be finished and everything placed in readiness for the closing of the mine by the first of next week.

While the Swansea has been shipping considerable ore during the past few months the values were quite low and with a heavy operating expense which always accompanies mining operations where there is water to be handled it was impossible to make any money in fact it has been a losing game for the past few weeks. There are large quantities of low grade ore in the mine which can no doubt be handled to good advantage upon the completion of the mill which the Knight people are now planning to build.

The upper portion of the mine may possibly be turned over to some number of well known miners having been leased to the management for several years and which are above the water level.

Zinc Ore From The Gemini

The Gemini mine in which a large number of lessees are successfully operating is coming into prominence as a zinc producer. Last week two cars were loaded with zinc ore and started on their way to the smelter and within the next week or ten days three or four cars of the same character of ore will leave the mine. In the Gemini this ore is being mined by the lessees but in the neighboring property the Ridge and Valley which is being worked through the same shaft the company has a small force at work on a body of zinc ore which is located on the 1800 level.

Leasing operations in the Gemini are responsible for the circulation of a large amount of money among the local miners some of whom are drawing down big checks each month. Almost without exception the lessees are doing well.

After Gold Chain Ore.

At the property of the Tintic Development company at Mammoth Drifting is now under way on the 800 level and for the present sinking has been stopped. This ground is adjoining the Mammoth Gold Chain and Opohongo mines and it was the recent ore development in the Gold Chain which caused the resumption of operations after several years of inactivity. The shaft was sunk to the 800 level with out interruption and now it is the intention of the management to thoroughly prospect the country the first drift to be pushed out to the north in which direction the bulk of the company's ground is located. If the ore is not found at that depth the shaft will no doubt be sent down to the 1000 level.

Colorado Makes Report

A very complete report covering the past year's work has just been prepared and will soon be mailed to each shareholder of the Colorado company. The report shows that the ore production has been confined to the old channel where small stringers and offshoots from the main fissure have been followed with profit. The company had a cash balance of $110,748.18 on November 1st of last year and on November 1st 1912 the treasury contained $103,000.94. During the year the sum of $90,000 was paid out in dividends. The ore sales for the year brought the company $170,518.64.

Tintic's Wonderful Record

In commenting on the heavy output of the Tintic mine for the week ending last Friday the mining editor of the Herald Republican has the following:

Ore shipments from Tintic for this week again broke the production record. They exceeded last week's heavy output by 12 carloads or 600 tons. This week the total amounted to 232 carloads or approximately 11,600 tons of an estimated valuation of $200,000. At this rate Tintic after forty to fifty years of steady wealth giving to the world continues to increase its production. It is now producing over $1,000,000 a month or $12,000,000 a year.

C. E. Allen, mine manager for the United States company was in Eureka on Tuesday and Wednesday.

James Orelton was over from Stockton yesterday for the purpose of eating turkey with his wife and children.

L. F. Ruter returned to his home at Salt Lake on Sunday after spending a few days at Silver City for the purpose of looking after his mining interests.

The mines in the Mammoth end of the district are again having difficulty in getting their ore to the market. The engine used on the high line, being out of commission during the greater part of the past week.

Another carload of ore was sent forward to the smelter this week from the New Bullion property in which local people hold a lease. The ground is located just south of the Scranton mine and the lessees are H. T. Gear, J. H. McChesney and Maurice Kelly. The mine has produced considerable lead ore in years past but it was only recently that attention was called to the fact that it contained zinc in commercial quantities.

The case of Annie P. B. Houghton vs. the Ch. of Cons. mining company which was brought before the Fifth Judicial court of Juab county has been transferred to the federal court at Salt Lake. Mrs. Houghton asks for damages in the sum of $10,000 because of injuries which her son James Beddingfield sustained while at work in the defendant company's mine. While at work at the shaft Beddingfield's arm was struck by the counterbalance and an amputation was narrowly averted.

Scranton Resumes Work

Over the Scranton mine in which Tintic is now being made to secure miners to take the place of the men who went out on a strike last week. It reports which are in circulation here are correct the mine is operating with about ten men and guards are employed to prevent the strikers or their friends from interfering with the work. Guards are hardly needed however as the strikers have all secured other employment. The officers of the Tintic District Miners Union have posted notices which state that the Scranton is a fair and all friends of organized labor are warned against assisting in employment there. The union officials say that the men who quit their job had just cause for doing so and that until conditions are changed the Scranton people will have a hard time in getting miners.

Will Ask For A New Trial

Attorney Poulton, who defended James Hickman recently found guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of Dave Hutchinson is now preparing his motion for a new trial which will be submitted in the district court in the near future. Mr. Poulton was here this week securing data to be used in his motion for a rehearing of the case. He states that if he is unsuccessful in getting a new trial an appeal will be taken to the supreme court.

Bull Moose Hold Banquet

A Bull Moose banquet was given at the Wilson Hotel at Salt Lake on Wednesday evening. The menu including moose steak furnished to the Utah Progressives by members of that party who reside in the wilds of Washington. Captain Hugo Depiez of this city was selected as a member of the reception committee for this banquet and jollification but found it impossible to attend.

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland, a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland James Armstrong Maitland a protegee falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them while bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent which sweeps Enid into gorge where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland camper. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid however confess their love for each other. She learns that the hermit who killed his wife in the mountain

Oh God! Oh God! he cried in his humiliation and shame if I had only met you first or if my wife had died as others die and not by my hand in that awful hour I can see her now broken bruised bleeding torn I can hear the report of that weapon her last glance at me in the midst of her indescribable agony was one of thankfulness and gratitude I can't stand it I am unworthy even of her

But you could not help it it was not your fault And you can't help caring—for me—

I ought to help it I ought not love you I ought to have known that I was not fit to love any woman that I had no right that I was pledged like a monk to the past I have been weak a fool I love you and my honor goes I love you and my self respect goes I love you and my pride goes Would to God I could say I love you and my life goes and end it all He stared at her a little space. There is only one way of satisfaction in it all one gleam of comfort he added. And what is that?

You don't know what the suffering is you don't understand you don't comprehend. And why not?

"Because you do not love me. But I do," said the woman quite simply as if it were a matter of course not only that she should love him but that she should also tell him so.

The man stared at her amazed

Such fierce surges of joy throbbed through him as he had not thought the human frame could sustain. This woman loved him in some strange way he had gained her affection. It was impossible yet she had said so. He had been a blind fool. He could see that now. She stood before him and smiled up at him looking at him through eyes misted with tears with lips parted with color coming and going in her cheek and with her bosom rising and falling. She loved him he had but to step nearer to her to take her in his arms. There was a trust devotion surrender everything in her attitude and between them like that great gulf which lay between the rich man and the beggar that separated heaven and hell was that he could not cross.

I never dreamed I never hoped—oh he exclaimed as if he got his death wound this cannot be borne.

He turned away but in two swift steps she caught him.

Where do you go?

Out out into the night.

You cannot go now it is dark hark to the storm you would miss your footing you would fall you would freeze you would die.

What matters that?

I cannot have it.

It would be better so.

He strove again to wrench himself away but she would not be denied. She clung to him tenaciously.

I will not let you go unless you give me your word of honor that you will not leave the plateau and that you will come back to me.

I tell you that the quicker and more surely I go out of life the happier and better it will be for you.

And I tell you said the woman resolutely that you can never go out of my life again living or dead. She released him with one hand and laid it upon her heart. You are here.

Enid cried the man.

No she thrust him gently away with one hand yet detained him with the other—that was emblematic of the situation between them. Not now not yet let me think but promise me you will do yourself no harm you will let nothing imperil your life.

As you will said the man regretfully I had purposed to end it now and forever but I promise.

Your word of honor?

My word of honor.

knew them by heart she had read and reread them often when she had been alone. They had fascinated her. They were letters from some other man to this man's wife. They were signed by an initial only and the identity of the writer was quite unknown to her. The woman's replies were not with the others but it was easy enough to see what those replies had been. All the passion of which the woman had been capable had evidently been bestowed upon the writer of the letters she had treasured.

Her story was quite plain. She had married Newbold in a fit of pique. He was an eastern man the best educated the most fascinating and interesting of the men who frequented the camp. There had been a quarrel between the letter writer and the woman there were always quarrels apparently but this had been a serious one and the man had savagely flung away and left her. He had not come back as he usually did. She had waited for him and then he had come back—too late!

He had wanted to kill the other but she had prevented and while Newbold was away he had made desperate love to her. He had besought her to leave her husband to go away with him. He had used every argument that he could to that end and the woman had hesitated and wavered but she had not consented. She had not denied her love for him any more than she had denied her respect and a certain admiration for her gallant trusting husband. She had refused again and again the requests of her lover. She could not control her heart nevertheless she had kept to her marriage vows. But the force of her resistance had grown weaker and she had realized that alone she would perhaps inevitably succumb.

Her lover had been away when her husband returned prior to the last fateful journey. Enid Maitland saw now why she had besought him to take her with him she was afraid to be left alone. She did not want to depend upon her own powers any more. Her only salvation was to go with this man whom she did not love whom at times she almost hated to keep from falling into the arms of the man she did love. She had been more or less afraid of Newbold. She had soon realized because she was not blinded by any passion as he that they had been utterly mismatched. She had come to understand that when the same knowledge of the truth came to him as it inevitably must some day nothing but unhappiness would be their portion.

Every kind of an argument in addition to those so passionately adduced in these letters urging her to break away from her husband and to seek happiness for herself while yet there was time besieged her heart. Seconded her lover's plea and assailed her will and yet she had not given way.

Now Enid Maitland hated the woman who had enjoyed the first young love of the man she herself loved. She hated her because of her priority of possession because her memory yet came between her and that man. She hated her because Newbold was still true to her memory because Newbold believing in the greatness of her passion for him thought it shame and dishonor to his manhood to be false to her no matter what love and longing drew him on.

Yet there was a stern sense of justice in the bosom of this young woman. She exulted in the successful battle the poor woman had made for the preservation of her honor and her good name against such odds. It was a sex triumph for which she was glad. She was proud of her for the stern rigor with which she had refused to take the easiest way and the desperation with which she had clung to him she did not love but to whom she was bound by the laws of God and man in order that she might not fall into the arms of the man she did love in defiance of right.

Enid Maitland and this woman were as far removed from each other as the opposite poles of the earth but there was yet a common quality in each one of virtuous womanhood of lofty morality. Natural perhaps in the one and to be expected in the other but there. Now that she knew what love was and what its power and what its force—for all that she had felt and experienced and dreamed about before were as nothing to what it was since she had spoken—she could understand what the struggle must have been in that woman's heart. She could honor her reverently for her pity her.

She could understand the feelings of the man too she could think much more clearly than he. He was distracted by two passions for his pride and his honor and for her she had as yet but one for him.

She could understand how in the first frightful rush of his grief and remorse and love the very fact that Newbold had been compelled to kill his wife of whom he was beginning to grow a little weary under such circumstances had added immensely to his remorse and quickened his determination to expiate his guilt and cherish her memory. She could understand why he would do just as he had done go into the wilderness to be alone in horror of himself and in horror of his fellow men to think only mistakenly of her.

Now he was paying the penalty of that isolation. Men were made to live with one another and no one could violate the law natural or by so long an inheritance as to have so become without paying that penalty. His ideas of loyalty and fidelity were warped his conceptions of his duty were narrow. There was something noble in his determination it is true but there was something also very foolish. The dividing line between wisdom and folly is sometimes as indefinite as that between comedy and tragedy between laughter and tears. If the woman he had married and killed had only hated him and he had known it would have been different but since he believed so in her love he could do nothing else.

At that period in her reflections Enid Maitland saw a great light. The woman had not loved her husband after all she had loved another. That passion of which he had dreamed had not been for him. By a strange chain of circumstances Enid Maitland held in her hand the solution of the problem. She had but to give him these letters to show him that his golden image had stood upon feet of clay that the love upon which he had dwelt was not his. Once convinced of that he would come quick to her arms. She cried a prayer of blessing on old Kirkby and started to her feet the letters in hand to call Newbold back to her and tell him and then she stopped.

Woman as she was she had respect for the binding conditions and laws of honor as well as the Chance. Nay Providence had put the honor of this woman her rival in her hands. The world had long since forgotten this poor unfortunate in no heart was her memory cherished save in that of her husband. His idea of her was a false one to be sure but not even to procure her own happiness could Enid Maitland overthrow that ideal shatter that memory.

She sat down again with the letters in her hand. It had been very simple a moment since but it was not so now. She had but to show him those letters to remove the great barrier between them. She could not do it. It was clearly impossible. The reputation of her dead sister who had struggled so bravely to the end was in her hands she could not sacrifice her even for her own happiness.

Quixotic you say? I do not think so. She had blundered unwittingly unwillingly upon the heart secret of the other woman. She could not betray it. Even if the other woman had been really unfaithful in deed as well as in thought to her husband Enid could hardly have destroyed his recollection of her. How much more impossible it was since the other woman had fought so heroically and so successfully for her honor. Womanhood demanded her silence. Loyalty honor compelled her silence.

A dead hand grasped his heart and the same dead hand grasped hers. She could see no way out of the difficulty. So far as she knew no human soul except old Kirkby and herself knew this woman's story. She could not tell Newbold and she would have to impose upon Kirkby the same silence as she herself exercised. There was absolutely no way in which the man could find out. He must cherish his dream as he would. She would not enlighten him she would not disabuse his mind she could not shatter his ideal she could not betray his wife. They might love as the angels of heaven and yet be kept forever apart—by a scruple, an idea a principle an abstraction honor, a name.

Her mind told her these things were idle and foolish but her soul would not hear of it. And in spite of her resolutions she felt that eventually there would be some way. She would not have been a human woman if she had not hoped and prayed that she believed that God had created them for each other that he had thrown them together. She was enough of a fatalist in this instance at least to accept their intimacy as the result of His ordination. There must be some way out of the dilemma.

Yet she knew that he would be true to his belief and she felt that she would not be false to her obligation. What of that? There would be some way. Perhaps somebody else knew and then there flashed into her mind the writer of the letters. Who was he? Was he yet alive? Had he any part to play in this strange tragedy aside from that he had already assayed?

Sometimes an answer to a secret query is made openly. At this juncture Newbold came back. He stopped before her unsteadily his face now marked not only by the fierceness of the storm outside but by the fiercer grapple of the storm in his heart.

You have a right he began to know everything now I can with hold nothing from you.

He had in his hand a picture and something yellow that gleamed in the light. There he continued extending them toward her. Is the picture of the poor woman who loved ghost of suspicion to enter my mind it may have been a brother or her father in his youth.

And why did you wear it?

Because I took it from her dead heart. Some day I shall find out who the man is and when I shall I know there will be nothing to her discredit in the knowledge.

Enid Maitland nodded her head. She closed the locket laid it on the table and pushed it away from her. So this was the man the woman had loved who had begged her to go away with him this handsome Armstrong who had come within an ace of winning her own affection to whom she was in some measure pledged!

How strangely does fate work out

She Was Utterly Unable to Suppress an Exclamation me and whom I killed you saw it once before.

Yes she nodded taking it from him carefully and looking again in a strange commixture of pride resentment and pity at the bold somewhat coarse entirely uncultured yet handsome face which gave no evidence of the moral purpose which she had displayed.

And here said the man offering the other article is something that no human eye but mine has ever seen since that day. It is a locket I took from her neck. Until you came I wore it next to my heart.

And since then?

Since then I have been unworthy her as I am unworthy you and I have put it aside.

Does it contain another picture?

Yes.

Of her?

A man's face.

Yours?

He shook his head.

Look and see he answered.

Press the spring.

Suiting action to word the next second Enid Maitland found herself gazing upon the pictured semblance of Mr. James Armstrong! She was utterly unable to suppress an exclamation and a start of surprise at the astonishing revelation. The man looked at her curiously he opened his mouth to question her but she recovered herself in part at least and swiftly interrupted him in a panic of terror lest she should betray her knowledge.

And what is the picture of another man doing in your wife's locket?

She asked to gain time for she very well knew the reply knew it in deed better than Newbold himself! Who as it happened was equally in the dark both as to the man and the reason.

I don't know answered the other.

Do you know this man?

I never saw him in my life that I can recall.

And have you—did you—

Did suspect my wife?

Never I had too many evidences that she loved me and me alone for a its purposes. Enid had come from the Atlantic seaboard to be the second woman that both these two men loved!

If she ever saw Mr. James Armstrong again and she had no doubt that she would she would have some strange things to say to him. She held in her hands now all the threads of the mystery she was master of all the solutions and each thread was a chain that bound her.

My friend she said at last with a deep sigh you must forget this night and go on as before. You love me thank God for that but honor and respect interpose between us. And I love you and I thank God for that too but for me as well the same barrier rises. Whether we shall ever surmount these barriers God alone knows. He brought us together he put that love in our hearts we will have to leave it to him to do as he will with us both. Meanwhile we must go on as before.

No cried the man you impose upon me tasks beyond my strength you don't know what love is you don't know the heart hunger the awful madness I feel. Think I have been alone with a recollection for all these years a man in the dark in the night and the light comes you are here. The first night I brought you here I walked that room on the other side of that narrow door like a lion pent up in bars of steel. I had only my own love my own passionate adoration to move me then but now that I know you love me that I see it in your eyes that I hear it from your lips that I mark it in the beat of your heart, can I keep silent? Can I live on and on? Can I see you touch you breathe the same air with you be pent up in the same room with you hour after hour day after day and go on as before? I can't do it it is an impossibility. What keeps me now from taking you in my arms and from kissing the color into your cheeks from making your lips my own from drinking the light from your eyes? He swayed near to her his voice rose. What restrains me? he demanded.

SERVING A SUMMONS

By CLARA INEZ DEACON

It was just between twilight and dark that a Jersey cow owned by farmer Hollis jumped the field fence into the highway and sauntered down the road.

As Miss Jersey stepped slowly along enjoying the beauties of the evening an auto was coming up from the direction of Glen Head. It contained two young men and the chauffeur. It stole upon the cow unheard and hoisted her into the ditch and broke her back.

The house of farmer Hollis was only eighty rods away but there was no going back to notify him of the accident. The cow was dead and that settled that. It has been stated that the animal belonged to farmer Hollis. So it did in a way. In several other ways it belonged to his daughter Florence who had petted and cared for it since its birth. It made quite a difference whose cow it was.

Next morning the hired man reported the tragedy. Miss Florence went down the road and viewed the body and wept and then returned to the house to ask her father who was partially an invalid.

Well what are you going to do about it?

It was an auto I suppose?

Yes. And it may belong to any one of a thousand people?

Of course.

And be fifty miles away by this time?

Just so.

Well there you are. What can I do about it? I don't see that any thing can be done.

'Well I do' was the vigorous reply from the daughter.

Half an hour later Miss Florence was on the road with her pony and cart. Two miles up the highway was a road house at which nine out of ten autos bound either way might be counted on to stop. The girl drove up and called for the proprietor to come out.

An auto about 7 o'clock? he mused at her query. Yes there was one. It held two young men. It went down the road and must have passed your house.

And the young men—were they strangers?

Well yes and no. I know that one and he is the owner of the machine.

Is Burt Merriam and the other is Steve Dayton. They were great chums at college. I believe they had two beers here and went on.

And this Mr Merriam—where does he live please?

Over at Brookdale I understand.

She drove into Glen Head and to the office of a lawyer and told her story. The lawyer said he thought there was a case and added:

We might as well give the young man a chance. I'll apply for a summons and you better drive over and serve it on him.

Two days later Miss Florence drove over to Brookside with the legal document. After a few inquiries she located the house of the father of her victim but only to be told that young Mr Merriam was not at home and might not be for several days.

Her father said it would all end in smoke and that the rich alone controlled the laws but on the third day Miss Florence started out again to serve the summons. She was half way to Brookside when she saw an auto coming. The pony was a little skittish of them and she gave up the whole of the road and waited. The auto slowed down as it came up but nevertheless the pony chose to perform. He was standing on his hind legs and making ready to bolt and in her sudden fright the girl had lost the lines and was screaming when a young man leaped from the machine and caught the animal by the head. He was dragged several rods before his weight told and as Miss Florence ran to him she saw that he was hurt.

Shoulder out of joint I guess he said with a smile.

Let me see she replied. 'You must go to a doctor as soon as you can. What a ninny I was to let Fred act up so! I can manage him now however.'

The plans of mice and men you know. I was on my way to see a Mr Hollis on a matter of business. Wish this had happened later.

Business with my father?

Then you are Miss Hollis?

Yes.

And the young lady who called at my home?

The same.

Was it about the cow?

It was sir.

'I know we killed one but I was rushing my chum to the city to catch a steamer for Europe. I only got back three hours ago. Don't go off and sue me. Don't have me arrested. Don't call me hard names. I'll come back in a day or two and settle.'

The young man was as good as his word though no better than a one-armed man. He was only too happy to hand over eighty dollars and he laughed at the summons and said it should be treasured as a souvenir. He had to call again to see if the pony had recovered from its scare and a third time to consult Mr Hollis about potato bugs and the fourth time he had the cheek to make no excuse at all.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion.

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat every thing your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

'I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolute no confidence in them I began taking Chambers Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets.'

The Chambers Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

When purchasing Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefitted the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand the loss. All we ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will.

The Wild Sheep of Western Kansas

by H. FRANK WALLACE

YOU come by way of Taohow the new city—a mushroom growth of some six hundred years old—not the old which lies further to the west. The wall straggles up a hillside and round a sharply rising knoll—a fine natural watch tower. Two thirds of the area enclosed is devoted to cultivation while the town itself flatroofs and in the case of some houses two storied meanders above the lower slopes and is almost entirely inhabited by Tibetan Mahomeds. It is in reality the border town between Tibet and China though Tibet proper lies thirty miles to the west. A few li from the city you cross a low pass from which it is possible to see the snow capped heights of the Minshan mountains. They look down on a huddled mass of gradually lowering hills torn and intersected by green rushing mountain streams from which radiate an interminable series of birch and fir clad gullies. The Tao river sharply divides this type of country from the low bare cultivated slopes where Taohow lies. From the summit of the pass one drops down between narrow grass covered corries to the little town—if such it can be called—of Choni within a few hundred yards of the river. Incidentally one passes from Jackadalsal Inert China into an atmosphere of border feuds mediaeval raids pine covered snow capped peaks and a wild race of Highlanders. It is a quaint little place like a pigeon's nest in a cluster of red cliffs dominated by a lamaerial containing six hundred monks as dirty and evil looking as most of their tribe. The capital of the Prince of Choni is the only town within his dominions which extend over a district half as large as Scotland. A half caste Tibetan aged twenty three he furnishes a very pretty parallel to Rehoboth. His predecessor who was the eighteenth of his line a prince and wise old ruler adopted him. The prince on his death turned away the old man who had hitherto helped to govern the forty eight wild tribes who owned allegiance to their master and substituted his own friends spending his nights with them in gambling opium smoking and other forms of dissipation. He is dependent on China and under the authority of the county official who in turn is subject to the vicerey of Shensi and Kansu. This personage resides at Lanchow. When we arrived at the capital the prince and about two hundred men (he owes no tribute to China but must supply two thousand irregular cavalry if called upon) were away in the hills fighting the Te pu a wild aboriginal tribe who infest the country to the south of the Minshan mountains. These interesting people are divided into fourteen clans and are much dreaded by the Chinese who only venture through their country once a year. They then organize a big caravan of merchants with guards and get through as quickly as possible. The Te pu are very hostile to strangers and it would probably be as much as one's possessions were worth to venture into their territory alone. A clan protects its own friends and the friends of its chief but not the friends of another clan who are looked on as legitimate prey. When they hold a stranger in great affection and reverence they have a custom of regarding him as their adopted father. As an illustration of their character the prime minister of the late Prince of Choni being adopted as father by about forty Te pu went alone among them to retrieve the grandchildren of a Christian convert whom they had kidnapped. All the kings horses and all the kings men were powerless but this one man because he was their friend safely entered their country and returned with the children. They are not agriculturists but live chiefly by barter and come into Choni occasionally for provisions. I saw a number of them later on including a lama who performed a monotonous and somewhat senseless dance for our edification. At times they dash down in a sudden raid as the Chonians are watering their horses and livestock at the river and whirl them away into the hills before their owners have time to recover from their astonishment. One of their priests was imprisoned by the prince in his yamen. Six of them set out to rescue him and had the impudence and courage to go and cook their food in the yard of the yamen. So much for the Te pu!

We spent some days in Choni and on September 11th left for the little village of Archuen thirty miles to the south where we were the paying guests of one Chishi. He was a keen hunter a little thin wiry man with a pleasant face. The Tibetan houses are far cleaner and more tidily kept than those of the Chinese. We occupied the large family room which they all contain and were really very well off. Our hostess a most masterful lady who ruled her husband with a rod of iron had to be warned not to invade the sanctity of our chamber at certain hours otherwise she and the rest of the village crowded to what they considered a show organ fized by a beneficent Providence for their especial benefit in and out of season.

Our object in coming to Archuen was to secure heads of the wild sheep of western Kansu. Dr. J. A. C. Smith our companion sent home a specimen which the natives brought him early in 1911 but so far as I am aware it has not hitherto been secured by a white man in this particular part of China. Mr. R. Kingdon Ward has erroneously described it as Ovis Hodgsoni but this it most certainly is not. A full grown male stands about three feet at the shoulder and weighs approximately one hundred and fifty pounds (I give later the measurements of one which I subsequently shot). The horns are smooth growing more or less at right angles to the skull and curving upwards and outwards at the tips. The animals are handsomely marked with black on the forelegs with a white patch on the knee. A black stripe runs up the hind legs to the point of the thigh. The hoofs are also black. The chest of the older rams is of a similar color speckled with white on the neck the black marking extends between the fore legs. There is a black stripe on the side extending from the point of the thigh to a point short of the elbow. The tip of the tail is black. The general color is gray brown though in certain aspects there is a decidedly blue tinge. The muzzle is dark to a line between the eyes turning to a red brown tone at the edges where it merges into the general gray tone of the face. Very closely allied to the burhel of India (Ovis montanus) I cannot be certain if they are identical. It is difficult to compare the two from photographs but from the remarks of local hunters it would certainly appear that there are differences particularly in the shape of the horns. After a week's hunting from Archuen we decided to move so as to be closer to our ground. George had got on the track of a herd containing three rams while I had seen a lot of nine headed by a single ram with one horn. George located his herd on an extremely steep rocky ridge which thrust itself from a grassy slope above the river. The ledges were sprinkled with fir and rhododendrons which added considerably to the difficulties of the task. He slept out on one occasion beneath a seen nothing since my first day out so we moved five or six miles to the east.

The weather was very changeable and we experienced snow hail thunder rain and mist in disagreeable succession. On September 25th I reached camp just as it was getting dark to find that the two shots I had heard in the forenoon were the heralds of success and that George had secured a very pretty head. I had an alternation of good and bad luck for spying a ram at 7.30 I had my stalk spoiled by three miserable meddlesome diggers followed him all day had four distinct stalks missed him once and finally killed him at five o'clock in the evening.

The horns measured 20 inches in length 12 inches in circumference and 23 inches from tip to tip. This of course is small in length for an Indian burhel but good in other respects. The native hunters declare that the heads in this district never attain to very much greater length and Dr. Smith tells me that the head which he sent to England was somewhat thicker in circumference but not so long and much more clumsy in appearance. All of which would seem to prove that his was an older ram which had worn down the tips of his horns, while my specimen is probably that of a rather younger beast very nearly if not quite in his prime.

He certainly was not at all strong smelling which is a characteristic of the Indian variety, though George said he noticed a distinct odor from the head. The native hunters declare that these sheep run in January and that the lambs are dropped in May. If this is so the best rams were probably still on higher ground which we had not time to reach.

The measurements of my specimen are as follows:

	Inches
Height (allowing for weight when stand- ing)	35
Length (nose to root of tail straight line)	48
Length (following curve of back)	55

NAPOLEON RELIC FOUND

It is reported here says a Paris correspondent of the New York Times that at the town of Dorpat in Russia there has just been discovered a remarkable relic of Napoleon's Russian campaign in the form of a copy of Goethe's "Werther" which was his personal property and accompanied him wherever he went.

The volume which is bound in leather and in an excellent state of preservation contains as well as Napoleon's signature a curious inscription on the fly leaf by an unknown hand stating that the book was stolen by a Cossack from the emperor's sledge one night on the retreat from Moscow.

Besides the date of the theft and the name of the thief details are given of the method by which the Cossack managed to possess himself of the volume.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

AMIR OF AFGHANISTAN HELPS TURKEY

The specter of a holy war is unfolding itself before the eyes of Europe.

It began when Italy clashed with Turkey in Africa and now that the little Christian states that act as a buffer between the larger powers and Turkey are at war the cloud is darkening rapidly among all the Mohammedan nations.

In the mosques of India the pagodas of Malaysia and the shrines of a dozen other nations prayers are being said for the success of the Turkish arms.

All Islam has thrown its religious support to the khalifate at Constantinople and should the sultan as head of the Moslem faith unfurl the green flag of the prophet it is feared the fanatic Mohammedan nations would begin holy wars.

Even the most conservative of European diplomats admit there is a possibility of political alliances between Turkey and other Islamic nations.

The Russian persecutions in Persia have fired the Mohammedans there and the Asiatic Moslems are looking for a champion who can come to the rescue of the threatened Islamic states—Turkey and Persia.

Habibullah Khan Amir of Afghanistan is the man. One word from him alarmists say and others fear will bring on a series of religious clashes that will entangle every nation in Europe, Asia and Africa.

The amir has not failed to take advantage of the almost universal manifestation of respect paid him and in a meeting held in Kabul recently to express sympathy with the Turks he spoke in no uncertain manner.

SOMETHING NEW IN ORGANIZED CHARITY

Before the state legislature in Albany N. Y. this winter will be presented a plan for America's first department of home assistance the first organized government bureau to care for the destitute home. More than a generation ago governmental aid for the families of the very poor was abandoned in New York city living conditions—and living costs—have changed radically since then today the specially appointed committee of investigation for the city conference of charities and correction urges governmental aid as the only hope of real social justice and livable support for the homes of the destitute. There are hundreds of women and children starving in New York for whom only the government can adequately care.

Of course it is primarily a matter of the cost of living said O. F. Lewis chairman of the conference committee on governmental aid of New York city. The price of the necessities of life has increased so much that destitution has become a problem too great for the private societies to meet alone. I have no doubt that the private charitable organizations could take care of the destitute families if they only had enough money but under present conditions they have not enough money, and so something else must be done—something else must be added.

What we are suggesting is something absolutely new. But it is simply the outgrowth of present conditions. It is a question that has broken through many times lately in various parts of the United States, here in New York we are first bringing it to the point of definite organized action.

PRINCESS NURSING WOUNDED SOLDIERS

According to press reports from Greece the hospital arrangements of the Greek army are entirely inadequate for emergencies. The army has acted with such rapidity that it is impossible for the field ambulances to keep pace with it. Princess Alice wife of Prince Andrew the fourth son of King George with a staff of picked nurses is following the army and rendering first aid to the wounded by whom she is spoken of as the ministrating angel.

At Sarandopole she performed all most miracles fitting with her staff from one quarter to another until late in the evening when she was compelled to stop because her clothing was drenched with blood.

Princess Helena daughter of the Crown Prince has also arrived with her hospital train.

Looking around the railroad station at Larissa which was littered with wounded men some on ambulances others propped against the walls she exclaimed in pathetic tones:

Only three weeks to prepare for all this! It was not enough time and this is only the beginning.

MRS. GROVER CLEVELAND TO WED AGAIN

Mrs. Grover Cleveland widow of the former president of the United States is to be married next April to Prof. Thomas Preston an honorary professor at Princeton University and now occupying the chair of archaeology at Wells College Aurora N. Y. the institution attended by Mrs. Cleveland then Frances Folsom.

Although formal announcement has not been made and probably will not be made until after the debut of Miss Esther Cleveland this winter the fact of the engagement has been known for some time among the intimate friends of Mrs. Cleveland and Professor Preston.

The second romance of the woman who as the bride of the White House charmed a nation and whose high character and devotion to her distinguished husband have been by example a national influence toward high ideals of wifehood is the outcome of an acquaintanceship of little more than a year's duration with a man practically unknown in America.

Professor Preston who is about fifty years of age a literary scholar and a linguist of international distinction is a man of strong but retiring personality and although he has held a high place among the faculty of Princeton for years it is said that his first meeting with Mrs. Cleveland took place not many months ago.

NEW MODES IN FUR

- 1 Sealskin Lined With White Velvet
- 2 Ermine Scarf
- 3 Molekskin Trimmed With Chinchilla Squirrel

There doubtless has been an unusual amount of fur sold this season for the fashion oracles have decreed that this shall be a fur season.

In many respects models for this winter vary but slightly from those of the preceding season but this is to be expected for much of the beauty of a fur garment depends upon the quality and color of the fur and the fine workmanship displayed in its fashioning rather than upon originality of line or trimming.

The most beautiful furs are at their best when severely handled. No applied trimming or bizarre cutting can improve Russian sable or silver fox and as a rule the better grades of long-haired furs are more effective when merely self-trimmed. Scarfs of one variety of fur are much in evidence too this season even in the short-haired furs such as seal ermine and chinchilla.

Many of the scarfs are three quarters or even a yard wide and proportionately long being lengthy enough to drape around the body and fall almost to the floor.

Ermine is usually left unadorned save for a fringe of ermine tails. And incidentally it may be noted that the fashion for scattering tiny splashes of black and faint yellow over the surface of an ermine coat scarf or muff no longer prevails. Preference is now given to tailless or white ermine with the black tails applied as fringe or in ornamental clusters.

Entire coats of ermine are frequently seen. Sometimes the pure white fur is trimmed with the black and white tails again black and white ermine is trimmed with black fur such as the finest breitschwanz silky caracul black fox etc. These fur coats are ample luxurious and full length the right front crossing far over the left but so cut that the coat is drawn in toward the bottom to give the approved narrow silhouette. Of fine seal breitschwanz molekskin and sable coats there is apparently no end and these furs are made up into coats ranging from the conservatively practical coat for street wear to the sumptuous evening wrap.

Sealskin is perhaps the smartest fur for street or evening wear and one of the sketches in the large drawing shows an extremely chic model for afternoon or evening wear made of sealskin. The coat has a high turn down collar at the back and at the front there are long revers the right revers crossing over to the left and fastening at the left side. The back of the garment is also cut in point shape the point crossing over to the right side. The coat is lined with white velvet.

HAVE A NOVELTY IN GLOVES

Something Decidedly New That is a Welcome Addition to the Fashion.

To discover a novelty in gloves is a feat worth chronicling. The newest gloves bear the name so familiar this season—Robespierre. These kid gloves are given the novel touch in the turnover cuffs which display a lining contrasting in color to the glove. A tan glove for instance will have a red or a king's blue lining while a white pique will be made very pretty with a Nile green shade or a soft lavender tint.

For very dressy wear these turnover cuffs may be lined with lace just as were the gloves of the dandies of Louis XVII's time. To complete the velvet suit when calling or teaing these new gloves are most attractive.

To stick in them by the way there are dainty little glove handkerchiefs either embroidered or with colored borders to match the turnover cuffs. Only a few inches square to be sure yet these handkerchiefs are wonder fully useful to touch the lips after a cup of tea. So soft and fine are they that one almost forgets them when they are tucked in the palm of the hand.

Merit of Neatness

There are many girls who without being at all good looking always appear neat and smart.

They may only have a small dress allowance but with it are able to appear more attractive than girls who with twice their amount of money often look overdressed or dowdy.

What is the secret of this? Surely it is due to the neat girl's taste she always puts on her clothes with care and makes a point of her appearance being neat and tidy. She keeps her wardrobe orderly and has a place for everything her ribbons gloves handkerchiefs etc. are never bundled into a drawer just to get them out of the way but are carefully put in their proper places.

NATTY WAIST MODEL

This very dainty waist of white crepe de chine trimmed with bands and points of beautiful lace. It crosses slightly in front over a tucked chemise of white mousseline de soie the collar of which is trimmed with lace.

Bands of lace finish the kimono sleeves and the undersleeves are of the mousseline de soie. The girdle is of ribbon or velvet ribbon prettily knotted at the side with a bunch of little roses.

Small Women Models Again

According to a report by les Grandes Modes de Paris the small figure is fashionable. During former seasons one could find a large number of tall and stately mannequins in the dressmakers' ateliers while nowadays only women of small stature are chosen to show the fall and winter styles—Women's Wear.

IN THE WRONG STATE

Story of Moonshiners and Love in the Kentucky-Tennessee Mountains.

By HAROLD CARTER

John Vincent federal revenue officer acting in Kentucky pulled in his mare and coolly surveyed the heights in front of him. On every side arose precipitous mountains clothed with their perennial garb of spruce and pine. The trail which wound sluggishly through the defile disappeared into the heart of the forest to reappear a sinuous winding ribbon along the flank of the crest. There was no sign of human habitation in that rugged and abandoned land.

Yet somewhere on Bear mountain was the cabin of the Norman moonshiners and outlaws. And for the arrest of Jim Norman the youngest Vincent held a warrant. He had set forth to bring him into Kempville. Others had held warrants too but Vincent newly appointed to his post was more reckless than they and he had dared to ride alone into the heart of the Norman stronghold.

He reined in suddenly for his quick eyes had caught a glimmering flash from the peak in front of him. It might have been the sun glancing on some hidden pool. But it looked more like light reflected from a rifle barrel.

After a moment's hesitation he urged his mare into a canter and plunged into the undergrowth. For the next half mile he was safe until he emerged upon the mountain slopes. And when at last he came into the sunlight again he tethered his beast to a sapling and drawing his revolver began to ascend the peak cautiously keeping out of the range of the hidden marksman of whose existence he was tolerably sure.

He crouched beside the trail plunged into the scrub pine emergent lost again until at length he saw the bare acclivity of Bear mountain in front of him. And near the summit was a small log cabin set in the midst of a tiny patch of garden ground. This was the place of which he was in search.

His weapon in his hand Vincent leaped forward scaled the boulders on the summit and appeared before agely standing over her. He had often seen her in Kempville this dark-haired and blue-eyed mountain girl of that perfection of type which flourishes as in its native soil in the Kentucky hills. The sight of her flushed with her race her eyes alight with triumph set his heart furiously beating and mingled with this new emotion was one of anger and shame at having been outwitted.

Jim? she drawled. Oh Jim was in the woodshed when you came up. I reckon you won't find him now, though Jim's a swift runner. I reckon Jim's swifter than me and you couldn't catch me she mocked.

Then—then— he stammered. Now Mr. Vincent said the girl soothingly. If it hadn't been for me you'd never have reached Bear mountain. Jim had a bead on you all along the trail. You've got me to thank for saving your life by this here change of parts.

Well I've got you anyway said Vincent sullenly.

I reckon not she drawled.

Why not?

Because she answered this in Tennessee and I reckon your territory's Kentucky. Vincent was dumbfounded. He had forgotten the warning carefully conveyed that the Norman cabin was designedly perched upon the border line, and that therefore he must take his captive within the cabin itself.

You stop right where you are said Lily. If you lay a finger on me I'll tell the governor of Tennessee.

A light of amusement flickered in Vincent's eyes. Deliberately he stretched out his hand found the cool slender fingers of the girl and held them.

I guess the law doesn't say anything against amicable visiting between the states does it? he asked.

Well she admitted if you come that way I—I guess it doesn't.

Vincent stepped forward and planted both feet firmly upon Tennessee soil.

Nor about—this? he asked. And placing his arm round her, he drew her to him and kissed her upon the lips.

Lily he said this isn't love at first sight for I've loved you since I first saw you in Kempville. But it comes mighty near and if I can't get Jim—why I reckon I'm going to get you some day.

CHRONICLE OF THE SINNER

Being the Story of a Man Mean Enough to Deceive Even His Trusting Wife.

At two o'clock in the morning William Wilberforce succeeded after many efforts in getting his key to serve the purpose for which it had been made. Then he stumbled into the hall and fell over an upturned corner of a rug. This awakened Mrs. Wilberforce who switched on the electric light.

When she got downstairs her husband was sitting up and staring vacantly at a beautiful picture of Queen Louise of Prussia.

Why William! exclaimed his wife what has happened? Where are your glasses? How did you get that cut on your nose? Why are your clothes all covered with mud?

Mr. Wilberforce put his hands up to his face and sobbed. Dearest Mrs. Wilberforce cried kneeling beside him tell me what is the matter.

I can't in dear he replied, it was awful! Horrible!

O William! Is it possible that you have been—

No no it ain't possible he interrupted. Wash assaulted by robberies. Thash what happened?

Darling! Are you badly hurt? Did they rob you of everything?

No no only stunned that's all—they didn't get my watch in they didn't get my money. I'm all right—Jush stunned, thash all.

Shant I phone for the doctor, dear?

No no all right Jush a little stunned—thash all.

Then believing him she helped him upstairs and assisted him to get into bed.

Yet there are those who refuse to admit that simple faith is better than Norman blood—Chicago Record Herald.

Massenet's Manuscripts

By his will Massenet left his manuscript music to the Opera but it will not be placed in the archives of the National Academy of Music until after the death of Mme. Massenet. The deceased composer expressed the wish that his wife should remain in charge of the manuscripts because their careful arrangement, classification and preservation had been wholly her work. France has a jealous eye upon Massenet's relics, for the memory of her composer is very dear to her.

Every day some anecdote of the musician appears in the newspapers, of which the following taken from the Figaro is typical. A critic indulging in extravagant praise of Massenet to his face and wound up his flattery. Wagner? What was he? His talent is most absurdly exaggerated. I have to pick and choose among a lot of rubbish in Wagner. Is that so? came the composer's suave reply. I should be quite happy with what you leave.

ONE OF WISCONSIN'S BEST END PLAYERS

Capt. Joseph Hoeffel

Joseph Hoeffel, captain of the 1912 University of Wisconsin football squad played a backfield position during his high school days at Green Bay Wis. but he has been a permanent fixture at left end since his freshman year. He is now a senior and considered one of the most reliable men on the team a deadly tackler and fast in getting down the field.

"KECKIE" MOLL IN COMMAND

Former Wisconsin Star Succeeds Marquis F. Horr as Football Coach at Purdue—Team Neglected

A bomb was exploded in the Purdue football camp when the board of directors of the University Athletic Association dismissed Marquis F. Horr, football coach from his position and turned the coaching of the Boilermaker squad over to Coach Keckie Moll who has charge of the back field only. George G. Dunlap, an instructor in the university who has been coaching the freshmen was appointed varsity line coach.

The action of the directors while it came unannounced was not entirely unexpected for it was generally reported that an investigation was being made of the conduct of Coach Horr with a view to either disciplining him or releasing him from Purdue's employ. Improper conduct is the language used by the directors in its report ordering the dismissal of Horr. It is charged that he has so conducted himself as to make his future connection with the university undesirable. Purdue's poor showing when every body expected a championship team led to the drastic action. The action is declared in no sense retaliatory neither is it due to a desire for punishment for inefficiency. The directors feel that the football squad owing to Coach Horr's misconduct has been neglected.

Coach Horr came to Purdue from Northwestern a year before last. He had previously achieved fame as a player on the Sycamore university eleven being selected as all American tackle two consecutive years. He went to the Olympic games several years ago and was a star in the weight events.

Marvelous Swimming Record

Peter John Newell the aged Samoan swimmer who for more than twenty years held the record for long distance and endurance swims broke his own record by remaining 27 hours and 12 minutes in the water without support of any kind and without partaking of food. Newell's great feat was accomplished on his sixty-eighth birthday anniversary.

SCANDAL IN ENGLISH RUGBY

Many Devonshire Players Receive Compensation for Lost Time in Addition to Expenses

English Rugby football is faced with a scandal which may lead to a wider breach in the English Rugby Union as that which caused the formation of the Northern Union in the nineties.

Rugby is ostensibly a purely amateur game in England in distinction to the association game which is played largely by professional teams.

Recently the Northern Union adherents invaded Devonshire and attempted to recruit players from the existing Rugby clubs. This campaign led to the exposure of the fact that many of the Devonshire players were receiving compensation for time lost from work in addition to their expenses while playing with their teams. This practice is open among the team of the Northern Union which has revised the Rugby rules until the form it plays is so strenuous that professional players are necessary for a successful team.

Some of the Devonshire players who have been suspended for negotiating with the Northern Union invaders state that the payment for lost time is general in the Rugby Union and they declare that they will expose the system at the investigation which has been ordered by the governing committee of the union.

The scandal comes at a particularly inopportune time as the South African Springboks have recently commenced a tour of the Rugby Union. England is particularly anxious to present an unbroken front to the invaders in order to wipe out the broken series of defeats which the last South African team inflicted on the English fifteens several years ago. During that tour the South Africans suffered only one reverse and that was at the hands of the Scottish Union. The present invaders declare that they will return home with a clean score and they are determined to show the Scots that their victory was a fluke.

GOSSIP AMONG SPORTS

What is your candid opinion of a newspaper that spells center fielder centre fielder?

It is said that McGraw Dootin and Clarke would like to obtain John Kling if Boston is through with him.

The Boston Braves are to have a new manager a new secretary and several new players next season.

Eppa Rixey, Philly star pitcher has returned to the University of Virginia and is playing on the basketball team. Ty Cobb announces he may quit baseball. This may be the first heat in Cobb's dash for the $15,000 salary demand.

Postponing a boxing match for two weeks on account of bike races show Boston still remembers the middle ages of sport.

Harry Ables, Texas southpaw once with Birmingham won a mess of games for Oakland of the Pacific coast league this year.

Clark Griffith after one year on the job as manager at Washington had his salary raised from $7,000 to $10,000 without a fight.

The vote must be in at general headquarters in this city not later than December 4. One of the proposed amendments would have the general executive board consist of 11 members instead of seven as at present. The amendment proposes that the board shall consist of the general president of the organization who would act as chairman of the board the general secretary who would act as secretary of the board the general treasurer the first general vice-president and one member from each of the seven divisions in the United States and Canada. Another proposed amendment provides that officers of local unions shall be elected for a term of one year instead of six months.

Washington—Of the 29,000,000 persons engaged in industry in the United States 6,000,000 are farmers and 4,000,000 are farm laborers. 12,000,000 are wage earners and salaried employees. 1,500,000 are professional persons and about 2,000,000 are employers. No. 7

Chief Declares Initial Dividend

At the Chief Co's mine a very nice tonnage of high grade ore is being placed on the market and but for the shortage of railroad cars the output would be even greater. Previous to the Bingham labor troubles which resulted in the partial closing of some of the smelters the Chief ore was handled by the International Smelting company and while awaiting for conditions to again become normal the mine has made a temporary contract with the United States Smelter & under this new contract Mr. Fitch does not care to ship anything but the higher grade product.

Some time ago this paper mentioned the fact that in the Chief Co's mine had been sunk in ore practice all the entire distance between the 1000 and 1200 levels and now that preparations have been made whereby the ore can be stored to good advantage from the 1200 the work of sinking a winze from this level for the purpose of following this same body of ore has started. The winze is down about twenty five feet below the level and a drift is also being driven for the same reason on the 1400 level. A donkey engine will at once be installed on the 1200 to be used in hoisting from the winze.

The Chief has some very nice stopes of ore on various levels but the new stope between the 1000 and 1100 is of such liberal dimensions that some of the others will look small in comparison.

The treasury of the Chief Co's mine is now said to contain about $50,000 and this week a dividend of 10 cents per share or $100,000 was ordered paid. The checks will however not be mailed out until early in January when the company's fiscal year closes. Not only is the management going to maintain a surplus of $250,000 but the question of dividends will be handled so conservatively that there will be no doubt of the mine's ability to earn the sum which is to be distributed quarterly or semi annually as the case may be.

Low Grade Zinc May be Valuable

It may be that at no distant day the treatment of zinc ores running under 20 per cent will be a general thing in the camps of the west but at present the smelters have all they need to care for in the high grade products says the Mining Science. The handling of the leaner materials will have to follow in time but it is not to be forgotten that such supplies of zinc ores as the west is now drawing upon are really virgin deposits. The zinc in dusts so far as the Rocky Mountain states are concerned has scarcely made a beginning. It may be said to still be in the bonanza stage if that word is suitable for any save the precious metal industry.

Concerning the zinc problem of the future a well known zinc buyer says: "There is no question in my mind but that the day will come when the zinc plants throughout the country will be able to handle successfully 18 per cent zinc, but it will take a little time yet. At present all of the plants are securing sufficient ore of a good grade so that they do not have to bother about the low grade material as it will keep."

Treasury Contains Large Sum

The Iron Blossom shareholders held their annual meeting at Provo on Saturday at which time the following officers were elected: Jesse Knight, president; J. W. Knight, vice president; W. L. Mangum, secretary; treasurer R. D. Allen; and Amanda M. Knight, additional directors.

The report submitted at this meeting shows that during the past year the mine has shipped a total of 55,733 tons of ore and that the treasury contained $333,800.83.

To Connect With Neighboring Mine

While the new hoisting plant at the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom mine has been tried out a time or two during the past week it will probably not be placed in operation until after the installation of the new steel galvanized frame. The material for this frame is expected within the next few days and the bunch of steel workers who will erect it at the mine have promised to do the work in about ten days.

The work of sinking the winze from the 600 level of the No. 3 workings of the Iron Blossom is progressing nicely and already a depth of about 70 feet has been attained. This winze, which the management has estimated at 100 feet, will be used to sink a drift to the 800 level, and will be used to sink a drift to the 800 level, and will be used to sink a drift to the 800 level.

By the first of January a connection will no doubt be made between the No. 1 workings of the Iron Blossom and the Star section of the Black Jack. The work recently taken up on the 300 level of the Black Jack in behalf of the Iron Blossom resulted in the opening of a very nice body of ore.

Colorado Finds New Ore Body

Colorado stock has been one of the features of the past week on the stock exchange, the activity no doubt being due to recent disclosures on the 300 level from the No. 1 shaft where so much silver ore has been encountered. The point at which this ore was found is to the north of the shaft and perhaps fifty feet below the old ore deposit which made this mine one of the richest in Tintic. At first it was thought that this new bunch of ore was an offshoot from the old vein and while it may yet prove to be such, it is a very good chance of it being an independent vein. In the event that it is a new ore body it will no doubt have an important bearing on the future of the mine. The ore body has a width of about ten feet on the 300 level and already it has been followed about the same distance above the 300 with everything in the date that it also extends below the level. Recent assays show the ore to carry about 60 ounces silver with some lead. Higher silver values have been found but the ore will not average up better than 60 ounces.

and now Supt. Zabriske proposes to connect this point with the 600 level of the Iron Blossom's No. 1 workings. About 175 feet of drifting will be sufficient to make the connection which will facilitate the handling of this new bunch of ore and also give both properties better ventilation.

Lessees Are Shipping at Victor

Saulsbury and Moyle, who are operating a lease at the Victor mine, sent out another car of ore this week. This ore was taken from the dump but the lessees have a fairly good bunch of ore in a cruise above the 300 level. The Smith brothers and Thomas Hillman were at work on another block of ground in the same mine are also loading a shipment of ore.

Tintic Standard Operations

The Tintic Standard property in the eastern end of the Tintic district drifting is still in progress on the 1000 level where the work is following the contact between the lime and the quartzite. The drift has already been driven in a northerly direction for a distance of about 400 feet cutting through some very promising looking ground. While the showing is quite favorable at the present time there is nothing especially new to report according to John Westerdahl.

who is superintending operations. L. J. Paddatz the manager and one of the heaviest shareholders is certainly placing a good example before some of the other East Tintic claim owners. He has kept pugging right along even when the general outlook for the mining industry was not the best and is deserving of success. Unless all indications are misleading there is a body of ore in the Tintic Standard ground and if persistent work will locate it the efforts of Mr. Paddatz and his associates will be crowned with success.

The Opex and Emerald

A small force of men has for some time been at work repairing the Opex shaft, new timbers being put in between the two lower levels. No significance should be attached to this work which is simply to keep the shaft in good condition.

The Emerald people are still operating through the Opex shaft and just as a recent drift is being driven to ward the southeast at a depth of 2000 feet the work being under the direction of Ed Oakes. At this great depth there seems to be a mighty opportunity for the Emerald to get into the ore.

The shipments stock quotations and additional mining news on page 3.

Electric Line To Scranton Mine.

The new electric line which is to connect the Scranton mine with the main line of the Utah Power company will soon be completed. D. H. McArthur and his force of electricians are now engaged in putting the finishing touches on the work. It was necessary to cut in five miles of line in order that the Scranton mine be supplied with power the cost of the line being a little over $4000 or $300 per mile. In places the poles are set in a V-shape formation.

In the next few weeks the Scranton mine will no doubt have a complete overhaul as for the operation of the compressor and hoist has given the management more or less trouble. The absence of water at the mine made necessary the installation of a gasoline engine which has given fairly good service for many years. With electric power the mine will be in shape for more extensive operations and the shipment of a much heavier tonnage of ore.

Corporation Tax Should Be Paid

The representatives of Tintic companies should not overlook the fact that the corporation tax becomes due next Sunday. Such companies as fall in to the delinquent list will be forced to pay a fine of $10 in addition to the tax. If the tax is not then paid proceedings are brought to annul the charter.

Mining Notes.

The president and secretary of the East Crown Point Consolidating company have just issued a statement covering the past operations on the ground owned by the eastern end of the Tintic district. The recent assessment of one-half cent per share as levied for the purpose of continuing development. The shareholders are invited to meet with the directors at a meeting to be held at Provo on December 21st at which time matters of interest will be discussed.

The directors of three Tintic mines met at Provo on Tuesday and passed dividends. They were the Colorado Grand Central and the Gold Chain. The Colorado dividend is 3 cents a share of $30.00 to be paid on December 20th. The Grand Central shareholders are to receive 5 cents per share or $25,000 on January 1st and the Gold Chain will pay 3 cents per share or $3,000 on December 20th.

At the Crown Point property the drift is still being driven toward the south on the lowest level which is something less than 600 feet in depth and during the past few weeks the showing has been very encouraging. Loosely ground filled with small bug holes has been encountered and in the eastern end of Tintic this is regarded as a very good indication of ore. The face of the drift is now about 140 feet from the shaft and for the present the management will continue work in the same direction.

Pay rolls books and tickets suitable for mining companies can be secured at the Reporter office.

Beck Tunnel Ore Breaking To East

Supt. Perry Fuller states that the Beck Tunnel property is looking as well as ever and that on the 300 level from the No. 1 shaft where drifting has been going on for some time a nice bunch of ore has just been located. The ore is probably an offshoot from one of the old stopes and while it is nothing big the present showing indicates that it will be good for a few shipments. The main Humboldt ore chute which has been followed in the Beck Tunnel ground for a distance of several hundred feet is not keeping its course toward the south but seems to be breaking off toward the east. This undoubtedly means that it will eventually connect up with the main ore zone from which the Beck Tunnel shipped so heavily years ago and from which this mine paid its big dividends. Ever since this ore was followed over to the Beck Tunnel line by the Uncle Sam people the management of the former property has been hoping that it would continue on to the south as this would carry it through a larger piece of Beck Tunnel ground than if the ore breaks off to the east and into the old workings of the mine.

From the No. 1 shaft of the Beck Tunnel a drift is now being sent out for the purpose of prospecting a very promising piece of ground which was developed to a certain extent a number of years ago when work was being handled through the old LaPeine tunnel. It will be remembered that before the LaPeine was taken over by the Beck Tunnel some ore was shipped from these workings and the drift which is now being sent out in that direction will cut the same vein something like 200 feet deeper. Two or three mineralized fissures have already been encountered and the present showing leads the management to believe that some ore will be found.

The great strides made in the perfection of electrical appliances have been recognized by early every man and woman in Tintic.

That this Xmas will see more electric irons, toasters, grilles, percolators, etc. given as gifts is an assured fact from the increased number of sales that have been made at the local appliance stores. Many a woman will receive an electric iron on her Xmas tree. It may be hubby brother or mother who presents it to her. She has probably seen her husband over the hot heavy and dirty old fashioned iron. After December 25th there will probably be hundreds of Tintic women in the new way.

And hubby will be influenced in purchasing an electric iron from an economical standpoint as the electricity is cheaper than coal.

If the housewife is fortunate in possessing an electric iron—she will probably get an electric toaster—an attractive little appliance that makes toast on the breakfast table right beside her plate.

What if she gets there is no doubt about it—she will be an electrical Christmas.

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland, a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland, James Armstrong Maitland's protegee falls in love with her. His persistent wooing of the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a man who had been Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirby, the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent which sweeps Enid into gorge where she is rescued by a mountaineer. Kirby after a thrilling experience camps in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Kirby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Kirby cooks breakfast for Enid after which they go on tour of inspection. The letter which Enid had kept in her pocket tells her that the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead and says he has sworn to never cherish her memory by living in solitude. Enid, however, confesses their love for each other. She learns that he is a man who killed his wife in the mountains. Enid discovers the writer of the letter to Newbold's wife to be James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is tracked by the bell and that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory. A Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong's companion, Kirby and Robert Maitland find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin and know that the girl is in his keep.

Not altogether admirable had been James Armstrong's outwardly successful career. In much that is high and noble and manly his actions—and his character—had often been lacking but even the base can love and sometimes love transforms if it be given a tinge, made a man and prince out of the fustian book and his real love for Enid Maitland might have been enough for Armstrong than to himself or any one who knew him as he was and few there were who had such knowledge of him dreamed was possible. There was one thing that love could not do however it could not make him a patient philosopher a good waiter. His rule of life was not very high but in one way it was admirable in that prompt bold desire action was his chief characteristic.

On this certain morning a month after the heart-breaking disaster his power of passive endurance had been strained to the vanishing point. The great white range was flung in his face like a challenge. With its secret recesses lay the solution of the mystery. Somewhere dead or alive beyond the soaring rampart was the woman he loved. It was impossible for him to remain quiet any longer. Common sense reason every argument that had been adduced suddenly became of no weight. He lifted his head and stared straight westward his eyes swept the long semicircle of horizon across which the mighty range was drawn like the chord of gigantic arc or the string of a mighty bow. Each white peak mocked him the insolent aggression of the range called him irresistibly to action.

By Heaven he said under his breath rising to his feet winter or no winter I go.

Robert Maitland had offices in the same building. Having once come to a determination there was no more uncertainty or hesitation about Armstrong's course. In another moment he was standing in the private room of his friend. The two men were not alone there. Stephen Maitland sat in a low chair before another window removed from the desk somewhat staring out at the range. The old man was huddled down in his seat, every line of his figure spoke of grief and despair. Of all the places in Denver he liked best his brother's office fronting the rampart of the mountains and hour after hour he sat there quietly looking at the summits some times softly shrouded in white some times swept bare by the fierce winter gales that blew across them some times shining and sparkling so that the eye scarce sustain their reflection of the dazzling sun of Colorado and at other times seen dimly through mists of swirling snow.

Oh yes the mountains challenged him also to the other side of the range. His heart yearned for his child but he was too old to make the attempt. He could only sit and pray and wait with such faint and fading hope as he could still cherish until the break up of the spring came. For the rest he troubled nobody. Nobody noticed him nobody marked him nobody minded him. Robert Maitland transacted his business a little more softly a little more gently that was all. Yet the presence of his brother was a living grief and a living reproach to him. Although he was quite blameless he blamed himself. He had not known how he had grown to love his niece until he had lost her. His conscience accused him hourly and yet he knew not where he was at fault or how he could have done differently. It was a helpless and hopeless situation. To him therefore entered Armstrong.

Maitland began. I can't stand it any longer I'm going into the mountains.

You are mad. I can't help it. I can't sit here and face them damn them and remain quiet.

You will never come out. Oh yes I will but if I don't I swear to God I don't care.

Old Stephen Maitland rose unsteadily to his feet and gripped the back of his chair.

Did I hear aright sir? he asked with all the polished and graceful courtesy of birth and breeding which never deserted him in any emergency whatsoever. Do you say—

I said I was going into the mountains to search for her.

It is madness urged Robert Maitland.

But the old man did not hear him. Thank God he exclaimed with deep feeling. I have sat here day after day and watched those mighty hills and I have said to myself that if I had youth and strength as I have love I would not wait.

You are right returned Armstrong equally moved and indeed it would have been hard to have heard and seen that father unresponsively and I am not going to wait either.

I understand your feelings Jim and yours too Steve began Robert Maitland arguing against his own emotions even if she escaped the flood she must be dead by this time.

You needn't go over the old argument Bob. I'm going into the mountains and I'm going now. No he his mouth to interpose further objection. You needn't say anything more. I'm going now. I'm going now. I'm going now.

to decide what I'm going to do. There is no argument there is no force there is no appeal there is nothing that will restrain me. I can't sit here and eat my heart out when she may be there. But it's impossible.

It is impossible. How do I know that there may not have been some body in the mountains she may have wandered to some settlement some hunter's cabin some prospector's hut.

But we were there for weeks and saw nothing no evidence of human life.

I don't care. The mountains are filled with secret nooks you could pass by within a stone's throw and never see into she may be in one of them. I suppose she is dead and it's all foolish this hope, but I'll never believe it until I have examined every square rod within a radius of 50 miles from your camp. I'll take the long chance the longest even.

Well that's all right said Robert Maitland. Of course I intend to do that as soon as the spring opens but what's the use of trying to do it now?

It's use to me. I'll either go now here in Denver or I must go to seek for her there.

But you will never come back. But you once get in those mountains alone I don't care whether I do or not. It's no use old man I am going and that's all there is about it.

Robert Maitland knew men. He recognized finally when he heard it or when he saw it and it was quite evident that he was in the presence of it then it was no use to say more.

Very well he said. I honor you for your feeling even if I don't think much of your common sense.

Damn common sense cried Armstrong triumphantly. Its love that moves me now.

Why Steve expostulated Robert Maitland surely you know I would risk anything for Enid. Somehow it seems as if I were being put in the selfish position by my opposition.

No no said his brother. It isn't that. You have your wife and child but this young man—who now that he had made up his mind was anxious to be off.

Well what do you say Kirby? Not that it makes any difference to me. That anybody says. Come we are wasting time. Interposed Armstrong.

Jim Armstrong answered Kirby decidedly. I never thought much of you in the past and I think since you've put out this last project of yours that I'm entitled to call you a damn fool which you are and I'm another for I'm going into the mountains with you.

At that moment there was a tap on the door. A clerk from the outer office bidden to enter announced that old Kirby was in the ante room.

Bring him in directed Maitland eager to welcome him.

He fancied that the newcomer would undoubtedly assist him in dissuading Armstrong from his foolhardy useless enterprise.

Mornin' old man drawled Kirby. Howdy Armstrong my respects to you sir. He said sinking his voice a little as he bowed respectfully toward Mr. Stephen Maitland a very sympathetic look in the old frontiersman's eyes at the sight of the bereaved father.

Kirby you've come in the very nick of time at once began Robert Maitland.

Allus glad to be Johnny. Kirby smiled the older man. Armstrong here continuing.

Kirby didn't love Armstrong. He didn't care for him a little bit but there was something in the bold hard Oh thank God! cried Stephen Maitland fervently.

I know you don't like me answered Armstrong. That's neither here nor there. Perhaps you have cause to dislike me perhaps you have not. I don't like you any too well myself but there's no man on earth I'd rather have go with me on a quest of this kind than you and there's my hand on it.

Kirby shook it vigorously.

This ain't committin' myself he said cautiously. So far I'm concerned you ain't good enough for Miss Maitland but I admire your spirit.

Armstrong an I'm going with you. Tain't no good twont' produce nothing most likely well never come back again but jest the same I'm going along. Nobody's goin to show me the trail. My nerve and grit when it comes to helpin a young female like that girl s as good as anybody's. I guess You're her father he drawled on turning to Stephen Maitland and I ain't no kin to her but by gosh I believe I can understand better than any one else yere what you are feelin.

Kirby said Robert Maitland smiling at the other two. So have gone clean back on me. I thought you had more sense. But some o' I guess it's contagious for I am going along with you two myself.

And I cannot I accompany you? pleaded Stephen Maitland eagerly drawing near to the other three.

Not much said old Kirby promptly. You ain't got the strength of man. You don't know them mountains nuther. You'd be helpless on a pair o' snow shoes there a n't anything you could do yod jest be a drag on us.

Without sayin anything about myself which I'm too modest for that there ain't three better men in Colorado to tackle this job than Jim Armstrong an Bob Maitland an— Well as I said I won't mention no other names.

Go a wess you all gentlemen faltered Stephen Maitland. I think perhaps I may have been wrong a little

Go a wess you all gentlemen faltered Stephen Maitland. I think perhaps I may have been wrong a little prejudiced against the west. You are men that would do honor to any family to any society in Philadelphia or any where else.

Lord love ye drawled Kirby his eyes twinkling. There ain't no three men on the Atlantic seaboard that kin match up with two of us yere to say nothin of the third.

Well said Robert Maitland the thing now is to decide on what's to be done.

My plan said Armstrong is to go to the old camp.

Yep said Kirby that's a good point of departure as my seafarin father down Cape Cod way used to say an wot's next?

I am going up the canon instead of down said the man with a flash of inspiration.

That ain't no bad idea nuther assented the old man. We looked the ground over pretty thoroughly down three men even considered what was to be done next.

We must begin a systematic search tomorrow said Armstrong decisively as the three men sat around the cheerful fire in the hut.

Yes assented Maitland. Shall we go together or separately?

Separately of course. We are all hardy and experienced men. Nothing is apt to happen to us. We will meet here every night and plan the next day's work. What do you say Kirby?

The old man had been quietly smoking while the others talked. He smiled at them in a way which aroused their curiosity and made them feel that he had news for them.

While you was puttin' the finishin' touches on this yere camp I come across a heap o' stuns that somehow the wind had swept bare there was a big rift in front of it which kept us from seeing it afore. It was built up in the open yere there was no trees an in our lumberin operations we wasn't lookin that a way I came across it by any chance an—

Well for God's sake old man," cried Armstrong impatiently what did you find anything?

This answered Kirby carefully producing a folded scrap of paper from his leather vest.

Armstrong fell on it ravenously and as Maitland bent to him they both read these words by the firelight.

Miss Enid Maitland whose foot is so badly crushed as to prevent her traveling is safe in a cabin at the head of this canon. I put this notice here to reassure any one who may be seeking her as to her welfare. Follow the stream up to its source.

WM. BERKELEY NEWBOLD.

Thank God! exclaimed Robert Maitland.

You called me a fool Kirby said Armstrong his eyes gleaming. What do you think of it now?

It's the fools I find said Kirby sapiently that generally gits there. Providence seems to be a watchin' over em.

You said you chanced on this paper Jack continued Maitland. It looks like the deliberate intention of Almighty God.

I reckon so answered the other, simply. You see he's got to look after all the fools on earth to keep em from doin too much damage to themselves an to others in this yere crooked trail of a world.

Let us start now urged Armstrong.

Tain't possible said the old man, taking another puff at his pipe and only a glistening of the eye betrayed the joy that he felt otherwise his phlegmatic calm was unbroken his demeanor just as undisturbed as it always was. We'd jest throw away our lives a wanderin round these yere mountains in the dark. We've got to have light an clear weather. Ef it should be snowin in the mornin we'd have to wait until it cleared.

I won't wait a minute said Armstrong. 'At daybreak weather or no weather I start.

What's your hurry Jim? continued Kirby calmly. The gals safe one day more or less ain't goin to make no difference.

She's with another man answered Armstrong quickly.

Do you know this Newbold? asked Maitland looking at the note again.

No not personally but I have heard of him.

I know him answered Kirby quickly an you've seed him too Bob, he's the feller that shot his wife that married Louise Rosser.

That man?

The very same.

You say you never saw him Jim? asked Maitland.

I repeat I never met him said Armstrong flushing suddenly but I knew him wife.

Yes you did that— drawled the old mountaineer.

What do you mean? flushed Armstrong.

I mean that you knowed her that's all answered the old man with an innocent air that was almost childlike.

When the others woke up in the morning Armstrong's sleeping bag was empty. Kirby crawled out of his own warm nest opened the door and peered out into the storm.

Well he said I guess the damn fool has beat God this time. It don't look to me as if even He could save him now.

But we must go after him at once urged Maitland.

See for yourself answered the old man throwing wider the door. We've got to wait till this wind dies down unless we give the Almighty the job o' lookin after three instead o' one.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chamber's Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat everything your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

"I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chamber's Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chamber's Dyspepsia Tablets."

The Chambers Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

When purchasing Chamber's Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefited the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand the loss. All we ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will.

DANGEROUS FACTOR IN 1913

Washington Team Expected to Cut Big Figure in Championship Race in American League

Owing to the success which the Washington club has had this year it is the opinion of many that the team will be a more dangerous factor for the championship of the American league in 1913 than it has been in 1912. This is the first season in which Washington has been a boardwalk promenade in the junior organization. Heretofore the Washingtons have traveled along the side streets peeping out now and then to watch the big show.

Griffith has a team which is composed of some very good material some average material and no material which is really bad. If he is able to hit up a little strength in one or two positions between now and the beginning of the next season he may enter the fight in the spring with a formidable aggregation.

Another fact to be considered in regard to the chances of the Washingtons next year is that the team will not start with mild curiosity as to its future. The players have found that they can win and if they get a good training season they are likely to step out in front at the drop of the hat and make everybody come to them.

Johnson will probably be assisted by a better pitching staff than operated with him this year and that is going to add to the success of the team. If Johnson had a running mate who was the same type as himself the Washingtons might have won the championship this year in spite of the fact that they were outplayed in some other departments of the field. Their defense would have been so strong that their ability to make two or three runs to a game or perhaps even a better margin than that would have pushed them out in front.

RATH IS A VALUABLE PLAYER

White Sox Second Baseman Leads American League With Eighty One Passes to Credit

Morris Rath of the White Sox that splendid little second baseman who received little boosting when he joined Comiskey's team but who made good with a vengeance is the best walter of em all. leaguers with eighty-one passes to his credit leading Dottie Bush of the Tigers by one.

A ball player who leads off and can get so many free trips to first is valuable in the extreme. Pitchers on other teams say Rath is the hardest man to throw to in the league. They can't explain why except he has a keen eye and refuses to hit unless the ball crowns the plate.

Yachting an Expensive Sport
Sir Thomas Lipton of England who has decided not to challenge for the America's cup this year proved himself the yachting champion in European waters by winning 23 first prizes out of 29 races in which he competed. He beat the German emperor's yacht and the Krupp schooner in their own waters. Sir Thomas three attempts to lift the America's cup has cost him $2,000,000 and about $5,000,000 has been spent by Englishmen in the 12 attempts to recover the trophy since the America beat all comers in the race round the Isle of Wight in 1851.

Lacrosse Increasing in Popularity
Lacrosse the national game of Canada is rapidly becoming a worldwide sport. The Britisher has scattered cricket and association football wherever he has settled. Baseball is confined almost entirely to Americans and Canadians and is being taken up by the Japanese and Chinese. On the other hand lacrosse is played not by Canadian residents in foreign lands but by the teams composed of natives in the United States Great Britain Australia New Zealand South Africa Japan etc.

Husky Bunch of Brother Athletes
At Parramatta Australia eight brothers of the Heckenberg family, averaging 224 pounds have formed themselves into a tug-of-war team. They are all over six feet in height, the tallest being six feet seven inches and their weights run from 203 pounds to 272.

WILFUL PENELOPE

Father's Scheme for Keeping the Old Compact.

By FRANCIS A. COREY

Colonel Brady crushed the letter in his big hand. It was written on the official paper of a noted law firm in the city of New York.

Well, he ejaculated, I thought of that old compact. It's hard to realize that my daughter is now grown up and sitting to another nest. I sighed. All the sun went out of his home when Penelope left it. She stole his eye. But the day of one day resigning her to her husband was not his chief worry. He would be like her to love unwisely. An experience of years in trying to guide his daughter had taught him that she had the more determined her own sweet will. He would be like her to love unwisely. An experience of years in trying to guide his daughter had taught him that she had the more determined her own sweet will.

He came to class his face a feather's weight. He well what she had at old agreement. I thought of the best man in the world and she would be like her to love unwisely. An experience of years in trying to guide his daughter had taught him that she had the more determined her own sweet will.

The color ebbed from Penelope's cheeks.

Fiddlesticks, dad! What does the betrothal of two infants amount to? she said scornfully.

I've heard from the young man. He proposes to hold us to the compact.

But he and I have never met—That's why I'm having your portrait painted my dear—that he may see what you're like before coming to claim you.

Oh, Penelope gasped taking a step forward as if to tear the canvas in shreds. I won't marry him! So there! You were a silly dad ever to get mixed up in such foolishness. You've got yourself into a pretty mess.

But there's money involved—a tidy sum—$50,000—

She wheeled on him. To you'd barter your daughter's happiness? she flashed.

It isn't the money child, but a solemn compact made with the dead must be kept. He looked down into the mutinous face his strong lips tightening. Penelope, you've had your own way ever since you were born. Now it's my turn. You are in duty bound to marry this man. Marry him you shall!

I shall—shall I? she mocked with glittering eyes.

You ought to know your daughter well to make so rash a declaration. Suddenly catching her breath in a sob she flung herself into his arms.

Oh, it's too ridiculous. Now give me a kiss dear old dad and let the whole miserable business drop.

The browbeaten man had been too long under the little tyrant's dominion to press the point.

Penelope had a wretched night. Dimly she realized why marriage with this stranger whose name she did not know was so obnoxious to her.

When she took her pose for the next morning's sitting her pretty face had lost its rosy freshness. A teary look was about her eyes. Owen Deering dashed on the colors recklessly for a few moments then threw down the brush.

Mrs. Brady what is it? he cried huskily. Please tell me.

Look and tone were too much for Penelope. Flushing her hands over her face she broke into low nervous sobs.

Oh, I'm the most unhappy girl in the world.

What about Penelope my darling?

That was the straw too much. Down went her hands and down went her head upon his shoulder. In a stormy gust of excitement she told him everything.

I could always twist dad around my finger! Now he's firm as a rock. Oh, what shall I do?

Marry me! Deering whispered eagerly.

Dad would never consent. Well, I'll elope.

Bright color came into Penelope's cheeks. She was so steeped in wilfulness and perversity the suggestion appealed to her powerfully. Then came the thought of the big silent father who had never denied her anything in all her cherished life.

Oh, no! I couldn't get married with out dad. She cried. And then in the next breath. Oh, I know what we'll do! Well, clasp hands and make a solemn vow to marry each other and never never to marry anybody else! It will be a thousand times more binding than that silly betrothal of two irresponsible children.

Deering nodded and smiled. What ever you say, he replied.

Now cried Penelope when the whimsical suggestion had been acted upon. I heard the lion in his den.

Several hours later two flushed radiant people entered unheralded Colonel Brady's city office. The colonel regarded them fixedly a moment then shut and bolted the door.

Good morning, young people. What can I do for you?

It was Penelope who replied. Dad, she said in a rather shaky voice. Major Graham's nephew will have to look elsewhere for a bride. Please write and tell him so. I've promised to marry Owen Deering and I will not go back on my word.

Colonel Brady wore a broad grin as he met her mutinous gaze.

All right my dear. And now that you two have settled things between you I may as well tell you something. Owen here is the major's nephew.

Penelope fell back a step trembling with anger as she realized what a trick had been played upon her by the parent she had worsted heretofore in every battle.

Owen's arm slipped quickly about her waist.

I'd seen you—fallen in love with you—before the portrait was ever thought of. He whispered. Forgive me dear for falling in with your father's scheme. Don't let it turn you against me. You—you've promised—to marry me you know!

So I have, smiled Penelope suddenly relenting.

The clever for Sea Work.

A fisherman in Crete has evolved the following plan for recovering articles dropped over with the refuse from the ships in Suda Bay. The water being absolutely clear he scans the bottom with his water glass and when he sees a plate or other article he takes from the bottom of the boat an octopus attached to a line which he drops down just over the object.

When the octopus is right over it the fisherman at the top jerks the line which makes the octopus cling at once to the thing nearest it which in this case is the plate. Then the plate and octopus are pulled to the surface.

ICELAND, PARADISE OF SPORTSMEN

HOT SPRINGS NEAR REYKJAVIK

It is probably difficult for the average tourist health seeker or sportsman to realize that within our days Reykjavik the capital of Iceland can be reached from Lenth.

Yet such is the case and perhaps it may be more surprising to learn that during the summer months the climate is mild and equable although the extreme northern part of the country is north of the arctic circle.

Last year I spent four months in this historical and romantic island the inhabitants of which still keep to their ancient customs in language dress and government.

The latter although nominally Danish as the king of Denmark has the veto since 1903 had his own minister who under the direction of a parliament which meets every two years looks after the affairs of the country. The crown has not yet once exercised the right to dismiss or amend any of the bills passed by the althing since the practically home rule bill of 1903 was passed.

During my visit the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Jon Sigurdson the great patriot who established free trade with all nations in 1854 was held and the opportunity taken to open the new university. Former students had to study at Copenhagen or other recognized universities but now they can take their degree in law medicine or divinity at Reykjavik.

The opening was very impressive and picturesque the whole town and countryside turning out in gala attire many coming from villages or lonely farms forty to fifty miles distant on their strong little ponies which are almost the only means of travel in the country. A few had little carts decorated with shrubs and artificial flowers.

After the ceremony which took place in the parliament house (the university proper is in the parliament house but there are several classrooms in various parts of the town) the mayor made a short speech after which the band struck up the Icelandic national anthem a very weird and doleful tune.

Reykjavik an Up to Date Capital.

A procession was then formed headed by the band playing the Danish national anthem followed by the foreign consuls who were all in uniforms the town and county councillors the decorated cars and little girls and boys (the former all dressed in white) carrying the national flag came in the rear. The procession then proceeded to the cemetery where a massive laurel wreath was placed on Sigurdson's grave which is marked by a handsome monument.

The capital itself is modern and up to date. While I was there a Danish theatrical company performed in the little theater and an excellent cinematograph entertainment was held every night where one might see everything from the coronation procession to the Grand National.

One of the two large and comfortable hotels boasts of excellent music in the restaurant every evening both summer and winter.

The althing or parliament consists of forty members who represent the 70,000 inhabitants on the island of which 11,000 reside in Reykjavik.

It is not generally known that Iceland and not Britain is the mother of parliaments. In 929 a representative parliament was constituted and its first meeting was held at Thingvellir.

A great sunken plane between two rifts with Thingvall lake before it and the gigantic Broadshield mountain looking down upon it.

Thingvellir which is thirty-five miles distant from Reykjavik has a weird and indescribable beauty and ascination of its own. There are many rifts and fissures in the lava covered plains which make it dangerous for strangers to roam without a guide. Many of these rifts in the lava rock are almost hidden by the undergrowth and an unwary step might precipitate one forty feet into ice cold water of an unknown depth.

Quite close to the inn and the parsonage is the largest rift. In the center of this is the Rock of Laws which is almost an island where nearly 1,000 years ago laws were made and judgments passed.

Further south a detached rock is known as the blood stone where for certain offenses the backs of criminals were broken and the bodies were thrown into the deep transparent water which rises from some subterranean source and runs from the rift underground toward the lake.

The ruins of the booths where the members of the thing or parliament and where at times long ago the heroes of the Sagas dwelt are still visible.

Iceland an Anglers Paradise.

The Thingvall lake teems with trout and char as do almost all the lakes and rivers in Iceland. The rivers mostly belong to farmers who own their own land and who charge from 1 to 2 kroner (1 kroner is equal to about 25 cents) a day per rod.

Trout of from one to five pounds are plentiful and it is a rare occasion indeed when one does not return with a full basket.

There are a number of salmon rivers the best of which is the Laxa near Reykjavik which is let to an Englishman but excellent sport can be got in remoter districts at a moderate charge.

In the season excellent shooting can be obtained. No license is required and the farmers generally give permission to shoot over their land. Ptarmigan snipe whimbrel plover ducks and wild swan abound.

Among the trips which can be taken from Reykjavik are Thingvellir and Hekla the latter about 5,000 feet above sea level which is the highest volcanic mountain in Iceland and as late as 1878 was in eruption and did a great deal of damage to the surrounding farms. Fortunately no lives were lost. It commenced on September 2 and lasted over four months the ashes actually being carried as far as Shetland.

Excellent accommodation can be had at the Parsonage Fellsmull. It is usual however to take several pack ponies as well as riding ponies to carry tents and other equipment to camp out. If the Great geyser is included the trip will last at least a week.

There is an inn near the geyser where a bed can be obtained and soap purchased. Strange to say the Great geyser will sometimes not descend to spout unless he receives from 20 to 60 pounds of soap and then he may remain sulky for a full week or even longer but on occasions he may spout several times a day. Why the soap affects him is unknown and likely will remain unknown for all time coming.

On the main country roads caravans of pack ponies from five to twelve in number are frequently met with. The ponies are tied head to tail that is the leader will have a rope attached to his tail which is fastened to the bridle of the following pony and so on and sometimes cows and goats are included.

Punctuality is not a strong point with the Icelanders a few hours here or there making no difference in keeping appointments. Taking them all round however they are a good natured and extremely intelligent lot and certainly put the average Britisher to shame in their knowledge of languages nearly all speaking Danish and English as well as their own. The recognized guides are highly educated and cultured men who can be relied upon to provide good ponies riding saddles and pack saddles.

Iceland has no trees with the exception of two or three small woods on the east coast. The government has been endeavoring to cultivate pines and firs near Reykjavik but hitherto have met with but little success.

In Reykjavik there is a large and handsome museum which from an antiquarian point of view is of immense interest. Among its collections are many manuscripts belonging to the old Saga writers. Under the same roof is a natural history collection embracing specimens of all the animals birds and fish in Iceland. There is also a splendid library and a good reading room with some thousands of books of reference in Icelandic English German and French.

PLUSH MUCH FAVORED

IS SEEN IN ALL EXAMPLES OF THE NEW MILLINERY.

Fad for Huge Low Hats With Little Trimming Seems Likely to Hold Over—Some Charming Color Combinations Seen

Fall hats have been blossoming plentifully ever since early in August and now even the fuzziest and warmest of plush and beaver and fur hats are on view.

Plush in particular fairly romps through the new millinery figuring in every type of hat from the soft little tailored model for street and outing wear to the handsomest of big dress hats and white plush though lamentably impractical takes precedence.

Oh you can clean it easily with French chalk the saleswoman says airily—but you can't and there will be sad sights in connection with those white plush hats a little later when soot and dust have done their worst. While they are clean however they are soft and pretty and becoming and Cassandra was a deservedly unpopular woman so a truce to dire prophecy.

There are two kinds of plush one with thick soft velvet like pile and one with longer nap and a little more of the look of silk beaver. The latter is the one more often used for the dress hat and there is frequently a low plain crown or slightly draped crown of this plush in white associated with a wide brim of black velvet or black satin.

A single great velvet rose white or black may be the only trimming for the summer fad for huge low hats little trimmed seems likely to hold over but more often the trimming is some fancy feather set at a spiny angle or a full egret or tuft of paradise plumes oddly and somewhat rakishly posed. Full fluffy trimming of facts concealing the hat lines are as little used as they have been during the summer. The line is the thing and in the small hats whatever trimming is applied is likely to be narrow and high while the trimming of the larger hat is usually low and unobtrusive or narrow and angling.

Fashions in Ostrich Plumes.

There are of course many exceptions to this rule. Beautifully shaded or plain toned ostrich plumes curl over some of the wide brims or around low crowns but so far few of them stand up in the old dashing fashion.

Large tulle bows do blur the outlines of some of the hats but these bows appear most frequently upon medium sized hats not upon the large shapes and often the whole hat is of the tulle with touches of fur to lend ors in millinery and is used even more for trimmings than for hat shapes. This color tones down satisfactorily most of the brilliant hues and in fur marabout velvet tulle etc gives good trimming effects. A draped toque of glowing geranium red for example has taupe marabout next the face and a feather fancy of marabout and heron posed at a curious angle.

Moleskin is much used also to sound the modish taupe note in millinery and there are quantities of chic little toques fashioned from this fur and matching velvet or silk or felt with some dull gold or silver ornament or a flash of bright color as a relieving note.

Barbaric bits of embroidery in bright wools or silks trim some of these fur toques and similar small shapes in velvet beaver or plush. Another trimming fancy suitable only for the little outing or tailored hat is the use of tiny narrow leather straps and buckles or tiny gold buttons such as are provided in various gay colors for the ornamentation of white or black belts. Several of these set one above another on the front of a soft round crown roll brim hat in plush beaver or velours make a smart trimming for the outing hat but the idea is of course merely a passing fad and will soon be tiresome.

Preferred Hat Shapes

The small high shapes or small shapes trimmed high will in all probability take the lead as first hats for autumn wear. The tailored costumes which are the first essential of the fall outfit and the French designers have sent over many of these on Girondin Marquise and various nondescript lines.

For their trimming as has been said before are the high narrow bows and cockades and feathers. A single ostrich plume standing straight and curling over and forward at the end is posed on the front in some of these small models and often this plume shows wonderful shading through several colors. Coque feathers too are used to lend height and various uncured feathers are pressed into service.

But quite in contrast to these high arrangements are low trimmings even on certain types of small hats an ostrich plume for instance curling around the hat and falling low over the ear and throat or even over the shoulder. Trimming is set under the hat brim too flat wings or bows or plumes that depart from their flatness to droop low at side or back.

The mustard and sulphur yellows and the Raphi shades are modish in millinery black usually toning down their brightness and making them less trying to the average complexion.

A Tuscan hat lined with soft white straw and edged with black velvet is the subject of the illustration.

Kay Was Turned Loose

The Reporter as misinformant last week regarding the outcome of the preliminary hearing of William Kay charged with murder in the first degree for the killing of Nick Witka at Monticello, was not bound over to the district court but was discharged by the justice of the peace at Nephew who claims that the defendant acted in self defense.

While there are a great many people on the east side of the county who do not fall for this story of self defense believing that when a man goes home and gets a shot at and comes back and kills a man he commits a cold blooded murder it is perhaps just as well that Kay has been turned loose without the formality of a trial.

Dozens of murders have been committed in Juab county but almost without exception the murderers have been turned loose.

This is the district court has simply meant running up an expense of thousands of dollars to be paid by the property owners of the county.

Miners Union Elect Officers

At the last meeting of Tintic District Miners Union on the following officers were elected: James Hanley President, George Burt Vice President, J. W. Morton Financial Secretary, Daniel Connelly Recording Secretary, Jerry Sullivan Treasurer, Edward Johnson Conductor, Daniel Knotts and James Nelson Warrens.

George Babcock Trustee. The election was quite a spirited one and a large vote as cast James Hanley for the office of president as elected without opposition. He is the present presiding officer of the union and one of the most popular members of the organization. The next officer in importance is undoubtedly that of financial secretary to which J. W. Morton was re-elected. Mr. Morton has served the union in a most creditable manner for a number of years.

Yes, Advertising Pays

Aoth man has covered that advertising pays and that the Reporter is real by practically everybody in the Tintic district. He is D. J. Russell the business manager of Taylor Bros. Tintic store who in our last issue advertised a fifty percent reduction on crockery, china, etc. and glassware in which these house wares are in such a discount. The sales of Tintic store in the past few days have been very good and the firm is now in a position to take in a large order. As Mr. Russell expressed it they kept the force so busy that it was impossible to attend to little duties like keeping the stock in order and so they put out the store.

Grandmother Wants Child

Harry J. Bane was in to early in the week to see the Reporter to be set in the district court at Provo on the 21st of the present month when Mrs. Dora Kohl of Locatello Idaho will make an effort to have the appointment of Mr. and Mrs. Bane as guardians of the minor child of the late Mrs. Olli Baker annulled. Mrs. Kohl is the child's grandmother and she has the child in her custody. She is a widow and her husband is a miner. She is a widow and her husband is a miner. "The Lion and the Mouse"

There is a great deal of novelty connected with "The Lion and the Mouse," a dramatic picture of house hold life connected with the career of a financial magnate. Peady Money Ryder the central character of the play who represents the money octopus of the present time is probably one of the greatest characterizations ever written into an American play. That the drama is one of the most successful ever produced in this country goes without saying. It enjoyed uninterrupted run in New York of two years and has been seen in almost every city of the United States. The United Play Company will offer the play to the local theatre goes at the Opera House next Tuesday. Advertisement.

Telephone Officials Still Making Promises Regarding Improvements

H. M. Fennimore and Samuel Jones representing the Mr. States Telephone company were in Eureka last Friday and appeared before the council the same evening for the purpose of discussing the proposed improvements to the company's plant in this city. City Attorney Berry objected to the bond under which the telephone company is now operating and which was made out in 1894 and the officials of this corporation have promised to at once file a new bond. Then as soon as they can get written permission to use the poles of the power company they intend to remove from Main street and Church street the old telephone poles which are absolutely useless and which are only obstructing these thoroughfares.

The local schools resumed work on Monday after a two weeks vacation. Thanksgiving week school as usual, journey giving the teachers an opportunity of attending the state teachers institute and last week the heating plant was not in working order and the vacation as consequent lengthened to another week.

I am an old man—and many of my troubles never happened.—FLBERT HUBBARD

THE white hair and wrinkled faces of our busy men and women tell of doubt, fear and anxiety—more than disease or age. Worry plays havoc with the nervous system—so that digestion is ruined and sleep banished. What is it to the friction of the delicate parts of an engine—is to the delicate organs of the body. Its a tonic and body builder—because it stimulates the liver to vigorous action, assists the stomach to assimilate food—thus enriching the blood and the nerves and heart in turn are fed on pure rich blood. Neuralgia is the cry of starved nerves for food. For forty years' Golden Medical Discovery in liquid form has given great satisfaction as a tonic and blood maker.

DR. PIERCE'S Golden Medical Discovery

Now it can be obtained in tablet form—from dealers in medicine or send 50 one cent stamps for trial box. Write R V Pierce, Buffalo.

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS Relieve constipation, regulate the liver, and bowels. Easy to take as candy.

FAVOR MANAGERS WHO PLAY

Club Owners Are Said to Have Little Use for Bench Directors—
Killifer Worked Hard

Baseball owners are of the opinion that a playing manager is of greater value to a club than one who directs from the bench In choosing a man they usually strive to get one who can participate actively in the con tests throughout the season Charlie Doon leader of the Philadelphia Na tional league team holds the belief that while a playing manager may be preferable he ought not to be a backstop as he Doon is
It will be remembered that Doon did little catching last season He was out for a while owing to an in jured leg but allowed Killifer to do most of the catching even when he was in condition
Doon also is credited with the statement that a catcher should not be a manager He declares that a young pitcher cannot do himself jus tice with the director behind the plate In straining himself to demon strate to the chief what he possesses in the way of speed he often outdoes himself consequently failing to get the best results Doon has found it this way while catching the young sters and therefore allowed Killifer to do the mash nearly all the time

HER STRONG REMARKS

By FRANK ROUSELETT

Good night said the young man. But he made no move from the far corner of the divan where he was seated.

The young woman sitting with her head obstinately turned from him moved it back perhaps half an inch. "What are you going for?" she demanded.

"Well said the young man I gathered from your last set of remarks that you could breathe more freely if the atmosphere of the room were not contaminated by my presence—that there would be more space to turn around if the place were not cluttered up by undesirable commodities. In short I rather figured it out that it was a hint for me to leave."

"I'm sure said the young woman that I don't want you to stay if you'd rather go! I wouldn't keep you for a minute against your will. It certainly shows when you eagerly seize upon the simplest remarks and twist them about to suit your own convenience that you are looking for a chance to escape! Don't let me detain you I beg!"

"Oh you aren't detaining me the young man assured her. Before I go I'd like to point out that you are in error when you call your remarks simple. They were not. On the contrary they were exceedingly forceful and emphatic."

While those remarks were clear in meaning they were complicated in design—you started on one topic and included sixteen others in the same sentence—so I am rather proud than otherwise that I was able to make out precisely what you meant. It proves to me that I have at least brains enough to come in out of the rain. I rather doubted this at first in the face of what you said. But I couldn't go away and leave you laboring under the delusion that you had something to say that was entirely ineffective and simple. What you said hit the spot!"

"I don't know what you are talking about!" said the young woman. "I suppose you think you are funny!"

"Funny!" the young man echoed in hollow tones. "What do you think I am? Do I impress you as the sort of person who would dance and sing at his own funeral? Why should I be mindful at having received my walk-up papers?"

"I hate slang observed the young woman. Don't be silly. I never said anything like that."

The young man shook his head in a resigned manner. Don't draw out the agony for me Genevieve he said. It's cruelty to attempt to smother the blow. Having given it why attempt to feed me chocolate drops?"

"I said some time ago good night!"

"I wish you wouldn't be so foolish said the young woman turning clear around toward him. If you go home now at nine o'clock mother and every one else will want to know what on earth is the matter. So will that Spreese girl across the street. I can see her in their front window now. She'll spread it all over the neighborhood in no time at all that we've quarreled!"

"Why fear the truth?" inquired the young man. I suppose sooner or later it will dawn on the people that I don't come here any more and—"

"Do you mean to say that you aren't ever coming to see me again?" the young woman broke in sharply.

"Why should I?" asked the young man resignedly. It never would occur to me that I was welcome after having been told that I wasn't!"

"I didn't tell you that."

"You may have clothed the idea in graceful language conceded the young man but it was there with both feet all right! It is plain to be seen that you're tired of me and it has all been a mistake. I apologize for hypnotizing you into engaging yourself to me and I regret the amount of the electric light bills that I have piled up for your father. I will say nothing about my ruined life because that is a subject that would not interest you. I think it is time to say good—"

"I never in my life interrupted the young woman with indignation saw a person twist things the way you do. I didn't say anything at all!"

"Yes you did—plenty!"

"Well said the young woman anxiously if I did I didn't mean it really!"

"Well that's different conceded the young man. Can it be that you don't want me to go?"

"Of course not—foolish! That Spreese girl across the street would be perfectly sure to hear of it."

"Really said the young man moving over close to her that Spreese girl is an angel since she has been kind enough to fix up our quarrel for us—Chicago Daily News

Looking Upward

Is not this little paragraph from Maeterlinck worth pondering nay more is it not worth acting upon?"

"We must learn to live in a beauty an earnestness that shall become a part of ourselves. In life there is no reature so degraded but knows full well which is the noble and beautiful thing that he should do but this noble beautiful thing is not strong enough within him. It is this invisible but abstract strength that it must be our endeavor to increase first of all and thus strength increases only in those who have acquired the habit of resting more frequently than others upon summits where life absorbs the soul upon heights whence we see that every act and every thought is infallibly bound up with something great and immortal"—Chicago Evening Post

"CHRISTMAS" By Walt Mason

The Christmas bells again ring out a message sweet and clear, and harmony is not about and happiness is near so let us all sing once again as on an earlier day. God rest you merry gentlemen let nothing you dismay! Forget the office and the mart the week lay back and crook and loosen up your withered heart as well as pocketbook. Forget the ledger and the pen and watch the children play. God rest you merry gentlemen let nothing you dismay! The Christmas time with peace is fraught from strife and sorrow free and every wish and every thought should kind and gentle be in worlds beyond our mortal ken this is a holy lay. God rest you merry gentlemen let nothing you dismay! Today from I lens plans afar the shepherds converse holi and catch again the risen star as in the lays of old and as those shepherds watched it then so I say we watch today. God rest you merry gentlemen let nothing you dismay!

Holiday Business Is Good

The local merchants are feeling good over the manner in which the holiday business is starting out. At the stores where large holiday stocks are carried the buying has been especially brisk during the past week and before Christmas day the stocks will be pretty well cleaned up. In Tintic it seems that the public has been educated to the system of shopping early and those who put off their buying until the last rush days will not have near the assortment to choose from that is to be found at the present time.

The many Tintic friends of the family will regret to hear of the death of Mrs. Joseph L. Luller. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Luller lived at Liberta and after selling out there they went to Santa Monica, Cal., where they died on the first of the present month.

Notes From Silver City

It is rumored that the moving picture shows are to be discontinued.

O. C. Mangum is on the sick list.

The new opera chairs ordered some time ago are now being placed in the Silver City meeting house.

Silver will now have a good convenient place in which its people can meet for worshipping purposes.

Mr. Hathaway of Silver has just invented a nailless horseshoe and will try and secure a patent.

Ed Stone of the Union Dairy Co. is trying out the new shoe on his horses and believes that it will be a great success.

The Scheme That Failed—a one act comedy—is presented at the Silver City Amusement Hall.

Evening well known residents of that place appearing in the cast.

The sketch was given in connection with the motion picture show.

In the cast were the following: J. L. Smith, C. Ray Evans, Elverda, Werrett, Maude, Cracht, Amy Massion and Jessie Brylson.

FOR RENT—Office rooms over Taylor Bros. Store.

Dan Ostrander has just moved his confectionery and soda fountain business from Schlecht's building on upper main street to the Franks building.

Prompt Settlement of Insurance.

The local council of the Knights of Columbus this week secured a check for $1,000 to cover the insurance carried by the late John M. O'Neil who died at Ottawa, Canada, last August.

Death proofs were not forwarded to the grand council of the Knights of Columbus until some time after the demise of Mr. O'Neil but according to Secretary John Sullivan of the local council payment of the insurance was made within ten days after the claim had been properly filed.

Many Attend Boxing Contest.

The boxing contest between Frank Burns and Frank Conley staged at the Crescent Theatre last Tuesday evening thoroughly pleased a big bunch of fight fans.

It went three rounds and was then stopped by the local officers. Referee Jack Devany declaring it a draw.

While this was the only thing the referee could lay down under the circumstances as both men were on their feet the decision should have gone to Conley.

Two men know about as much about boxing as could be gleaned from one lesson in a correspondence school but the spectators realize that they were doing their best.

Conley's habit of jugging around the ring prevented him from landing anything like a hard blow as no fighter or near fighter can put any steam behind a punch while doing the turkey trot.

When it got spinning around the floor on their backs the fighters mixed things in good shape and Burns was about all in when the officers called time.

Ross Ingersoll and Marlow Bray volunteered to go on for three rounds following the big event, and treated the spectators to a real hot rest to goodnight fight.

Ingersoll showed class and managed to put his man down for the count in the second round.

It was worth the money and the nine some.

Burns is billed for a contest with Fightin' Dick Hyland of Salt Lake, the bout to take place at Richfield on Christmas Day.

Hyland agrees to stop Burns in ten rounds.

Tax Money Received in Tintic.

Some of the tax money for the year 1911 has already been turned over to the various school districts of Tintic and the treasurer of Eureka City has also received the sum of $3,500.

The Tintic High School received $9,000, Eureka School District No. 1, $1,000 and Mammoth School District No. 10, $2,500.

Christmas Millinery

NO WOMAN feels exactly right at Christmas time unless she has among her possessions a beautiful and attractive hat which is suitable for winter wear. Had Solomon consulted the ladies, that saying of his would have read something like this: "A beautiful hat is rather to be chosen than great riches." It is the hat that makes the woman and no present could be more acceptable to mother, sister or sweetheart than one of the fine Winter hats now being shown here.

Everything in the millinery line at very moderate prices.

Tintic's Record Breaking Year.

The year 1912 will be the banner year in history of the Tintic district in the matter of ore production. The output being far in excess of that of any previous year. For some time the mines have been sending out better than 200 carloads of ore each week and during the greater part of November and December heavy shipments would undoubtedly have been in order had it not been for the shortage of railroad cars. Tintic has a wonderful string of prolific mines many of which are among the best dividend payers of the state and for the first time in its history an interrupted ore production is certainly something to talk about even in the best mining district in the whole western country.

At the Ophongo Property

The Ophongo mine at Mammoth is sending out its usual tonnage of ore four carloads going forward to the smelter each week. Supt. Samuel Cox states that conditions are as favorable as ever underground which undoubtedly means that the mine will be able to maintain its present tonnage of ore for some little time. Recently Mr. Cox has been looking for prospecting from the mine which was sunk to a distance of about fifty feet below the 700 level and while the bulk of the ore already encountered in that part of the mine has been of a low grade small bunches of the higher grade product have been found and some of this ore is now being saved for shipment. Mr. Cox is still confident of being able to get into a good body of shipping ore at that depth.

For Week at Eagle & Blue Bell

For the week which closed to day the Eagle & Blue Bell mine broke all previous records in the matter of ore production sending out a total of twenty-one carloads. Whenever a mine reaches the stage where with a limited force of men it is possible to mine large carloads of ore a day, it certainly entitles it to a place in the mining class. There can be no question but what the Eagle & Blue Bell is to become one of Tintic's greatest producers. Not only is the mine good for a heavy output for a long time to come but the ore is of a very high grade. Actual figures are not obtainable at this time but those who are looking after the property state that the ore has been gradually getting better for more than a month. The present tonnage is coming from the 900, 1000 and 1350 levels the higher ore being mined on the 1000.

Shaft For South Iron Blossom

This week the work of sinking a new shaft was taken up at the South Iron Blossom property. The shaft is to be sunk on the lot owned by John D. Clark which is directly traversed by the southern extension of the Iron Blossom vein. Secretary

"Santa's Going to Bring Me That, and That, and That!"

THE night before Christmas when all through the house not a soul had a penny nor even the mouse. The happy broke the all with "My Tim." God bless us every one. But of course all this has nothing to do with the little kiddies above. They are the real consumers of the Christmas season who can pick and choose at their hearts content and never spend a cent. Santa Claus attends to all their wishes the dear old lump so why should they worry? All over the land the children are playing the peasant game happy and innocent, joyous and glad waiting for the fulfillment of their excited dreams.

L. Schottel states that when the work is in the mine of annual assessment work on the company's unpatented ground the shaft has been located with a view to permanent. If conditions justify it, work will be continued after a sufficient amount of ore to cover this year's assessment will have been completed.

Eagle Will Pay Dividend

While the report cannot be verified locally it is generally understood that the Eagle & Blue Bell mine will soon make its plan to pay the regular dividend to its shareholders.

Pay rolls stock books receipt books and all kinds of printed supplies for mining companies can be secured at the Reporter office.

Electric Power At Victoria Mine

At the Victoria mine electric power is now used in the operation of the big hoisting engine. The switch over from steam to electricity has now been brought about during the present week. The old compressor is still in use but within the next few days the new compressor will take over the task of having already had some of the lighter parts up to the mine.

High Grade Zinc.

First Price states that he has just shipped an unusually nice carload of zinc ore from the Lower Mammoth mine. The settlement sheet showing that the ore will bring the company a check for $1373. This is one of the nicest cars of zinc that has been shipped out from the Tintic district in several months. The zinc which this mine is producing will average fully 90 per cent and there is no question but what a product of that kind will bring a real money price rapidly. Last month's ore sales brought the Lower Mammoth company better than $4000 and as the mines average account for that period did not exceed $7500 it can readily be seen that a surplus is being accumulated.

In present tonnage of zinc ore is being taken from the 1500 and 1800 levels the bulk of the output coming from the former level. Mr. Cox is devoting considerable attention to development work ten or fifteen feet of fourteen being kept continuously on prospecting. One of the most likely pieces of work at the mine is the west drift on the 1500 level where some zinc ore has been encountered. Recent showings as high as 15 per cent have been made and the ore is of a high grade. It is estimated that the drift is fully 400 feet to the west of the 1500 level and on a parallel surface which traverses virgin territory.

Lessees Nearing the Ore

I. H. Clark and William Christopherson who are now operating a lease in the Eureka Hill mine are now nearing the point where they should encounter the bulk of the ore which is known to be near the living line between this property and the Centennial Eureka mine. The body of ore was worked to some extent from the Centennial Eureka mine but in order to reach a large amount of lead work was necessary. Messrs. Clark and Christopherson have already been at work for about three months driving several hundred feet of drift through practically virgin ground. During that time the shafts have been used and large machine drills have greatly facilitated the work. It will cost the lessees a pretty large sum of money to get into the ore bearing ground but the returns should be large enough to make the lease a most profitable one.

Ships Splendid Ore

Some high grade ore which has been sent out during the past few days will fatten up the December earnings of the Grand Central mine quite materially. A lot of this ore containing a little better than 100 tons is expected to bring the company in the neighborhood of $500 per ton of better than $900 for the two cars. In this ore the silver values predominate although some of it runs well in gold. The mine assays showing as high as $600 per ton in the yellow metal. This is about the nicest lot of ore that has been shipped from the Grand Central mine during the past year but Assistant Manager V. D. Loose states that other shipments equally as rich will no doubt follow within the next few months. There are several small bunches of the high grade ore on the various levels between the 700 and 1800.

The Grand Central mine was also on the market this week with a couple of cars of very fine copper ore. At this mine the best grade of copper is kept separate and then as soon as a sufficient amount is available it is sent forward to the smelter. From the 100 tons of copper ore which has just been shipped the mine should receive $5000 about $60 per ton.

The table containing the weekly output of ore from the Tintic mines also stock quotations and additional mining news can be found on page three of this issue of the Reporter.

Full Face of Ore.

The drift driven over into the Chain property from the 1000 level of the Lower Mammoth mine now contains a full face of ore which is worth in the neighborhood of $20 a ton. Some of this ore is now being saved for shipment and for the purpose of developing the same vein another drift is headed over into the Cold Chain ground from the Lower Mammoth's 1200 level. Some little work will be necessary to get into ore on the 1200 and owing to the fact that this work will develop an important portion of the Lower Mammoth territory the two companies are sharing the expense. Even at this early date the showing is very favorable on that level and small bunches of fairly good ore are being cut from time to time.

Returns From Nevada Trip.

T. J. McDonald the Mammoth business manager returned home on Wednesday evening after a trip to Elko county Nevada where he has an interest in some very promising mining property. There is a bunch of men at work on the ground and preparing

New Line-Casting Machine Working

William Pace had his right hand crushed while at work in the Iron Blossom mine on Thursday a couple of the fingers being broken. He was attended by Dr. Cose.

The new American Typograph recently installed in the Reporter office is now in successful operation practically all of the copy for this issue having been handled by this machine. There is not another Typograph in the state of Utah nor is there one between Colorado and the Pacific coast and for that reason it was just a little difficult for us to install the machine and put it in working order. Nevertheless this has been accomplished. It is usually necessary in purchasing machines of this nature to see an experienced man to break in the new operator and to thoroughly explain the machine's technical construction and operation. No one in our office ever saw a Typograph before the one now in operation was unpacked and owing to the great distance between this office and the factory making it very expensive to secure an instructor we decided to go it alone. We have had some trouble made a few mistakes but in a few hours learning by experience. The machine is turning out the copy from which this issue is printed. It is of course not working perfectly but the defects are gradually being overcome.

We will probably know more about the Typograph within the next few weeks but from present appearances it is a rattling good line casting machine well adapted to meet the requirements of a daily or weekly newspaper.

Mining Notes.

George T. Bridges left this week for Milford where he will look after his mining interests.

James D. Eck, acting manager of the Uncle Sam May Day and Lower Mammoth mines arrived in Tintic yesterday afternoon and remained long enough to visit these properties. Conditions at the May Day were especially pleasing to Mr. Eck. The present output of zinc and lead ore is building up a nice surplus and early in the new year the directors will no doubt decide upon the distribution of a dividend.

The shareholders of the Chief Consolidating company this week received official notice of the dividend which was declared on the 11th inst. The amount is 10 cents per share to be paid on February 1st. It is understood here that the management is confident that the mine can be kept open for regular dividends in the future 10 cents per share to be distributed semi-annually.

Supt. F. R. Higginson has increased the output of iron ore from the Dragon Co. some what during the past few weeks and whenever it is possible to get a sufficient number of cars from the railroad company the mine is sending out a tonnage of from 125 to 150 tons a day. This increase in the output has necessitated the resumption of work on the other levels of the mine—the 800—where there is a splendid show of iron. The Dragon is now shipping the only iron that is being mined in the Tintic District that is going to the United States smelter.

Owing to the shortage of railroad cars the night shift was laid off at the Centennial Eureka mine on Thursday night. Today the day shift went to work as usual and Travel Light and Passenger Agent 1 of the Salt Lake route who is in Tintic is doing everything possible to keep the mine supplied with cars and thus prevent another shut down. All of the Tintic mines are having more or less trouble getting their ore to the market and it is certainly time that the railroad company gave the Tintic strikers a little more consideration.

Working The Cliff Property.

Frank Thornberg who was over from Silver City early in the week states that he has just received word on the North Cliff property in the south end of the Tintic district. He is driving a drift on the 200 level and within the past few days some small bunches of ore have been cut. Mr. Thornberg is confident that this property is of a small amount of money he will be able to put the North Cliff back in the list of shipping

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so-called Dyspepsia Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only the food. When you begin taking Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat everything your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

"I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and number of patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers' Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and I have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets."

The Chambers Medicine Co. will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

When purchasing Chambers' Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefited the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand behind our product. We ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will.

ZBYSZKO MAKES ANNUAL BID

Manager Herman Ready to Post $5000 to Blind Match With Gotch—Two Clubs Offer Purse

Jack Herman has again butted into sporting circles. Incidentally Jack has $5000 in bills of large denomination which he is ready to get rid of. All he wants to do with that dough is to post it as a forfeit—a sort of bait to coax Frank Gotch back into the wrestling game.

It seems that Gotch is telling the folks on his Iowa farm that he intends to retire with the championship packed away in the barn. That's what is worrying Herman. The latter is guiding Zbyszko through the mazes of the grappling sport and wants to get Gotch to give the Pole another chance at the title.

Manager Herman claims the management of the Salt Lake Amusement company stands ready and willing to hang up a purse of $30,000 for a match between the two stars of the hammerlock division. In behalf of Zbyszko Herman is agreeable to the offer and is perfectly willing to allow Gotch to dictate the terms.

It can be winner take all split any other way or I will sign articles giving Gotch the lion's share of the purse whether he wins or loses declares Herman.

You'll have to admit that Zbyszko stands second only to Gotch in the list and it is only fair he be given a chance at the title. Naturally if Gotch persists in his statement that he is through with the game I will claim the crown on behalf of my grapple.

Zbyszko Polish Wrestler.

plea. That is not much more than an empty honor which is not pleasing to Zbyszko.

In addition to the Salt Lake offer the Pittsburgh A. C. is willing to hang up a liberal purse for the match. As I said before Gotch can do all the fighting and Zbyszko can take the prize. All Zbyszko wants is a chance at the title.

STAR IS BARRED FROM GAME

Terre Haute Phys. clan Orders Mordecai Brown Never to Take Part in Athletic Contest

Mordecai Brown, former leading pitcher of the Chicago Cubs and rated one of the great hurlers of all time, may never don a baseball uniform again except in the role of manager. Brown, who went to Terre Haute recently, consulted a physician regarding his injured knee.

If you value the use of your limbs you will never take part in an athletic contest again, said the physician. The injury is of a serious nature and requires rest from all forms of strenuous exertion.

The passing of Brown takes from the national games a popular figure and robs the Cub fans of a pitching star who brought world's laurels to Chicago. Brown was known to fame is the Three Fingers Wonder. He was a great fielding pitcher. One of his great fielding plays at Detroit helped to save the world's flag for the Cubs.

Mordecai Brown

Return to American System

The English boxing system of refereeing boxing matches with the official sitting outside the ropes is a thing of the past at New York boxing clubs. The system has been given a four weeks trial at the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club and has met the disapproval not only of the club officials but also of the state athletic commission.

World of Labor

News from All Parts of the World, of General Interest to the Worker

Washington—The big powerful unions of today are not the result of accident, the mere turn of fortune, says a writer in a labor paper. Rather they are the result of patient pains taking intelligent management. There is always some good reason why one union is able to weather the storm and counter the journey while others collapse and die. The band of union men who are willing to make material sacrifices constantly in the interest of the union will have a strong union. And by sacrifices is not meant striking indiscriminately or making a lot of noise but rather the willingness to bear up under heavy assessments in order that strikes when necessary may be properly supported and prosecuted to a successful conclusion. The union which is always compelled to ask for financial assistance when trouble comes in the very nature of things cannot be as strong and successful as the union which finds it possible to finance its own fights. There is food for thought in this argument. Noise is cheap but it doesn't produce the results.

Indianapolis Ind.—Bonds totaling $250,000 have been bought for the International Typographical union by the executive council of the international and orders have been placed by the council for $75,000 par value bonds to be delivered as soon as they can be secured. The purchase of these bonds is in the nature of an investment for surplus funds of the international. The bonds purchased include Hawaiian government public improvement bonds, Chicago West Park commissioners bonds, New York city corporate stock bonds, state of Massachusetts gold three per cent registered bonds, city of Buffalo parks registered bonds and city of Milwaukee library park and school bonds. The bonds ordered are city of Ottawa bonds, city of Calgary bonds and San Francisco Geary street railway bonds.

New York—A remarkable defense was offered during the trial of a contract labor suit that terminated in the federal district court with a verdict in favor of the government. The subject of the suit was the recovery of penalties from the firm of J. M. Delberg & Co. manufacturers of railway equipment. The government charged that the firm had employed a man with having brought two workmen over from Manchester England. The defendants declared the superiority of the English operator in their particular line forced them to import the two cements. In spite of this argument Judge Learned Hand ordered the jury to bring in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff and a $2,000 penalty against the railroad concern was the result.

Locust Gap Pa.—The local United Mine Workers union proposed to the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company that the local colliery shall work on the day of the funerals of a deceased employee and that each colliery employ except the breaker boys shall give 25 cents for the family of the deceased. The same proposition was made recently by other locals in the region. The company is reluctant to do the collecting but the officials of the local union point out that this is not simply a union matter as all employees of the colliery union or not even the bosses will be expected to pay the assessment.

Indianapolis Ind.—Word was received in this city at the headquarters of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders of increases in the minimum wage scales for paper rulers of Chicago and paper rulers and blank bookbinders of New York city. The paper rulers of Chicago have signed an agreement increasing their minimum scale to $22.50 a week and an increase of $1.50 a week. This affects about 150 men. The paper rulers and blankbook binders of New York city have signed an agreement increasing their minimum scale to $21 a week and an increase of $3 and affecting about 600 men.

Rochester N. Y.—The American Federation of Labor convention settled the question of jurisdiction between the United Association of Plumbers and International Association of Steamfitters. By a vote of 192 to 31 the convention refused to seat the international association delegates and endorsed the action of the executive council in refusing to accept per capita tax from that organization because it had failed to amalgamate with the United Association.

Washington—Wages in Japan have risen on the average over 50 per cent in the last ten years. During that time the average price of commodities has increased about 33 per cent.

Washington—The second move of the American Federation of Labor to reorganize the stock yards unions broken up at the time of the great butchers strike in 1904 will be made this winter.

Boston—Coopers union 58 announces a general compliance with its request that time and a half be paid for all overtime and double time given for all work on Sundays and holidays. Boston—Fall River Textile council has asked the Cotton Manufacturers association of that city for a conference regarding better wages and conditions for the operatives.

Rochester N. Y.—No organization of men President Gompers declared in his opening report at the American Federation of Labor convention in this city represents a greater power for the advancement of humanity along right lines. The terms of labor war have been constantly refined he added. Free workmen do not employ the methods of slaves. Mr. Gompers report was given close attention and was frequently interrupted by applause. This was particularly marked when he declared against compulsory arbitration laws and for the recall of judges in the states and the reappointment of federal judges every four years. We have had enough government by dead men dead issues dead principles and ironclad restrictions he said amid cheers. We must have restored to the people the unrestricted power of changing their statutory or organic laws whenever they find the occasion and necessity warrant it.

Washington—Thirty thousand locomotive engineers on 52 railroads east of Chicago and north of Norfolk and Cincinnati gain a partial victory in their demand for more wages under the award announced by the board of arbitration. The award grants certain increased compensation and improved and uniform rules of service requested by the engineers but holds that a general increase of wages on all roads is not warranted upon the basis of the evidence presented. The board found that on some roads and for certain classes of service the compensation was too small and therefore introduced into the award the principle of a minimum wage for the entire district. The award which dates back to May 1 last and will stand for one year settles the most important labor dispute submitted to arbitration since the anthracite coal strike in 1902.

Houston Tex.—Pertinent topics of interest to the wage earner and the merchant were discussed October 1st at a joint meeting of the Houston Labor council and the Retail Merchants association. The meeting was called for the purpose of cementing a better friendship between the two organizations. It was believed by the officers of each that a better understanding would be mutually beneficial and for that reason George Mendell attorney for the merchants was listed as principal speaker. While outlining the purposes of the organization he suggested that all labor unions require their members to meet their obligations with the merchants. He said that if this is done a union card would be a credit and would be accepted as such by the merchants.

New York—The members of the cloak pressers branch of the Cloak makers union, the largest local union in any trade in the clothing industry met and decided in favor of making a demand for an increase in wages of four dollars a week subject to the approval of the joint executive board of the Cloakmakers union which has a membership of 75,000 in this city and the various local committees of the International Ladies Garment Workers union. The pressers voted to demand an increase from $21 to $25 a week minimum and the under pressers decided in favor of a demand for an increase from $18 to $22 a week. There are 10,000 members in the pressers branch of the union.

Charleston W. Va.—The end of the great coal strike in the Kanawha coal fields of West Virginia came in a signed wage agreement between the union miners and the officials of the National Bituminous Coal and Coke company. The agreement practically recognizes the union provides for a increase of about 21 per cent in wages reduces tonnage permits the miners to organize provides for a nine-hour work day and gives the men now on strike preference if they should desire to return to work.

Youngstown O.—At the bi-monthly wage settlement held here between representatives of the Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers and the Republic Iron and Steel company the rate for puddling was advanced to $6.19 a ton on a 130 card rate. This is the highest rate paid for puddling since November 1907. About 15,000 skilled workmen are benefited by the advance.

Madrid Spain—Inspired by the recent railway strike the schoolmasters of Spain are organizing themselves into a union. Their purpose is to make an energetic demand for better salaries. The average salary of masters in the elementary schools is now only four dollars a week—and they get that only when there are sufficient funds on hand to meet the obligation.

Ottawa Canada—The Trade and Labor congress of Canada has grown to proportions where it has become the great militant force in Canada for the protection of the interests of organized and unorganized workmen.

Paris France—France has probably the most comprehensive cooperative societies of any country in the world. There are cooperative stores and organizations of every kind for the aid of the toilers its members. Toronto Canada—The new Indian Banner printed in the interest of workers has made its appearance here.

IN MEMORY OF A BABY

By CARL MAYER.

It was in the late autumn yet a summer day when all the air was soft with a scarcely perceptible haze which gives October that pensiveness which is not sadness and yet which tempts joy

Miriam sat on the porch crooning a lullaby to her baby as she gently rocked back and forth and contemplated the quietude of the country as it lay before her in a glory of crimson and gold

A woman came slowly up the street and paused as she caught sight of mother and babe. A woman, haggard, faded, dust stained young in years but with youth's bloom gone from the pale cheeks and wretched eyes flashing suddenly with a wild light as she held out her arms in supplication

Miriam shrank back in her chair and held her baby closer thinking the woman insane but seeing her mistake leaned forward a bit inquiring if the woman was ill or needed help

No madam not ill but it has been so long since I've seen a baby! You are good you are so happy you have not seen sin you don't know what it is to have lost your baby and go about the world with empty arms and despairing heart. My baby is gone! If you will only let me kiss your baby let me hold it just once—I would be more fit to die

Intuitively Miriam saw that this woman had suffered much wronged her womanhood perhaps but suffered pity flashed tears into her eyes—sin shocked her—but she could not send a fellow creature away perhaps to death without giving what help she could

Hesitating but a moment she said Come sit here beside me baby is almost asleep and rising she laid the little bundle of warmth and fragrance in the stranger's arms

With a stifled cry the woman sank into a chair while tears coursed down her wan cheeks She wept—wept with grief unspeakable—with that agony of an overcharged spirit, until in the fullness of compassion Miriam put her arm around the shaking shoulders and tried in her gentle way to sympathize

The baby slept Miriam brought light refreshment dainty sandwiches and cool rich milk Refreshed the woman now calm softly whispered If you knew what I have been you would despise me You would not let me touch your pure sweet baby You have been so good now let me go

But Miriam gently detained her If it will help you to tell me your trouble I may be able to aid you she said

Then the woman wept again but tenderness prevailed and bit by bit the story of a young girl born and brought up on a farm far from the city's whirl lured away from home on promise of marriage then deserted came How her baby had been born in a charity hospital how she had searched and searched for her faithless lover only to find him emerging from a great church with a radiant bride on his arm how she had walked the streets night and day searching for work no one would give how reason had left her when her baby died in her arms how she was nursed back to puny health by others who had suffered who gave her a home and certain rough but tender care how she was led on to a life of shame because she could find no other means to earn bread and how sickened by the revolting life she had cast aside her gaudy raiment and was on her way to join her dead baby

Miriam felt the truth of her story felt that she could not turn away a soul so sorely distressed

I think you were more sinned against than sinning and God has brought you to me Will you stay with me and help me care for baby? I have great need of some one who will put love into this work and perhaps after a while my baby will comfort you as your own

You will take me you will keep me you will let me tend your baby? Oh it is too much too much

I will do more by giving you love and a great trust You can help or harm me much If you are loyal and faithful to baby and me you will give me a surer confidence in all humanity but if you fail me I shall never dare to listen to the voice of my own soul again It is a trial for us both

When the woman lifted her bowed head there was a new light in her eyes a rested look

I thought there was nothing for me to live for no work for me to do but I will live since you think me worthy of such a trust I will prove to you that there is something true in me still I will be faithful

The next spring in a far away city over a little mound in the churchyard a white stone was placed which bore the inscription In Memory of a Baby and the tiny grave was blue with myrtle and violets

The woman lived all her long years with Miriam and the baby She came to be like one of the family respected trusted loved looked up to She tended them in sickness and in health rejoiced in their joys sorrowed with their sorrows and the next generation never knew but what she had all ways been one of them

But never in all the days of her life did Miriam breathe to any one the woman's secret of her baby's grave

Too Much of It

'I want to get off sir to go to my grandmother's funeral

Tommy this thing of your grand mother's funeral is getting to be a grave matter

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland. James Armstrong Maitland's protégé falls in love with her. His persistent wooing irritates the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid learns the story of a mining engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being taken by wolves while he went for help. Kirby the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent which sweeps Enid into gorge where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks Maitland and Old Kirby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong accompanied by Kirby and Robert Maitland find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin and know that the girl is in keeping. Fate brings all the actors together.

CHAPTER XX

The Converging Trails

Whatever the feeling of the others Armstrong found himself unable to sleep that night. It seemed to him that fate was about to play him the meanest and most fantastic of tricks. Many times before in his crowded life he had loved other women or so he characterized his feelings but his passion for Louise Rosser Newbold had been in a class by itself until he had met Enid Maitland. Between the two there had been many women but these two were the high points the rest was lowland.

Once before therefore this Newbold had but in ahead of him and had won the woman he loved. Armstrong had cherished a hard grudge against him for a long time. He had not been of those who had formed the rescue party led by old Kirby and Maitland which had buried the poor woman on the great butte in the deep canon. Before he got back to the camp the whole affair was over and Newbold had departed. Luckily for him Armstrong had always thought for he had been so mad with grief and rage and jealousy that if he had come across him helpless or not he would have killed him out of hand.

Armstrong had soon enough forgotten Louise Rosser but he had not forgotten Newbold. All his ancient animosity had flamed into instant life again at the sight of his name last night. The inveteracy of his hatred had been in no way abated by the lapse of time it seemed.

Everybody in the mining camp had supposed that Newbold had wandered off and perished in the mountains else Armstrong might have pursued him and hunted him down. The sight of his name on that piece of paper was outward and visible evidence that he still lived. It had almost the shock of a resurrection and a resurrection to hatred rather than to love. If Newbold had been alone in the world if Armstrong had chanced upon him in the solitude he would have hated him just as he did but when he thought that his ancient enemy was with the woman he now loved with a growing intensity beside which his former resentment seemed weak and feeble he hated him yet the more.

He could not tell when the notice which he had examined carefully was written there was no date upon it but he could come to only one conclusion. Newbold must have found Enid Maitland alone in the mountains very shortly after her departure and he had had with him in his cabin alone for at least a month. Armstrong gritted his teeth at the thought. He did not undervalue the personality of Newbold. He had never happened to see him but he had heard enough about him to understand his qualities as a man. The tie that bound Armstrong to Enid Maitland was a strong one but the tie by which he held her to him if indeed he held her at all was very tenuous and easily broken. Perhaps it was broken already and so he hated him still more and more.

Indeed his animosity was so great and growing that for the moment he took no joy in the assurance of the girl's safety yet he was not altogether an unfair man and in calmer moments he thanked God in his own rough way that the woman he loved was alive and well or had been when the note was written. He rejoiced that she had not been swept away with the flood or that she had not been lost in the mountains and forced to wander on finally to starve and freeze and die. In one moment her nearness caused his heart to throb with joyful anticipation. The certainty that at the first flush of day he should seek her again sent the warm blood to his cheeks. But those thoughts would be succeeded by the knowledge that she was with his enemy. Was this man to rob him of the latest love as he had robbed him of the first? Perhaps the hardest task that was ever laid upon Armstrong was to lie quietly in his sleeping bag and wait until the morning.

So soon as the first indication of dawn showed over the crack of the door he slipped quietly out of his sleeping bag and without disturbing the others drew on his boots put on his heavy fur coat and cap and gloves slung his Winchester and his snow shoes over his shoulder and without stopping for a bite to eat softly opened the door stepped out and closed it after him. It was quite dark in the bottom of the canon although a few pale gleams overhead indicated the near approach of day. It was quite still too. There were clouds on the mountain top heavy with threat of wind and snow.

The way was not difficult the direction of it that is Nor was the going very difficult at first the snow was frozen and the crust was strong enough to bear him. He did not need his snow shoes and indeed would have had little chance to use them in the narrow broken rocky pass. He had slipped away from the others because he wanted to be first to see the man and the woman. He did not want any witnesses to that meeting. They would have come on later of course but he wanted an hour or two in private with Enid and Newbold without any interruption. His conscience was not clear. Nor could he settle upon a course of action.

How much Newbold knew of his former attempt to win away his wife how much of what he knew he had told Enid Maitland Armstrong could not surmise. Putting himself into Newbold's place and imagining that the engineer had possessed entire information he decided that he must have told everything to Enid Maitland as soon as he had found out the real relation between her and Armstrong. And Armstrong did not believe the woman he loved could be in any body's presence a month without telling something about him. Still it was possible that Newbold knew nothing and that he told nothing therefore.

The situation was paralyzing to a man of Armstrong's decided determined temperament. He could not decide upon the line of conduct he should pursue. His course in this the most critical emergency he had ever faced must be determined by circumstances of which he felt with savage resentment he was in some measure the sport. He would have to leave to chance what ought to be subject to his will. Of only one thing he was sure—he would stop at nothing murder lying nothing to win the woman and to settle his score with that man.

There was really only one thing he could do and that was to press on up the canon. He had no idea how far it might be or how long a journey he would have to make before he reached that shelf on the high hill where stood that hut in which she dwelt. As the crow flies it could not be a great distance but the canon zigzagged through the mountains with as many curves and angles as a lightning flash. He plodded on therefore with furious haste recklessly speeding over places where a misstep in the snow or a slip on the icy rocks would have meant death or disaster to him.

He had gone about an hour and had perhaps made four miles from the camp when the storm burst upon him. It was now broad day but the sky was filled with clouds and the air with driving snow. The wind whistled down the canon with terrific force. It was with difficulty that he made any headway at all against it. It was a local storm if he could have looked through the snow he would have discovered calmness on the top of the peaks. It was one of those sudden squalls of wind and snow which rage with terrific force while they last but whose rage was limited and whose violent duration would be short.

A less determined man than he would have bowed to the inevitable and sought some shelter behind a rock until the fury of the tempest was spent but there was no storm that blew that could stop this man so long as he had strength to drive against it. So he bent his head to the fierce blast and struggled on. There was something titanic and magnificent about this iron determination and persistence of Armstrong. The two most powerful passions which move human life were at his service. Love led him and hate drove him. And the two were so intermingled that it was difficult to say which predominated now one and now the other. The resultant of the two forces however was an onward move that would not be denied.

His fur coat was soon covered with snow and ice the sharp needles of the storm cut his face wherever it was exposed. The wind forced its way through his garments and chilled him to the bone. He had eaten nothing since the night before and his vitality was not at its flood but he pressed on and there was something grand in his indomitable progress. Excel all!

Back in the hut Kirby and Maitland sat around the fire waiting most impatiently for the wind to blow itself out and for that snow to stop falling through which Armstrong struggled forward. As he followed the windings of the canon not daring to ascend to the summit on either wall and seek short cuts across the range he was sensible that he was constantly rising. There were many indications to his experienced mind the decrease in the height of the surrounding pines the increasing rarity of the icy air the growing difficulty in breathing under the sustained exertion he was making the quick throbbing of his accelerated heart all told him he was approaching his journey's end.

He judged that he must now be drawing near the source of the stream and that he would presently come upon the shelter. He had no means of ascertaining the time. He would not have dared to unbutton his coat to glance at his watch and it is difficult to measure the flying minutes in such scenes as these through which he passed but he thought he must have gone at least seven miles in perhaps three hours which he fancied had elapsed his progress in the last two having been frightfully slow. Every foot of advance he had had to fight for.

Suddenly a quick turn in the canon a passage through a narrow entrance between lofty cliffs and he found himself in a pocket or a circular amphitheater which he could see was closed on the farther side. The bottom of this enclosure or valley was covered with pines now drooping under tremendous burdens of snow. In the midst of the pines a lakelet was frozen solid the ice was covered with the same dazzling carpet of white.

He could have seen nothing of this had not the sudden storm now stopped as precipitately almost as it had begun. Indeed accustomed to the grayness of the snow fall his eyes were fairly dazzled by the bright light of the sun now quite high over the range which struck him full in the face.

He stopped panting exhausted and leaned against the rocky wall of the canon's mouth which here rose sheer over his head. This certainly was the end of the trail the lake was the source of the frozen rivulet along whose rocky and torn banks he had tramped since dawn. Here if anywhere he would find the object of his quest.

Refreshed by a brief pause and encouraged by the sudden stilling of the storm he stepped out of the canon and ascended a little knoll whence he had a full view of the pocket over the tops of the pines. Shading his eyes from the light with his hand as best he could he slowly swept the circumference with his eager glance seeing nothing until his eye fell upon a huge broken trail of rocks projecting from the snow indicating the ascent to a broad shelf of the mountains across the lake to the right. Following this he saw a huge block of snow which suggested dimly the outlines of a hut.

Was that the place? Was she there? He stared fascinated and as he did so a thin curl of smoke rose above the snow heap and hovered up in the cold quiet air. That was a human habitation then. It could be none other than the hut referred to in the note Enid Maitland must be there and Newbold!

The lake lay directly in front of him beyond the trees at the foot of the knoll and between him and the slope that led up to the hut. If it had been summer he would have been compelled to follow the water's edge to the right or to the left both journeys would have led over difficult trails with little to choose between them but the lake was now frozen hard and covered with snow. He had no doubt that the snow would bear him but to make sure he drew his snow shoes from his shoulder slipped his feet in the straps and sped straight on through the trees and across it like an arrow from a bow.

In five minutes he was at the foot of the giant stairs. Kicking off his snow shoes he scrambled up the broken way easily finding in the snow a trail which had evidently been passed and repassed daily. In a few moments he was at the top of the shelf. A hard tramped path ran between high walls of snow to a door.

Behind that door what would he find? Just what he brought to it love and hate he fancied. We usually find on the other side of doors no more and no less than we bring to our own sides. But what ever was there there was no hesitation in Armstrong's course. He ran toward it laid his hand on the latch and opened it.

What creatures of habit we are! Early in that same morning after one vain attempt again to influence the woman who was now the deciding and determining factor and who seemed to be taking the man's place Newbold ready for his journey had torn himself away from her presence and had plunged down the giant stair. He had done everything that mortal man could do for her comfort wood enough to last her for two weeks had been taken from the cave and piled in the kitchen and everywhere so as to be easily accessible to her the stores she already had the run of and he had fitted a stout bar to the outer door which would render it impregnable to any attack that might be made against it although he saw no quarter from which any assault impended.

Enid had recovered not only her strength but a good deal of her nerve. That she loved this man and that he loved her had given her courage. She would be fearfully lonely of course but not so much afraid as before. The month of immunity in the mountains without any interruptions had dissipated any possible apprehensions on her part. It was with a sinking heart however that she saw him go at last.

They had been so much together in that month they had learned what love was. When he came back it would be different he would not come alone. The first human being he met would bring the world to the door of the lonely but beloved cabin in the mountains—the world with its questions its inferences its suspicions its denunciations and its accusations! Some kind of an explanation would have to be made some sort of an answer would have to be given some solution of the problem would have to be arrived at. What these would be she could not tell.

Newbold's departure was like the end of an era to her. The curtain dropped when it rose again what was to be expected? There was no comfort except in the thought that she loved him. So long as their affections matched and ran together nothing else mattered. With the solution of it all next to her sadly beating heart she was still supremely confident that love or God—and there was not so much difference between them as to make it worth while to mention the one rather than the other—would find the way.

Their leave taking had been singularly cold and abrupt. She had realized the danger he was apt to incur and she had exacted a reluctant promise from him that he would be careful. Don't throw your life away lost risk it even remember that it is mine she had urged.

And just as simply as she had enjoined it upon him he had promised. He had given his word that he would not send help back to her but that he would bring it back and she had confidence in that word. A confidence that had been inclined to break his promise would have made it absolutely impossible. There had been a long clasp of the hands a long look in the eyes a long breath in the breast a long throb in the heart and then—farewell. They dared no more.

Once before he had left her and she had stood upon the plateau and followed his vanishing figure with anxious troubled thought until it had been lost in the depths of the forest below. She had controlled herself in this second parting for his sake as well as her own. Under the ashes of his grim repression she realized the presence of live coals which a breath would have fanned into flame. She dared nothing while he was there but when he shut the door behind him the necessity for self control was removed. She had laid her arms on the table and bowed her head upon them and shook and quivered with emotions unrelieved by a single tear—weeping was for lighter hearts and less severe demands.

His position after all was the easier of the two. As of old it was the man who went forth to the battlefield while the woman could only wait passively the issue of the fight. Although he was half blinded with emotions he had to give some thought to his progress and there was yet one task to be done before he could set forth upon his journey toward civilization and rescue.

It was fortunate as it turned out that this obligation detained him. He was that type of a merciful man whose mercies extended to his beasts. The poor little burros must be attended to and their safety assured so far as it could be for it would be impossible for Enid Maitland to care for them. Indeed he had already exacted a promise from her that she would not leave the plateau and risk her life on the icy stairs with which she was so unfamiliar.

He had gone to the corral and shaken down food enough for them which if it had been doled out to them day by day would have lasted longer than the week he intended to be absent of course he realized that they would eat it up in half that time but even so they would probably suffer not too great discomfort before he got back.

All these preparations took some little time. It had grown somewhat late in the morning before he started. There had been a fierce storm raging when he first looked out and at her earnest solicitation he had delayed his departure until it had subsided.

His tasks at the corral were at last completed. He had done what he could for them both nothing now remained but to make the quickest and safest way to the settlement. Shouldering the pack containing his axe and gun and sleeping bag and such provision as would serve to tide him over until he reached human habitations he set forth. He did not look up to the hut but he could not have seen it for the corral was almost directly beneath it but if it had been in full view he would not have looked back he could not trust himself to every instant every impulse in his soul would have dragged him back to that hut and to the woman. It was only his will and, did he but know it, her will that made him carry out his purpose.

He would have saved perhaps half a mile on his journey if he had gone straight across the lake to the mouth of the canon. We are creatures of habit. He had always gone around the lake on the familiar trail and unconsciously he followed that trail that morning. He was thinking of her as he plodded on in a mechanical way while the trail followed the border of the lake for a time plunged into the woods wound among the pines at least reaching that narrow rift in the encircling wall through which the river flowed. He had passed along the trail oblivious to all his surroundings but as he came to the entrance he could not fail to notice what he suddenly saw in the snow.

Robinson Crusoe when he discovered the famous footprint of Man Friday in the sand was not more astonished at what met his vision than Newbold on that winter morning. For there in the virgin whiteness were the tracks of a man!

He stopped dead with a sudden contraction of the heart. Humanity other than he and she in that wilderness? It could not be! For a moment he doubted the evidence of his own senses. He shook his pack loose from his shoulders and bent down to examine the tracks to read if he could their indications. He could see that some one had come upon the canon that some one had leaned against the wall that some one had gone on. Where had he gone?

To follow the new trail was child's play for him. He ran by the side of it until he reached the knoll. The stranger had stopped again he had shifted from one foot to another evidently he had been looking about him seeking some one only Enid Maitland of course. The trail ran forward to the edge of the frozen lake there the man had put on his snow shoes there he had sped across the lake like an arrow and like an arrow himself although he had left behind his own snow shoes Newbold ran upon his track. Fortunately the snow crust upon bore him. The trail ran straight to the foot of the rocky stairs. The new comer had easily found his way there.

With beating heart and throbbing pulse Newbold himself bounded upon the acclivity after the stranger marking as he did so evidences of the other's prior ascent. Reaching the top like him he ran down the narrow path and in his turn laid his hand upon the door.

He was not mistaken he heard voices within. He listened a second and then flung it open and as the other had done he entered.

Way back on the trail old Kirby and Robert Maitland the storm having ceased were rapidly climbing up the canon. Fate was bringing all the actors of the little drama within the shadow of her hand.

Just a Man!

In the long line of cabs and automobiles in front of a big New York hotel was one car around which a few idlers had gathered. Something was wrong. Prone upon the ground lay an animal of some kind. A dear old lady happened along. She saw the little knot of people and put up her glasses to observe the cause. Then she saw the brown fur of the thing on the icy asphalt.

Poor creature poor creature! said she aloud in her compassion. Is its leg broken? She pushed close to the prostrate figure in the brown fur. It moved. The dear old lady took a closer look. Then she made a sound approximating a ladylike snort. It was the chauffeur of one of the taxi cabs clad in his brown fuzzy coat in the usual attitude of flatness tinkering the under part of his machine with a monkey wrench.

The dear old lady all her sympathy curdled hurried on.

Trying Out Iron Blossom's Plant.

The new machinery at the No 1 workings of the Iron Blossom mine was started up for the first time last Tuesday and while the limbering up process showed the new plant to be in almost perfect working order it will be early next week before it goes into commission. The new steel gallow frame will not be ready for a few weeks yet and in the mean time the old wooden frame and the oil cables will be used later giving way to the new equipment. The new plant has been installed under the direction of A C Hindbeck while the electrical work was supervised by J B Myers who is tinto manager for the Knight company. Leonard Wilson of the firm of Wilson & Ott contracting electrical engineers was out from the capital for the initial run of the new machinery and expressed himself as being highly pleased with the manner in which the plant performed its work.

The new hoist is one of the best ever brought into Tintic and but few electrically operated hoists in the entire west compare with it because it carries many new features. Notwithstanding the fact that the hoist is designed for a speed of about 1,600 feet per minute it is an economical user of power. The new plant consists of the large Nordberg hoist a 300 horse power direct connected and direct current motor as well as all the other large equipment.

Dividend From Gemini.

The shareholders of the Gemini and Godiva companies held their annual meetings at the capital during the week re electing the present officers. At these meetings reports were also submitted telling in detail of the past year's work at the Gemini. There has been little coming at the Godiva although lessees operated there during a portion of the year. Last month the directors of the Gemini which is a close corporation ordered the payment of $6 a share on the company's 50,000 shares the total amount of the dividend being $300,000. This brings the total from this old time Tintic producer up to $1,130,000.

Swansea Mine Closed.

On Tuesday of this week the force of men at the Swansea mine completed their clean up of the property preparatory to the shut down which took place the following day. The mine is now closed and there is nothing to indicate just when it will be opened again although there is no doubt much ore in the upper workings which can be handled to good advantage upon the completion of the new mill which the Knight people intend to erect in the south end of the district.

May Day In Fine Shape

May Day stock has been in demand at advanced prices during the past week and those who are keeping in close touch with underground conditions at this mine are of the opinion that the stock will bring even better prices within the next few months. The mine has had some little difficulty in sending out its ore this week due to the inability of the railroad to supply cars but the management has managed to keep things moving in the usual satisfactory manner. Much ore is now exposed in the various parts of the mine and almost every week new bodies of high grade zinc are encountered.

Switch To Chief Cons.

It is understood here that the construction of a switch connecting the Chief Cons mine with both the Rio Grande and Salt Lake railways will be taken up at once. The surveyors for these roads reported that it would not be possible to construct a switch in such a manner that the mine would have connection with both lines but Manager Fitch has outlined a plan which seems feasible. This new switch will put the Chief Cons mine in splendid shape for the handling of a large tonnage of ore as soon as conditions become normal at the smelter making such an output possible.

George Jones the next representative to the state legislature from Juab county was in the capital on business during the week returning home on Wednesday.

The Knight Consolidated Power company has filed dissolution papers in the district court at Provo. The company has sold its entire holdings in stock property and fixtures and all debts have been paid.

Electricity For Victoria Yankee Gets New Body of Zinc Ore.

Supt John Shea expects to be using electricity in the operation of the hoist at the Victoria mine by the first of next week the electricians now being engaged in making the necessary connection with the lines of the Knight Power company from which the current will be secured. The new compressor for the Victoria has not yet arrived but it is expected soon and after its delivery at the mine no time will be lost in the installation. Victoria stock has advanced somewhat during the past few days and while there is nothing especially new underground it is generally understood that the ore deposits are being opened up in splendid shape. With the new equipment in working order the management will be able to get out a much heavier tonnage of ore.

Grand Central's Heavy Tonnage

For the week just closed the Grand Central mine shipped a total of seven teen carloads of ore this being a substantial increase over the output for the previous week or for any week during the past few months. Much of this ore was taken from the two lowest levels of the mine—the 2200 and 2300—where the copper values predominate. On the 2200 level the ore will average up better than 15 per cent copper with some gold and silver while on the 2300 level 30 per cent copper is by no means unusual.

One of the biggest bodies of quartz ever found in the Grand Central is that which has been prospected to some extent on the 2300 level. The quartz carries some values but it falls just a little short of what is required to make it a shipping product.

Beck Tunnel's Output.

Supt Perry Fuller reports the Beck Tunnel mine in a very satisfactory condition and says that there is no reason why the output for December will not be as large if not larger than for the previous month. November shipments from this mine exceeded the output for October by several carloads. The Humboldt body is still being followed toward the south and the values remain practically the same. The connection between this ore body and the 470 level of the Beck Tunnel shaft is quite an advantage in the handling of the mine's product.

Orris Jarman made a trip to Salt Lake last Tuesday going there to attend to mining business.

At Lehi-Tintic Property

Manager George Nichols of the Lehi-Tintic property of North Tintic was in camp early in the week and says that the usual development work is under way on this ground. In addition to the work in the main tunnel Mr Nichols is also driving a crosscut toward the north. This crosscut is now in a distance of 120 feet and it is thought to be nearing the Dmp re lead which at this depth should contain good values. The main tunnel is now in 165 feet and within the next 100 feet the old Gold Blossom vein should be cut. This is the most important vein on the company's property and the present showing in the tunnel could hardly be more encouraging. The drills are now cutting through a white dolomite limestone which contains carbonate and iron and the tunnel is following a big vein fissure.

After New Ore At Gold Chain.

Last week the drift which was driven over into the Gold Chain from the Lower Mammoth opened an important ore body for which Assistant Manager W D Loose is now preparing to prospect from the Gold Chain's 1000 level. This level is about 600 feet above the point at which the ore was encountered but Mr Loose believes that the ore will be located without difficulty and in that event he will install a donkey engine and sink a wire thus making it possible to bring the ore to the surface through the Gold Chain shaft.

The Gold Chain continues to have trouble in the shipment of its ore due to a shortage of railroad cars. Today the ore house is filled almost to overflowing but it is thought the ore will be moved in time to prevent a shut down.

Receive Splendid Report

John Hurd and Joseph Novack have just received a very encouraging report from their mining property in Plumas county California. At the present time the ground is being worked under lease and bond by well known Salt Lake mining men who claim that they will be ready to commence shipping ore early in the spring. The work is now being handled from an 80 foot shaft which has been sunk through low grade copper ore for almost the entire distance. Some ore of a shipping grade is now being piled up on the dump and it is the intention of the lessees to use a traction engine in hauling their ore to the railroad a distance of about 13 miles when they commence shipping in the spring.

The Prevention of Tuberculosis

Local physicians have just received from Dr F B Beatty the secretary of the state board of health a circular on the prevention of tuberculosis. All health officers are called upon to assist in the prevention of this disease by promptly reporting cases as the state law requires. Dr Beatty calls attention to the fact that the death rate from the disease is the lowest in Utah of any state in the union and makes suggestions as to how this record can be continuously maintained. He urges the co-operation of the officials in promoting the projected tuberculosis sanatorium which the board will endeavor to get appropriations for from the next legislature. Utah was the first state in the union to enact a law requiring physicians to report tuberculosis cases and according to Dr Beatty the compliance with the law has been far from satisfactory notwithstanding the continued efforts of the state board of health to enforce it.

The Reporter offers the advertiser the one means of reaching the people of Tintic in their homes. If you have anything to sell tell the public through these columns.

Knights Coming to Eureka

Plans are now being made by state deputy S A McGinnis of the Knights of Columbus and the members of the Eureka Council to exemplify the second and third degrees at this place in the near future. While the date for this special session has not been set it is understood here that it will be early next month—January. A large number of knights from Ogden and Salt Lake are planning to come to Eureka for this meeting and the members of the local lodge will arrange a suitable entertainment in honor of the visitors.

Improving Wagon Road Into Tintic From Utah County

The present state of affairs in the splendid work in the matter of road improvements and there is scarcely a county in the state in which large sums of money have not been spent for the construction of new wagon roads and the bettering of roads which were previously in use. Tintic is to derive some benefit from this movement and already a large number of men and teams are at work on the Salt Lake to Tintic District. It is stated that the sum of $6,000 has been appropriated for the improvement of the road between Bingham and the Tintic District and while the bulk of this money will not be spent in the vicinity of Bingham and Cochen where the wagon road has been in very bad condition for a number of years, this is undoubtedly the first step toward a better highway into Utah's greatest mining district. When this money was first appropriated it was thought that it would be possible to use some of it in shortening the road through the canyon which leads to the Tintic District from Utah county selected another route by way of the Tintic District and this was later found impractical in view of the limited sum available. Later it was decided to select another appropriation for this purpose.

Case Goes to Supreme Court

The case of George A. Ullall vs. George A. Love & Co. in which the plaintiff brings a suit for damages in the sum of $10,000 for hotel occupancy after the expiration of the district court term of last week. The court after hearing the evidence took the case from the jury's hands and gave the motion of the defendant company for a non-suit. The attorney for the plaintiff have appealed to the supreme court for the purpose of determining the questions of law involved.

Mr. Ullall's side of the case was handled by Mine & McKnight of Eureka.

Prompt Settlement of Insurance

H L Nelson and A M East well known representatives of the New York Life Insurance company have been in Tintic for the past two days and while here will arrange for the settlement of the policy which was held by the late J C Sullivan. This company has a splendid record for the prompt adjustment of all claims and no time was lost in the settlement of Mr. Sullivan's policy which was in the sum of $10,000.

SYNOPSIS

Enid Maitland, a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelpha girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protégé, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them while bathing in mountain stream. Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent which sweeps Enid into gorge where she is rescued by a mountaineer hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her but nature in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The strange hermit tells of a wife he had who is dead and says he has sworn to cherish her memory by living in solitude. Enid and her rescuer confess their love for each other. She learns that the man who killed his wife in the mountain Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to be James Armstrong. Armstrong decides to start to the settlement for help.

Nothing said the woman never shrinking back an inch facing him with all the courage and daring with which a Goddess might look upon a man. Nothing but my weakness and my strength.

Yes that's it but do not count too much upon the one or the other. Great God how can I keep away from you. Life on the old terms is insupportable. I must go.

And where?

Anywhere so it be away.

And when?

Now.

It would be death in the snow and in the mountains tonight. No, no, you cannot go.

Well tomorrow then. It will be fair. I can't take you with me but I must go alone to the settlements. I must tell your friends you are here alive. Well, I shall find men to come back and get you. What I cannot do alone numbers together may effect. They can carry you over the worst of the trails. You shall be restored to your people to your world again. You can forget me.

And do you think asked the woman that I could ever forget you?

I don't know.

And will you forget me?

Not so long as life throbs in my veins and beyond.

And I too was the return.

So be it. You won't be afraid to stay here alone now.

No, not since you love me. Was the noble answer. I suppose I must there. I no other way we could not go on as before. And you will come back to me as quickly as you can with the others?

I shall not come back. I will give them the direction they can find you without me. When I say goodbye to you tomorrow I shall be forever.

And I swear to you asserted the woman in quick desperation. If you do not come back they shall have nothing to carry from here but my dead body.

And how will you prevent my going?

I can't. But I will follow you on my hands and knees in the snow until I freeze and die unless I have your promise.

You have beaten me, said the man hopelessly. You always do. Honor what is it? Pride what is it? Self respect what is it? Say the word and I am, at your feet. I put the past behind me.

I don't say the word, answered the woman bravely white faced pale lipless but resolute. Be to yours to have you mine is the greatest desire of my heart but not in the coward's way not at the expense of honor or self respect—no not that way. Courage my friend God will show us the way and meantime good night.

I shall start in the morning. Yes she nodded reluctantly but knowing it had to be. Out you went go without bidding me good bye.

No.

Good night then she said extending her hand.

Good night he whispered hoarsely and refused it backing away. I don't dare to take it. I don't dare to touch you again. I love you so my only salvation is to keep away.

CHAPTER XVIII

The Strength of the Weak. Although Enid Maitland had spoken bravely enough while he was there when she was alone her heart sank into the depths as she contemplated the dreadful and unsolvable dilemma in which these two lovers found themselves so unwittingly and inextricably involved. It was indeed a curious and bewildering situation. Passionate adoration for the other rose in each breast like the surging tide of a mighty sea and like that tide upon the shore it broke upon conventions ideas ideals and obligations intangible to the naked eye but as real as those iron coasts that have withstood the waves assaults since the world's morning.

The man had shaped his life upon a mistake. He believed absolutely in the unquestioned devotion of a woman to whom he had been forced to mete out death in an unprecedented and terrible manner. His unwillingness to derogate by his own conduct from the standard of devotion which he believed had inhabited his wife's bosom made it impossible for him to allow the real love that had come into his heart for this new woman to have free course honor pride and self respect scourged him just in proportion to his passion for Enid Maitland.

The more he loved her the more ashamed he was. By a curious combination of circumstances Enid Maitland knew the truth she knew that from one point of view the woman had been entirely unworthy the reverence in which her husband held her memory. She knew that his wife had not loved him at all that her whole heart had been given to another man that what Newbold had mistaken for a passionate desire for his society because there was no satisfaction in life for the wife away from him was due to a fear lest without his protection she should be unable to resist the appeal of the other man which her heart seconded so powerfully. If it were only that Newbold would not be false to the obligation of the other woman's devotion Enid might have solved the problem in a moment.

It was not so simple however. The fact that Newbold cherished this memory the fact that this other woman had fought so desperately had tried so hard not to give away entitled her to Enid Maitland's admiration and demanded her highest consideration as well. Chance or Providence had put her in possession of this woman's secret. It was as if she had been caught inadvertently eavesdropping. She could not in honor make use of what she had overheard as it were she could not blacken the other woman's memory she could not enlighten this man at the expense of his dead wife's reputation.

Although she longed for him as much as he longed for her although her love for him amazed her by its depth and intensity even to bring her happiness commensurate with her feeling she could not betray her dead sister. The imposts of honor how hard they are to sustain when they conflict with love and longing.

Enid Maitland was naturally not a little thrown off her balance by the situation and the power that was hers. What she could not do herself she could not allow anyone else to do. The obligation upon her must be extended to others. Old Kirkby had no right to the woman's secret any more than she he must be silenced. Armstrong the only other being who was privy to the truth must be silenced too.

One thing at least arose out of the sea of trouble in a tangible way she was done with Armstrong. Even if she had not so loved Newbold that she could scarcely give a thought to any other human being she was done with Armstrong.

A singular situation Armstrong had loved another woman so had Newbold and the latter had even married this other woman yet she was quite willing to forgive Newbold she made every excuse for him she made none for Armstrong. She was an eminently sane just person yet as she thought of the situation her anger against Armstrong grew hotter and hotter. It was a safety valve to her feelings although she did not realize it. After all Armstrong's actions rendered her a certain service. If she could get over the objection in her soul if she could ever satisfy her sense of honor and duty and obligation she could settle the question at once. She had only to show the letters to Newbold and to say. These were written by the man of the picture. It was he and not you your wife loved and Newbold would take her to his heart instantly.

These thoughts were not without a certain comfort to her. All the compensation of self sacrifice is in its realization. That she could and did not somehow ennoble her love for him. Even women are alloyed with base metal. In the powerful and universal appeal of this man to her she rejoiced at whatever was of the soul rather than of the body. To possess power to refrain from using it in obedience to some higher law is perhaps to pay oneself the most flattering of compliments. There was satisfaction to her soul in this which was yet denied him.

Her action was quite different from his. She was putting away happily which she might have had in compliance with a higher law than that which bids humanity enjoy it was flattering to her mind. In his case it was otherwise. He had no consciousness that he was a victim of misplaced trust of misinterpretation. He thought the woman to whom he was putting away happiness was almost as worthy if infinitely less desirable as the woman whom he now loved.

Every sting of outrage every feeling of shame every fear of dishonor scourged him. She could glory in it he was ashamed humiliated broken.

She heard him savagely walking up and down the other room restlessly impelled by the same Erinyes which of old scourged Orestes the violator of the laws of moral being drove him on. These malign Dumeildes held him in their bands. He was bound and helpless as he might in one moment pray as he did in another he light came into the whirling darkness of his torn tempest tossed driven soul. The irresistible impulse and the immovable body the philosophers puzzled over were exemplified in him. Whilst he almost hated the new woman ideas and his ideals of he must inevitably take the woman.

How frightful was the battle that raged within his bosom! Sometimes in his despair he thought that he would have been glad if he and she had gone down together in the dark waters before all this came upon him. The floods of which the heavens had emptied themselves had borne her to him. Oh if they had only swept him out of life with its trouble its trials its anxieties its obligations its impossibilities. If they had gone together! And then he knew that he was glad even for the torture because he had seen her because he had loved her and because she had loved him.

He marveled at himself curiously and in a detached way. There was a woman who loved him who had confessed it boldly and innocently there was none to say him nay. The woman who stood between had been dead five years. The world knew nothing cared nothing they could go out together he could take her she would come. On the impulse he turned and ran to the door and beat upon it. Her voice bade him enter and he came in.

Her heart yearned to him. She was shocked appalled at the torture she saw upon his face. Had he been laid upon the rack and every joint pulled from its sockets he could not have been more white and agonized.

I give up he cried. What are honor and self respect to me? I want an whilst he almost loved the old yet that he did neither the one thing nor the other absolutely was significant.

Indeed he knew that he was glad Enid Maitland had come into his life. No life is complete until it is touched by that divine fire which for lack of another name we call love. Because we can experience that sensation we are said to be made in God's image. The image is blurred as the animal predominates it is clearer as the spiritual has the ascendancy.

The man raved in his mind. White faced stern he walked up and down he tossed his arms about him he stopped his eyes closed he threw his hands up toward God his heart cried out under the lacerations of the blows inflicted upon it. No flagellant of old ever trembled beneath the body lash as he under the spiritual punishment.

He prayed that he might die at the same moment that he longed to live. He grappled blindly for solutions of the problem that would leave him with untarnished honor and undiminished self respect and fidelity and yet give him this woman and in vain. He strove to find a way to reconcile the past with the present realizing as he did so the futility of such a proposition. One or the other must be supreme he must inexorably hold to his

you. I have put the past behind. You love me and I am yours with every fiber of my being. Great God! Let us cast aside these foolish quixotic scruples that have kept us apart. If a man's thoughts declare his guilt I am already disloyal to the other woman deeply entirely so. I have betrayed her shameless her abandoned her. Let me have some reward for what I have gone through. You love me come to me.

No answered the woman and no task ever laid upon her had been harder than that. I do love you I will not deny it. Every part of me responds to your appeal. I should be so happy that I cannot even think of it if I could put my hand in your own. If I could lay my head upon your shoulder if I could feel your heart beat against mine if I could give myself up to you I would be so glad so glad. But it cannot be now.

Why not? pleaded the man. He was by her side his arm went around her. She did not resist physically it would have been useless. She only laid her slender hand upon his broad breast and threw her head back and looked at him.

See she said how helpless I am how weak in your hands. Every voice in my heart bids me give way. If you insist I can deny you nothing. I am helpless alone but it must not be. I know you better than you know yourself. You will not take advantage of affection so unbounded of weakness so pitiable.

Was it the wisdom of calculation or was it the wisdom of instinct by which she chose her course? Resistance would have been unavailing in weakness was her strength.

Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth. Yes that was true. She knew it now if never before and so did he.

Slowly the man released her. She did not even then draw away from him. She stood with her hand still on his breast. She could feel the beating of his heart beneath her fingers.

I am right she said softly. It kills me to deny you anything. My heart's years toward you. Why should I deny it? It is my glory not my shame.

There is nothing above love like ours he pleaded wondering what marvelous mastery she exercised that she stopped him by a hand's touch a whispered word a faith.

No love is life love is God but even God himself is under obligations of righteousness. For me to come to you now to marry you now to be your wife would be unholy. There would not be that perfect confidence between us that must endure in that revelation. Your honor and mine your self respect and mine would interpose. If I can't have you with a clear conscience if you can't come to me in the same way we are better apart. Although it kills me although life with out you seems nothing I would rather not live it we are better apart. I can't be your wife until—

Until what and until when? demanded Newbold.

I don't know said the woman but I believe that somewhere somehow we shall find a way out of our difficulty. There is a way she said a little incautiously. I know it.

Show it to me.

No I cannot.

What prevents?

The same thing which prevents you honor loyalty.

To a man?

To a woman.

I do not understand.

No but you will some day. She smiled at him. See she said through my tears I can smile at you though my heart is breaking. I know that in God's good time this will work itself out.

I can't wait for God. I want you now. persisted the other.

Flush don't say that answered the woman for a moment laying her hand on his lips. But I forgive you. I know how you suffer.

The man could say nothing do nothing. He stared at her a moment and his hand went to his throat as if he were choking.

Unworthy he said hoarsely unworthy of the past unworthy of the present unworthy of the future. May God forgive me I never can.

"He will forgive you never fear answered Enid gently.

And you? asked her lover. I have ruined your life.

No you have ennobled it. Let nothing ever make you forget that wherever you are and whatever you do and whatever you may have been I love you and I shall love you to the end. Now you must go. It is so late. I can't stand any more. I throw myself on your mercy again. I grow weaker and weaker before you. As you are a man as you are stronger save me from myself. If you were to take me again in your arms she went on steadily. I know not how I could drive you back. For God's sake if you love me—

That was the hardest thing he had ever done to turn and go out of the room out of her sight and leave her standing there with eyes shining with pulses throbbing with breath coming fast with bosom panting. Once more and at a touch she might have yielded.

CHAPTER XIX

The Challenge of the Range.

Mr. James Armstrong sat at his desk before the west window in his private room in one of the tallest buildings in Denver. His suite of offices was situated on one of the top floors and from it he had a clear and unobstructed view of the mighty range over the intervening house tops and other buildings. The earth was covered with snow. It had fallen steadily through the night but with the dawn the air had cleared and the sun had come out brightly although it was very cold.

Letters papers documents the demands of a business extensive and varied were left unnoticed. He sat with his elbow on the desk his head on his hand looking moodily at the range in the month that had elapsed since he had received news of Enid Maitland's disappearance he had sat often in that way in that place staring at the range a prey to most despondent reflections heavy hearted and desolate indeed.

After that memorable interview with Mr. Stephen Maitland in Philadelphia he had deemed it proper to await there the arrival of Mr. Robert Maitland. A brief interview with that distracted gentleman had put him in possession of all the facts in the case. As Robert Maitland had said after presentation of the tragic story the situation was quite hopeless. Even Armstrong reluctantly admitted that her uncle and old Kirkby had done everything that was possible for the rescue or discovery of the girl.

Therefore the two despondent gentlemen had shortly after returned to their western homes. Robert Maitland in this instance being accompanied by his brother Stephen. The latter never knew how much his daughter had been to him until this evil fate had befallen her. Robert Maitland had promised to inaugurate a thorough and extensive search to solve the mystery of her death which he felt was certain in the spring when the weather permitted humanity to have free course through the mountains.

Mr. Stephen Maitland found a certain melancholy satisfaction in being at least near the place where neither he nor any one had any doubt his daughter's remains lay hid beneath the snow or ice on the mountains in the freezing cold. Robert Maitland had no other idea than that Enid's body was in the lake. He intended to drain it—an engineering task of no great difficulty—and yet he intended also to search the hills for miles on either side of the main stream down which she had gone for she might possibly have strayed away and died of starvation and exposure rather than drowning. At any rate he would leave nothing undone to discover her.

He had strenuously opposed Armstrong's recklessly expressed intention of going into the mountains immediately to search for her. Armstrong was not easily moved from any purpose he entertained or lightly to be hindered from attempting any enterprise that he projected but by the time the party reached Denver the winter had set in and even he realized the futility of any immediate search for a dead body lost in the mountains. Admitting that Enid was dead the conclusions were sound of course.

The others pointed out to Armstrong that if the woman they all loved had by any fortunate chance escaped the cloudburst she must inevitably have perished from cold starvation and exposure in the mountain long since. There was scarcely a possibility that she could have escaped the flood but if she had it would only be devoted to death a little later. If she was not in the lake what remained of her would be in some lateral canon. It would be impossible to discover her body in the deep snows until the spring and the warm weather came. When the snows melted what was concealed would be revealed. None she could do nothing. And admitting again that Enid was alone this conclusion was as sound as the other.

Now no one had the faintest hope that Enid Maitland was yet alive except perhaps her father Mr. Stephen Maitland. They could not convince him he was so old and set in his opinions and so utterly unfamiliar with the conditions that they tried to describe to him that he clung to his belief in spite of all and finally they let him take such comfort as he could from his vain hope without any further attempt at contradiction.

In spite of all the arguments however Mr. James Armstrong was not satisfied. He was as hopeless as the rest but his temperament would not permit him to accept the inevitable calmly. It was barely possible that she might not be dead and that she might not be alone. There was scarcely enough possibility of this to justify a suspicion but that is not saying there was none at all.

Day after day he had sat in his office denying himself to everyone and refusing to consider anything but the situation. He loved Enid Maitland he loved her before and now that he had lost her he loved her still more.

Daniel and the Lions. And it came to pass that Daniel was cast into the den of lions by order of King Darius.

Early the next morning King Darius went to the den rolled away the stone and called out. Do the lions bite?

Not unreasonably replied Daniel who was well up in the legal vernacular of the day.

Good ejaculated King Darius as he rolled back the stone. Thereupon he went forth and proclaimed to the multitude that the lion question had been solved—Puck.

FOOTBALL TOO ROUGH

Pugilists Dodge Gridiron Game Because Too Strenuous..

Average Fighter Would Sooner Face Pack of Fallen Angels Than Take Any Part in the Popular College Pastime

If you want to get a fighter's goat just ask him to help out some team in a football game said Bug Slattery to a party of friends the other day, writes Walter C Kelly in the Cleveland Leader

How's that Bug don't the mitt artists like the gentle gridiron pastime? asked Harry L Davis who is an enthusiast on all branches of clean sport

The average pugilist would sooner face a pack of fallen angels than take part in a football contest answered Slattery The professional fighter has a horror of the strenuous college sport He does not like the roughing and the terrific bumps that the gladiators of the gridiron are so accustomed to A fighter likes to have a single opponent and he wants him in such a position that he can keep his eyes upon him all the time He dislikes to have a king upset him from behind and then have a dozen or more other chaps stamp all over him and wipe up the mud with his physiognomy

They brought a big fighter to Buffalo a few years ago to play against the Oakdales The manager of the visiting team thought his fighter could take care of anything they would place opposite him in the game and he went in there with the express determination to knock out his man But he counted without his host The game had not gone the first half before the pugilist was being carried off to the side lines by his friends He was a sorry looking specimen and so sore about the body that he did not leave his room for a few days That guy never tried the college sport again

I remember some years ago when the Detroit A C brought a team here to play against the C A C they brought a fighter named McGee with them It was to be his job to put Sport Donnelly the C A C captain out of commission Donnelly who was a great football genius and a fighter as well was put wise to Mr McGee's intentions and he watched the D A C slugger closely Along about the latter part of the first period there was a scrimmage near the grand stand and when the smoke cleared away McGee remained prostrate on the sod while Sport was in his position innocently chewing his finger nails

I guess the fighters were never known to make a success at football said Doctor Kvz They do not never stand the game in the first place never having been trained to that sort of thing Football is a college game and it requires a different sort of tutoring altogether to develop players than what is given the pugilistic gentry Then too it requires a different sort of pluck to that shown in fist engagements Football is much more strenuous and far more dangerous than fighting in the ring The gridiron hero is more daring and reckless than his pugilist brother and the football man is obliged to train much harder and to suffer more hardships He needs more moral courage than the fighter

EDDIE GILLETTE

One of the most popular players on the University of Wisconsin football team and who is noted for his long and spectacular runs

Lacrosse Growing in Popularity
Lacrosse the national game of Canada is rapidly becoming a world wide sport The Britisher has scattered cricket and association football wherever he has settled Baseball is confined almost entirely to Americans and Canadians and is being taken up by the Japanese and Chinese On the other hand lacrosse is played not by Canadian residents in foreign lands but by teams composed of natives in the United States Great Britain Australia New Zealand South Africa, Japan etc

Big U S Soccer Organization
It is probable a big soccer organization covering the United States will be formed in the near future

The ONLOOKER WILBUR D. NESBIT The LOSERS

James Jones will roll a peanut past the courthouse with his nose
John Harkins from a blackjack will receive a dozen blows
Eph Tomphs all this winter will appear in his straw hat
Tom Ludlow every evening will yowl like a pussy cat
Tis thus we show our stanchness and our faith in what we claim
And that to us our party is much greater than a name
Life Frozman takes Hen Miller for a nice wheelbarrow ride
Abe Early wears green whiskers—just to day he had them dyed Sam Judson gets no haircuts and cannot shave for a year
Mart Willis wears a placard reading
Kick Me at the rear
For thus we show our stanchness and our faith in what we claim
And mark our right to pick out who shall make the nation's laws
Luke Fergus on a broomstick will go riding all about Pete Jessup wears his garments with his coat turned inside out Ed Green must live on crackers till the seventeenth of May Frank Heeler like a donkey every morning must wildly Bray
These sacrifices show us what true patriots will do
To prove their stern devotion to the old red white and blue

Very Like It

And what are the principal shots in his ards? asked the fair young damsel of the wise young man
The kiss the follow the bank and the draw he replied
How lovely she exclaimed It is almost like a courtship First the lover gets a kiss then he follows the girl all about and then—
And then interrupts the man who aspires to pessimism and then they get married and he goes to the bank and draws for that is his cue unless he wishes to be frozen
For the benefit of the unsuspecting

REMINGTON-UMC
The Remington-Union Metallic Cartridge Co. Auto-loading Shotgun.

For singles-trap or field—just toss in a shell press the button and—PULL. The side bolt makes it easy. You don't have to tug at the barrel or watch an on and off device. The action stays open after each single shot is fired—it always stays open when the magazine is empty. Five shots—three to get the cripples—each under absolute control of the trigger finger. The recoil reloads for you—locks another shell in—takes the strain off the gun—the discomfort out of the kick—all without diminishing the drive behind the shot.

Simple take down—a few turns of the readily handled magazine screw cap makes cleaning carrying and interchange of barrels quick and easy.

Send for a motion picture booklet telling how the lack is used—how a friction device found only on the Remington-UMC Auto-loading Shotgun takes the punishment out of heavy loads.

Pepsin Does Not Cure Indigestion.

Laboratory tests which we have made for 20 years proved it. The majority of so called Pepsin Cures on the market are simply Pepsin Tablets which digest only Albuminous Foods. When you begin taking Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets we don't want you to deny yourself a thing. Eat every thing your stomach craves. Read the following testimony from a Utah woman.

"I suffered untold agony from acute indigestion. I tried physicians and numerous patent medicines but none of them did me any good. During one attack a friend recommended your Dyspepsia Tablets. With absolutely no confidence in them I began taking Chambers Tablets. After using three boxes I was completely cured. That was over a year ago and have never had a return of the trouble since. I weigh 15 pounds more than I did a year ago and can eat anything. My stomach never troubles me and I want to give full praise to Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets."

The Chambers Medicine Co., will be glad to furnish you the name of this lady upon application.

When purchasing Chambers Dyspepsia Tablets do so with the understanding that if you are not benefitted the dealer from whom you purchased them will gladly refund your money. He loses nothing. We stand the loss. All we ask is that you be fair with us and we know that you will.

INDIGNATION MEETING

BY JAMES HARDING.

"Well wouldn't that make you three?" called Mrs. Brill as she came out on her back porch and slammed the door sharply behind her.

Her neighbor Mrs. Graves looked up in surprise for Mrs. Brill was of a most unflinching demeanor ordinarily sitting back on her heels in the grass she abandoned her pursuit of dandelions long enough to inquire sympathetically "What would?"

Mrs. Brill's pretty frilled dress cap fairly stood on end with indignation. I've been trying to get Raymond's school by telephone for at least half an hour. You know my sister and her little boy are coming up for the day and of course Raymond wants to stay at home. Well he's in the entertainment next week and I wanted to tell his teacher he'll be absent today and I wanted to find out about his costume. But do you suppose I could get that school? No indeed! And I tell you Mrs. Graves the phone service we have here now is something awful. There is a phone at the school for I saw it one day. There is no number in the book and all I could get out of those girls was we have no record. I tell you our improvement association ought to get after the phone service instead of putting up any more fancy street lamps.

Now Mrs. Brill, expostulated the woman two doors away who had suspended operations on her clothesline to listen and who stood drooping gracefully over the fence and rattling the clothespins in her apron pocket. It isn't the fault of the telephone at all its the schools or the school board or something. Listen to what happened to me the other day.

I wanted to go down town early and get at the sales before the bargains were all picked over. I hurried so that I forgot to take the pigs feet off the stove that were cooking for my husband's supper. He likes them once in a while and they have to be fixed just so in order to suit him. These were awfully nice ones and I wanted to cook them as long as possible. On the car I remembered that I hadn't removed them but the gas was turned low so they couldn't burn very soon. Well I hurried to the nearest phone to call up Bobbie at his school and tell him to run over at recess time and turn out the gas.

But do you suppose I got any satisfaction? Well I didn't. Oh I was mad! Here I had planned on those sales for a month you know to get some furniture and hangings cheap for the porch. I didn't half look at what they had just bought some things in a hurry and then rushed home I was hardly in time either for those pigs feet were scorched.

Then my husband got mad. You know John is awfully particular about what he eats. And I had to send the furniture back because it wasn't at all what I wanted.

She paused a moment for breath and to enjoy the sympathetic comments of her neighbor. Then with a coquettish toss of her head she continued. Well I just told John how it all was. You see my husband knows the superintendent of this district real well. They go down together on the 7:45 train real often. So he'll just fix it up at headquarters. The idea of not being able to phone to one's own child in a city of this size!

Mrs. Brill nodded emphatically at Mrs. Graves who had gone back to hunting dandelions. Though ostensibly talking to the woman two doors away she directed her next remarks straight to Mrs. Graves whom she considered more or less a party to the misdemeanors of the city school because Mrs. Graves had once taught in them.

That's just it declared Mrs. Brill. Now in Splashville where my sister teaches you can phone to anyone in any school at any time about anything. That's how it should be. Suppose somebody should die suddenly or break an arm or something. You couldn't get word to the child in any way here.

Mrs. Graves answered the accusation as she picked up the mutilated dandelions preparatory to going into the house. Surely every kind of message should be given and to every one of the thousands of youngsters in the schools just because some one might die some time. It would take several clerks just for that and the classes would be continually disturbed but what of that?

"Well pouted Mrs. Brill what do we pay taxes for?"

That's right insisted the neighbor for two doors away. Anyway my husband's going to see about it. —Chicago Daily News

Admire American Fashions
American fashions have recently become very popular with the young men of Belgrade Serbia. There is an unprecedented demand at the local shops for hats boots and other wearing apparel similar to that in vogue in the United States and the American style of their cutting has come into favor. These innovations according to the American consul are the result of the exhibition of moving pictures of American origin.

Caffeineless Coffee
The American consul at Matatava, Madagascar has sent to Washington samples of a natural caffeineless coffee growing in that island. It is locally known as mantaska or cafe sauvage grows to a height of 12 to 20 feet and resembles the ordinary coffee tree but has smaller leaves and a yellowish berry.

LAND OF OUR FOREFATHERS

Edward Everett's Tribute to England as the Cradle and Refuge of Free Principles.

For myself I can truly say that after my native land I feel a tenderness and a reverence for that of my fathers. The pride I take in my own country makes me respect that from which we are sprung. The sound of my native language beyond the sea is a music to my ears beyond the rich east strains of Tuscan softness or Castilian majesty.

I am not—I need not say I am not—the panegyrist of England. I am not dazzled by her riches nor awed by her power. The scepter the mitre and the coronet stars garters and ribbons seem to me poor things for great men to contend for.

But England is the cradle and the refuge of free principles though often persecuted the school of religious liberty the more precious for the struggles through which it has passed she holds the tombs of those who have reflected honor on all who speak the English tongue she is the birthplace of our fathers the home of the Pilgrims it is these which I love and venerate in England.

I should feel ashamed of an enthusiasm for Italy and Greece did I not also feel it for a land like this. In an American it would seem to be degenerate and ungrateful to hang with passion upon the traces of Homer and Virgil and follow without emotion the nearer and plainer footsteps of Shakespeare and Milton. I should think him cold in love for his native land who felt no melting in his heart for that other native country which holds the ashes of his forefathers—Edward Everett.

No Need to Worry

A lovely woman who lives on Roxford road East Cleveland is the proud mother of two boys. Reginald is six years old while Ronald is not yet two. Both children are active and inquisitive so it has become necessary to employ a young girl to watch them.

Mamma is subject to headaches and mamma has discovered the sort of proprietary pills that will relieve them. One mustn't take more than one per hour. And the other afternoon mamma had a headache took a pill and went to rest. After a while she got up to repeat the dose—and found the pill box empty. She summoned the maid.

Frida! she cried. Did Reginald swallow all those pills. Answer me! No m answered Frida with a smile. Don't be scared none. He's a chenerous kid—he gave half of em to der baby! —Cleveland Plain Dealer Dealer

Honesty in London

Montenegro has a law ordaining that any found valuable shall be placed where the loser can find it. The fact suggests an anecdote told of Garibaldi's grandfather in Dickens life of the famous clown. One of his visits to Leadenhall market with nearly $2,000 in gold and silver upon him he found that his shoe had become unbuckled and taking from his pocket the bag he placed it upon a neighboring post and then proceeded to adjust his buckle. Having afterward to pay for a purchase he missed his bag of gold and hurried back to the post where he had buckled his shoe. Although more than three quarters of an hour had elapsed there it remained safe and untouched on the top of a post in the open street! That was in eighteenth century London.

THE PARTING GUEST

Where are the good things promised me
By the Old Year that is dying?
And what care I how it will be
Who was so given to lying?
A comely youth he sought my door
And tarried till his locks were hoar
A fair and fowl capricious guest,
Who swore to give me of his best
Who pledged himself a true year
But he was thence—the New Year

Where are the liver and the gold
Ere now should fill my wallet?
What mean these scanty clothes and old,
This a room and pallet?
The pure he dangled in my new Betwixt his juggling hands slipped through,
He found me poor he left me poorer
But now a richer friend and sinner
Awaits me—in the New Year

Where are the poet's bays he said
My dulcet song should give me?
The wreath that was to crown my head
Thy applause that should sustain me?
Alack! round other brows than mine
I see the fresh won laurels twine
Still, for the muse's sake, I sing,
The world may listen yet, and bring
Its gladness—in the New Year

Where is the one dear face to love
His golden mouth should bring me,
Whom an old recompense would prove
For all the ills that sting me?
My heart all beats in loneliness
There is no darling hand to press
But, oh, I dream we yet shall meet,
And trust in her—in the New Year

Where are the works in patience wrought
The grace to love my neighbor
The sin left off the wisdom taught
Of suffering and labor
The fuller life the strength to wait
The equal heart for either fate?
We may speed the parting guest
And take this stranger to our breast
Be thou indeed a true year
O fair and welcome New Year!

To Our Friends and Patrons.

The year 1912 which is rapidly drawing to a close has been an important one in the history of the Tintic District and it has likewise been an important period in the history of Tintic's greatest store--The Tintic Mercantile Company. We appreciate the splendid business which has been accorded us during the past twelve months and trust that during the new year we will enjoy the patronage of all our old time friends and that our fair methods of merchandising will attract new friends to our store. The Tintic Mercantile company extends best wishes to all. May the new year bring peace, happiness and prosperity.

Store will be closed for stock-taking on Saturday morning, reopening Dec. 31.

They Say--

That a sucker sometimes finds it hard to keep his head above water. That while a person without relatives may feel lonesome too many of them are not desirous. That whiskey would not be so bad if it did not make a man talk so much. That the higher living gets the more we want to live. That more people attend church because they think they ought to than because they want to. That if more folks were working for a living the cost of living would not be so blamed high. That while clothes do not make the man a gentleman will try to get along without them. That today is a good time to reform--don't put it off until Jan. 1st.

That the Tintic stores did a very satisfactory holiday business. That the man who gets the girl is just as likely to be disappointed in love as the man who loses out. That Tintic people are going to ask that diners and sleepers be put on all local trains.

That discolored optics are quite fashionable this week.

That notwithstanding the fact that many left to town the street presented a busy appearance all week.

That the days are getting longer.

That Roosevelt differs from Lincoln. One was a rail splitter and the other a party splitter.

That if you take care of the pennies the dollars will take care of you.

That the new year is approaching and applications for seats on the water wagon are again in demand.

That when the doctor goes after the veriform appendix he usually cuts off a good slice of the spinal column.

That it was the best Christmas in twenty years--ask the Democrats.

That the railroads got a big slice of money during the week in return for the usual poor passenger service.

That while the Eureka police officers welcome an occasional call from their sworn officers of the law the visitors should come sober and unarmed.

That promiscuous shooting on a public thoroughfare is hardly permissible even on Christmas night when almost anything goes.

That in Tintic there is very little interest in the wrestling game and after all it is about as exciting to watch two men at the knees or tiddie ends.

That it is more expensive to give than to receive.

That a special Christmas dinner as served at the Hotel de Pele (Red Room) private car at the Ho Gray depot some of the distinguished members of the Tintic club being present.

The pupils of the St. Joseph school had their usual Christmas program and tree last Friday afternoon which was attended by many parents and friends. The little folks presented a splendid program and then received their gifts of candies nuts etc. Through the kindness of Mrs Maude Fitch a hundred or more of the smaller children received special presents.

Council Holds Meeting. Fails in Effort to Get Grandchild

Mayor Mitchell and all members of the city council were present at the regular meeting held at the city hall last Friday evening. After the order William Bacon had read the minutes of the previous meeting a communication was presented from William McLeod who wishes to purchase or rent a small piece of ground which adjoins his property. This matter was referred to the proper committee for investigation. A communication was also presented by members of the Retail Merchants Association calling the attention of the council to the injustice of forcing merchants to pay a license and allowing peddlers the privilege of selling without a license. P. J. Fennell and I. A. Gionar local merchants also appeared before the council and spoke at considerable length on this matter. Attention was called to the repeated violation of the pure food laws by the peddlers. Upon motion of one of the councilmen this matter was laid over for investigation but later in the evening it was again brought up for discussion. The council as a whole will give the matter thorough investigation and report at the next meeting.

Councilman Nelson introduced an ordinance levying a tax against property in the new sewer district No. 3 which extends from the D. J. Sullivan corner to the high school site on upper Main street. The sewer was installed some time ago. The ordinance was duly passed and is being published in this issue of the Reporter.

Bills against the city amounting to $10,000 were read and after receiving the endorsement of the auditing committee were ordered paid. Councilman Knowles of the fire and water committee submitted a report regarding the heating of the city hall. He stated that the heating plant at the library building is extremely too small to heat both buildings and for that reason recommended that stores be used at the city hall. In the spring the necessary changes will be made to the heating plant.

The telephone station was again brought up for discussion and City Attorney Berry was instructed to take the necessary legal steps to ward forcing the Mt. States Telephone Co. into carrying out the long promised improvements in this city. Mayor Mitchell reported the receipt of a communication from an Omaha corporation regarding the establishment of a gas plant in Eureka. The recorder was instructed to reply to the letter giving the requested information. The mayor stated that he intended making a trip to California and appointed Councilman Nelson to act as mayor during his absence. The next meeting of the council will be held on January 3rd.

SYNOPSIS

Enid Matland a frank free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle Robert Matland James Armstrong Matland's protegee falls in love with her his persistent wooing irritates the girl but she hesitates and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer Enid hears the story of a mining engineer Newbold whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help Kirkby the old guide who tells the story gives Enid a package of letters which she says were found on the dead woman's body She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot A storm adds to the girl's terror A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent which sweeps Enid into gorge where she is rescued by a mountaineer who tells her of a thrilling experience Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks Matland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk Miller cooks breakfast for Enid after which they go on tour of inspection The permit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Matland campers He admits that he is also from Philadelphia The permit falls in love with Enid The man comes to a realization of his love for her but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in so rude a place and Enid however confesses that she is for each other She learns that he is a man who killed his wife in the mountains Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong Newbold decides to start on the settlement for a while The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in his possession Armstrong accompanied by Kirkby and Robert Matland find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin and know that the girl is in his keeping Fate brings all the actors to the scene Newbold returns from hunting game and sees a man near the hut It is James Armstrong who has at last located the missing girl and he enters the cabin

CHAPTER XXI

The Odds Against Him

The noise of the opening of the door and the rush of cold air that followed awoke Enid Matland to instant action She rose to her feet and faced the entrance through which she expected Newbold to reappear—for of course the newcomer must be he—and for the life of her she could not help that radiating flash of joy the momentary anticipation of which fairly transfigured her being although if she had stopped to reflect she would have remembered that not in the whole course of their acquaintance had Newbold ever entered her room at any time without knocking and receiving permission

Some of that joy yet lingered in her lovely face when she tardily recognized the newcomer in the half light Armstrong scarcely waiting to close the door sprang forward joyfully with his hands outstretched

You! She Exclaimed Almost In Terror

Enid he cried

Naturally he thought the look of expectant happiness he had surprised upon her face was for him and he accounted for its sudden disappearance by the shock of his unexpected unannounced abrupt entrance

The warm color had flushed her face but as she stared at him her aspect rapidly changed She grew paler The happy light that had shone in her eyes faded away and as he approached her she shrank back

You! she exclaimed almost in terror

Yes he answered smilingly I have found you at last Thank God you are safe and well Oh if you could only know the agonies I have gone through I thought I loved you when I left you six weeks ago but now—

In eager impetuosity he drew nearer to her Another moment and he would have taken her in his arms but she would have none of him

Stop she said with a cold and inflexible sternness that gave pause even to his buoyant joyful assurance Why what's the matter?

The matter? Everything but—

No evasions please continued the man still cheerfully but with a growing misgiving His suspicions in abeyance for the moment because of his joy at seeing her alive and well arose with renewed force I left you practically pledged to me he resumed

Not so fast answered Enid Matland determined to combat the lightest attempt to establish a blinding claim upon her

Isn't it true? asked Armstrong Here wait he said before she could answer I am half frozen I have been searching for you since early morning in the storm He unbuttoned and unbelted his huge fur coat as he spoke and threw it carelessly on the floor by his Winchester leaning against the wall Now he resumed I can talk better

You must have something to eat then said the girl

She was glad of the interruption since she was playing for time She did not quite know how the interview would end and he had come upon her so unexpectedly and she had never formulated what she would say to him that which she felt she must say She must have time to think to collect herself which he in his part was quite willing to give her for he was not much better prepared for the interview than she He really was hungry and tired his early journey had been footsore and in the highest degree dangerous The violence of his admiration for her added to the excitement of her presence and the probable nearness of Newbold as to whose whereabouts he wondered were not conducive to rapid recuperation It would be comfort to him also to have food and time

Sit down she said I shall be back in a moment

The fire of the morning was still burning in the stove in the kitchen to beat a can of soup to make him some buttered toast and hot coffee were the tasks of a few moments she brought them back to him set them on the table before him and bade him fall to

By Jove exclaimed the man after a little time as he began to eat heartily but with great relish what she had prepared while she stood over him watching him silently This is cozy A warm comfortable room something to eat served by the finest woman in the world the prettiest girl on earth to look at—what more could a man desire? This is the way it is going to be always in the future

You have no warrant whatever for saying or hoping that answered the girl slowly but decisively

Have I not? asked the man quickly Did you not say to me a little while ago that you liked me better than any man you had ever met and that I might win you if I could? Well I can and what's more I will in spite of yourself Enid he laughed Why the memory of that kiss I stole from you makes me mad He pushed the things before him and rose to his feet once more Come give me another he said It isn't in the power of a woman to stand against a love like mine

Isn't it? No indeed

Louise Newbold did she answered very quietly but with the swiftness and the dexterity of a sword thrust by a master hand a mighty arm Armstrong stared at her in open mouthed astonishment

What do you know about Louise Rosser or Newbold? he asked at last

All that I want to know

And did that damned hound tell you?

If you mean Mr Newbold he never mentioned your name he does not know you exist

Where is he now? thundered the man

Have no fear answered the woman calmly he has gone to the settlements to tell them I am safe and to seek help to get me out of the mountains

Fear! exclaimed Armstrong proudly I fear nothing on earth For years ever since I heard his name in fact I have longed to meet him I want to know who told you about that woman—Kirkby?

He never mentioned your name in connection with her

But you must have heard it some where cried the man thoroughly bewildered The birds of the air didn't tell it to you did they?

She told me herself answered Enid Matland

She told you? Why she's been dead in her grave five years shot to death by that murderous dog of a husband of hers

A word with you Mr Armstrong said the woman with great spirit You can't talk that way about Mr Newbold he saved my life twice over from a bear and then in the cloudburst which caught me in the canyon

That evens up a little said Armstrong Perhaps for your sake I will spare him

You laughed the woman contemptuously Spare him? Be advised look to yourself if he ever finds out what I know I don't believe any power on earth could save you

Oh said Armstrong carelessly enough although he was consumed with hate and jealousy and raging against her clearly evident disdain I can take care of myself I guess Anyway I only want to talk about you not about him or her Your father—

Is he well?

Well enough but heartbroken crushed I happened to be in his house in Philadelphia when the telegram came from your uncle that you were lost and probably dead I had just asked him for your hand he added smiling grimly at the recollection

You had no right to do that I know that

It was not it is not his to give Still when I won you I thought it would be pleasant all around if he knew and approved

And did he?

Not then he literally drove me out of the house but afterwards he said if I could find you I could have you and by Heaven I have found you and I will have you whether you like it or not

Never cried the woman decisively

The situation had got on Armstrong's nerves and he must perforce show himself in his true colors His only resources were his strength not of mind but of body He made another most damaging mistake at this juncture

We are alone here and I am master remember he said meaningfully Come let's make up Give me a kiss for my pains and—

I have been alone here for a month with another man answered Enid Matland who was strangely unafraid in spite of this threat A gentleman he has never so much as offered to touch my hand without my permission the contrast is quite to your disadvantage

Are you jealous of Louise Rosser? asked Armstrong suddenly seeing that he was losing ground and casting about desperately to account for it and to recover what was escaping him

Why that was nothing a mere boy and girl affair he ran on with a speck of good humor as if it were all a trifle The woman was I hate to say it just crazy in love with me but I really never cared anything especially for her it was just a harmless sort of flirtation anyway She afterward married this man Newbold and that's all there was about it

The truth would not serve him and in his desperation and desire he staked everything on this astounding lie The woman he loved looked at him with her face as rigid as a mask

You won't hold that against me will you? pleaded the man I told you that I'd been a man among men yes among women too here in this rough country and that I wasn't worthy of you there are lots of things in my past that I ought to be ashamed of and I am and the more I see you the more ashamed I grow but as for loving any one else all that I've ever thought or felt or experienced before now is just nothing

And this indeed was true and even Enid Matland with all her prejudice could realize and understand it Out of the same mouth was said of old proceeded blessing and cursing and from these same lips came truth and falsehood but the power of the truth to influence this woman was as nothing to the power of falsehood She could never have loved him she now knew a better man had won her affections a nobler being claimed her heart but if he had told the truth regarding his relationship to Newbold's wife and then had completed it with his passionate avowal of his present love for her she would have at least admired him and respected him

You have not told me the truth she answered directly you have deliberately been false

Can't you see protested the man drawing nearer to her how much I love you?

Oh that yes I suppose that is true as far as you can love any one I will admit that you do love me

So far as I can love any one? he repeated after her Give me a chance and I'll show you

But you haven't told the truth about Mrs Newbold You have calumniated the dead you have sought to shelter yourself by throwing the burden of a guilty passion upon the weaker vessel It isn't manlike it isn't—

Armstrong was a bold fighter quick and prompt in his decisions He made another effort to set himself right He staked his all on another throw of the dice which he began to feel were somehow loaded against him

You are right he admitted wondering anxiously how much the woman really knew It wasn't true it was a coward's act I am ashamed of it I'm so mad with love for you that I scarcely know what I am doing but I will make a clean breast of it now I loved Louise Rosser after a fashion before ever Newbold came on the scene We were pledged to each other a foolish quarrel arose she was jealous of other girls—

And had she no right to be? Oh I suppose so We broke it off anyway and then she married Newbold out of pique I suppose or what you will I thought I was heartbroken at the time it did hit me pretty hard it was five or six years ago I was a youngster then I am a man now The woman has been dead long since there was some cock and bull story about her falling off a cliff and her husband being compelled to shoot her I didn't believe it at the time and naturally I have been waiting to get even with him I have been hating him for five years but he has been good to you and we will let bygones be bygones What do I care for Louise Rosser or for him or for what he did to her now? I am sorry that I said what I did but you will have to charge it to my blinding passion for you I can truthfully say that you are one woman that I have ever craved with all my heart I will do anything be anything to win you

It was very brilliantly done he had not told a single untruth he had admitted much but he had withheld the essentials after all He was playing

ing against desperate odds he had no knowledge of how much she knew or where she had learned anything Every one about the mining camp where she had lived had known of his love for Louise Rosser but he had not supposed there was a single human soul who had been privy to its later developments and he could not figure out any way by which Enid Matland could have learned by any possibility any more of the story than he had told her He had calculated swiftly and with the utmost nicety just how much he should confess He was a keen witted clever man and he was fighting for what he held most dear but his eagerness and zeal as they have often done overrode his judgment and he made another mistake at this juncture His evil genius was at his elbow

You must remember he continued that you have been alone here in these mountains with a man for over a month the world—

What what do you mean? exclaimed the girl who indeed knew very well what he meant but who would not admit the possibility

It's not every man he added blindly rushing to his doom "that would care for you or want you—after that"

He received a sudden and terrible enlightenment

You coward she cried with up raised hand whether in protest or to strike him neither ever knew for at that moment the door opened the second time that morning to admit an other man

CHAPTER XXII

The Last Resort of Kings and Men

The sudden entrance upon a quarrel between others is invariably at a disadvantage Usually he is unaware of the cause of difference and generally he has no idea of the stage of development of the affair that has been reached Newbold suffered from this lack of knowledge and to these disadvantages were added others For instance he had not the faintest idea as to who or what was the stranger

The room was not very light in the day time Armstrong happened to be standing with his back to it at some distance from the window by the side of which Enid stood Six years naturally and inevitably makes some difference in a man's appearance and it is not to be wondered that at first Newbold did not recognize the man before him as the original of the face in his wife's locket although he had studied that face over and over again A nearer scrutiny a longer study would have enlightened him of course but for the present he saw nothing but a stranger visibly perturbed on one side and the woman he loved apparently fiercely resentful stormily indignant confronting the other with an up raised hand

The man whoever he was had affronted her had aroused her indignation perhaps had insulted her that was plain He went swiftly to her side he interposed himself between her and the man

Singular perversion this to which some minds are liable! To take from a man his wife by subtle and underhand methods to rob him of that which makes life dear and sweet—there was nothing dishonorable in that! But to take his life a thing of infinitely less moment by the same process—that was not to be thought of In Armstrong's code it was right it was imperative to confront a man with the truth and take the consequences but to confront a woman with a lie and take her body and soul if so be she might be gained was equally admirable And there are other souls than Armstrong's in which this moral inconsistency and obliquity about men and women has judgment!

Chance for One Armed Man

I'm looking for a one armed man said the patron of a New York restaurant If you know of a man who has only a right hand I can make him a good business proposition—one that will save him a lot of good dollars and save me the same amount His right hand however must be a No 7 1/4

It is this way Several months ago I sprained my ankle and for many months was obliged to lean heavily on a cane To protect my left hand I wore a glove on that hand but did not use one on the right The result was that I wore out dozens of left gloves but the right hand ones I never put on

"A New Year Vow," By Walt Mason

I don't go much on gilded vows for I have made them in the past and they are with the boy who says they were too all-fired good to last. And so I'll make one vow today. I'll simply try to do my best. That you should help me on my way for I embrace all the rest. I'll take the middle of the road and always do the best I can and pack along my little load and try to be a manly man. A man may end his journey here too poor to buy a decent shroud and plant his body out a tear of mourning from the voracious crowd but when he is in judgment he'll come triumphant from the test no man has failed no man can fail who always does his best. And though my pathway be obscure and void of honor and applause and though the laugh of the mob to my cheap lowly ways nearer draws I'll keep a stout heart in my breast and follow up this simple plan. I'll always do my very best and try to be a manly man.

A widow who marries the second does not deserve to fly one.

If you can neither fly nor climb don't be discouraged—perhaps you can kick.

One thing I never try to do and that is to scratch the back of a professional porcupine in order to secure his good will.

It's only the fellow on the outside who can tell a snake how his shell looks.

Only wise men know how to play the fool.

The only man who is in danger of losing his soul is the one who fails to use his skull piece.

Genius may have its limitations but stupidity is not thus handicapped.

Defeat is only for those who accept it.

Children begin by loving their parents as they grow older they judge them—sometimes they forgive them.

We live in an age when unnecessary things are our only necessities.

The old believe everything the middle aged suspect everything the young know everything.

Only one gets mad at a time.

People who profess to love their enemies are liable to hold averages good by hating their friends.

One half of all the lawyers are rogues. All lawyers admit it and I give no offense to anyone in making the statement as every lawyer who reads this will instantly place himself in imagination on the side of the virtuous and run over in his mind the lawyers whom he knows are sure enough rascals.

Success does not consist in showing how bad your competitor is.

The cheerful loser is a winner.

A woman over thirty who will tell her age will tell anything.

Body Still Remains Unclaimed

The body of Howard Proffit the young man who last week lost his life while working on a prospect near Desert Mountain in the West Tintic district still remains at Wallace's undertaking rooms in this city. The message which was sent to the man's mother at Levison Mont was evidently not delivered the woman probably having removed to some other place and now the county officers have written to a number of other friends of Proffit securing their addresses from correspondence which was found among his personal belongings. At the time of his death he was not regularly employed but was spending the bulk of his time trapping coyotes and other animal and consequently the man left no money. In the event that the body is not claimed by friends or relative it will be given a city burial.

Christmas in Tintic

Christmas the universal holiday was fittingly celebrated in Eureka and the other Tintic camps on Wednesday. While there were suitable services at some of the churches most Tintic people it was simply a day of rest rejoicing feasting and merriment. There was not only a surcease from toil throughout the district but peace quiet and good will seemed to prevail.

There were dances and special programs at the shows but most of the Tintic people preferred to spend the holiday at home and it was around the fireside that the members of the family together with friends gathered and enjoyed the Christmas spirit to the fullest.

Resolutions of Condolence

By Columbia Rebekah Lodge No

Whereas It has pleased the Great Ruler of the universe to permit the angel of death to visit the home of Sister Barrett and take from her home a beloved husband
Resolved That in the death of our beloved brother our lodge has lost a faithful and devoted member
Resolved That the departure from earth to the unknown world is at the voice of him who speaks and it is done who commandeth and it stands fast who works all things after the counsel of His own will who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind and though we bow in meek submission to His divine will and purpose yet we are sorrowful that such should be our loss still our loss is our brother's gain
Resolved That to the bereaved wife and relatives we tender our heartfelt sympathy in their sad hour of bereavement. We most earnestly commend them to him who has promised to be a guard and to the widow and we doubt not but that God in His love and mercy will help them to bear up under this affliction which has so suddenly saddened their hearts and left their home desolate
Resolved That in token of our love and esteem for our late Brother Barrett we drap our charter with the insignia of mourning for the period of thirty days sent a copy to the Eureka Reporter for publication and a copy of the same be presented to the wife and relatives of our late brother and entered upon the minutes of this lodge
Jesus while our hearts are bleeding
O'er the spot that death has on
We would at this solemn meeting
Calmly say Thy will be done

Listen! We got a right to blow Our Horn.

We have had a successful year's business, thank you. We will tell you why: You have learned there is never a thread of cotton in anything we have told you is ALL-WOOL; that our merchandise has always been even better than we told you it was; that our prices have always been "down-right" low for the "up-right" quality of our goods.

We are happy over what we have done; we are happy over our prospects for next year. We can look everybody we've done business with square in the eye; we have treated them right.

Same methods next year.
